The trustees of a will, by which two contiguous estates were devised to them upon distinct trusts, obtained from the court an order giving them power to grant mining leases in conformity with and subject to the provisions of the Settled Estates Act, 1856 (19 & 20 Vict. c. 120), s. 10, and with the consent of the respective tenants for life for the time being. The trustees and the tenants for life of the two estates afterwards entered into an agreement to grant a mining lease of the two estates for forty years, rents and royalties being reserved as if the two estates were one property. On a bill by the trustees to enforce specific performance of the agreement:—Held, that the trustees had no power to grant such a lease of the two estates, and that the bill therefore must be dismissed. Tolson v. Sheard, 46 L. J., Ch. 815; 5 Ch. D. 19; 36 L. T. 756; 25 W. R. 667—C. A.

To "Person or Persons"—Corporation.]—Trustees of a will had power to grant leases to any "person or persons" they should think fit:—Held, that this authorised them to grant a lease to a limited company. Jeffcock's Trusts, In re, 51 L. J., Ch. 507.

Tenancy from Year to Year.]—A trustee in whom the legal estate is vested, and who has active duties to perform, may, without any express leasing power, make a yearly or other reasonable letting of tenantable lands. Naylor v. Arnitt (1 Russ. & M. 501) followed; Wood v. Patteson (10 Beav. 541), and Shaw's Trusts, In re, supra, explained and distinguished. Fitzpatrick v. Waring, 11 L. R., Ir. 35—C. A.

Authority of trustees to let from year to year, apportionment of rent. Monson v. Essex (Lord), 8 L. J. (O.S.) 169.

Repairing Lease—Tenant to do Necessary Repairs.]—A settlement of house property gave power to the trustees to demise or agree to demise all or any of the messuages "to any person or persons who shall improve or repair the same, or covenant or agree to improve or repair the same, or shall expend or agree to expend such sum or sums of money in improvements thereof respectively, as shall be thought adequate for the interest therein respectively." The trustees agreed to let a house on the terms of a letter by which the tenant undertook "to do necessary repairs":—Held, by Chitty, J., that the agreement did not satisfy the terms of the power, and that specific performance of it could not be decreed at the suit of the trustees. But held, by the court of appeal, that the agreement imposed upon the tenant the burden of doing all repairs which were requisite during the term, and that it satisfied the requisitions of the power. Doe v. Withers (2 B. & Ad. 896) doubted. Truscott v. Diamond Rock Boring Co., 51 L. J., Ch. 259; 20 Ch. D. 251; 46 L. T. 7; 30 W. R. 277; 46 J. P. 486—C. A.

—— Rights of Trustees of Leaseholds where Tenant for Life does not Repair in Accordance with Covenant.]—When leasehold houses are vested in trustees on behalf of a tenant for life and remaindermen, it is the duty of the trustees to keep the property free from the risk of forfeiture by a breach of the covenants of the lease, and they are entitled to have the rents applied in keeping the houses in a proper state of repair. The trustees are not bound to be content with the setting apart of a sum of money in the joint names of themselves and the tenant for life as an indemnity against the consequences of a breach of the covenants of the lease, but are entitled to require the covenants to be specifically performed. When a tenant for life of leasehold houses is allowed by the trustees to receive the rents, and the houses are not kept in a proper state of repair according to the covenants of the lease, the court will, at the instance of one of the trustees, appoint a receiver of the rents, for the purpose of enforcing the proper repair of the houses. Fowler, In re, Fowler v. Odell, 16 Ch. D. 723; 44 L. T. 99; 29 W. R. 891.

Building Lease—Trust for Sale.]—An unrestricted power of leasing includes a building lease. James, In re, James v. Gregory, 64 L. J., Ch. 686; 73 L. T. 1—C. A.

A testator, entitled on his death to city freeholds, devised his real estate upon trust after the death of his widow to sell at such times and in such manner as his trustees should think fit, and until sale he empowered his trustees in the widest possible terms to let the same on lease or otherwise. Upon proof that the testator's real estate could be most profitably realised by first putting up the property to auction to be let on a building lease to the highest bidder and then selling the reversion, and that the ground rent to be obtained from the building lease would not be less than the rent of the property in its existing condition, the court authorised the trustees to realise in the manner proposed. Ib.

—— In Accordance with Terms Agreed on by Previous Tenant for Life.]—A tenant for life had entered into a binding agreement for a building lease under a power, and the intending lessee had done everything requisite to entitle him to require the tenant for life to grant him a lease. The tenant for life died, leaving an infant tenant in tail, during whose minority the trustees had a power of leasing:—Held, that the trustees had a power to grant a lease in accordance with the agreement. Davis v. Harford, 52 L. J., Ch. 61; 22 Ch. D. 128; 47 L. T. 540; 31 W. R. 61.

Lease by Corporation at Gross Under-value.]—A right of pasture over certain of his lands was granted by an archbishop of C. to the corporation of C., for the use of the corporation and the inhabitants of C. The corporation subsequently, by some means unexplained, became seised absolutely of part of these lands:—Held, that they were so seised in trust for the town of C., and that therefore a lease for ninety-nine years made by them at a gross under-value should be set aside; and that, though the absolute ownership might have been acquired by usurpation, the trusts would nevertheless have attached. Att.-Gen. v. Cashel Corporation, 2 Con. & L. 1; 3 Dr. & War. 294.

Underlease by Executor or Administrator with Option of Purchase.]—In selling or subletting the leaseholds of a testator or intestate, an executor or administrator stands to the beneficiaries, or next of kin, in the same relation as a trustee to his cestui que trust. Therefore, for an executor or administrator to grant an underlease with the option of purchase to be exercised by the sub-lessees at a future time, at a price now fixed, is ultra vires, and a breach of trust. Such a transaction cannot be supported as against the beneficiaries or next of kin, however advantageous the transaction may have been to their estate. Oceanic Steam Navigation Co. v. Sutherberry, 50 L. J., Ch. 308; 16 Ch. D. 236; 43 L. T. 743; 29 W. R. 113; 45 J. P. 238—C. A.

—— Agreement for Underlease.]—An agreement by trustees of a will to grant an underlease of the testator's property is primâ facie inconsistent with a trust for sale of it. There may, however, be circumstances to justify the agreement, but the court cannot enter into the consideration of those circumstances in a suit for specific performance between the trustees and the underlessee, the cestuis que trust not being parties to it. Evans v. Jackson, 8 Sim. 217; 6 L. J., Ch. 8.

Statute.]—Trustee Act, 1893, s. 19.

Duty of Trustee to Renew.]—Where a renewable lease is vested in trustees, upon trust, to pay the rent and renewal fines, they are guilty of a breach of trust if they permit the tenant for life to take and use the rents, and neglect to take out renewals as the lives fall in. Townley v. Bond, 2 Con. & L. 393; 4 Dr. & War. 240.

When, under the provisions of a settlement, the trustees were to renew, and to pay the renewal fines out of the rents and profits, and they neglect to renew, and the tenant for life takes the rents, he will be liable to answer to the trustees for any damages they might sustain in consequence of their breach of trust. Ib.

Testator bequeathed a leasehold for years upon certain trusts; and gave a sum of money to his executor to extend the interest in the lands, if same could be accomplished. The executor did not make any attempt, during the continuance of the term, to obtain an extension of the lease. After it had expired, the master reported that an extension of the interest could have been obtained:—Held, that the money should go according to the trusts of the term. O'Shea v. Howley, 1 Jo. & Lat. 391; 7 Ir. Eq. R. 56.

Settlement of a renewable lease in trust out of the rents and profits to pay the fines and charges of renewing, and subject thereto for husband and wife successively for life; remainder to the first son at twenty-one. The trustees, not having renewed in the lives of the tenants for life, answerable as for a breach of trust, though not deriving any benefit from it. Montford (Lord) v. Cadogan (Lord), 17 Ves. 485; 19 Ves. 635; 2 Mer. 3; 13 R. R. 270; 16 R. R. 135.

—— Covenant to obtain Renewal.]—Trustees of a messuage and premises, partly freehold and partly leasehold, for a term, of which fourteen years were unexpired, but which lease was renewable by custom on paying a fine, granted a lease to W. of the whole for fourteen years, and covenanted to use their best endeavours to obtain a renewal of the lease, and thereupon to grant him a lease for a further term of seven years from the expiration of his tenancy, at a like rent. The trustees' power was to lease at a rack rent for any term not exceeding twenty-one years. Before the expiration of W.'s lease new trustees had been appointed, and the reversion in fee had become vested in other persons, who would not renew the lease on the old fine, the property having much increased in value:—Held, that the trustees had no power to enter into a covenant to grant a further term at a like rent on the renewal of the lease, and that the covenant did not bind the new trustees. Salamon v. Sopwith, 35 L. T. 826.

On a bill for specific performance of an agreement entered into by the testator to grant a lease to the plaintiff of certain premises for twenty-one years, which lease was to contain a covenant for the renewal of the lease for two further successive terms of twenty-one years each:—Held, that a devisee in trust, who had no beneficial interest, could not be compelled to enter into any covenant for renewal of the lease, nor to enter into any other than the usual trustee's covenant, that he had done no act to encumber. Worley v. Frampton, 5 Hare, 560; 16 L. J., Ch. 102; 10 Jur. 1092.

—— Trustee of Lunatic Renewing Lease for his Own Benefit.]—Trustee of lunatic renewing lease for his own benefit, declared guilty of breach of trust, and discharged. Phelps, Ex parte, 9 Mod. 357.

—— Discretion of Trustees — Imperative Trust.] — A testator gave his leaseholds to trustees for legatees in succession, and upon trust, if the trustees "should think it proper or advantageous, as to those which were customarily or might be renewed," to endeavour to renew. And in order thereto should, "if they in their discretion should think fit or expedient, but not necessarily or peremptorily," insure the lives of the cestuis que vie, and apply the insurance money in renewing, and out of the rents and profits raise sufficient money to renew so often as a renewal should be advisable, and he gave a power to mortgage for the same purpose:—Held, first, that this was an imperative trust, and that the trustees were bound to renew, if they could do so on reasonable terms; secondly, that if the trustees refused, the court would exercise it; and, thirdly, that they were bound to raise the necessary funds in such a mode as would be most beneficial to all parties interested. Mortimer v. Watts, 14 Beav. 616; 21 L. J., Ch. 169.

A renewable lease not inconsistent with a covenant to let and manage to the best advantage; with reference to the subject, the trust for creditors. Kirkham v. Chadwick, 13 Ves. 547.

On demurrer:—Held, that trustees to whom a discretionary power was given of renewing leases, had not an arbitrary power of renewal, but must renew when most for the benefit of the cestui que trust. Milsington v. Mulgrave, 3 Madd. 491.

Tenant for Life of Leasehold—Liability on Covenants—Fine on Renewal.]—Trustees of a will held a renewable lease upon trust for successive life tenants, with remainders over, and the residuary personal estate of the testator upon trust out of the income to pay all the costs, charges, and expenses of executing the trusts of the will, with divers trusts of the residue:—Held, that the trustees, and not the life tenants, were the persons liable to observe the covenants and to pay the rent and outgoings which, on the true construction of the will, should be paid by them out of the income, and that the fine and expenses of renewal of the lease should be borne by the beneficiaries ratably, according to their enjoyment of the lease, to be ascertained by actuarial valuation. Baring, In re, Jeune v. Baring, 62 L. J., Ch. 50; [1893] 1 Ch. 61; 3 R. 37; 67 L. T. 702; 41 W. R. 87.

Improvident Contract for Sale.]—A contract to sell improvidently entered into by a trustee will not be cancelled, but the court will not execute it. Turner v. Harvey, Jacob, 178.

Consent of Tenant for Life—Incumbrances on Life Estate — Bankruptcy — Concurrence of Trustee and Incumbrancers.]—The trustees of a settlement of real estate were empowered to sell and sold the property comprised therein, with the consent of the tenant for life. The tenant for life was bankrupt, and had encumbered his life estate:—Held, that the concurrence of the incumbrancers and the trustee in bankruptcy of the tenant for life was essential in order to make a good title. Bedingfield and Herring, In re, 62 L. J., Ch. 430; [1893] 2 Ch. 332; 3 R. 483; 68 L. T. 634; 41 W. R. 413.

Trust for Sale—Married Woman—Real Estate—Conveyance to Purchaser—Concurrence of Husband.]—Real estate vested in a married woman (married since the commencement of the Married Women's Property Act, 1882) jointly with other persons upon trust for sale cannot be effectually conveyed to a purchaser without the concurrence of her husband and a separate acknowledgment by her. Harkness and Allsopp's Contract, In re, 65 L. J., Ch. 726; [1896] 2 Ch. 358; 74 L. T. 652; 44 W. R. 683.

Legacies charged on Realty—Devise to Trustees—Concurrence of Beneficiaries.] — Where residuary realty charged with the payment of debts and legacies is given to trustees with an unlimited power of sale, and is subsequently devised absolutely to beneficiaries, the trustees can exercise the power of sale and confer a good title upon a purchaser without the concurrence of the beneficiaries, so long as the exercise of the power is necessary in order to perform the trusts of the will. Dyson and Fowke's Contract, In re, 65 L. J., Ch. 791; [1896] 2 Ch. 720; 74 L. T. 759; 45 W. R. 28.

Duration and Determination—Intention of Settlor.]—A power given to the trustees of a settlement or will to sell land comprised in it can be exercised by them after the property has, under the trusts, become absolutely vested in persons who are sui juris, if on the construction of the instrument it appears to be the intention of the settlor or testator that it should be then exercised, provided that the power in its creation was not obnoxious to the rule against perpetuities, and that the cestuis que trust have not put an end to the trusts by electing to take the property as it stands. Cotton's Trustees and the London School Board, In re, 51 L. J., Ch. 514; 19 Ch. D. 624; 46 L. T. 813; 30 W. R. 610.

It is a question of intention whether a power of sale of real estate given to trustees of a deed or will can be exercised by them after the beneficial interest in fee has vested absolutely; and the court has to look through the instrument to ascertain whether such an intention is manifested. Sudeley and Baines' Contract, In re, 63 L. J., Ch. 194; [1894] 1 Ch. 334; 8 R. 79; 70 L. T. 549; 42 W. R. 231.

Where an intention is shown that the power should be exercised for the purpose of division of the estate among the persons absolutely entitled, the power does not determine on the death of the last tenant for life, but remains exercisable for a reasonable time afterwards for that purpose, and, being so exercisable, does not infringe the rule against perpetuities. Dictum of Jessel, M.R., in Peters v. Lewes and East Grinstead Ry. (50 L. J., Ch. 839; 18 Ch. D. 429; 45 L. T. 234; 29 W. R. 875), adopted. Ib.

In pursuance of a power contained in a marriage settlement, lands were appointed, subject to life estates, among the five children of A., one-fifth to each of four as tenants in common, and the remaining fifth to E., the other child, for life, with remainder to the first four. E. was of unsound mind, not so found by inquisition:—Held, that a power of sale contained in the settlement was not destroyed by the appointment. Brown's Settlement Trusts, In re, 39

The trustees of a settlement having power to sell the fee at the request of the tenant for life can, by an exercise of the power upon his request made, after he has alienated his particular interest, confer on the alienee a good title to the fee. Alexander v. Mills, 40 L. J., Ch. 73; L. R. 6 Ch. 124; 24 L. T. 206; 19 W. R. 310.

An estate was conveyed to a trustee in fee, upon trust for A. for life; then as A. should appoint; and, in default of appointment, the trustees to convey and assure the same to the right heirs of A. A general power of sale was given to the trustee. A. died, not having made any appointment; and, after her death, the trustee conveyed to another trustee, who sold the premises. Primâ facie, the heir has a right to set aside the sale. Jefferson v. Tyrer, 9 Jur. 1083.

Jurisdiction of Court to Interfere with Discretion.]—If a trustee, having discretion to sell trust property, submit to a decree for sale, the court is not therefore bound to carry the sale into execution. Polley v. Seymour, 2 Y. & C. 708; 7 L. J., Ex. Eq. 12; 1 Jur. 958.

—— Infants' Property.]—Two trustees having power to sell the freehold property of an infant at the request of the guardians, and one trustee having declined upon such request to exercise the power of sale, the court refused to control the discretion of the trustees by ordering them to sell the estate—there being no absolute necessity for raising money and the existing income being sufficient to keep down the charges upon the estate—notwithstanding that the effect of the sale would be to increase very considerably the income of the property. Camden (Marquis) v. Murray, 50 L. J., Ch. 282; 16 Ch. D. 161; 43 L. T. 661; 29 W. R. 190. And see ante, B. 7. b.

Death of Parties to Concur.]—Real property was vested in trustees upon trust at the request of A. and B. and the survivor, and after their death at discretion, to sell and hold the proceeds upon trust for A. and B. successively for life, and then for the children equally. After the deaths of A. and B. there were three adult children:—Held, that the trust for sale was not spent, but was exercisable by the trustees without the concurrence of the beneficiaries. Tweedie and Miles, In re, 54 L. J., Ch. 71; 27 Ch. D. 315; 33 W. R. 133.

Bequest of Leaseholds with Directions to Executor to Sell and Pay himself a Debt.]—A testator bequeathed certain leaseholds to his son, whom he also appointed his executor, with directions to sell, and reimburse himself a debt, &c. due to him from the testator, and to stand possessed of the surplus, if any, upon the trusts of the will. The son never proved the will, but took possession of the leaseholds in satisfaction of his debt, and afterwards bequeathed them to the plaintiff. Upon a bill filed by the latter twenty years after the death of the elder testator, to recover the said leaseholds:—Held, that the trusts of the will must be performed, and the leaseholds sold, and accounts taken; the balance, if any, to be made good out of the son's estate. Smith v. Bakes, 20 Beav. 568.

Sale to Tenant for Life.]—It is a well settled rule that where trustees of a settlement have a power of sale and exchange over the settled estates, to be exercised at the request, or with the consent, of the tenant for life, they may sell to the tenant for life just as they may to any other person. Dicconson v. Talbot, L. R. 6 Ch. 32; 24 L. T. 49; 19 W. R. 138.

The reason for that rule is that the consent of the tenant for life to the exercise of the power is required for his own benefit, and does not place him in any fiduciary relation to the persons entitled in remainder. Ib.

Provided a sale by trustees to a tenant for life is bona fide and at a fair price, it is immaterial what was the object for which he made the purchase. Ib.

A power of sale and exchange vested in the trustees of a settlement, may be exercised by the trustees upon a sale to, or an exchange with, the tenant for life of the settled estates. Where, upon the exercise of such a power, it is declared that the estate shall be vested in the purchaser, the purchase being made in the name of a trustee, an appointment to the trustee, in trust for the purchaser, is a valid execution of the power. Howard v. Ducane, Turn. & R. 81; 1 L. J. (o.s.) Ch. 85; 23 R. R. 190.

Long Term of Years—Suit to compel Sale for Remainder of Term—Reversioner Unknown—Liberty to Cestui que Trust to Bid.]—A bill was brought by one of several cestuis que trust to compel trustees to sell part of the trust property which consisted of a term of 200 years, of which only nine months remained unexpired. It was not known who was entitled to the reversion expectant on the determination of the term, and the plaintiff was anxious to buy up the residue himself. The court decreed a sale, giving all the cestuis que trust liberty to bid, and also directing advertisements to be made for the representatives of the original lessor, who were to be at liberty to come in under the suit. Edmonds v. Foley (Lord) 9 W. R. 859.

Authority to Trustees and Executors to Adjust and Pay Claims—Charge of Debts on Real Estate.]—A testator devised his real estate to trustees upon trust to pay the rents thereof together with the income of his personal estate to his wife for life, and after her death upon trust to sell his real estate and such part of his personal estate as should not consist of money, and to invest the proceeds, and he authorised his trustees to release or compound any debts to him or to his estate, and "to adjust and pay all claims" made upon his estate. During the life of the testator's widow his trustees, who were also executors of his will, contracted to sell the real estate. The purchaser objected that they had no power of sale, and repudiated the contract:—Held, that the authority to the trustees to adjust and pay claims did not create a charge of debts upon the real estate, and that the trustees had no power of sale during the life of the widow. Head's Trustees and Macdonald, In re, 59 L. J., Ch. 604; 45 Ch. D. 310; 63 L. T. 21; 38 W. R. 657—C. A.

Extinguishment — Disentailing Deed.]—An estate was devised to uses to secure certain annuities, and subject thereto in strict settlement, with power to the trustees to sell at the request of the tenant for life under the will. The estate was disentailed and resettled (the existing life estate being postponed to certain charges, and the powers of the will being expressed to be kept alive) :—Held, that the trustees for sale and the tenant for life could make a good title. Wright to Marshall, 54 L. J., Ch. 60 ; 28 Ch. D. 93 ; 51 L. T. 781 ; 33 W. R. 804.

Power of Executrix to Apply Proceeds of Sale for her own Benefit — Agreement to Sell Part for her own Benefit and Settle Remainder — Power to Mortgage Part which she had Power to Sell under the Agreement,] — R. by his will appointed his wife sole executrix, with power to appoint another person to assist her in carrying out the trusts of the will, and gave her certain leasehold houses during her widowhood, with power to sell, mortgage, or lease any part thereof, and to apply the money to her own use, and subject thereto he gave the same on certain trusts in favour of his children. R. died in 1883. By indenture of the 31st October, 1887, between the widow and other beneficiaries under the will, it was agreed that the widow should appoint another person to act with her in the trusts of the will, and that she should, prior to such appointment, sell the leaseholds and apply the money as therein mentioned. The leaseholds were not sold according to this agreement, but the widow, by indenture of the 8th December, 1887, appointed W. to act with her as co-trustee, and vested the leaseholds in themselves jointly, and by indenture dated the 19th May, 1888, they mortgaged the leaseholds to the defendant. He afterwards contracted as mortgagee to sell a part of the leaseholds to the plaintiff, who refused to complete the purchase, and sued the defendant for the return of his deposit :—Held, that the widow and W. had power to mortgage the leaseholds, and that the defendant could make a good title to them. Saxby v. Thomas, 64 L. T. 65—C. A.

Sale or Surrender of Life Policy—Inability of Settlor to pay Premiums—Power of Court.]—Where, upon the occasion of a marriage, a policy of insurance has been settled, and the settlor (the husband) is unable to perform his covenant to keep up the policy, the court can authorise the trustees to sell or surrender the policy, and obtain a fully paid-up policy in lieu thereof, even though there are funds out of which the premiums may be and have been paid by the trustees, provided it is satisfied that the sale or surrender of the policy would be for the benefit of the wife and infant child of the marriage. Steen v. Peebles, 25 L. R., Ir. 544.

—— Price not Beneficial to Cestui que Trust.]—Under the circumstances, the sale by trustees of a policy of insurance for a price which at the time seemed to be beneficial for the cestui que trust :—Held, to be a discreet exercise of their power, although it eventually turned out that the sale was prejudicial to the interest of the cestui que trust. Hanchett v. Smith, 1 L. J., Ch. 218.

Power to Increase Capital Employed in Business—Mortgage to Secure Business Debts.]—A testator, who died in 1866, devised and bequeathed all his real and personal estate upon trust for sale and conversion, and empowered his trustees to carry on his business for such time as they should see fit, and to employ in the business all the capital which might be invested therein at the time of his decease, and the profits thereof, and to increase or abridge the business and his capital therein, and generally to transact all matters and concerns respecting the business, and to do all acts relative thereto, in the same manner as if they were absolutely entitled to the same. The personal estate of the testator comprised nearly the whole of the capital of the business. His real estate consisted of the manufactory and buildings upon which the business was carried on, and for which he received a rent. The trustees carried on the business after the testator's death in partnership with other persons ; but the firm ultimately became bankrupt. In 1869 one of the trustees advanced to his co-trustees 2,000*l.*, and the title deeds relating to the manufactory and premises were deposited with him for securing the repayment of the advance with interest. The money was applied for the purposes of the business. This transaction had not been disclosed. In January, 1882, an action was commenced for the administration of the testator's estate. In pursuance of an order made in that action, the business was sold in 1883. In September, 1882, certain of the beneficiaries mortgaged all their respective shares under the will to secure the repayment to a banking company of 4,600*l.* The banking company applied by petition for leave to intervene in the action, and obtained payment of their debt. The question raised was, whether the trustees had power to make an equitable mortgage of real estate, which did not form part of the assets employed in the business for the purposes of the business :—Held, that power to employ other assets in the business was conferred upon the trustees by the authority to increase the capital of the business ; that, as they could have sold the real estate and used the proceeds in the business, they were not wrong in using the property itself to assist in carrying on the business ; and that the mortgage of 1869 had priority over the mortgage of 1882. Held also, that, as the banking company were not creditors of the testator, they had taken the most convenient course in applying to intervene by petition. Dimmock, In re, Dimmock v. Dimmock, 52 L. T. 494.

Appointment of New Trustee — Pending Action.]—Real estate was settled by will on D. for life, with remainders over, and the will appointed two trustees, and empowered them to sell at the request and by the direction of the person entitled to the actual freehold, with the usual provisions for reinvestment in land and interim investment in other securities. The will also gave a power to appoint new trustees, vested in the same person. One of the trustees was dead. D., who was over eighty years of age, proposed to sell the estate. The remaindermen brought this action for the appointment of a new trustee, and to restrain the sale as improper, adducing evidence to show that the estate would sell to better advantage at a future date, owing to the existence of minerals at present unworked, and a projected railway which would pass through the estate. D. had no re-investment in land in view, and proposed to invest in consols. After action brought, the Settled Land Act, 1882, came into operation ; and shortly before the action came on for trial, D., under the power in the will, appointed a new trustee without referring the appointment to the court. The trustees consented to the proposed sale:—Held, that D. was entitled to sell the estate as well under the power in the will as under the settled land act. Thomas v. Williams, 52 L. J., Ch. 603; 24 Ch. D. 558; 49 L. T. 111; 31 W. R. 943.

Held, also, that the new trustee was properly appointed, notwithstanding the pending action. Ib.

Breach of Trust—Adoption of Sale by Beneficiaries.]—A testator devised certain lands to his wife and his eldest son as trustees in trust for his wife for life, and after her decease in trust to sell and divide the proceeds amongst his children. After the testator's death, his eldest son as beneficial owner mortgaged part of the lands to a solicitor who had notice of the contents of the will, to secure a sum advanced to him and the testator's widow; after her death, the solicitor sold under the mortgage; in an action against the eldest son and the solicitor by the beneficiaries:—Held, that they might adopt the sale, and that the solicitor must repay to them the purchase money less such part of the sum secured by the mortgage as he could show was advanced by him for the benefit of the trust estate. Champion, In re, Dudley v. Champion, 62 L. J., Ch. 372; [1893] 1 Ch. 101; 2 R. 162; 67 L. T. 694—C. A.

—— Property Purchased in Breach of Trust—Concurrence of one Beneficiary.]—Trustees under a will which contained a power to sell real estate, but no power of investing the trust funds in real estate, bought real estate, and had it conveyed to the trusts of the will:—Held, that they could sell and make a good title to the real estate wrongfully purchased with the trust funds on obtaining the concurrence in the sale of one of the persons beneficially interested in the trust funds. Patten and Edmonton Union, In re, 52 L. J., Ch. 787; 48 L. T. 870; 31 W. R. 785.

—— Improper Investment — Sale of Trust Funds—Liability of Trustees to Replace Stock Sold.]—The trustees of a settlement had power to invest in real securities, and to vary investments. In 1875 they sold a sum of consols, forming part of the trust funds, and invested the proceeds of sale on a contributory mortgage of real estate subject to a jointure and portions. It was admitted that this mortgage was an improper investment. The tenant for life having died, the money on mortgage was called in. The whole of the principal was forthcoming, so that no loss would follow directly from the investment, but remaindermen, who were entitled to the capital, claimed that the trustees ought to replace the sum of consols sold in 1875, which at that time stood at a much lower price than the then present value:—Held, that, as the sale was made for the purpose of effecting another investment, if that purpose was improper, then the sale was improper also; and that consequently the trustees were in this case liable either to replace the stock or to repay the proceeds of sale at the option of the cestuis que trust. Massingberd's Settlement, In re, Clark v. Trelawney, 60 L. T. 620.

Minerals apart from Surface—Beneficiaries—Service.]—Petition under the confirmation of sales act by trustees with an absolute power of sale for the sanction of the court to the sale of minerals apart from the surface. The beneficiaries, who were all infants, were not made parties to the petition. The court made the order without directing service on the beneficiaries. Wadsworth's Trust, In re, 63 L. T. 217.

Depreciatory Conditions of Sale.] — When trustees sell property with depreciatory conditions, which render the sale liable to be impeached by the cestuis que trust, the trustees cannot maintain an action for specific performance against the purchasers. Dunn v. Flood, 54 L. J., Ch. 370; 28 Ch. D. 586; 52 L. T. 699; 33 W. R. 315—C. A.

Trustees for sale under a will put up for sale by auction certain lands in numerous small lots, with conditions providing, inter alia, that the title should commence with the conveyance to the testator ten years before; that every recital in any abstracted document should be conclusive evidence of the fact stated; and that the lots were sold "subject to the existing tenancies, restrictive covenants, and all easements and quit-rents (if any) affecting the same," and that the purchasers were to indemnify the vendors against the breach of any restrictive covenants contained in the abstracted muniments of title. The sale was made also subject to certain general conditions restricting the occupation of the land. The abstracted documents contained no other restrictive covenants than those comprised in the general conditions; and the vendors stated that they knew of no other restrictive covenants, and of no existing tenancies, easements, or quit-rents affecting the property:—Held, that the condition as to existing tenancies and restrictive covenants was depreciatory, and that the objection was a good defence to an action for specific performance by the trustees against a purchaser. Ib.

But, semble, the condition limiting the title to ten years, having regard to the number and smallness of the lots, was not unreasonable. Ib.

Trustees for sale sold by auction certain leasehold properties. One of the conditions of sale stipulated that no objection should be made if any lease was an underlease, or that the premises were held on the same lease with other property, or that the same were liable to superior rents or covenants. A purchaser objected to this condition as depreciatory:—Held, that the solicitor who prepared the conditions should have ascertained whether the leases were underleases or not; that there should have been a statement of fact as to each lot, and not, as this was, a statement which might apply to any of the lots; and that this was a depreciatory condition, and ought not to have been inserted by the trustees. Rayner's Trustees and Greenaway, In re, 53 L. T. 495.

—— Lost Deed.]—Trustees having power to sell under such special or other conditions or stipulations as they should think fit, sold by auction with a condition limiting the title to commence in 1858 (fourteen years previously). The next convenient root of title was a deed of 1819, from which a good title could be deduced, but the trustees could not find this deed, and had only recitals of its contents. There was also a condition that all recitals and statements in the deeds and particulars should be accepted as conclusive evidence:—Held, that the sale under such conditions was a breach of trust, and an injunction was granted at the suit of a cestui que trust to restrain completion. Dance v. Goldingham, 42 L. J., Ch. 777; L. R. 8 Ch. 902; 29 L. T. 166; 21 W. R. 761.

The bill was filed in the name of an infant having a very small interest:—Held, that the court could not look into the motives of the next friend. Ib.

Such a suit can be maintained by one cestui que trust without making the other parties. Ib.

And see Trustee Act, 1893, s. 14.

Implied Power — Discretionary Power to Invest Estate.]—A testator devised and bequeathed the residue of his estate and effects to trustees upon certain trusts; and he declared that it should be lawful for his trustees, at their absolute and uncontrolled discretion, to continue the whole or any part of his estate in the firm in which he was a partner, or "to invest, re-invest, and lend any part" of his estate to the firm on such terms as the said trustee should, at such discretion as aforesaid, think proper:—Held, that there was no implied power to sell the real estate. Holloway, In re, Holloway v. Holloway, 60 L. T. 46; 37 W. R. 77.

Free from Portions.]—A tenant for life and a tenant in remainder, having power under a settlement to appoint to uses, by a deed-poll indorsed on the settlement, appointed that the settlement should be read and construed as if the words "with any gross sum or sums (other than portions)" had been inserted after the word "charging." The intention was to enable the trustees of the settlement to sell any part of the land free from portions charged on the estate by the tenant for life:—Held, that the tenants for life and in remainder having power to appoint to new uses, the deed-poll operated as a due exercise of such power, and that therefore the trustees of the settlement had power to sell the lands, the subject of a certain contract, free from portions. McAuliffe and Balfour, In re, 50 L. T. 353.

Sale of Trust Property to Stranger—Subsequent Purchase by Trustee—Validity.]—In 1854 the trustees of certain property sold it at an adequate price. Shortly after one of them bought it from the purchaser at a slightly increased price, and in 1874 sold it at a large profit. In 1866 certain beneficiaries commenced an action against the executors of the trustee claiming the increased price received, alleging that the purchaser in 1854 was put forward by the trustee, and that there was an understanding between them that the trustee should afterwards purchase the property:—Held, that considering the number of years since the sale took place, that the parties were dead, and that the facts were capable of a reasonable explanation consistent with the validity of the transaction, the court would not presume it was not valid merely because some facts were suspicious. Postlethwaite, In re, Postlethwaite v. Rickman, 60 L. T. 514; 37 W. R. 200; 53 J. P. 357—C. A.

Executor of Surviving Trustee—Conveyancing Act, 1881, s. 30.]—A testator appointed A. and B. executors and trustees of her will, and devised certain specified properties, and all other estates or interests belonging to her in Ireland, to and to the use of A. and B., upon trust for sale of such part or parts thereof as might in their judgment be necessary for the discharge of debts and legacies, and as to the remainder thereof upon trust that they, or the survivors of them, should receive the rents, and pay them to A. for life, and after his death, sell the same and divide and pay the proceeds to or among her nieces. A. died before the testatrix, B. survived her, and died without exercising either trust for sale:—Held, that B.'s executors could not give a good title, notwithstanding the Conveyancing and Law of Property Act, 1881, s. 30. Ingleby and Norwich Union Insurance Co., In re, 13 L. R. Ir. 326.

Receipt of Purchase Money—Power to Delegate.]—On the sale of land by trustees with power of sale, the purchasers made a requisition that either the vendors should attend personally to receive the purchase money, or the purchase money should be paid into a bank to the joint account of the vendors under a written direction, to be signed by them and given to the purchasers. The vendors refused to comply with the requisition, alleging that it was inconvenient so to do, and proposed that one of them should attend and receive the purchase money under a written direction to that effect, to be signed by them all:—Held, that the purchasers were entitled to insist upon their requisition. Flower and Metropolitan Board of Works, In re, 53 L. J., Ch. 955; 27 Ch. D. 592; 51 L. T. 257; 32 W. R. 1011.

See now Trustee Act, 1893, s. 17.

Beneficiaries' Freehold Interest.] — By a deed made between three persons, described as trustees, of the one part, and thirty-four other persons, described as beneficiaries, of the other part, a rent-charge in fee of 120*l.* a year, of which the trustees had become possessed under a grant to them, was subdivided by them into fifty-four parts or shares, one of which was purchased, and the price of 52*l.* 5*s.* paid by each of the thirty-four beneficiaries; and the trustees covenanted with them respectively to stand seised of an undivided equal fifty-fourth part of the rent of 120*l.*, and the power and remedies for enforcing payment, and the benefit of the covenants contained in the original grant, in trust for each of the beneficiaries, his heirs and assigns absolutely. The remaining twenty shares were retained by the trustees, in trust for themselves, their heirs and assigns, as tenants in common. The deed also contained a covenant by each of the beneficiaries with the trustees that, if the former should be desirous of selling his share of the rent-charge, it should be first offered to the trustees at a price to be ascertained, in case of dispute, by two arbitrators; and a similar covenant as to the shares of the trustees. Then came a declaration or proviso that the trustees, or the survivor of them, should respectively have "an absolute power of sale over the rent and premises, exercisable at their or his discretion, without any further consent on the part of any person:"—Held, that the power of sale reserved to the trustees did not cut down the freehold interest which was created in the beneficiaries by the earlier part of the deed, inasmuch as it could only be exercised by the trustees for the benefit of the beneficiaries; and consequently, that the latter had such a freehold interest as would entitle them to be registered as voters for the county. Ashworth v. Hopper, 45 L. J., C. P. 99; 1 C. P. D. 178; 33 L. T. 667; 24 W. R. 187.

vi. Payments to and Receipts by Trustees.

Statute.]—Trustee Act, 1893, s. 20.

In General.]—Payment of money to a trustee, with notice of the trust, is a mis-payment, though the trustee had judgment and execution against the person that paid the money. Pritchard v. Langher, 2 Vern. 197.

A. and B., being trustees of money for the separate use of a feme covert, lend to C., who gives a bond to the trustees, and the trust is declared in the condition. The bond is kept by the feme, and, B. having received money for C., they settle an account, and B. gives C. a receipt for 100*l.* as received for the use of the feme. B. becomes insolvent: whether C. is well discharged of this 100*l.*, quære. Baldwin v. Billingsley, 2 Vern. 539.

A., on her marriage, assigned a debt due to her from B. to three trustees, upon trust, when requested by her to call it in and invest it, and hold in trust for A., her husband, and children. B., with full notice, but without such request, paid part of the money to the husband by order of the trustees, and other part to the trustees for the express purpose of being advanced to the husband in breach of trust. The money was lost:—Held, that B., as well as the trustees, was responsible for the breach of trust. Andrews v. Bousfield, 10 Beav. 511.

The obligor of a bond, which had been afterwards assigned to a trustee, of which assignment the obligor of the bond had notice, but not of the particular terms of the trust, was held not liable for payments not warranted by the trust made by him under the direction of the trustee, but only for such payments as he had made without such direction. Roberts v. Lloyd, 2 Beav. 376.

Mortgage to Trustees to Secure Re-transfer of Stock—Receipt in Cash.]—Where a mortgage was made to secure a sum of stock, which was for the purpose sold by trustees who had power to give receipts for moneys and power to vary securities, the mortgage was held, as between vendor and purchaser, not to be sufficiently discharged on payment of a sum of money to the trustees, the money not appearing to have been again invested in stock or upon security. Pell v. De Winton, 2 De G. & J. 13; 27 L. J., Ch. 230; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 225; 6 W. R. 179.

Payment to One Trustee—Solicitor Dealing with Trust Estate.]—A firm of solicitors having been employed by the trustees of a will to receive the proceeds of the testator's real estate, which had been taken by a railway company, paid over the money to one of such trustees without the receipt or authority of the other. The money having been lost to the estate by the insolvency and death of the trustee to whom it was paid:—Held, that the receipt of one trustee only (though also an executor) was not a sufficient discharge to the solicitors for the money which they had received by the authority of the two, and that they were personally liable to make good the loss which had resulted to the trust estate from such improper payment. Lee v. Sankey, or Ginder v. Sankey, L. R. 15 Eq. 204; 27 L. T. 809; 21 W. R. 286.

—— Bankers.]—Payment by bankers to one of several trustees, of the proceeds of stock sold out under a joint power of attorney from the trustees, does not discharge the bankers as against the other trustees, unless previously authorised by them. Stone v. Marsh, Ry. & M. 364.

—— Purchaser.]—Trustees, with a power to sell and to invest the proceeds in government or real securities, sold the estate, and received only part of the purchase money, but executed a conveyance to the purchaser, on the back of which was endorsed a receipt for the whole sum, which was signed by them all. This deed and the other deeds they retained as a security for the unpaid purchase money, with interest, and they entered into a written agreement with the purchaser that the deeds should remain with them as such security, and that he should, if required, execute a proper mortgage. This agreement was signed by the purchaser, and by the trustee in whose custody the deeds were placed. Eight years afterwards the purchaser paid the principal and interest of his debt to this trustee, and received from him the deeds, including the conveyance, with the receipt indorsed:—Held, that by such payment the purchaser did not discharge himself of his liability incurred by participation in the breach of trust, and the trustee who received the money, having misapplied it and absconded, the purchaser was made to pay it over again. Webb v. Ledsam, 1 K. & J. 385; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 775.

Testator devised his real and personal estate to trustees, to be sold for the benefit of his children, and directed that their receipts should be sufficient discharges. The children filed a bill to have the will established and the trusts performed. At the hearing, the bill was dismissed against the heir, and the court did not establish the will, but made a decree affecting the personal estate only. The suit afterwards became abated, and was not revived. On the death of the surviving trustee, another suit was instituted for the appointment of new trustees, which was done. The new trustees then sold part of the testator's real estates to the plaintiff, who filed a bill for a specific performance:—Held, that the former suit having been dismissed as against the heir, without the will being established, no suit was pending for the administration of the testator's real estates; and that the new trustees had the same power of giving receipts as the original trustees had. Drayson v. Pocock, 4 Sim. 283.

Legacy Ordered to be Paid to Trustees of Chapel.]—Legacy to a chapel directed to be paid to the trustees of the chapel. De Windt v. De Windt, 23 L. J., Ch. 776; 2 Eq. R. 1007; 2 W. R. 648.

Income—Form of Order.]—It is not desirable as a general rule to order income to be paid to trustees, "or either of them," according to the form in Seton on Decrees, p. 88, s. 4, No. 2. Clinton, In re (8 W. R. 492), not followed. Carr, In re, Carr v. Carr, 36 W. R. 688.

Settlement—Infant Tenant in Tail—Capital Money within Settled Land Act—Repairs—Proposed Expenditure on Objects not Authorised by Settled Land Acts — Original Jurisdiction—Salvage.]—Whatever original jurisdiction the court possessed to sanction the expenditure by trustees of an infant's money on his property for purposes other than those authorised by the settled land acts for the application of capital money still remains, and has not been impliedly taken away by the settled land acts, though the provisions of the acts are of great use as a guide to the court in the exercise of such jurisdiction. Hawker's Settled Estates, In re, 66 L. J., Ch. 341 ; 76 L. T. 286 ; 45 W. R. 440.

Semble, that under the original jurisdiction the court may, on behalf of an infant actually entitled as tenant in tail, with the concurrence of the next remainderman, authorise trustees in a proper case on the principle of salvage to expend capital money on repairs to buildings which are necessary to enable the property to remain let. Ib.

The extent and limits of the original jurisdiction considered. Conway v. Fenton, infra, and De Teissier's Settled Estates, In re, infra, discussed. Ib.

Land and money were vested in the trustees of a settlement for the benefit of the husband and wife for their lives, and after their deaths for their children. The buildings on a farm on the land were so much out of repair as to make the farm untenantable ;—Held, that the court had power under its original jurisdiction to sanction the expenditure of part of the money in repairing the farm buildings. Conway v. Fenton, 58 L. J., Ch. 282 ; 40 Ch. D. 512 ; 59 L. T. 928 ; 37 W. R. 156.

—— Expenditure of Trust Money—Tenant for Life in Possession—Infant—Remainderman—Salvage.]—Real estate, including a mansion house, was settled to the use of several tenants for life in succession (the last of whom was an infant), without impeachment for waste, with remainders over. Divers repairs and improvements were considered necessary to make the house habitable, including the repair of the damage caused by dry rot. On an application by the trustees of the will :—Held, that the circumstances did not amount to a case of salvage or preservation of the inheritance, and the court had no inherent jurisdiction to charge or sell an infant's estate upon the notion that such a proceeding would be beneficial to the infant. Hibbert v. Cooke (1 Sim. & S. 552) followed. Jackson, In re (21 Ch. D. 786) and Conway v. Fenton, supra, distinguished. De Teissier's Settled Estates, In re, De Teissier v. De Teissier, 62 L. J., Ch. 552 ; [1893] 1 Ch. 153 ; 3 R. 111 ; 68 L. T. 275 ; 41 W. R. 186.

—— Money to be invested in Land—Permanent Repairs—Tenant for Life and Remainderman.]—A testator bequeathed all his real and personal estate to trustees upon trust to settle his real estate upon L. for life without impeachment of waste, with remainder to her second son (an infant) in tail male, with remainders over ; and to lay out his personal estate in the purchase of lands to be settled in the same manner as his real estate, and he empowered his trustees to postpone the getting in and investment of his personal estate, and to make out of the income or capital thereof any outlay for the benefit of his estate. The tenant for life applied under the general jurisdiction of the court that the trustees might be directed out of moneys in their hands representing personal estate to pay for permanent repairs to the mansion-house, amounting to the construction of a new roof, rendered necessary by dry rot :—Held, that the court had no jurisdiction to direct such an application of capital, and that it was not authorised by the power in the will. De Tabley (Lord), In re, Leighton v. Leighton, 75 L. T. 328.

—— Rebuilding Houses—Infant Remaindermen—Jurisdiction.]—The court has no jurisdiction to authorise trustees of a settlement to raise money by mortgage of the settled property for the purpose of pulling down and rebuilding houses forming part of such property in a case where the rebuilding, though beneficial to the persons interested, is not necessary for the salvage of the property in question. Montagu, In re, Derbishire v. Montagu, 66 L. J., Ch. 541 ; [1897] 2 Ch. 8 ; 76 L. T. 485 ; 45 W. R. 594—C. A.

And see LANDS CLAUSES ACT—SETTLEMENT.

Power as to Repair.]—By his will a testator gave to his trustees his house and all the furniture, &c. therein at the time of his death in trust to permit B. to use and occupy the house and furniture for and during her life, free of all rent or compensation for the same, and free from all obligation to repair or insure (which he expressly directed his trustees to do), and free of all rates, taxes and other outgoings (all of which he directed his trustees to discharge) ; and after the death of B., the house and furniture were to fall into and form part of his residuary estate :—Held, that the trustees were not bound to do more than repair and insure the premises, and pay the rates, taxes, tithes, and other outgoings during B.'s life ; but that, if in their opinion it should be necessary to do more than this to prevent the property from becoming deteriorated, their proper course would be to come to the court for direction. Colyer, In re, Millikin v. Snelling, 55 L. T. 344.

A testatrix gave "all my real and personal estate" to trustees "upon trust at their discretion to sell all such parts thereof as shall not consist of money," and out of the produce to pay her debts and funeral and testamentary expenses, and invest the residue, "and shall stand possessed of such real and personal estate, moneys, and securities" upon trust "to pay the rents, interest, and dividends and annual produce thereof" to T. during her life, with a clause of forfeiture on alienation, and after the decease of T. the testatrix devised and bequeathed "my said real and personal estate and the securities on which the same may be invested unto and to the use of V. C., his heirs, executors, administrators and assigns for ever, according to the nature and quality thereof respectively." At her death she was entitled in fee to the P. estate, which was unincumbered. Some time after her death a remainder in fee to which she was entitled in the B. estate, which was subject to mortgages made by prior owners and was out of repair, fell into possession, and its income was only sufficient to pay the interest on the mortgages. The trustees took out a summons for directions as to interest and repairs. The tenant for life contended that she could disclaim the B. estate ; the remainderman contended that the rents of the P. estate were liable for the interest on the mortgages of the B. estate and for repairs of that estate :—Held, that the will did not create a trust for conversion, but only gave a power of sale; that no power of management and applying rents in repairs was conferred on the trustees; that T. as equitable tenant for life was not bound to repair; and that the rents of the P. estate could not be applied by the trustees in repairing the B. estate, though the court, if applied to, could sanction the doing such repairs as were expedient on terms which would be equitable as between the tenant for life and the remainderman. Held, further, that under a trust of this nature the trustees had a discretionary power to apply, if expedient, the income of the unincumbered estate in paying such part of the interest on the mortgages as the rents of the mortgaged estate were insufficient to pay, but whether in case of their doing so there would not be equities to be adjusted between the tenant for life and the remainderman, quære. Hotchkys, In re, Freke v. Calmady, 55 L. J., Ch. 546; 32 Ch. D. 408; 55 L. T. 110; 34 W. R. 569—C. A.

Certain property, comprising freeholds and leaseholds, was settled on trust for a married woman for life for her separate use without power of anticipation, with power of appointment by deed with the consent of the trustees. The settlement also provided that the trustees should at their discretion, inter alia, direct repairs to be done to the property, and that all expenses properly incurred by the trustees in carrying out the trusts or powers of the settlement should constitute a charge on the premises in their favour. The plaintiff, at the direction of the tenant for life, did certain repairs to the property:—Held, that the trustees were bound to carry out any repairs directed by the tenant for life, provided the cost of them did not exceed the value of the property. Skinner v. Todd, 51 L. J., Ch. 198; 46 L. T. 131; 30 W. R. 267.

Held, also, that the tenant for life herself directing the repairs to be done was in substance an exercise of her power to direct the trustees to do them. Ib.

Held, also, that the trustees must raise the amount of the plaintiff's bill for the repairs, by way of charge on the property, and pay it to him. Ib.

Repairs to Leaseholds—Income or Corpus—Annuities payable out of Rents subject to Expenses of Performance of Trust.]—Where a testator gave the residue of his leasehold houses and property to trustees upon trust to receive the rents and profits thereof, and to pay thereout certain annuities, but directed the trustees before making any payments on account of the annuities, to pay out of such rents and profits all costs, charges, and expenses incurred in the performance of the trusts, and the trustees in consequence of a notice from the lessor expended on repairs a sum of money that exceeded the value of the unexpired term under the lease, which had then only about eight years to run, the expenses of such repairs are, in the absence of evidence that the houses were out of repair at the testator's death, payable out of the income of the residue. Debney v. Eckett, 13 R. 207; 71 L. T. 659; 43 W. R. 54.

—— Appointment of Receiver of Rents to Enforce Repairs.]—When leasehold houses are vested in trustees in behalf of a tenant for life and remaindermen, it is the duty of the trustees to keep the property free from the risk of forfeiture by a breach of the covenants of the lease, and they are entitled to have the rents applied in keeping the houses in a proper state of repair. The trustees are not bound to be content with the setting apart of a sum of money in the joint names of themselves and the tenant for life as an indemnity against the consequences of a breach of the covenants of the lease, but are entitled to require the covenants to be specifically performed. When a tenant for life of leasehold houses is allowed by the trustees to receive the rents, and the houses are not kept in a proper state of repair according to the covenants of the lease, the court will, at the instance of one of the trustees, appoint a receiver of the rents, for the purpose of enforcing the proper repair of the houses. Fowler, In re, Fowler v. Odell, 16 Ch. D. 723; 44 L. T. 99; 29 W. R. 891.

Action against Tenant for Life for Non-repair.]—A testator gave his real estate to trustees upon trust for his widow for life, with remainder over, in events which happened, to A. for life, &c. The will contained a direction that each tenant for life should during such estate keep the buildings thereon in substantial repair, and if any such person should neglect to effect such repairs within six months after being requested so to do by the trustees, the trustees should be at liberty to effect such repairs. The widow of the testator was in possession of the premises till her death, and she had omitted to repair the buildings. A claim was carried in against her estate in an administration action, in respect of the omission to repair, the claimants being the trustees of the will, and the then equitable tenant for life. The claim was resisted, on the ground that the right to recover, if any, was in the remainderman, and that therefore the claim was preferred by the wrong parties:—Held, that as the trustees had an interest in protecting the ultimate equitable estate, the claim was properly brought by them. Williames, In re, Andrew v. Williames, 54 L. T. 105—C. A.

A trustee to whom real property is devised in trust for one for life, cannot interfere with the possession of the equitable tenant for life, because he neglects to keep the property in repair; but if the tenant for life is committing active waste, it seems that the trustee may, and probably ought to interfere, at least if the persons entitled in remainder are under disability; therefore such a trustee is not liable to the remainderman for the neglect of the tenant for life to repair. Powys v. Blagrave, Kay, 495; 2 Eq. R. 375; 18 Jur. 462; 2 W. R. 289, 359.

Repairs to Mansion House—Rebuilding Farmhouses.]—A testator directs his trustees out of the rents and profits of his estate, to keep the mansion house and messuages in good repair, and, if necessary, to rebuild any farm building from time to time. The buildings being in a dilapidated state at the testator's death, a question arises between the tenants for life and those in remainder, as to the construction of the will in this respect:—Held, that the mansion house and messuages must be repaired out of the annual rents and profits. That the rebuilding applies to farmhouses, and then only in case of their being incapable of repair, or in case of the expense of rebuilding being no greater—regard being had to the nature, age, dimension, and structure—than the cost of putting them into good repair. Cooke v. Cholmondeley, 4 Drew.

326; 27 L. J., Ch. 826; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 827; 6 W. R. 802.

—— Re-building Mansion House.] — A testator, after devising a mansion house and farm at W., directed that all persons who should come into possession of W. should take the name of K., it being his wish that the family of K. should be re-established there, and empowered his trustees to deduct sufficient to keep all the premises in repair, and to make such improvements, by draining, walling, binding, liming, or manuring the land, at the expense of his estate, as they might think proper, or by planting for shelter or ornament. The mansion house at W. was at the decease of the testator, and still continued, in such a want of repair as to necessitate re-building:—Held, that the power did not extend to authorise re-building against the consent of the cestuis que trust, being of full age; and that the word "building" must be confined to building for agricultural purposes. Bleazard v. Whalley, 2 Eq. R. 1093; 18 Jur. 869; 2 W. R. 608.

Direction to Trustees to erect Mansion House—Garden and Pleasure Grounds.]—A testator directed his trustees to erect a mansion house, and suitable offices fit for the residence of the owner of his estates (which were worth about 15,000*l.* per annum), on some convenient spot:—Held, that under this direction the trustees were empowered to lay out a garden and pleasure grounds around the mansion, in addition to the houses and offices, in such a manner as the master should direct. Lombe v. Stoughton, 17 Sim. 84; 18 L. J., Ch. 400.

Borrowing Money to Rebuild Mansion House burnt down.]—A testator devised his mansion house and other real estate to trustees for the term of 1,000 years, upon certain trusts, and, subject thereto, he devised the same upon legal limitations, under which the plaintiff was tenant for life. Shortly after the testator's death the mansion house was burnt down. The sole acting trustee had expended, in addition to insurance moneys, the sum of 2,000*l.* in rebuilding the mansion house, which amount he had borrowed on his own personal security and on a charge of the estate. It was admitted that this expenditure was very beneficial to the estate, and that the value thereof was increased. There were in court sums of consols, arising from the sale of part of the estate, and such sums were liable to be re-invested in land. By the decree in the action an inquiry had been directed as to what sum was necessary to complete the restoration of the mansion house, and how the same ought to be raised, but no formal order was made sanctioning the raising of a loan for the purpose. A petition was presented by the personal representative of the trustee, asking that the funds in court might be sold, and that such further sum as, with the proceeds of such sale, would make up the 2,000 borrowed by the trustees, might be raised by mortgage or sale of the settled estate, in order to enable such loan to be repaid:—Held, that the court had no jurisdiction to order a mortgage or sale of the settled estate, or to authorise the expenditure for the proposed purpose, even of moneys which were subject to a trust for re-investment in land; but it appearing that the estate had been benefited by the outlay of the trustee to the full amount of the funds in court, and that the outlay had been bonâ fide made under the impression that it would be repaid out of the estate, the court would, although considering the conduct of the trustee irregular, order that he should be recouped his outlay to the extent of the funds in court but no further. Jesse v. Lloyd, 48 L. T. 656.

Investment of Personalty in Rebuilding.]—When under a will real and personal estate was settled upon a person as tenant for life, with remainder to his children, but the will contained no power for investing the personal property in improving the realty, the court, on its being shown to be beneficial for all parties, sanctioned the investment of part of the personalty in rebuilding the house, which was in an uninhabitable condition. Pearson, In re, 28 L. T. 57; 21 W. R. 401.

Allowances for Rebuilding.] — Charges by trustees for money laid out in luxuries under colour of maintenance, and for money unnecessarily expended in pulling down and rebuilding a house, disallowed. Bridge v. Brown, 2 Y. & C. C. C. 181.

Circumstances under which allowances will be made for maintenance, repairing, and furnishing considered. Griggs v. Gibson, 21 W. R. 818.

Money Standing to Real Estate Capital Account.]—Trustees of a term with power to apply surplus in building and improvement were allowed to apply money standing to real estate capital account in building and improvements, including drainage. Leslie's Trusts, In re, 45 L. J., Ch. 668; 2 Ch. D. 185; 34 L. T. 239; 24 W. R. 546.

Costs of Inquiry as to Additional Expenditure.]—Trustees of a charity having in carrying into effect a scheme for building exceeded the amount of the estimate which had been sanctioned by the court, were made to pay their own costs of the inquiry before the master as to the propriety and beneficial nature of the additional expenditure. Att.-Gen. v. Armistead, 19 Beav. 584.

Power to Apply Rents only in Repairs—Borrowing Money to Repair.] — A power to apply the rents of real estate in repairing does not imply a power to borrow money for repairing on the security of the estate. Fazakerley v. Culshaw, 24 L. T. 773; 19 W. R. 793.

The trustee of real estate, on which a dwelling-house was situate, who was empowered to lay out the rents in repairing the house, but was not empowered to borrow money for the purpose, pulled down and rebuilt the house, and borrowed money at interest for the purpose, which he afterwards repaid out of the rents:—Held, that his claim for interest on the sum borrowed must be disallowed. Ib.

When a small estate was settled in strict settlement, and the settlement contained power for the trustees during minorities to repair and rebuild, and to pay the expenses out of the rents and profits, but no power to borrow on mortgage, the court, on being satisfied that it was for the benefit of all parties, and notwithstanding that some interested were infants, gave the trustees leave to borrow money on mortgage, not exceeding a sum fixed by the court, to rebuild the house, as no repairs would render it habitable. Frith v. Cameron, 40 L. J., Ch. 778; L. R. 12 Eq. 169; 24 L. T. 791; 19 W. R. 886.

rowed on their own security with a deposit of the chapel deeds made on their own authority, and having been compelled to re-pay the amount:—Held, to have a lien on the deeds, but not to be entitled to a sale of the property to re-imburse the outlay. Drake or Darke v. Williamson, 25 Beav. 622; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 1009; 6 W. R. 824.

Trustees having power, during the minorities of tenants for life or in tail, to superintend the management of an estate, cut timber, erect, pull down, and repair houses, and do various other things of a more or less similar character, "and generally to deal with the premises, as they or he might do if they or he were the absolute beneficial owners or owner, without being answerable for any loss or damage which might happen thereby," deposited with a bank the title deeds of the estate to secure an advance of money to be employed in the erection of buildings under the power:—Held, that the bank had no valid title under the power. Broom v. Sheffield & Rotherham Bank, 24 W. R. 948.

Improvements—Cotton Mill.]—Part of the property of a testator consisted of a cotton mill which he directed his trustees not to sell, nor to work themselves, but to let. The will also contained a direction to the trustees not to lend any of the personal estate on mortgage, and prescribed strict modes of investment. The cotton mill being out of repair could not be let as it then stood; the trustees, therefore, entered into a provisional agreement with a firm of cotton spinners, by which the latter agreed to take a lease of the mill for twenty-one years, and to spend large sums of money in machinery and repairs, provided the trustees advanced to them, on the security of the machinery, rather more than half the sum required for such machinery and repairs, and also spent a considerable sum in the erection of steam boilers and other landlord's fixtures. Under the terms of the will the trustees could not comply with such proposals; but, upon it being clearly proved that such an arrangement would be highly beneficial to the trust estate, and was one which it was not unusual for lessors in similar cases to enter into, the court sanctioned the agreement, and directed the costs of all parties to the application to come out of the testator's residuary personal estate. Lee's Trusts, In re, 32 L. T. 298.

—— Building of Labourers' Cottages.]—Where a testator directed his trustees to lay out money for the improvement of his estates and the erection of farmhouses and out-buildings, the court sanctioned the building of labourers' cottages. Rivers (Lord) v. Fox, 2 Eq. R. 776.

—— Drainage and New Buildings.]—Trustees of real estate for a term of 1,000 years from the day of the death of the settlor, had powers, during a period of certain lives in being and twenty-one years, to manage the estates, and out of the income to keep down charges and incumbrances, and subject thereto to repair, erect new or additional buildings, and generally to "make such outlay for the improvement of" the estates as they should "think fit or conducive to the general benefit of" the estates "or the tenants thereof," and hold the surplus as capital, which was to be laid out in the purchase of lands to be settled to the like uses. The settlor having died in 1870, the first tenant for life being in possession, and the income being insufficient, after keeping down charges and incumbrances, to pay for repairs, for the cost of new buildings, and generally for improvement of the property, out of capital, the court allowed payments in draining upon which the tenants paid 5*l.* per cent., and in erecting new buildings. Leslie's Settlement Trusts, In re, 45 L. J., Ch. 668; 2 Ch. D. 185; 34 L. T. 239; 24 W. R. 546.

—— Surplus Rents.]—Trustees under a will of real estates, the surplus rents and profits of which, during minority, &c., were to be invested in the purchase of other real estates, to go as the devised estates, expended very large sums of the surplus rents and profits in repairing houses, building houses, draining and fencing farms, and other similar improvements:—Held, that they were entitled to be allowed those sums in their discharge; the will containing this general direction, "that, during minority, &c., the said trustees or trustee, for the time being, of the said term, do and shall, generally, superintend the management of the same manors, hereditaments, and premises, and appoint such stewards, bailiffs, agents, and collectors, and with such salaries as they shall think proper," &c. Bowes v. Strathmore, 8 Jur. 92.

—— Mixed Fund of Realty and Personalty.]—The trustees of a mixed fund of realty and personalty laid out 1,600*l.*, part of the personalty, upon the erection of a house on the real estate, for the bonâ fide purpose of increasing the value of the whole as building land:—Held, that the trustees should not be entirely disallowed the sum so expended, but if the cestuis que trust desired it, they should be ordered to take the house themselves at the price of 1,600*l.*, and the value of the site as unbuilt upon. Vyse v. Foster, 42 L. J., Ch. 245; L. R. 8 Ch. 309; 27 L. T. 774; 21 W. R. 207—L.JJ.

—— Right of Executor to Charge Expenditure on Testator's Estate.]—S. was, at the time of his death, seised of a plot of ground, upon which he had commenced to build certain houses. By his will he devised and bequeathed all his real and personal property to J. for life, upon trust, as to one moiety of the rents and profits, for himself, and, as to the other, for other purposes, with remainder over. J. became the personal representative of S., and after S.'s death expended large sums in building the houses:—Held, that J. was not entitled to a charge upon the plot of ground for moneys expended by him, either as tenant for life, trustee, or personal representative of S. Gilliland v. Crawford, 18 W. R. 60; Ir. R., 4 Eq. 35.

Power to Insure Buildings.]—See TRUSTEE ACT, 1893, s. 18.

viii. Allowance of Payments and Advances.

Bonâ fide Payment not Authorised by Trust.]—A trustee, who, acting in the bonâ fide exercise of his discretion, makes a payment which, though not authorised by the terms of the trust, is in his opinion necessary to enable him to execute the trust, will be allowed such payment in passing his accounts; though he does not act prudently in assuming the responsibility of such a payment without the sanction of the court. Forshaw v. Higginson, 8 De G. M. & G. 827; 26 L. J., Ch. 342; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 476; 5 W. R. 424—L.JJ.

A., by will, charged his real estate with debts, and gave a legacy to B. in terms which made it an arguable question whether it was not charged on the real estate. Afterwards the estate was conveyed to trustees for sale by a deed to which the legatee was not a party. The trustees entered into a contract for sale of part of the estate on very advantageous terms. The purchaser required evidence that the legacy had been paid, but no such evidence could be found, and it appeared probable that it never had been paid. The purchaser insisting on the objection, the trustees, acting under legal advice, and considering the most advantageous course for the trust estate, paid the legacy:—Held, that the amount so paid must be allowed them in passing their accounts. Ib.

Retainer of Balance Due from Tenant for Life.]—Upon marriage, certain stock was settled in trust for the husband for life, remainder to the wife for life, with remainder to the children of the marriage. After the death of the husband, A. and B. became trustees of the fund; and an account was opened between B. and the widow, in respect of certain receipts and payments and bills of costs, upon which account there was an apparent balance due to B. B. as trustee, received the dividends of the trust funds, to which the widow was entitled for her life:—Held, that B. was entitled to retain, out of such dividends, the balance due to him from the widow. Russel v. Buchanan, 9 L. J., Ch. 129.

A., who is a trustee for B. of 1,000*l.* South Sea stock, at the desire of B. borrows 1,000*l.* on this stock of the company, and B. receives the money; A. pays the 10 per cent. upon 7 Geo. 1, sess. 2, s. 7, to be discharged of the loan: though B. forbade the payment, yet he is liable. Balsh v. Hyham, 2 P. Wms. 453; 2 Eq. Cas. Abr. 741, pl. 8.

Augmentation of Salaries of Master and Usher of School.]—A testator, after devising lands on trust to constitute a grammar school, directed that the trustees should have the management of it, and should appoint a master and usher, and pay to them respectively 50*l.* a year, and 30*l.* a year; the trustees established a school, which, however, from mistake was not conducted as a free grammar school, and, the rents of the charity lands having increased, an augmentation was made to the salaries of the master and usher:—Held, that the trustees were entitled to have the sums paid in receipt of this augmentation allowed them in their accounts, notwithstanding their error in the application of the charity, and the mention of salaries of a specified amount in the bill. Att.-Gen. v. Christchurch (Dean), 2 Russ. 321.

Advances on West Indian Estates.]—West India estates were devised upon trust for sale, and distribution of the proceeds among the testator's children absolutely. In a suit for the administration of the trust consignees were appointed, and pending the suit settlements were made of the children's shares, by which interests for life and in reversion were limited. In making payments which had been sanctioned by the court, the consignees became in advance to the trust estate:—Held, that these advances were a charge upon the corpus of the trust estate. Morison v. Morison, 7 De G. M. & G. 214; 3 Eq. R. 557; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 1110; 3 W. R. 383. And see Daniel v. Trotman, ante, col. 613.

Money Expended in Maintaining Children.]—A husband being held liable at the suit of the children of his wife's first marriage, to replace the trust funds received by him, claimed a large sum expended in maintaining the children after the second marriage. The claim was disallowed. Grove v. Price, 26 Beav. 105.

Stock obtained by Infant by Fraud.]—An infant fraudulently concealing his age, and obtaining from trustees part of stock which he was entitled to on coming of age; and when of age, a few months afterwards, applying for and receiving the residue of such stock:—Held, a fraud in the infant, and that neither he himself nor his assignees could enforce repayment by the trustees of the stock paid during infancy, and that applying for the residue of the stock when of age was a recognition of the first payment. Cory v. Gertcken, 2 Madd. 40; 17 R. R. 180.

Proper Expenses—Right of Trustees to Reimburse themselves.]—Where persons entrusted with the administration of a fund have incurred legitimate and proper expenses in performing duties thrown upon them by their fiduciary situation, they have a right, both at law and in equity, to reimburse themselves out of the funds in their hands, without any special provision to that effect. Att.-Gen. v. Norwich Corporation, 2 Myl. & Cr. 407. Affirming 1 Keen, 700; 1 Jur. 398.

Trustee, or next friend of infant, is entitled to fair expenses beyond taxed costs, under the head of just allowances. Fearns v. Young, 10 Ves. 184.

Costs Bonâ fide Paid to Solicitor to the Trust.]—An executor or trustee is not to be allowed, without question, the amount of bills of costs which he has paid bonâ fide to the solicitor to the trust; and the master, without regularly taxing the bills, will moderate their amount. Johnson v. Telford, 3 Russ. 477; 27 R. R. 116.

Postponement of Payment Off of Incumbrances.]—A father devised his real estate to trustees to pay an annuity of 6,000*l.* a year to his daughter, and subject thereto upon trust to accumulate the rents for twenty-one years, and out of the accumulated fund from time to time to pay his debts, legacies, and the incumbrances on the estates, and invest the residue in the purchase of lands to be held on the same trusts; and he directed the estates, on the expiration of the trust for accumulation, to be settled in strict settlement. He directed that as soon as the incumbrances were paid off, the annuity should be increased to 8,000*l.* He gave his residuary personal estate to his trustees to pay off the incumbrances, and apply the surplus in the same way as the accumulated rents and profits. He died leaving personalty which, within a month after his death, was ascertained to be amply sufficient to pay off his debts, legacies, and incumbrances. The trustees, however, retained a considerable part of the personal estate, as it was producing a high rate of interest; and they did not for several years pay off all the incumbrances:—Held, that the trustees were right in paying the annuity at the rate of 8,000*l.* a year from the testator's death, and must be allowed it in their accounts. Astley v. Essex (Earl), L. R. 6 Ch. 898; 25 L. T. 470.

Allowances for Due Management.]—A trustee and executor, although taking under the will a commission as a satisfaction for the trouble, is entitled to allowances under a general trust to set and manage, as he should think proper, and out of the rents and profits to pay all rates and taxes, charges of repairs, stewards', bailiffs', and gamekeepers' salaries and expenses, and all other charges and expenses he should think proper; but he was not allowed to appoint an establishment, gamekeepers, &c., except as the due management required. Webb v. Shaftesbury (Earl), 7 Ves. 480.

—— Annuities given to Trustees—Collector of Weekly Rents.]—Testator gave annuities to his trustees for their trouble in the execution of his will, and died possessed of several houses, let at weekly rents. The trustees are justified in paying a person to collect these rents, and do not, therefore, lose their annuities. Wilkinson v. Wilkinson, 2 Sim. & S. 237; 25 R. R. 193.

Fund Set Apart for Payment of Expenses.]—As to what expenses relating to real estate are properly payable out of a fund set apart to pay, amongst other things, the expenses of executing the trusts of the will. Brougham (Lord) v. Poulett (Lord), 19 Beav. 119; 24 L. J., Ch. 233; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 151.

A testator declared trusts relating to his real and personal estate, and gave his personal estate to trustees, in trust to set apart and invest a sufficient fund to pay his debts, legacies, funeral expenses, expenses of providing his will, "and the execution of the trusts thereof":—Held, that the "expenses in the execution of the trusts of the will" were limited to those properly payable by the executors, in their character of executors alone, and therefore that the costs of executing the trusts of the various real estates fell on the cestuis que trust. Ib.

Interest on Advances.]—A trustee will be allowed interest upon money advanced by him, and applied in payment of his testator's debts, or otherwise on account of his personal estate. Finch v. Prescott, 30 L. T. 156; 23 W. R. 437.

Costs and Expenses in General.]—See post, I.

ix. Notice of Assignments.

Mortgage—Notice to affect Trustees.]—Funds belonging to M. were, on her marriage in 1834, vested in three trustees (one of whom died in 1840) in trust for her for life for her separate use, without power of anticipation, and after her death for the children of the marriage, and in case there should be none, for such persons, if she should die in her husband's lifetime, as she should appoint. In 1843 the husband and wife executed a deed to secure the payment of moneys due from him, and the wife appointed that in case there should be no child of the marriage, and if she should die in the husband's lifetime, the trustees of the settlement of 1834 should, out of the trust funds, raise sufficient to pay the husband's debt. Notice was given of the deed of 1834 to the two surviving trustees of the settlement. In 1848 the wife and the sole surviving trustee of the settlement, who desired to retire, appointed three new trustees, and assigned to them the trust funds. One of those trustees died, and the two surviving trustees and the survivor of them, at the request of the husband and wife, dealt with some of the trust funds, which ultimately were much diminished. A portion of the funds was invested in the purchase of leasehold premises, which were held upon the trusts of the settlement. The wife died in March, 1870, without having had any child. The husband survived. The survivor of the trustees of 1848 in May, 1870, received a notice from L. of a charge on the leaseholds in his favour, dated the 5th of October, 1864; and in October, 1870, he received a notice of the deed of 1843:—Held, that the surviving trustees of 1848 were not liable to make good the funds which had been lost; that L. was not entitled to priority over the trustees of the deed of 1843; and that the persons claiming under the deed of 1843 were entitled to the funds which remained in part satisfaction of the moneys due to them. Phipps v. Lovegrove, 42 L. J., Ch. 892; L. R. 16 Eq. 80; 28 L. T. 584; 21 W. R. 590.

Assignees of an equitable interest should, if they desired to be perfectly secured, obtain a distringas on the funds; or have their deed indorsed on the original deed; or obtain a transfer of the funds into court. Ib.

Semble: New trustees of trust funds in settlement are not bound to inquire of the old trustees whether they have received notice of any incumbrance; and it has never been the practice of the courts on appointing new trustees of funds to make such an inquiry. Ib.

Assignment — Priority — Notice to one Trustee only — Effect of Death on Notice.]—Where one only of two trustees of a fund has notice of an incumbrance or assignment affecting the trust fund, and a second assignment is afterwards made, of which both trustees receive notice, the subsequent death of the trustee who alone had notice of the prior incumbrance or assignment does not alter the priority obtained by the first assignee. Ward v. Duncombe, 62 L. J., Ch. 881; [1893] A. C. 369; 1 R. 224; 69 L. T. 121; 42 W. R. 59—H. L. (E.)

—— Notice to one Trustee—Notice of Subsequent Mortgage to Both—Death of Trustee having Notice of Assignment — Priority.]— In distributing a trust fund it is the duty of all the trustees to act upon the notices of incumbrances received by each, and to this extent notice to one trustee is notice to all. Consequently an intending incumbrancer cannot safely take a charge upon a trust fund without ascertaining from each trustee that he has no notice of any existing charge. Wyatt, In re, White v. Ellis, 61 L. J., Ch. 178; [1892] 1 Ch. 188; 65 L. T. 841; 40 W. R. 177—C. A.

A married woman having by her marriage settlement settled a reversionary share of a trust fund to which she was entitled under a will, joined with her husband in mortgaging the share without disclosing the settlement. One of the trustees of the will had notice of the settlement, the other had not. The mortgagees before taking their security made inquiries of the trustees as to incumbrances, and received from the trustee who had notice an answer which conveyed no information. They then executed the mortgage, and gave notice of it to both trustees. The trustee who had notice of the settlement died before the fund came into possession. In a contest for priority between the marriage settlement and the mortgage :—Held, that the settlement took priority, and that such priority was not changed by the death of the trustee. Ib.

—— Fund Partly in Court and Partly in Hands of Trustees.]—When an assignment is made of an interest in a trust fund, part of which is in court and part in the hands of the trustees, the assignee, in order to complete his title, must, as regards the fund in court, obtain a stop order, and as regard the fund in the hands of trustees, give notice to the trustees. Mutual Life Assurance Society v. Langley, 32 Ch. D. 460 ; 54 L. T. 326—C. A. Affirming 53 L. J., Ch. 996 ; 32 W. R. 791.

—— Trustee Party to Suit—Stop Order — Priority.]—Where a trustee and a party to a suit had a charge on the share of one of the cestuis que trust, and obtained a stop order, he was postponed to a judgment creditor of the cestui que trust who had obtained an earlier stop order. Elder v. Maclean, 3 Jur. (N.S.) 283 ; 5 W. R. 447.

Original and Derivative Settlements — Fund in Court — Notice.] — Where there are two settlements, one original and the other derivative, the proper person to whom an assignee of an equitable interest in personalty under the derivative settlement should give notice of his incumbrance is the trustee of that settlement, and not the trustee of the original settlement, though the fund under which the interest arises is still in his hands. Dicta of Lord Romilly in Bridge v. Beadon (36 L. J., Ch. 351 ; L. R. 3 Eq. 664 ; 15 W. R. 527) dissented from ; Booth's Settlement, In re (1 W. R. 444) not approved ; Holt v. Dewell (4 Hare, 446 ; 15 L. J., Ch. 14), approved. Stephens v. Green, 64 L. J., Ch. 546 ; [1895] 2 Ch. 148 ; 12 R. 252 ; 72 L. T. 574 ; 43 W. R. 465—C. A.

—— Trustee himself an Assignee.]—A trustee who receives notice of an assignment of the trust fund made by the cestui que trust is not, in the absence of inquiry, bound to inform the person giving him the notice that he himself has a prior assignment. By omitting to give that information the trustee will not lose his priority. Lewer, In re, Wilkes, Ex parte, 4 Ch. D. 101 ; 35 L. T. 557. Affirmed, nom. Garrard, Ex parte, Lewer, In re, 5 Ch. D. 61 ; 25 W. R. 364—C. A.

New Trustees — Notice of Incumbrance to Original Trustees — Constructive Notice.] — Persons appointed new trustees under a will or settlement are bound to inquire what the trust property consists of, and what the trusts are, and to look into the trust documents to see what incumbrances their predecessors had notice of. But if there was nothing among the trust documents which would have given them notice of an incumbrance, they will not be held liable for loss arising from their ignorance of it, even though they have in fact omitted to look into those documents. Hallows v. Lloyd, 58 L. J., Ch. 105 ; 39 Ch. D. 686 ; 59 L. T. 603 ; 37 W. R. 12. And see Phipps v. Lovegrove, supra.

—— Notice to Solicitor of Trustees.]—Quære, is a solicitor of trustees their agent for the purposes of notice? If so, does the rule that notice to one trustee is notice to all, apply where the notice has been to the solicitor of one trustee? Does the rule apply only so long as the person to whom notice has been given remains a trustee? W. C. was clerk to J. C. his father, a solicitor, who was a trustee with notice, which W. C. knew. W. C. upon the retirement of J. C. was made trustee. Did W. C. import into his character of trustee this antecedent knowledge for the purpose of notice? Durand's Trusts, In re, 1 L. T. 84 ; 8 W. R. 33.

Right of Mortgagee to receive Whole of Fund mortgaged.]—The assignee of a trust fund by way of mortgage with power to give receipts in the name of the mortgagor cannot compel the trustees of the fund to pay the whole over to him notwithstanding the existence of puisne incumbrancers. All that he is entitled to demand is the amount due upon the mortgage. Bell, In re. Jeffery v. Sayles, 65 L. J., Ch. 188 ; [1896] 1 Ch. 1 ; 73 L. T. 391 ; 44 W. R. 99—C. A.

Accretion to Trust Estate — Devise to First Mortgagees—Mortgage held on Trust.]—B., by will dated the 24th March, 1884, devised his freehold ground rent arising out of the house and premises, No. 7, W. Terrace, and all his interest in the said premises, "to the present mortgagees thereof." At the date of the will, and of B.'s death, there was no mortgage of the freehold ground rent in existence, but the leasehold premises out of which the rent arose were mortgaged by demise to the trustees of a certain settlement to secure moneys advanced by them out of the trust funds. These trustees and the beneficiaries under the settlement were alike strangers to B. :—Held, that the ground rent passed under the devise to the trustees of the settlement, but that they took upon the trusts of the settlement, and not beneficially. Payne's Settlement, In re, Kibble v. Payne, 54 L. T. 840.

General Principle.]—A trustee is of course entitled to all reasonable expenses of the trust, but not for personal trouble and loss of time, unless he makes out a special case therefor, before acceptance of trust. Brocksopp v. Barnes, 5 Madd. 90.

Settled rule, that, in all matters of trust or in the nature of trust, a trustee is not allowed any compensation for his trouble in the business entrusted to him. Ormsby, In re, 1 Ball & B. 189 ; 12 R. R. 13.

A trustee has no right to exact or charge any remuneration or bonus in respect of great advantages accrued to the cestuis que trust from services incident to the performance of the duties imposed by the deed of trust. Barrett v. Hartley, L. R. 2 Eq. 789 ; 12 Jur. (N.S.) 426 ; 14 L. T. 474 ; 14 W. R. 684.

A settled account by a cestui que trust, allowing a bonus to the trustee, was set aside. Ib.

Professional Business—Costs out of Pocket.]—A trustee acting as solicitor in the trust matters is merely entitled to costs out of pocket. The rule is not inflexible ; and compensation may, in special cases, be made to him under the authority of the court, by a fixed allowance, but not by allowing him to make the usual professional charges. Bainbrigge v. Blair, 8 Beav. 588 ; 9 Jur. 765.

Trustees can only be allowed costs out of pocket for professional business transacted by a firm, one of whom is a trustee, though the business is done by one of the partners who is not a trustee. Christophers v. White, 10 Beav. 523. See also post, 10.

Salary for Management of Road.]—Two persons, in whom was vested, under an act of parliament, the right to the tolls and profits arising from a certain road, for a term of fifty years, conveyed, by deed of May 27th, 1827, the same, and all their estate and interest therein, to A., B. and C. (the defendant), upon certain trusts therein mentioned; and subject thereto, in trust for the said A., B. and C., their executors, administrators, and assigns, as tenants in common, for their own use and benefit, for the residue of said term of fifty years; and the deed contained a provision, that in case any of the said trustees should be unable to join in the direction and superintendence of the said road, it should be lawful for any two of the said trustees to act of themselves in the management of the said road, and in all other things relating to the execution of the said trusts. The interests to which the said A. and B. were entitled under the said deed having become subsequently vested in the plaintiff, and C. (the defendant) having taken upon himself the exclusive control and management of the road, and insisted upon his right thereto, and also upon being paid a salary for his trouble and supervision:—Held, upon a bill filed by the plaintiff, disputing such right, that the defendant C. was entitled to have the sole management of the road, but that his claim for salary could not be maintained. Taylor v. Taylor, 4 Dr. & War. 124.

Commission of Mortgagee appointed Receiver by Co-Mortgagees.]—Mortgagor conveyed all his real and personal estate to three mortgagees in trust for creditors:—Held, that one of the mortgagees was not entitled to a commission on the rents received by him under an appointment as receiver by himself and his co-trustees. Nicholson v. Tutin, 3 Jur. (N.S.) 235.

Law of Scotland as to Trustee holding Office of Profit.]—Quære, how far the principle of English law, that a trustee cannot hold an office of profit under the trust (except with the express sanction of the court), has been established in Scotland. Quære, also, as to the soundness of the principle. Home v. Pringle, 8 Cl. & F. 264—H. L. (Sc.)

A trustee does not, by being cashier to the trust estate, incur any additional liability in respect of its management, beyond what he was subject to as trustee. Ib.

Payment into Court—Trustee Deducting Costs.]—A trustee paid into court the balance of the trust fund, having first deducted the amount which he claimed for costs, charges, and personal expenses, which amount he knew was objected to by his cestuis que trust, as being excessive:—Held, that the trustee ought to have paid into court the whole of the trust fund, leaving it to the court to decide the amount to which he might be entitled. Beaty v. Curson, 38 L. J., Ch. 161; L. R. 7 Eq. 194; 20 L. T. 61; 17 W. R. 132.

Auctioneer's Commission.]—A. assigned to B. timber and stock in trade, upon trust to sell and apply the money arising from the sale in paying the expenses of preparing for, making, and completing such sale or sales, "including the usual auctioneer's commission, and otherwise incidental to the aforesaid trusts." B. was auctioneer, and had been employed as such by A.:—Held, that the words appeared to have been inserted to provide for B. being employed in the sale, and that B. was entitled to charge his commission. Douglas v. Archbutt, 2 De G. & J. 148; 27 L. J., Ch. 271; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 315; 6 W. R. 306.

Appointment of Trustee as Receiver.]—Though a general, it is not an inflexible, rule that no remuneration will be allowed to a trustee appointed by the court receiver of the trust estate. The court has a discretion to grant or refuse it. The fact that nothing is said about remuneration in the judgment appointing a receiver does not preclude the court from subsequently allowing remuneration. Bignell, In re, Bignell v. Chapman, 61 L. J., Ch. 334; [1892] 1 Ch. 59; 66 L. T. 36; 40 W. R. 305—C. A.

—— Commission Paid to Rent-collector.]—Trustees who have been appointed by the court to receive the rents of, and to manage, a trust estate, receiving a commission upon the rental, will not be allowed to charge additional payments made by them to a collector of rents. Cox v. Bennett, 39 W. R. 308—C. A.

And see as to disallowance of salary, Bedingfield, In re. Bedingfield v. D'Eye, 57 L. T. 382, supra, col. 615, and Freeman's Settlement, In re, 57 L. J., Ch. 160; 37 Ch. D. 148; 57 L. T. 798; 36 W. R. 71.

xi. Application for Advice or Opinion of the Court.

See now R. S. C., Ord. LV.

a. Under the General Jurisdiction of the Court.

Notice to Trustees of Doubt as to Testator's Title to Devised Estate.]—Upon a bill filed by trustees for the directions of the court in execution of the trusts of a will, if the trustees have notice of any doubt as to the title of the testator to a part of the estate devised, the person who may be benefited by that doubt is properly made a defendant to the suit, and the court will not proceed to the execution of the trusts of the will, until that doubt is removed, either by a proceeding at law, or by such other course of inquiry as the court may think proper to direct. Talbot v. Radnor (Earl), 3 Myl. & K. 252.

As to Trusts upon which Property ought to be held.]—Where a trustee accepts the trust of a fund, with the knowledge that it is doubtful whether it ought to be held upon such trust, he is nevertheless entitled to come to the court for its direction, whether the trusts ought to be executed:—Held, by Lord Justice Turner; Lord Justice Knight Bruce entirely dissenting, Neale v. Davies, 23 L. J., Ch. 744; 2 Eq. R. 530; 2 W. R. 358.

Where trustees accept such a trust, with knowledge of the doubt, and with the same and no more knowledge, are called upon to part with the fund, by the cestui que trust, they are bound in morality to do so; and an adverse claimant would have no claim against them personally after they had parted with the fund in conformity with the trusts on which they accepted it: Per Lord Justice Knight Bruce. Ib.

The question having been raised in a suit between the trustees and cestui que trust of the deed, one of the vice-chancellors refused to pronounce a decree, but ordered the cause to stand over, with liberty to the plaintiff, the cestui que trust, to amend by adding parties; and their lordships differing in opinion, the order of the court below was affirmed. Ib.

Opinion as to Propriety of Applying Rents in Repairs and Permanent Improvements.]—Where trustees of a settlement, having a power of purchasing lands on the request of tenants for life, desired the opinion of the court as to the propriety of applying 1,200*l.* on such request, in repairs and permanent improvement, no answer was given on the petition: but it was intimated that, on a bill filed, there would be no objection on principle to the course proposed to be taken, and subsequently the order was made in a suit instituted for the purpose. Barrington's Settlement, In re, 1 J. & H. 142; 29 L. J., Ch. 807; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 1073; 8 W. R. 577.

Important and Difficult Question Involved.]—On application by trustees for the advice of the court, where an important and difficult question is involved, the proper course is, to file a bill instead of presenting a petition. Mockett's Trusts, In re, Johns. 628; 29 L. J., Ch. 294; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 142; 1 L. T. 136; 8 W. R. 235.

Trustees of an under-lease of church property authorised to take steps to obtain a clause for compensation for their tenant right of renewal, inserted in an act pending in parliament, to make a new street, which would require part of the property. Jones v. Powell, 4 Beav. 96.

Direction as to Investment of Moneys during Minority—Payment into Court.]—A testator bequeathed to each of his six grandchildren 200*l.*, and, in case any of them should not have attained twenty-one at the death of the testator, he directed his trustees, who were also his executors and residuary legatees, to pay interest for the legacies of such children, after the rate of 5 per cent., towards their maintenance and education. Upon differences arising between the father of the children and the trustees as to the investment of the money pending minorities, the trustees filed their bill to obtain the direction of the court, and for leave to pay the amount into court:—Held, that the trustees might pay the principal money into court; and, semble, the trustees will not be liable to make up the difference between the dividends on the money in court and the 5*l.* per cent. Abrahams v. Holderness, 6 Jur. 290.

Semble, if the direction in the will had been for the trustees to pay interest at 2 per cent., and the money was paid into court, the legatees would be entitled to the full amount of the dividends. Ib.

Effect of Invoking Aid of Court.]—After trustees have invoked the aid of the court in administering an estate, and a decree has been made, they cannot act in the matter of the administration except under the sanction of the court. Minors v. Battison, 46 L. J., Ch. 2; 1 App. Cas. 428; 35 L. T. 1; 25 W. R. 27—H. L. (E.)

Originating Summons — Act done outside Trust.]—Rule 3 (e) of Ord. LV. only relates to the doing, or the abstaining from doing, by trustees, of some act within the scope of their trusts; and an originating summons ought not to be taken out under that rule for the purpose of obtaining a direction to trustees to do, or to abstain from doing, an act which is outside the scope of their trust. Suffolk v. Lawrence, 32 W. R. 899.

Trustee acting under Special Case—Protection.]—By the combined effect of Ord. XXXIV., r. 8, and the saving clause in the Statute Law Revision Act, 1883, the protection given to trustees and others acting on the declaration of the court on a special case is preserved, notwithstanding the repeal of the act. Forster v. Schlesinger, 54 L. T. 51.

b. Under the Law of Property Amendment Act, 1859 (22 & 23 Vict. c. 35), s. 30. Repealed by Trustee Act, 1893.

Retrospective Effect of Statute.]—The 22 & 23 Vict. c. 35, s. 30, is retrospective in its operation. Simpson's Will, In re, 1 J. & H. 89; 2 L. T. 170; 8 W. R. 388.

Who may Apply.]—The court will make an order under 22 & 23 Vict. c. 35, s. 30, on the petition of a cestui que trust. Ward, In re, 13 L. T. 494; 14 W. R. 96.

As to Construction of Instruments.]—The court will not, upon a petition presented by a trustee or an executor under s. 30 of the 22 & 23 Vict. c. 25, for the opinion, advice, or direction of the court, construe an instrument or make any order affecting the rights of the parties to property. Such petitions should relate only to the management and investment of trust property. Lorenz, In re, 1 Dr. & Sm. 401; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 402; 4 L. T. 501; 9 W. R. 567.

The court declined, upon a petition for its opinion under 22 & 23 Vict. c. 35, s. 30, to decide whether an intestate's estate was liable upon a covenant to be implied in his marriage settlement. Evans, In re, 30 Beav. 232.

Questions of construction affecting capital of considerable amount will not be decided upon a petition under the 22 & 23 Vict. c. 35, s. 30. Bunnett, In re, 10 Jur. (N.S.) 1098.

The court will not, under 22 & 23 Vict. c. 35, s. 30, give its opinion for the guidance of trustees on the effect of a limitation contained in an instrument. Hooper's Estate, In re, 29 Beav. 656; 30 L. J., Ch. 795; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 595; 9 W. R. 729.

The court will not give an opinion under the 22 & 23 Vict. c. 35, upon matters of detail, which cannot be properly dealt with without the superintendence of the court and the assistance of affidavits. Barrington's Settlement, In re, 1 J. & H. 142; 29 L. J., Ch. 807; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 1073; 8 W. R. 577.

Therefore, where trustees of a settlement, having a power of purchasing lands on the request of tenants for life, desired the opinion of the court as to the propriety of applying 1,200*l.* on such request, in repairs and permanent improvement, no answer was given on the petition; but it was intimated that, on a bill filed, there would be no objection on principle to the course proposed to be taken, and subsequently the order was made in a suit instituted for that purpose. Ib.

On Questions of Difficulty.]—Where the opinion of the court is sought by petition under 22 & 23 Vict. c. 35, by executors of a will upon which questions of difficulty arise, and the assets are not distinctly ascertained, the court will not give its opinion unless at the wish, and with the consent, of all parties interested. Mockett's Trusts, In re, Johns. 623; 29 L. J., Ch. 294; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 142; 1 L. T. 136; 8 W. R. 235.

The 22 & 23 Vict. c. 35, s. 30, was not intended to provide for the decision of nice questions of law, but merely to procure for trustees the assistance of the court upon points of minor importance arising in the management and administration of trust property. Tyrrell's Trusts, In re, 23 L. R. Ir. 263.

Indemnity to Trustees.]—The opinion of the court upon a petition under the 22 & 23 Vict. c. 35, gives an indemnity to the trustees only upon the facts stated in the petition, is subject to no appeal, and will not preclude the filing a bill, which would seem the better course under the circumstances above stated. Mockett's Trusts, In re, supra.

Hypothetical Case.]—The court will not give its opinion on an hypothesis; therefore when a petition was presented under 22 & 23 Vict. c. 35, to obtain the advice of the court as to the mode in which calls not yet made on account of shares specifically bequeathed by a testator were to be met, the court ordered the petition to stand over till the call had been actually made. Box, In re, 11 W. R. 945.

As to Investments.]—On an application under s. 30 of 22 & 23 Vict. c. 35, for the opinion of the court whether, under a trust for investment in government or other personal securities, trustees would be justified in investing a trust fund in East India stock or railway debentures, or on mortgage of freehold, copyhold, or leasehold hereditaments, the court approved of an investment on freeholds in England or Wales, but declined to give any answer sanctioning investments in the other securities mentioned. Simson's Will, In re, 1 J. & H. 89; 2 L. T. 170; 8 W. R. 388.

If an act of parliament contains provisions enabling trustees, with the sanction of the court, to invest trust funds upon securities, neither recognised by the courts, contemplated by the legislature, nor sanctioned by the settlor or testator at the time the trusts were created, the court, in the absence of an express legislative declaration, will not give the act any other than a prospective operation, or advise trustees under the 22 & 23 Vict. c. 35, ss. 30, 32, to invest the trust funds upon any other securities than those comprised within the provisions of the instrument creating the trusts. Miles' Trusts, In re, 27 Beav. 579; 29 L. J., Ch. 47; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 1236; 1 L. T. 122; 8 W. R. 54.

The trustee of a will of a testator, who died in 1845, had power to invest on "real securities in England or Wales, but not in Ireland." The court declined advising the trustee to invest, under the powers contained in the 22 & 23 Vict. c. 35, s. 32, on a mortgage of a Scotch estate. Ib.

As to Compromise of Claim.]—The court will on a petition under 22 & 22 Vict., c. 35, s. 30, sanction the compromise by trustees of a claim depending on foreign law and the accounts of disbursements on an estate in a foreign country, which accounts the trustees have no means of verifying. Mackintosh's Settlement, In re, 42 L. J., Ch. 208.

As to Appointment of Trustees.]—A father bequeathed a share of a fund in trust for his daughter and her children, power being given to the trustees to invest it in the public funds of any colony or dependency of the united kingdom. The daughter married a domiciled citizen of the Canadian dominion, and was permanently resident in Canada. It was proposed to appoint two persons, citizens of Canada, trustees, and to transfer the share of the trust fund to them for the purpose of investment in securities in Canada. On a petition under 22 & 23 Vict. c. 35, s. 30, the court was of opinion that such proposed appointment and transfer might be made. Smith's Trusts, In re, 26 L. T. 820; 20 W. R. 695.

As to Granting Leases.]—Upon a special case presented under the 22 & 23 Vict., c. 35, and the 23 & 24 Vict., c. 38, the court declined to give power to trustees to grant leases of real estate for a term not exceeding ten years. Shaw's Trusts, In re, L. R. 12 Eq. 124; 25 L. T. 22; 19 W. R. 1025.

As to Payment of Income.]—A married woman who was of unsound mind, but not so found by inquisition, was entitled for her separate use to the income of certain trust funds. Her written consent was also required to the investments by the trustees. Upon a petition under Lord St. Leonards' Act (22 & 23 Vict., c. 35, s. 30) for the advice of the court:—Held, that the court had jurisdiction to entertain the petition; that the whole income might be paid to the husband on his undertaking to apply it to the maintenance of the wife: and that her consent to the investments might be dispensed with. T——, In re, 15 Ch. D. 78; 29 W. R. 42.

As to Retaining Mortgages.]—A testator lent money on thirteen mortgages of 100*l.* each, granted under an act of parliament, on the security of stallage rents, and received 4*l.* per cent. interest. He devised and bequeathed all his realty and personalty upon trusts for sale and conversion. After his death the trustees discovered that the mortgagors had exceeded their borrowing powers, and that the mortgages were only worth 74*l.* each, and they sold five at that price. If the remainder were sold, the income of the beneficiaries would be reduced from 32*l.* to 20*l.* per annum. On a petition by the trustees, under 22 & 23 Vict. c. 35, the court was of opinion that they would be justified in retaining the remaining mortgages in their hands. Faning's Trusts, In re, 10 Jur. (N. S.) 307; 10 L. T. 61.

As to Payment of Costs incurred by Tenant for Life.]—The trustees of settled estates presented a petition under s. 30 of Lord St. Leonards' Act, 1859, asking the opinion of the court (1) whether they were justified in applying money in their hands, proceeds of sales and enfranchisements of the settled estates, towards paying costs incurred by the tenant for life as plaintiff and defendant in a series of actions undertaken by him to resist claims of rights of common over the settled estates; (2) whether they might apply similar sums to be derived from future sales, and towards discharging their costs; (3) whether in discharging these costs they might properly treat them as a solicitor and client costs; (4) whether they might adopt the acts and proceedings of the tenant for life. The petition was also entitled in the Settled Estates Act, 1877, under which the trustees prayed that such costs as were not provided for as above might be raised and paid as between solicitor and client by means of a charge on the settled estates:—Held, that the first four questions might be answered in the affirmative, and that the order for raising and paying the residue of the costs as between solicitor and client might be made to the court under s. 17, although no application had been made to the court before commencing proceedings. De la Warr's (Earl) Settled Estates, In re, 51 L. J., Ch. 407; 46 L. T. 340.

Where proceedings have been instituted (though without the preliminary sanction of the court), whether by claim in an action, or by defence to an action, for the protection of a settled estate, the court will, if it sees fit, give permission to the trustees to apply the proceeds of the sale of a portion of the estate in defraying the costs already incurred, and which must necessarily be incurred, by the tenant for life, in instituting such proceedings. S. C., 50 L. J., Ch. 383; 16 Ch. D. 587; 44 L. T. 56; 29 W. R. 350.

The tenant for life of settled estates having successfully opposed a sewage scheme proposed by the sanitary authority of the parish in which the settled estates were situate, on the ground that the works would deteriorate the value of the estate, incurred certain costs. The trustees of the settled estates applied, under 22 & 23 Vict. c. 35, s. 30, for the advice of the court whether they would be justified in paying these costs out of money in their hands, representing the proceeds of part of the settled estates sold under the order of the court made in 1874. The petition was entitled in the matter of the Settled Estates Act, 1856, and the Amendment Acts of 1858 and 1864, and the Act 22 & 23 Vict. c. 35. The court was of opinion that s. 30 of the act 22 & 23 Vict. c. 35 only gave the court power to advise, and did not empower it to authorise the payment, but that the case came within s. 17 of the Settled Estates Act, 1877, and ordered that the petition should be amended by entitling it in the matter of that act, when, on the amount expended by the tenant for life, not exceeding a sum named, being proved before the registrar, the court would advise the trustees to pay it. Willan's Settled Estates, In re, or Twyford Abbey Settled Estates, In re, 45 L. T. 745; 30 W. R. 268.

Practice on Application.]—Where an application was, under the 22 & 23 Vict. c. 35, s. 30, made in chambers by trustees for the direction of the court as to certain repairs of a permanent nature proposed to be made on the property mentioned in the will, the vice-chancellor directed that the matter should be brought before him in court upon petition, it not being, in his opinion, intended that the court should deal with questions of this kind without the assistance of counsel. Dennis's Will, In re, 5 Jur. (N.S.) 1388; 1 L. T. 158.

On a petition under the 22 & 23 Vict. c. 35, s. 30, the court will not direct an inquiry at chambers. Mockett's Trusts, In re, Johns. 628; 29 L. J., Ch. 294; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 142; 1 L. T. 136; 8 W. R. 235.

A petition under the 22 & 23 Vict. c. 35, s. 30, ought not, in the first instance, to be served upon any one, but an application should be made in chambers as to the persons upon whon the petition should be served. No affidavits can be read on such petition. Muggeridge's Settlement, In re, Johns. 625; 29 L. J., Ch. 288; 6 Jur. (N.S) 192; 1 L. T. 436; 8 W. R. 234.

When a petition is presented under 22 & 23 Vict. c. 35, the petitioners must serve such persons as they think proper, and must not bring on the petition merely in order to ascertain who ought to be served. Green's Trust, In re, 29 L. J., Ch. 716; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 530. And see 6 Jur. (N.S.) 479; 2 L. T. 275; 8 W. R. 403.

On a petition (not served on any person) by English and Irish trustees, under 22 & 23 Vict. c. 35, s. 30 (the domicil of the testator and the tenant for life being Irish and English respectively), for the opinion of the court as to the power of the trustees to make certain investments, the court, there having been no application to the court of chancery in Ireland, exercised the jurisdiction, and did not require the petition to be served on any one. French's Trusts, In re, L. R. 15 Eq. 68.

c. Investment of Trust Funds.

Statutes.]—Trustee Act, 1893, ss. 1—9, Trustee Act, 1894, s. 4.

General Principles.]—Trustees not answerable for having applied the trust property, even to what turned out a losing adventure, if without fraud or negligence. Wilkinson v. Stafford, 1 Ves. 41.

Trustee investing money at his own discretion, runs risk of depreciation. Hancom v. Allen, Dick. 498.

A testator empowered his trustees to lend such part of the trust moneys as they should think proper to A. and B., who were respectively his son and son-in-law:—Held, that this authorised a several loan to either. Parker v. Bloxam, 20 Beav. 295.

One year is a "reasonable time" in which a purchase directed by will should be made. Parry v. Warrington, 6 Madd. 155; 22 R. R. 264.

It is the duty of a trustee who executes a power to show that he has complied with the exigencies required by it. So where he varies the investment of the trust fund, the burden of proof lies on him to show that it is a fit and proper investment. Norris v. Wright, 14 Beav. 291.

If the executor lays out the assets on private securities, all benefit made thereby shall accrue to the estate, yet the executor shall answer all the deficiency, and the particular circumstances of good conduct in the executor cannot prevail against the general rule. Adye v. Feuilleteau, 1 Cox, 24.

An executor bonâ fide invested part of the assets of his testator in the purchase of bank stock. He is not answerable for any further loss than was occasioned by his buying bank stock instead of three-and-half per cent. government stock. Hynes v. Redington, 1 Jo. & Lat. 589; 7 Ir. Eq. R. 409; Ll. & G. t. Plunk. 33.

Where a will directs dividends to be paid to the tenant for life at Lady-day and Michaelmas-day, the money was ordered to be invested in the 3 per cents. reduced; the dividends on that stock being payable at that period. Caldecott v. Caldecott, 4 Madd. 189.

Reduction in Rate of Interest.]—A testator gave a legacy of 12,500*l.* 4 per cent. annuities. At the making of his will there was a stock called new 4 per cents., in which he had a small sum, and a stock called 4 per cents. consolidated, of which he was a holder to a very large amount. Before the death of the testator the latter stock was reduced to 3½ per cent.; another 4 per cent. stock was created. The investment of the legacy is to be made in an existing 4 per cent. stock, and not in the stock which had been reduced to 3½ per cent. Banks v. Sladen, 1 Russ. & M. 216; Tam. 407; 8 L. J. (o.s.) Ch. 101.

—— Right of Remainderman.]—Where the question as to the propriety of an investment by trustees for a tenant for life and remainderman arises between the latter parties, while the court will not, on the one hand, sanction a collusive and fraudulent investment that would have the effect of diminishing the capital to which the remainderman will be entitled on the death of the tenant for life, yet, on the other hand, it is not in the power of the remainderman to require the investment to be made at the lowest rate of interest, in order that the capital may be increased. Vickery v. Evans, 33 Beav. 376; 3 N. R. 286; 33 L. J., Ch. 261; 10 Jur. (N.S.) 30; 9 L. T. 822; 12 W. R. 237.

Where, however, the trustees are also residuary legatees, and where there is a large discretion reposed in them, and no fraud in the case, it would seem that there is no rule prohibiting an investment of the trust funds at 4*l.* 5*s.* per cent., on sufficient security. Ib.

Personal estate was bequeathed to a trustee to lay out upon personal or government security, paying the interest to one for life, remainder as to the principal sum, after the life interest to others:—Held, that upon the bill of the next in remainder, the money not already laid out upon private security must be laid out on government security. Holmes v. Moore, 2 Moll. 328.

—— Consols.]—Although the court will not, except under special circumstances, invest a fund in court in any stock except consols, yet if executors or trustees have power under the will to invest in other government securities, they will not be held liable for a breach of trust for so doing, although the stock in which they invest should be reduced, provided they acted fairly and reasonably. Where a testator gave personal estate to his executors, upon trust to convert the same and to invest the produce in "government or some other good security," and left a sum of navy 5*l.* per cents., which were afterwards reduced to 3*l.* 5*s.* per cents., the surviving executrix, who was also tenant for life, was not held liable for having permitted the fund to remain in that investment. Baud v. Fardell, 7 De G. M. & G. 628; 25 L. J., Ch. 21; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 1214; 4 W. R. 40.

Words held sufficient to give an option of investing on real security or in consols. Apsland v. Watte, 25 L. J., Ch. 53; 3 W. R. 526.

Power of executors as to investment of funds under a power to employ them in any manner they should think proper. Dickonson v. Player, C. P. Cooper, 178; 2 Jur. 870.

Legacy to be Invested in Lands for a Charity.]—Where it appeared upon an information against the Fishmongers' Company, that the company had omitted to invest a legacy directed to be invested in land for the benefit of the charity, but had applied their own funds in aid of the charity to a larger amount than the investment would have produced; the court held, that the neglect to invest the legacy, either in land, or (if that could not be advantageously accomplished) in some separate fund, was a substantial ground of complaint, and directed accordingly such investment as appeared most beneficial to the charity, but refused an inquiry as to the loss alleged, but not shown to have been sustained by the neglect to invest. And, considering that the suit was not instituted for the benefit of the charity, the court directed the defendants to pay the costs, as between party and party, and refused the relators their extra costs out of the charity fund. Att.-Gen. v. Fishmongers Co., 1 Keen, 492.

Purchase of Lands.]—Trustees authorised by a settlement to lend the trust fund upon such security as they should think advantageous laid out a portion of the trust fund in the purchase of lands in fee simple; an offer having been made to purchase the lands at a profit, the court directed the purchase to be completed, and the purchase money to be brought into court to the credit of the trust. Robinson v. Robinson, Ir. R. 10 Eq. 189.

Onus as to Sufficiency of irregular Securities.]—When trustees lend on irregular securities, the onus is on them to show that they were of sufficient value, not on the cestui que trust to show that they were insufficient. Stretton v. Ashmall, 3 Drew. 9; 24 L. J., Ch. 277; 3 W. R. 4.

Measure of Liability.]—Where executors were declared liable for a breach of trust in allowing leaseholds to be enjoyed by the tenant for life till the expiration of the term, and responsible for the value at the testator's death, and the title to such leaseholds was shown to have been bad, and not marketable:—Held, nevertheless, that the value must be fixed on the footing of the actual enjoyment, and not by the price they would have fetched if sold at the proper time. Mehrtens v. Andrews, 3 Beav. 72.

Partnership—Change of Members.]—Where a testator directs his trustees to invest certain funds, "either by placing the same on deposit in the hands of" a specified firm, "should they be willing to receive it at interest, but, if not, to invest the trust moneys" as in the will stated; the testator must in the absence of indications of a contrary intention, be held to have placed reliance in the partners at the time his will takes effect; that, consequently, on a change in the membership of the firm, it is the duty of his trustees to call in the trust funds, and they are liable to the beneficiaries for any loss which may occur by reason of their not having done so. Tucker v. Tucker, 63 L. J., Ch. 223; [1894] 1 Ch. 724; 8 R. 113; 70 L. T. 127; 42 W. R. 266.

Conversion of Bank Shares.]—C. bequeathed 2,000*l.* to trustees upon trust to invest in real estate; and he then gave certain cottages and hereditaments to the same trustees on the same trusts as he had declared as to the estate to be purchased with the 2,000*l.* He then gave his thirty shares in the Leeds Banking Company to the same trustees upon the same or the like trusts as were declared concerning the 2,000*l.* and the cottages. The banking company failed, and the trustees had paid large sums out of the testator's estate on account of the shares. A suit was instituted for the administration of the testator's estate, and the master of the rolls considered the trustees of the will liable for not having converted the shares:—Held, that the directions for investment contained in the will could not be taken to apply equally to the 2,000*l.* and the cottages, and must be read reddendo singula singulis. The bequest of the bank shares was specific, and the shares need not be converted unless the direction to convert was clear. The court was of opinion that it was not clear, and reversed the order of the Master of the Rolls. Craven v. Craddock, 20 L. T. 638—L. C.

Power to Sever Fund for Investment.]—A testatrix directed her trustees to pay the interest or annual rent of 2,000*l.* to Mrs. A. during her life, and after her death to divide that sum among her children; and to pay the interest or annual rent of a similar amount to Mrs. B. in life-rent, with the fee to her children. The trustees were empowered by the deed to realise, or to continue to "hold any or all of such shares or stocks" as might belong to the testatrix at her decease, "should they consider it advisable or expedient to do so, without any personal responsibility for loss, if any, thereby sustained": with power also "to lend or place out on such securities, heritable or movable, as they shall consider advantageous, the aforesaid legacies of 2,000*l.* and 2,000*l.* respectively, the securities to be conceived in favour of my trustees, and that for the purposes of this trust and no otherwise." The testatrix at her death held 850*l.* stock of an unlimited bank. The trustees, at the desire of Mrs. A., and without consulting Mrs. B., set 200*l.* of this stock aside as part of the fund appropriated to Mrs. A., and realised the remainder. They afterwards, on the narrative of the purposes of the trust deed, and of the sums invested for the two specific legacies of 2,000*l.*, and that they had paid the residue, received their discharge from Mrs. A. and Mrs. B. Statements and separate accounts of interest on the investments allocated to each were sent half-yearly to Mrs. A. and Mrs. B. All the investments stood in the names of the testatrix's trustees. The bank became insolvent, and calls were made upon the trustees in respect of the 200*l.* stock. They sought to indemnify themselves for payment of the calls out of the whole trust estate. Mrs. B. objected to any portion of her legacy being taken:—Held, reversing the decision of the court below, that the trustees had the power to sever and had severed the two legacies, and had placed them in separate investments for behoof of the respective beneficiaries, and therefore the trustees had no right to relief from the investments allotted to Mrs. B. and her family for liabilities incurred on those allotted to Mrs. A. and her family. Garland, Ex parte (10 Ves. 110), followed. Fraser or Robinson v. Murdoch, 6 App. Cas. 855; 45 L. Investment in such Securities as the Trustees shall "think fit."]—A power to trustees to invest in such securities as they "think fit" means as they "honestly think fit." Smith, In re, Smith v. Thompson, 65 L. J., Ch. 159; [1896] 1 Ch. 71; 73 L. T. 604; 44 W. R. 270.

Power to Change Securities with Consent.]—Discretion of trustees having power to change securities with consent, is not to be controlled by court, unless mischievous and ruinous to that fund. De Manneville v. Crompton, 1 V. & B. 354; 12 R. R. 233.

Purchase of Railway Stock bearing High Rate of Interest—Securities of a permanent Nature.]—A testator directed his trustees to lay out and invest 15,000*l.* upon Government, real, or personal security, or in such stocks, funds, or shares as they might, in their absolute discretion, think fit, and pay the interest to his wife for life; the capital to be for his children. The trustees, with the sanction of the widow, invested a portion of the money upon railway stock bearing a high rate of interest. Upon her death the securities were greatly reduced in value:—Held, that the trustees were bound to invest upon securities of a permanent nature; that, in the absence of evidence to the contrary, it must be assumed from the rate of interest that these investments were not permanent, and that the 15,000*l.* must be invested for the benefit of the children of the testator. Stewart v. Sanderson, L. R. 10 Eq. 26; 18 W. R. 278.

Express Direction for Conversion and Investment.]—An express direction, by a testator, for the conversion and for investment of his personal property, from time to time as trustees may think fit, does not necessarily prevent the operation of the general rule of investing in securities approved by the court. Caldicott v. Caldicott, 1 Y. & C. C. C. 312; 11 L. J., Ch. 158; 6 Jur. 232.

Power to Postpone Sale of Real Estate.]—A testator directed his trustees "as soon as conveniently might be after his decease, to sell his real estates," and invest the proceeds in government or real securities. The trustees postponed the sale for eleven and thirteen years. The value of the estates at the testator's decease was 1,500*l.*, which would then produce 2,630*l.* consols. The estates, however, realised 2,112*l.*, which only produced 2,300*l.* consols:—Held, first that under the terms of the will the trustees had a discretionary power to postpone the sales; and secondly that such discretion had been discreetly exercised. Warner v. Torkington, 4 L. J., Ch. 193.

Where trustees have a discretion, the test of a negligent breach of trust is what would have been the course of the court under similar circumstances. Ib.

Where trustees have a discretion as to what part of the testator's estate may be converted the court will not interfere with such discretion, at all events after a considerable time has elapsed since it has been exercised. Sewell's Estate, In re, 40 L. J., Ch. 135; L. R. 11 Eq. 80; 23 L. T. 835.

Trustees Declining to Exercise Discretion.]—Where trustees are directed to pay a certain sum to a person for life, and are empowered according to their discretion to invest the trust funds out of which that sum is to arise, but decline or neglect to act, and the assistance of a court of equity is sought in order to carry into effect the purposes of the will, the court will not, as a matter of course, exercise that discretion, but will only act on its established and known rules, unless the intention of the testator plainly appears to exclude such a mode of proceeding. Prendergast v. Prendergast, 3 H. L. Cas. 195; 14 Jur. 989.

A testator, after making certain specific bequests, proceeded as follows: "I give and bequeath to my trustees hereinafter named, so much of my personal estate and effects, as, at the time of my decease, shall produce the clear annual income of 1,500*l.*; and I direct that the same shall be selected and appropriated, and set apart, as soon as may be, &c., by my said trustees, in their uncontrolled discretion, upon trust to pay" to his wife the dividends during her life or widowhood; and after her death or second marriage, the same was to become part of his residuary personal estate. He directed that if the annual produce so appropriated should be increased or reduced in amount, his wife was to receive the increased or reduced dividends, as the case might be, in lieu of those before directed to be paid to her. The trustees were fully empowered, at their discretion, to permit the personal estate to continue on the same securities as at the time of his decease, or to sell and reinvest, as the testator himself might do. Some of the foreign funds ceased to pay any dividends, and the trustees refused to exercise their discretion as to altering the investments, but submitted to act as the court should direct. The court refused to exercise the discretion vested in the trustees, but acting on its general rule in such matters (as the testator had not expressed a different intention), directed the annuity to be raised by the purchase of an adequate sum in consols, and ordered the master to inquire, having regard to the interests of other parties under the will, what investments must be called in to effect this object:—Held, that the decree thus made was correct. Ib.

Power to Purchase Irredeemable Annuity]—By a will a sum was given to two trustees on trust to pay the income to C. for his life, with a gift over of the principal on his death; but the trustees had a discretionary power to purchase with the principal an irredeemable annuity for the life of C. for his benefit. The trustees did not purchase an annuity, but one of them paid to C. during his life, from time to time, various small sums, amounting in the aggregate to more than the total income, but less than the principal:—Held, that this was a proper exercise of the discretionary power. Messeena v. Carr, 39 L. J., Ch. 216; L. R. 9 Eq. 260; 22 L. T. 3; 18 W. R. 415.

Discretionary Trusts in General.] — See ante, B. 7.

iii. Express Powers of Investment with Consent.

In Funds or on Real Security or in Purchase of Estates—Loan to Bank without Written Consent.]—A marriage settlement recited that it had been agreed that a debt should be assigned to the trustees upon trust, after calling it in, to invest the money upon such security as should be approved of by the husband and his father, either on government, real, or personal security; and by the witnessing part, the debt was assigned upon trust for calling in, and investing the same on government, real, or personal security, or in the purchase of lands at the sole order and by the sole direction, consent, and approbation of the husband and his father or the survivor, and to stand possessed thereof on the trust therein mentioned. Then followed the trusts, and a power in the usual form for the trustees, with the consent of the husband and his father or the survivor in writing, to invest the trust money in the funds, or on real security, or in the purchase of freehold or leasehold estates:—Held, that the last clause controlled and interpreted the former parts of the settlement, and that a loan of the trust fund to a bank in which one of the trustees was a partner on an interest note without a written consent, was a breach of trust constituting a provable debt against the separate estate of the trustee. Hakewill, Ex parte, Wise, In re, 2 Mont. D. & D. 607; 6 Jur. 787.

Consols — Sale without Consent.] — Consols were settled to the separate use of the wife for life, with a power to appoint by will, and with a power for the trustees, with the consent of the wife, to alter the securities, such securities to be either real or in the public funds. The trustees, without such consent, sold the consols, and invested the produce in long annuities, which they afterwards sold and lent the money, which was afterwards received by the husband, who invested it in leaseholds. The wife received the long annuities until sold, and afterwards joined her husband in executing a deed, reciting that the sale of the long annuities and the subsequent investments had been with her consent:—Held, that the appointees of the fund under her will were entitled, as against the husband and trustees, to have the consols replaced, and that the interest, over which the wife had a general power of appointment, was not liable to make good the breach of trust. Kellaway v. Johnson, 5 Beav. 319; 6 Jur. 751.

Power to invest in Freeholds or Copyholds of Inheritance—Purchase of Copyholds for Life without Consent.]—The trustees of a marriage settlement being empowered by it to invest the trust funds in freeholds, or copyholds of inheritance, with the consent of the husband and wife, authorised the husband to purchase a certain estate, as an investment of part of the trust funds, and afterwards they sold out a sufficient part of those funds to pay for the estate, and the husband received the proceeds. The estate was copyhold for lives, and the purchase was made without the wife's consent:—Held, nevertheless, that, as between the husband and the trustees, he must be considered to have purchased the estate for them. Trench v. Harrison, 17 Sim. 111.

Consent by Tenant for Life just of Age to Inadequate Security.]—Where a tenant for life gave his consent (as required by the terms of a settlement) to the investment by trustees of trust funds upon a particular mortgage :—Held, that he could not afterwards, on the security turning out inadequate, complain that it was an improper investment ; but, the loss being chiefly attributable to the subsequent mismanagement and negligence of the trustees, that he might recover against the trustees the loss of interest incurred thereby, and that his original consent to the improper investment gave them no counter-claim against the funds in court representing his life interest, in respect of the costs, &c., incurred by them in suits and proceedings instituted on account of the trust funds. Lockhart v. Reilly, 25 L. J., Ch. 697 ; 3 W. R. 227—L. C.

The consent of the tenant for life was obtained from him by the acting trustee, when he was just of age, in pecuniary difficulties, and without a proper knowledge of the facts, yet the deed which signified such consent never having been set aside :—Held, that the court was bound to treat it as a binding consent. Ib.

Funds Invested on Inadequate Security — Consent of Tenant for Life Refused.]—Where trust funds are invested on inadequate security, it is the duty of the trustees to re-invest them, although the written consent of the tenant for life, rendered necessary to any change in the investment, is refused, and the security is one expressly authorised by the trust. Harrison v. Thexton, 4 Jur. (N.S.) 550.

—— Stock—Sale with Consent of Intended Husband and Wife — Loan without Security.]—Stock was transferred into the names of trustees of a marriage settlement, in trust for the intended wife for life, with trusts over. The trustees had power to sell out the stock and invest it on mortgage or other securities, with the consent of the intended husband and wife. After the execution of the settlement, and before the marriage, the intended wife and husband and the settlor signed a memorandum, requesting the trustees to lend the stock to the owners or lessees of a particular property called V., who at that time were the settlor and two others. The stock was sold out and lent to the three, but no security was taken. The settlor then sold his interest in the property called V. to the other two, who gave a mortgage on the same :—Held, that the loan was a breach of trust on the part of the trustees. A bill was filed by the wife, her daughter, who had attained twenty-one, and her infant children, for the restoration of the stock ; and by the decree the stock was ordered to be brought into court. Fowler v. Reynal, 2 De G. & Sm. 749 ; 13 Jur. 649. Affirmed, 3 Mac. & G. 500 ; 21 L. J., Ch. 121 ; 13 Jur. 1019.

Suit without Consent of Husband and Wife for Enforcement of Charge on Hotel.] — A marriage settlement empowered the two trustees to vary the investment of the trust funds, "with the consent in writing of the husband and wife." Part of the trust funds consisted of 1,000*l.*, which was a first charge on an hotel and premises, of which the husband was, at the time of the marriage, the sole proprietor. Afterwards, the hotel was destroyed by fire, but was rebuilt on the same site, enlarged by the addition of adjoining ground. Subsequently the husband became bankrupt, and one of the trustees became, by purchase, sole proprietor of the new hotel and premises. The other trustee filed a bill against him, and against the assignees in bankruptcy of the husband, and prayed that the 1,000*l.* might be raised by a sale of the premises. It did not appear that the consent of the husband and wife had been obtained : —Held, that the want of the consent could not fetter the action of the court, which, if satisfied that the existing security was insufficient, was bound, independently of any consent, and in order to protect the interests of all the cestuis que trust, to require that the money should be called in and properly invested ; and the court decreed that the 1,000*l.* should be raised out of the premises on which it was charged. Costello v. O'Rorke, Ir. R. 3 Eq. 172.

Another portion of the trust funds consisted of 1,000*l.*, which was paid in cash to the two trustees, who, in breach of trust, invested it in ordinary railway shares. Thereby a loss was sustained ; and the trustees, in further breach of trust, transferred these shares to the N. Bank, to secure the private debt of the husband, the tenant for life. Subsequently O., one of the trustees (without the knowledge of his co-trustee), procured an assignment (for a nominal consideration) of those shares to two persons who became trustees thereof for the R. Bank, which had made to the husband large advances, the full amount of which was secured by the guarantee of O. A week after this assignment, the amount of the husband's debt to the N. Bank was paid by a cheque on the R. Bank, which, before the transfer of the shares was lodged with it, cashed that cheque out of the original credit given to the husband. These shares were sold, without the other trustee's knowledge, for 592*l.* 10*s.*, which sum was applied in reducing the debt due by the husband to the R. Bank. O. obtained from the husband mortgages of the hotel, furniture, &c., to the amount which covered the whole sum guaranteed by him to the R. Bank :—Held, that O. was, as between him and his co-trustee, primarily bound to replace the 592*l.* 10*s.* Ib.

Debt to be Called in and Invested at Request of Settlor—Payment by Debtor to Trustees without Request.]—A., on her marriage, assigned a debt due to her from B. to three trustees, upon trust, when requested by her to call it in and invest it, and hold it in trust for A., her husband and children. B., with full notice, but without such request, paid part of the money to the husband by order of the trustees, and other part to the trustees for the express purpose of being advanced to the husband in breach of trust. The money was lost :—Held, that B., as well as the trustees, was responsible for the breach of trust. Andrews v. Bousfield, 10 Beav. 511.

Part of Trust Fund Outstanding on Husband's Note of Hand.]—Trustees of a marriage settlement were empowered, with consent of the husband and wife, to invest the funds on such security, "either real or personal," as they, with such consent, should think proper. At the date of the marriage a sum of 2,500*l.*, part of the trust funds, was outstanding on the note of hand of the husband, having been advanced to him by the intended wife prior to the marriage. A separation having taken place, but the wife, nevertheless, desiring that the fund should remain in the husband's hands :—Held, that this investment might be continued until further order on the husband executing a bond to the trustees for the amount. Picard v. Anderson, L. R. 13 Eq. 608 ; 26 L. T. 725.

Re-Investment without Consent in Railway Debentures.]—By a settlement, the trustees were authorised to invest the trust money in debentures, preference shares, or other securities, issued or guaranteed by any incorporated public company paying a dividend, or guaranteed income; and, with the consent in writing of the tenant for life (notwithstanding her coverture), to alter, vary and transpose the funds and securities from time to time. The trustees, without any consent, invested the trust money in debentures of a railway, which were afterwards paid off, and the money then received was, in like manner, reinvested in debentures of another line. The dividends on that line were guaranteed by the contractors of it. The tenant for life and her husband joined in signing the receipts for the dividends from the latter investment, till the contractors failed, when the line ceased to pay anything. The wife died ; but after her death the husband received a dividend from the subsequent investment. On a bill by him against the trustees of the settlement, to make them liable for a breach of trust:—Held, that the previous consent in writing of the wife was not required to an investment by the trustees ; and that he could not make them liable for a breach of trust. Stevens v. Robertson, 37 L. J., Ch. 499 ; 18 L. T. 427 ; 16 W. R. 724.

Prayer for Payment of Trust Moneys — Form of Decree.]—The husband was entitled under the settlement to the trust funds for his life ; and under his wife's will to the absolute interest in them in remainder (subject to the payment thereout, on his death, of certain legacies). He, as the executor of his wife's will, wished to pay the legacies forthwith, out of the settlement moneys ; and for that purpose to have those moneys paid to him on his undertaking to satisfy the legatees :—Held, that the proper decree was to declare the trust funds bound by the trusts of the settlement and the will, with liberty to all parties interested to apply. Ib.

iv. Advancement of Trust Funds to Husband.

a. Express Power.

Advance without Written Consent.]—By a marriage settlement the interest of a trust fund was limited to a wife for life, for her separate use, with power to the trustees, upon her consent in writing, to advance the trust fund to her husband, upon the security of his bond ; if the trustees, with consent of the wife, advance the fund to the husband, but without her written consent, and without the husband's bond, and if the trust fund be lost by his subsequent bankruptcy, the trustees are not entitled to be indemnified to the extent of the wife's interest. Cocker v. Quayle, 1 Russ. & M. 535.

[[—— Acquiescence.]—By a marriage settlement, 700*l.* then in the hands of H., was agreed to be transferred to the joint account of H. and two other trustees, to be held by them upon trust to pay the same to the lady at her request in writing, and, subject thereto, upon trust, for her separate use, and on her death, as she should by will appoint, with certain trusts over in default. The money was left for many years, with the lady's acquiescence, in the hands of H., who advanced to the husband the greater part of the principal, as to 200*l.* with the lady's knowledge, but not by her request in writing :—Held, that H. was liable to replace the 500*l.* but no more, and that the lady was disentitled to relief against the other trustees by reason of acquiescence. Jones v. Higgins, 35 L. J., Ch. 403 ; L. R. 2 Eq. 538 ; 14 L. T. 126 ; 14 W. R. 448.

Power to trustees to advance to A. 1,000*l.* with consent of B. under her hand, signed by two witnesses. Trustees advance the sum without consent. Subsequent acquiescence by such deed not sufficient, and trustees ordered to refund. Bateman v. Davis, 3 Madd. 98 ; 18 R. R. 200.

Prospective Consent.] — Trustees were empowered by a settlement to lend the trust funds to the husband, with the consent in writing of the wife. They lent him part of the funds, the wife by deed consenting to that loan and to the loan of the remaining trust moneys at such times and in such proportions as the husband might require, and the husband covenanting to repay the loan then made in six months on demand. Further parts of the trust moneys were advanced. The moneys advanced were all lost by the insolvency of the husband :—Held, that the trustees were not bound to call in the money at the end of six months, the form of the wife's consent showing that she sanctioned the loan for an indefinite time. Held also that the wife could not give a prospective consent, but her consent was necessary to each particular loan. Child v. Child, 20 Beav. 50.

Subsequent Consent—Bankruptcy of Debtor.]—Trustees of a marriage settlement held a bond of the husband for securing 6,000*l.* six weeks after the marriage. The trusts were to permit the money to remain on this security with the written consent of the wife and her husband, or to call in and invest the same upon government security with the like consent. The trustees without any written consent, permitted the money to remain upon the bond, and the husband became bankrupt. A composition was made by him of 16*s.* 6*d.* in the pound, and paid to the other creditors, and the fiat was annulled, the trustees being consenting parties. They did not receive the composition of 16*s.* 6*d.* on the 2,000*l.*, and the husband again became bankrupt. The trustees after the first bankruptcy obtained the wife's written consent that the money should not be called in. The whole was ultimately lost, although it was proved that 16*s.* 6*d.* in the pound might have been recovered :—Held, that the trustees were liable for the whole amount of the 2,000*l.* Wiles v. Gresham, 5 De G. M. & G. 770 ; 3 Eq. R. 116 ; 24 L. J., Ch. 264 ; 3 W. R. 87.

By a clause in a marriage settlement, trustees were empowered and required, at the request in writing of the wife, to advance part of the trust moneys to the husband, on the security of his bond. After the marriage, the husband was arrested, went to prison, and took the benefit of the Insolvent Debtors Act. The wife then applied to the trustee for a loan to the husband, according to the terms of the settlement :—Held, that such a change had taken place in the circumstances of the husband, as rendered the clause inapplicable to him, and consequently that the trustee was justified in refusing to lend the money. Boss v. Godsall, 1 Y. & C. C. C. 617; 11 L. J., Ch. 391; 7 Jur. 146.

b. Concurrence of Wife.

Trust Property Transferred to Husband with Consent of Wife.]—Stock was settled on a wife, for her separate use, for life, with a power of appointment by will. The trustees, at the request of the husband and wife, sold out the stock, and paid the proceeds to the husband, who afterwards became bankrupt. The wife filed a bill to compel the trustees to replace the stock, and obtained a decree, under which the trustees transferred part of the stock into court, and they were allowed time to transfer the remainder. The wife died, having by her will appointed the stock to her husband, and appointed him her executor. He filed a bill of revivor and supplement against the trustees, and his assignees, claiming the stock under the appointment, and praying the same relief as his wife might have had. But, as he had received the proceeds of the stock sold out, his bill was dismissed. Nail v. Punter, 5 Sim. 565.

—— On Release and Joint Bond of Indemnity.]—By settlement before marriage it was agreed, that 2,000*l.* in the hands of a trustee should be laid out in land, to the use of the husband for life, then to the wife for life for her jointure, and to the children equally; and in default of issue, to the wife in fee; and if he survived, to him in fee. The husband and wife being necessitous, the trustee paid them 600*l.* on a release, and their joint bond of indemnity, and afterwards 400*l.* on a like bond, and a new agreement that the remaining 1,000*l.* should be laid out in an annuity, for the separate use of the wife, during coverture, and in fee in case of survivorship. The trustee afterwards paid the husband the remaining 1,000*l.*; then he died without issue, and left his wife destitute. Upon a bill by the wife against the trustee's representative, upon this breach of trust, and to be paid what should be due to her for the 2,000*l.*, the parties, on the recommendation of the lord chancellor, agreed to pay the wife 100*l.* per annum for life, tax free, together with the costs, which was ordered accordingly. Thayer v. Gould, 1 Atk. 615.

Settlement upon marriage, of stock, the property of the wife, in trust from time to time to receive the dividends, and to pay them into the hands of the wife, for her sole and separate use; her receipt to be a discharge; after her decease, if the husband should survive, for him for life; and after the decease of the survivor, to transfer the principal among the children, according to her appointment by will; in default thereof, equally; if no children, according to her appointment by will. The trustees, with the privity of the wife, sold the stock, and paid the money to the husband, taking his bond of indemnity: he died insolvent. Upon the bill of the widow and children, the fund having been replaced by the trustees was transferred to the accountant-general upon the trusts of the settlement; the trustees to pay the dividends to the widow from the death of the husband with costs. Whistler v. Newman, 4 Ves. 129. See, as to the authority of this case, 5 Ves. 17 n. and 694 n.

A sum of money charged upon lands was, by a marriage settlement, assigned to trustees, to pay the interest to A., the husband, for his life, and after his death to pay the wife a jointure of 200*l.* a year; provided that it should be lawful for A., with the consent of the trustees, in writing, to call in the fund, and lay out and dispose of the same in the purchase of an estate of inheritance or freehold, for a term of at least three lives, or of a lease for a term of years, whereof ninety-nine years shall be unexpired, or otherwise advantageously, which purchase or disposal, when so made, should be settled and vested to the several uses, trusts, intents, and purposes thereinbefore mentioned in respect to the said sums. A portion of the fund was paid to the surviving trustee, who lent it to A., on a release being executed by A. and the wife B. and C. their son, and acknowledged by her:—Held, after the death of A., in a suit by B. to replace the trust fund, that the release as to her was inoperative. Smithwick v. Smithwick, 12 Ir. Ch. R. 181.

—— On Bankruptcy of Husband Interest cannot be Proved for.]—Where trustees under marriage settlement lend wife's money to husband with her consent, and husband becomes bankrupt, they cannot, on behalf of wife, prove for interest of money, but only for the principal; she having been supported by husband since marriage; upon the principles applicable to wife's pin-money. Semble, secus, if they prove to save themselves from consequences of their own act, her consent not having been given. Green, Ex parte, 2 Deac. & C. 113; 2 L. J., Bk. 2.

—— Transfer into Name of Wife.]—A testatrix gave a sum in stock to a feme covert, to be transferred into her name, the dividends to be for her sole and separate use, the principal remaining in the executors' hands until her youngest child attained twenty-one, when it was to become her own, or in case of her demise to devolve to her husband. The trustees transferred the stock into her name alone, and she with her husband sold it out, and both signed the transfer:—Held, to constitute a breach of trust, and the trustees were ordered to bring the fund into court, but that the wife had made a valid disposition of the dividends to accrue until the youngest child, born after the death of the testatrix, attained twenty-one. Crosby v. Church, 3 Beav. 485; 10 L. J., Ch. 212; 5 Jur. 50.

—— Covenant by Husband to Settle After-Acquired Property.]—In his marriage settlement, a husband covenanted that any after-acquired property, exceeding 200*l.*, should be settled in the same manner as certain sums therein mentioned. The husband, as next of kin, became, in 1848, entitled to a sum exceeding the above amount, and he induced the administrator, who had notice of the trust, to pay the whole to him, the wife consenting, and signing a memorandum at the time. The husband died in January 1862, and in December following the the surviving trustee of the settlement, in conjunction with the widow, filed a bill for a declaration that the estate of the administrator (he having died in 1853) was, in the hands of his representative, liable to make good the sum paid to the husband; and the court held that the widow was entitled to have raised out of real estate of the administrator (his personal estate having been fully administered) a sum sufficient to provide her an annuity equal to the interest of the misapplied fund; and that the right of the trustee of the settlement to sue was not barred by the statute of limitations. Cresswell

v. Dewell, 3 N. R. 148 ; 10 Jur. (N.S.) 354 ; 10 L. T. 22 ; 12 W. R. 123.

Right of Trustees to be Recouped—Restitution of Fund by Husband.]—The trustee of a marriage settlement concurred in a breach of trust, by lending the fund to the husband, on a security not warranted by the settlement:—Held, that the representatives of such trustee could maintain a bill against the husband and the cestui que trust, for the restitution of the fund. Greenwood v. Wakeford, 1 Beav. 576 ; 8 L. J., Ch. 333.

A trust fund settled on husband, wife, and children in succession, was received by the husband and lent by him to his brother. A bill by one trustee against the other trustee, the husband and wife, and omitting the brother and children :—Held, sustainable, and a decree was made against the husband, reserving all rights against the brother and the trustees. Hughes v. Key, 20 Beav. 395.

The co-trustee, who had not joined as co-plaintiff, refused his costs. Ib.

By a marriage settlement of 1832, real and personal estate of H., the intended wife, was conveyed to trustees in trust for R., the intended husband for life, and after the death of the survivor of R. and H., in trust for the children of the marriage, as R. and H. or the survivor should appoint, and in default of appointment for the children equally. The trustees allowed R. to obtain possession of the trust fund, which he mixed with moneys of his own, and in 1861 one of the trustees commenced a suit to compel him to replace the fund. By arrangement of the trustees with R., he and H., by deed of the 25th September, 1861, irrevocably appointed the fund equally among the children, four of whom were of age, and one (the plaintiff) a minor. On the following day the four adult children, and two years afterwards the plaintiff, when of age, executed a deed releasing the trustees from the trusts of the settlement. The children executed the release by the direction of their father, without any professional advice or assistance, and in ignorance of its contents or effect, and of their rights under the settlement. R. from time to time paid sums of money for the plaintiff; he purchased for the plaintiff a commission in the army, paid for his outfit, &c., made him an adequate yearly allowance, and paid a large sum for his promotion. No one of the sums so advanced was equal in amount to the plaintiff's share of the trust fund, nor was there any evidence that it was stated at the time of the advances, or understood between the plaintiff and R., that they were made out of the trust fund in R.'s hands:—Held, first, that the release should be set aside; second, that R.'s position was that of a debtor to his five children for their respective shares of the trust fund; third, that the sums advanced being respectively less in amount, that the plaintiff's share was not a satisfaction of it, pro tanto, and that R. was not entitled to credit for them. Reade v. Reade, 9 L. R. Ir. 409.

The trustees of a marriage settlement permitted the husband to retain the trust funds, which he appropriated to his own use. One of the trustees ultimately became entitled under the settlement to half the trust funds:—Held, that the estate of the husband was liable to refund his moiety. Butler v. Carter, 37 L. J., Ch. 270 ; L. R. 5 Eq. 276 ; 18 L. T. 11 ; 16 W. R. 388.

The trustees of a fund settled on a husband for life or until insolvency, and then to his wife for life for her separate use, at the solicitation of her husband, and with the concurrence of the wife, committed a breach of trust by lending part of the trust funds to the husband, who afterwards became an insolvent. In a suit against the trustees, charging them with a breach of trust, the husband and wife being parties to the suit:—Held, that the court could make a declaration that the husband should recoup the trustees the amount which they were liable to make good to the trust funds; and that a cross-bill by the trustees was not necessary. Keays v. Lane, Ir. R. 3 Eq. 1. And see Nail v. Punter, supra, col. 669.

—— Reversionary Interest of Wife.]—Held, also, that the husband not being in insolvent circumstances at the time of the loan, his wife's separate estate in the trust fund was then reversionary; and, therefore, as it could not then be bound by her, it was not available to recoup the trustees. Ib.

—— Contingent Interest of Wife for Separate Use.]—A money fund belonging to the wife was vested in trustees, upon trust to pay the interest to the husband for his life, or until he should take the benefit of any act for the relief of of insolvent debtors; and, after his decease, or obtaining the benefit of such act, upon trust to pay the interest to the wife for her life, the same to be paid to her, in case of the insolvency of the husband, to her separate use, and, after her decease, in trust for the issue. The trustees, at the instance of the wife, committed a breach of trust, by lending part of the trust funds to the husband, who afterwards was discharged as an insolvent. Upon a bill by the wife and her children to make the trustees answerable for the breach of trust:—Held, that the contingent interest of the wife for her separate use was not bound to make good to the trustees the money so advanced. Mara v. Manning, 2 Jo. & Lat. 311 ; 8 Ir. Eq. R. 218.

Quære, whether her life interest, after death of husband, was so bound. Semble, if the discharge of husband as an insolvent had been concerted with her so as to get a present interest, and defeat the equity of the trustees, they would be entitled against her. Ib.

—— Power of Appointment to Wife.]—Trust money was settled on a married woman for life for her separate use, without power of anticipation, but with power to her to appoint the capital after her death by deed. The trustees lent part of the trust money to the husband on mortgage, and she consented to the investment by the mortgage deed. Part of the trust money having thereby been lost:—Held, that the wife had not, by executing the deed, appointed the reversion, so as to make it liable for loss. Fletcher v. Green, 33 Beav. 426.

Trustees committed a breach of trust, by lending trust moneys on mortgage; they instituted a suit to realise their security, in which the property was sold, and the produce paid into court and invested. In taking the accounts, they were debited with the cash, and not with the investment. On further directions, the stock was ordered to be sold, and the produce, after payment of the costs, was paid to the trustees. The funds having risen, there was a gain of 251*l.* by the investment: — Held, that the trustees were entitled to the benefit of this sum, in discharge of their liabilities. Ib.

Statute.]—Trustee Act, 1893, s. 6.

Power to Purchase Land—Real Estate Purchased partly with Testator's Money.]—Personal estate was given to executors in trust to invest 50,000*l.*, part thereof in the purchase of land to be conveyed to the use of a nephew, with remainders over, and as to a considerable residue, in trust for his nephew as residuary legatee. The executor did not prove, and the residuary legatee became administrator with the will annexed, and purchased several estates, partly with money of the testator, in his own name, at prices amounting to 49,773*l.* He subsequently improved one of these estates so that it was worth 60,000*l.*, and by his will gave it to the tenant in tail in remainder of the estates directed to be purchased, on condition that he should accept it in satisfaction of all claims under the original will: — Held, that the estates purchased for 49,773*l.* were purchased in execution of the trust for investment, and that the condition was nugatory. Mathias v. Mathias, 3 Sm. & G. 552; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 429.

Trustee for the purchase of land died without personal assets, but, having purchased land, the estates purchased were held not liable to the trust, the circumstances affording no presumption that they were purchased in execution of the trust. Perry v. Phelips, 17 Ves. 173.

J. S., by will, left 8,784*l.* to A. in trust, to be invested in lands, and settled on herself for life; remainder to the heirs of B. A decree was had against A., to lay out the money in lands, and to settle the same according to J. S.'s will. A. purchased lands to the value of 3,300*l.*, and devised those lands to C. (who was heir-at-law to B.) and her heirs, and gave several legacies, which could not be paid if the devise were not to be taken as part satisfaction, and for that reason it was decreed. Gibson v. Scudamore, Select Ca. Ch. 63.

Trustees, with the consent of A. B., the tenant for life, had a power to sell the trust estate, and invest the produce in other real estate. In 1810, A. B., with the concurrence of the trustees, sold the estate for 8,440*l.*, and received the purchase money. About the same time (but whether with the concurrence of the trustees was not proved), A. B. purchased another estate for 17,400*l.* Of the 8,440*l.*, 8,124*l.* was paid by A. B. in part payment of the second estate; the remainder was partly paid out of A. B.'s monies, and partly by money raised by a mortgage of the estate. The estate was conveyed to A. B. in fee. No acknowledgment or declaration of trust was ever made by A. B., and he retained possession of the estate till thirty years after, when he became bankrupt. The court, against A. B.'s assignees, presumed, under these circumstances, that the purchase had been made under the power for the benefit of the trust, and held that there had been no such adverse possession, and no such acquiescence on the part of the trustees, as to preclude the court making a declaration that they had a lien on the estate to the extent of the trust monies invested in its purchase. Price v. Blakemore, 6 Beav. 507.

Purchase of Equity of Redemption.]—A power to trustees to purchase freehold or leasehold hereditaments does not authorise a purchase of an equity of redemption in land. Worman v. Worman, 43 Ch. D. 296; 61 L. T. 637; 38 W. R. 442.

"Irish Land"—Liverpool Corporation Stock.]—Where a testator gave all his personal estate to executors to be sold, and directed them out of the proceeds to buy land in Ireland, and in the meantime the executors had invested part of the proceeds in Liverpool Corporation stock; on an originating summons, asking for directions as to the investments, and for an order permitting the applicant to delay or postpone making any investment in Irish land:—Held, that the Liverpool Corporation stock was not an investment authorised by the joint operation of s. 21 of the Settled Land Act, 1882, and s. 17 of the Local Authorities Loans Act, 1875. Further, that it was imprudent for the trustees to invest money in Irish land, and it was their duty to retain it until such time as it was prudent to carry out the directions of the testator, and that the court had jurisdiction to postpone such investment under s. 33 of the Settled Land Act, 1882. Maberly, In re, Maberly v. Maberly, 56 L. J., Ch. 54; 33 Ch. D. 455; 55 L. T. 164; 34 W. R. 771.

Fixed Rent-charge—Freehold Estate subject to a Long Term.]—By private act, money was directed to be laid out in the purchase of freehold lands, tenements, or hereditaments, and the fee simple and inheritance thereof, which might be approved by this court:—Held, first, that the purchase of a fixed rent-charge was not a proper investment; and secondly, that the purchase of a freehold estate, subject to a term of 1,000 years, at a fixed rent, was equally objectionable. Gartside, Ex parte, 6 L. J., Ch. 266.

Freehold Ground Rents.]—A power to invest trust funds in the purchase of hereditaments of a clear and indefeasible estate of inheritance in fee simple in possession, authorises an investment in freehold ground rents. Peyton's Settlement, In re, 38 L. J., Ch. 477; L. R. 7 Eq. 463; 20 L. T. 728.

Copyholds for Life.]—The trustees of a marriage settlement being empowered by it to invest the trust funds in freeholds, or copyholds of inheritance, with the consent of the husband and wife, authorised the husband to purchase a certain estate, as an investment of part of the trust funds, and afterwards they sold out a sufficient part of those funds to pay for the estate, and the husband received the proceeds. The estate was copyhold for lives, and the purchase was made without the wife's consent:—Held, nevertheless, that, as between the husband and the trustees, he must be considered to have purchased the estate for them. Trench v. Harrison, 17 Sim. 111.

Mines and Minerals.]—A testator directed his trustees to invest certain funds in the purchase of lands to be held with others devised in strict settlement:—Held, that they might invest in the purchase of the mines and minerals under part of the settled estates. Bellot v. Littler, 30 L. T. 861; 22 W. R. 836.

No Purchase within Reasonable Time.]—

Where trustees who are directed by will to purchase land within a reasonable time (a year being taken as the limit of such reasonable time), do not purchase within one year, the party who would have been entitled to the land to be purchased is entitled to interest on the fund provided for that purpose. Parry v. Warrington, 6 Madd. 155; 22 R. R. 264.

Directions by will to lay out personal estate, consisting of Bank and East India stock, and moneys standing on other funds and securities, in the purchase of land to be settled to certain uses; whether the stock and funds, not being consols, ought to be sold and invested in consols during the interval which elapsed before the purchase of lands was found, quære. Sowerby v. Clayton, 3 Hare, 430; 8 Jur. 597.

Purchase of Lands in Scotland.]—A testator gave various annuities, which he directed to be secured in the public funds, and that as they respectively fell the principal should be added to the residue of his fortune, and be disposed of by his executors, as after directed, for the benefit of the heirs, under a bond or deed of entail therein mentioned. He then gave some legacies, and directed his executors to consolidate into one fund the whole of his fortune and movables, which fund they were to lay out in purchasing lands in Scotland, to be entailed upon the series of heirs specified in the bond and deed of entail already mentioned:—Held, that the first year's clear annual proceeds of the executory estate from the death of the testator, it being invested in consols, was properly paid by the executors to the first heir under the deed of entail. Macpherson v. Macpherson, 16 Jur. 847.

—— Whether Heir Entitled to Interest on Money until Invested.]—Trust fund directed by the testator to be invested by the trustees after his death in the purchase of lands, to be settled on certain persons mentioned:—Held, that after the period of twelve months from the time of testator's death, the interest of the trust fund, until it should be invested in land, was given to those who would be successively entitled to the rents and profits of the lands when purchased; this being a rule founded on the primary intention of the testator, and resting on principles common to the laws both of England and Scotland. Stair (Earl) v. Macgill, 1 Bligh (N.S.) 662; 1 Dow & Cl. 24—H. L. (Sc.)

Money directed to be laid out in Purchase of Lands—Rebuilding Mansion House.] — A testator devised real estates in strict settlement, and directed his residuary personalty to be laid out in the purchase of lands to be settled to the same uses. After the date of the will, the testator executed a deed whereby he assigned specific personalty to a large amount to the same persons, whom he named as the trustees and executors of his will, upon trusts (not referring to, but) corresponding with, and only in a remote contingency differing from, those of the will. The mansion-house having been pulled down, and requiring to be re-built, the tenant for life proposed that, out of the specific personalty fund settled by the deed, 24,000*l.* should be advanced to him to pay for the re-building, and that out of the same fund 40,000*l.* should be set aside, and the dividends accumulated for twenty years, until an amount of 24,000*l.* should be saved, with which the same fund should be recouped:—Held, that the court had jurisdiction to make the order. Donaldson v. Donaldson, 3 Ch. D. 743; 34 L. T. 900; 24 W. R. 1037.

A testator devised his mansion-house and other real estate to trustees for the term of 1,000 years, upon certain trusts, and, subject thereto, he devised the same upon legal limitations, under which the plaintiff was tenant for life. Shortly after the testator's death the mansion-house was burnt down. The sole acting trustee had expended, in addition to insurance moneys, a sum of 2,000*l.* in re-building the mansion-house, which amount he had borrowed on his own personal security and on a charge of the estate. It was admitted that this expenditure was very beneficial to the estate, and that the value thereof was increased. There were in court sums of consols, arising from the sale of part of the estate, and such funds were liable to be re-invested in land. By the decree in the action an inquiry had been directed as to what sum was necessary to complete the restoration of the mansion-house, and how the same ought to be raised, but no formal order was made sanctioning the raising of a loan for the purpose. A petition was presented by the personal representative of the trustee, asking that the funds in court might be sold, and that such further sum as, with the proceeds of such sale, would make up the 2,000*l.* borrowed by the trustee, might be raised by mortgage or sale of the settled estate, in order to enable such loan to be repaid:—Held, that the court had no jurisdiction to order a mortgage or sale of the settled estate, or to authorise the expenditure for the proposed purpose, even of moneys which were subject to a trust for re-investment in land; but it appearing that the estate had been benefited by the outlay of the trustee to the full amount of the funds in court, and that the outlay had been bonâ fide made under the impression that it would be repaid out of the estate, the court would, although considering the conduct of the trustee irregular, order that he should be recouped his outlay to the extent of the funds in court, but no further. Jesse v. Lloyd, 48 L. T. 656.

Devise of lands to successive tenants for life, and then in strict settlement, with a condition that "he or they" should reside in the mansion-house on the lands, and a declaration of forfeiture in case of non-residence. The first tenant for life, who was a married woman, was named as such in the will:—Held, that on breach of the condition by her the estate for life was forfeited. Dunne v. Dunne, 3 Sm. & G. 22; 30 Beav. 363; 7 De G. M. & G. 207; 3 Eq. R. 760; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 176, 1056; 3 W. R. 256, 380.

—— Improving and Repairing Mansion-House.]—Held, also, that although the mansion-house was inadequate to the income of the devised property, and was also dilapidated, the tenant for life was not authorised to employ towards improving or repairing the mansion-house any part of the capital of funds directed by the testator to be laid out in the purchase of lands to the same uses. Ib.

—— Re-building Parsonage-House.] — A nobleman directed his trustees to lay out his residuary personalty in the purchase of land to go along with certain settled property. The settled property comprised an advowson, of which the parsonage-house was, at his death, in a ruinous state, and he was about to re-build it :—Held, that the trustees might properly lay out part of the residuary personalty in re-building the house. Hotham (Lord), In re, L. R. 12 Eq. 76.

—— Rebuilding House—Restitution of Funds—Consent and Acquiescence.]—Under a marriage settlement a wife was entitled to the income of the trust property for life, for her separate use, without power of anticipation. The settlement contained a power to the wife to appoint 10,000*l.*, and the trustees were empowered to invest in the purchase of lands. It appeared from the evidence that after the marriage the wife contemplated a gift of capital to her husband, and from the first she permitted her husband to receive the income of the whole trust property. In pursuance of the power in the settlement, the wife appointed that a sum of East India Stock (of the value of 10,000*l.*) should be transferred to her husband and herself, for his and her own absolute use and benefit. This sum of stock was sold by the husband at four different times ; the wife joined in the transfers of the stock ; the husband received the proceeds of sale, and applied them to his own purposes. The husband subsequently borrowed two sums of 8,000*l.* and 5,696*l.* from the trustees of the settlement to enable him to make purchases of real property ; these sums were secured by a deposit of title deeds. The husband also rebuilt a house on the property in settlement, with the consent of the trustees, and sought to have 2,000*l.* in respect of such improvements allowed in account as against the sum of 8,000*l.* due from him. In an action against the husband and the trustees, commenced by the wife and continued by her executors :—Held, that the 2,000*l.* expended in building could not be considered as sanctioned by the power to invest in land ; and that the two sums of 8,000*l.* and 5,696*l.* must be repaid, but without interest ; and that the executors of the wife were not debarred from obtaining the restitution of the trust funds by the alleged acquiescence of the wife in the breaches of trust. Hale v. Sheldrake, 60 L. T. 292.

—— Permanent Drainage and Erection of New Farmhouses.]—A testator devised his residuary personalty to the trustees of a settlement to be held and applied as moneys arising from the sale of any of the settled estates. The settlement directed that the moneys to arise from the sale of any of the settled estates should be laid out in the purchase of other lands to be settled to the same uses :—Held, that the trustees might apply the residuary personalty in making good sums expended by them in the permanent drainage of part of the settled estates, and in the erection of new farm buildings on other parts of the estates. Leslie's Settlement Trusts, In re, 45 L. J., Ch. 668 ; 2 Ch. D. 185 ; 34 L. T. 239 ; 24 W. R. 546.

Trustees of a settled estate having, out of moneys in their hands, in trust to be laid out in lands to be settled to the same uses, purchased a farm for 20,000*l.*, the court, in an action, authorised 1,000*l.* of the same moneys to be applied in repairing, improving, and rebuilding the farm buildings and cottages upon the purchased lands. Cowley (Lord) v. Wellesley, 46 L. J., Ch. 869.

When the rents of real estate devised in strict settlement were directed to be accumulated during the minority of any person who should become tenant for life, and the accumulated fund and interest thereon were from time to time to be invested in the purchase of other lands to be settled to the same uses :—Held, that no part of such accumulated fund could be applied, at the instance of a tenant for life, in necessary repairs and improvements on the estate. Brunskill v. Caird, 43 L. J., Ch. 163 ; L. R. 16 Eq. 493 ; 21 W. R. 943.

—— New Buildings.]—Moneys, which under the trusts of a will, settlement, or private act of parliament, are to be invested in the purchase of land, as well as moneys to be invested under the Settled Estates Act or the Lands Clauses Act, may be properly employed in the erection of new buildings on land settled to the same uses, provided the court is satisfied that it is beneficial to the estate ; but repairs and permanent improvements do not come within this principle. Drake v. Trefusis, L. R. 10 Ch. 364 ; 33 L. T. 85 ; 23 W. R. 762. S. P., Venour's Settlement, In re, 45 L. J., Ch. 409. And see Newman's Settled Estates, In re, 43 L. J., Ch. 702 ; L. R. 9 Ch. 681.

Proceeds of Sale of Timber—Building a Farmhouse.]—An estate was settled with a direction that the proceeds of the sale of timber should be laid out in land, to be settled to the like uses :—Held, that a sum produced by the sale of timber could not be laid out in building a farmhouse, as a permanent improvement of the settled estate. Poulett (Earl) v. Somerset, 25 L. T. 56 ; 19 W. R. 1048.

A trust fund is created by will to be laid out in the purchase of lands : an estate is purchased, and trust money is laid out in repairs and improvements ; this is a misapplication, and shall not be allowed. Part of the trust money was sold out just before a dividend was payable ; no allowance can be made to the tenant for life (who would be entitled to the dividend) in the price. Where a trustee sells out trust money, the cestui que trust may elect whether he will have it replaced, or be paid the produce of it. Bostock v. Blakeney, 2 Bro. C. C. 653.

Direction to Purchase Land in a particular County.]—Where a testator orders his money to be laid out in land in a particular county, and his trustees cannot purchase in that county, the court, after a convenient time, will deviate from the strict terms of the trust. So, where trustees cannot purchase a freehold without great disadvantage, unless they take a college-holding with it, the court will dispense with the strict directions of the will. Maynwaring v. Maynwaring, 3 Atk. 414.

Trustees for Sale of Building Land—Other Lands to be Purchased with Proceeds.]—By a private act of parliament certain settled estates, of which the ultimate remainderman was an infant, were vested in the plaintiffs as trustees for sale, with directions to sell the same for building purposes, and lay out the proceeds in the purchase of other lands, to be settled to uses similar to those declared by the settlement with respect to the lands sold, and to pay over the surplus, if any, to the tenant for life. The act did not contain any express power to the trustees to expend any part of the trust funds in laying out the property in lots, or in making roads :—Held, that the trustees ought, and that it was to be understood that the legislature intended that they should have the power of doing that which was necessary to effect the purposes pointed out by the act, viz. the power of making roads, and dividing the property into lots for sale. Cookson v. Lee, 23 L. J., Ch. 473—L.JJ.

Solicitors for trustees for sale purchased part of the trust property and mortgaged it to A. and B. The purchase was set aside :—Held, that A. and B., who had had notice of the relation in which their mortgagors stood to the vendors, could claim no better title than their mortgagors. Ib.

Contract for Sale and Purchase of Lands.]—Effect of a contract for the purchase of lands for the reinvestment of trust moneys being made without reference to the fund proposed to be thereby reinvested. Caddick's Settlement, In re, 9 Hare (App.) lxxxv. ; 17 Jur. 84 ; 1 W. R. 212.

The S. estates were by act of parliament vested in trustees upon trust to sell, with the consent of the earl, the tenant for life in possession, and to invest the sales moneys in the purchase of other lands convenient to be held with the bulk of the property. Under these trusts certain outlying portions of the estates were, by a contract between the trustees, the earl, and P., contracted to be sold to P. for 29,000*l.*, and 5,000*l.* was paid by P. to the earl as deposit, to be paid by him to the trustees when a proper purchase should be fixed upon in which to re-invest the sales moneys according to the trust. The purchase was never completed, and the 5,000*l.* thus left in the earl's hands was forfeited, and the same lands were, some years afterwards, sold for 22,000*l.* :—Held, that the 5,000*l.* belonged to the settled estates, and not to the earl absolutely. Shrewsbury (Earl) v. Shrewsbury (Countess), 18 Jur. 397.

The earl had bought, in his own name, for 18,000*l.*, the C. H. estate, which was convenient to be held with the bulk of the S. estates, and with the view of offering it to the trustees. In order to raise the purchase money the earl immediately mortgaged it to nearly the full amount of 18.000*l.*, and after having made some alterations in it to suit his own purposes, he offered the same to the trustees for 16,350*l.* The trustees agreed to the proposition, and a joint petition was presented to the court, praying a reference to inquire into the title, and whether it was a fit and proper purchase, and an order was made in the terms of the prayer. Before any other step was taken the earl died. The agreement by the trustees to purchase the C. H. estate was not signed by the trustees, but rested on some letters written by the earl to his solicitors, and by them to the earl, the solicitors being also solicitors to the trustees :—Held, that the C. H. estate was part of the earl's estate, and not part of the settled estates, there being no binding contract entered into by the earl capable of being enforced against his real representative. Ib.

Quære, what would have been the result if the order had not stopped at directing the inquiries, but had proceeded to order the completion of the sale, in case of the inquiries as to fitness and title being satisfactory. Ib.

Lands vested in trust out of receipts, &c., to make certain payments, and lay out surplus upon mortgage or government securities, with a view to accumulation, with bequest of such accumulations. On petition, a real estate contiguous to testator's real estate was permitted to be purchased under the circumstances, and to be considered as personal estate. Webb v. Shaftesbury (Lord), 6 Madd. 100 ; 22 R. R. 249.

Purchase of Leaseholds with Consent, whether Imperative or Discretionary.]—Where the power of trustees, with the consent of the husband and wife, or the survivor, to vary the securities, was discretionary, and the wife having survived and married again, sought to have the funds invested in leaseholds (although eligible securities), the court refused to interfere. Lee v. Young, 2 Y. & C. C. C. 532 ; 12 L. J., Ch. 478 ; 7 Jur. 761.

Trustees were "authorised and empowered," with the "consent and direction" of the tenant for life, to lay out the trust moneys on leasehold hereditaments "in some convenient place" :—Held, that it was imperative on the trustees, on the requisition of the tenant for life, to invest in leaseholds, and that they could not refuse to do so on the ground of the liabilities to be incurred by them on the covenants, they having expressly contracted on the subject, but that they had a discretion to exercise as to value, title, and locality ; secondly, that leasehold houses were within the power. Beauclerk v. Ashburnham, 8 Beav. 322 ; 14 L. J., Ch. 241 ; 9 Jur. 146.

By a deed, power was given to trustees, and they were required, with the approbation of the tenants for life, to invest in the purchase of leaseholds :—Held, that it was compulsory on them to invest when called upon to do so by the tenants for life. Cadogan v. Essex (Earl), 2 Drew. 227 ; 2 Eq. R. 351 ; 23 L. J., Ch. 487 ; 18 Jur. 782 ; 2 W. R. 313.

Costs of Investment.]—Under a direction by will to accumulate and lay out a certain sum of money in the purchase of land to be settled to uses thereby declared, the costs of the investment are to be paid out of the particular sum directed to be invested. Gwyther v. Allen, 1 Hare, 505.

Statute.]—Trustee Act, 1893, ss. 8 and 9.

General Principles.]—Trustees, when considering whether trust funds should be invested on mortgage, must, notwithstanding the opinions of valuers, solicitors, or other trusted agents, exercise their own judgment as to the security. They must regard the transaction not only from the view of securing the capital, but must also consider whether the income of the property is sufficient to provide the interest on the amount advanced. Although the position of the borrower may reasonably be considered by them, they should not advance a sum largely in excess of the proper amount, relying on the pecuniary position of the borrower. Somerset, In re, Somerset v. Poulett (Earl), 62 L. J., Ch. 720 ; 3 R. 547 ; 68 L. T. 613 ; 41 W. R. 536. See S. C. on appeal, 63 L. J., Ch. 41 ; [1894] 1 Ch. 231 ; 7 R. 34 ; 69 L. T. 744 ; 42 W. R. 145.

Semble, that in the absence of direction as to investment, trustees cannot properly invest on mortgage. Raby v. Ridehalgh, 7 De G. M. & G.

104 ; 3 Eq. R. 901 ; 24 L. J., Ch. 528 ; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 363 ; 3 W. R. 344.

There is a known established distinction in equity, between government and real securities ; "real" is a term adopted in the law, and must be understood to mean land securities only. Att.-Gen. v. Bowles, 3 Atk. 808.

It is not necessarily a breach of trust, under a will directing trustees to invest in parliamentary stocks or funds, or on real securities, to continue in their actual state of investment part of the assets, consisting of turnpike bonds. Robinson v. Robinson, 1 De G. M. & G. 247 ; 21 L. J., Ch. 111 ; 16 Jur. 255.

Where an executor puts out money, though without the indemnity of a decree, upon a real security, which there was no reason then to suspect, but afterwards such security proves bad, he is not accountable for the loss, any more than he would have been entitled to the profits had it continued good. Brown v. Litton, 1 P. Wms. 141 ; 10 Mod. 20.

General Rule as to Advance.]—The general understanding is, that a trustee should only lend to the extent of two-thirds of the value on agricultural freeholds, and to the extent of one-half on freehold houses. Semble, also, that one-half is the limit in the case of a leasehold renewable for ever at a large head rent. Macleod v. Annesley, 16 Beav. 600 ; 22 L. J., Ch. 633 ; 17 Jur. 608 ; 1 W. R. 250.

Two-thirds Rule — Advance on Valuation made on Sale to Mortgagor.]—In May 1870, F. and G., the trustees of a will, one of whom, F., was an experienced farmer, and the other, G., a solicitor, advanced a sum of 2,400*l.*, part of the trust estate, along with another sum of 2,600*l.* not part of the estate, making together 5,000*l.*, at 4*l.* per cent., on the security of a freehold farm, which in 1868 had been sold to the mortgagor, who was farming that and the neighbouring land on a peculiar system of husbandry. The trustees had power to advance on contributory mortgages. In 1868 the farm had been valued on behalf of the vendors, of whom G. was one, and also the solicitor, at 6,895*l.* This valuation was communicated to F. at the time of the mortgage ; and no other valuation was made. Interest was paid in full, but irregularly, down to November 1877, since which time the farm, which was situated on clay soil, in a wet situation, had become unsalable and unlettable, owing to unfavourable seasons, and had yielded no income. The mortgagor became insolvent. Upon claim by the cestui que trust against F. and the executors of G. to be declared entitled to payment of the 2,400*l.* and interest since November 1877 :—Held, notwithstanding that no valuation was used at the date of the mortgage other than the valuation made on behalf of the vendors at the time of the sale to the mortgagor ; that G., the trustee, was himself one, and solicitor of the others, of the vendors to the mortgagor ; and that the sum advanced was more than two-thirds of the estimated value of the farm—that the trustees were not liable to make good the deficient security. Godfrey, In re, Godfrey v. Faulkner, 52 L. J., Ch. 820 ; 23 Ch. D. 483 ; 48 L. T. 853 ; 32 W. R. 23.

The test of liability always is, whether or not the trustees have acted as prudent men would have acted in dealing with their own property. The "two-thirds" rule is not enforceable with exact strictness. Ib.

—— Valuation by Trustees' Surveyor.]—A testator bequeathed all the residue of his property to trustees upon trust to invest it "on good and approved freehold or leasehold securities." The trustees advanced a sum of 2,600*l.* of the trust fund to a builder, upon security of certain freehold buildings and land, valued by a surveyor at 3,500*l.*, the income of which was 175*l.* per annum. The mortgagor became insolvent, and upon a sale of the mortgaged property there was a loss of 353*l.* to the trust estate :—Held, that, although the defendant's general conduct had been faithful and honest to his cestuis que trust, he had been negligent and wanting in judgment in making the investment upon property of such doubtful value ; that to advance two-thirds of the supposed value of the property could not be considered a prudent act of a trustee, notwithstanding he had had the property valued by a surveyor ; and that, as the defendant had not exercised due care and diligence in the investment, he must be held liable to make good the loss occasioned to the trust fund ; but as there was nothing to impeach his character, no costs would be given as against him. Jones v. Lewis, before the Lord Chancellor, 26th February, 1852. Reversing S. C., 3 De G. & Sm. 471 ; 18 L. J., Ch. 430 ; 13 Jur. 877.

One-half Rule — Mortgage of Buildings — Report of able Practical Surveyor.]—A trustee is not entitled to the protection afforded by s. 4 of the Trustee Act, 1888, unless the report or valuation upon which he acted in making an investment, which ultimately proves insufficient, was made upon his own instructions and directed to the particular investment. A trustee is not entitled to the protection afforded by s. 5 of the Trustee Act, 1888, unless the investment which has proved deficient was a proper investment at the time in all respects other than value. Walker, In re. Walker v. Walker, 59 L. J., Ch. 386 ; 62 L. T. 449. See also Blyth v. Fladgate, 63 L. T. 546.

The onus lies upon a trustee who seeks to take advantage of s. 5 of the Trustee Act, 1888, to show that at the time he made an investment it was, except as to value, in all respects a proper one. An investment of trust funds by way of mortgage upon an undivided third, together with an undivided moiety of another undivided third, in reversion, of lands held at rent, comes within the rule which limits the loan to one-half the value of the lands. Jones v. Julian, 25 L. R., Ir. 45.

—— House Property.]—Trustees, who were empowered to invest on mortgage, advanced the sum of 8,300*l.* upon the security of certain leasehold property consisting of small cottages, some of which were let to weekly tenants. The mortgagor having made default, the trustees took possession of the property, which would not realise the sum advanced, the value of the property having greatly depreciated. Evidence was adduced to show that, at the date of the mortgage, the sum advanced was equal to about two-thirds of the value of the property. But there was other evidence to the effect that the property was then even less valuable ; and that the trustees had not obtained any formal valuation thereof :—Held, that the trustees had made a most improvident investment, and had disregarded the rule as to the limit to be observed when investing trust funds upon the security of house property; that they ought to have made a more careful examination of the security; and that, under the circumstances, they were liable to replace the sum advanced. Olive, In re, Olive v. Westerman, 56 L. J., Ch. 75; 34 Ch. D. 70; 55 L. T. 83; 51 J. P. 38.

—— Hotel.]—Trustees having power to invest upon real security invested 1,400*l.*, part of the trust fund, upon the security of a freehold house at Broadstairs, used as an hotel. The evidence of value, upon which they made the investment, was a report made by a London surveyor, who, according to his report, went to Broadstairs, and examined the property, and made some inquiries; he valued the security at 2,700*l.*, including in this sum 800*l.*, as the value of the beer and spirit licence. No other inquiries appear to have been made. In fact, the house had only recently been opened as an hotel, and did not prove successful. The security turned out to be deficient:—Held, that the security was not a proper security for the investment of trust funds, and that the trustees must be charged with the amount advanced. Budge v. Gummow, 42 L. J., Ch. 22; L. R. 7 Ch. 719; 27 L. T. 666; 20 W. R. 1022.

—— Hotel and Stables.]—Trustees advanced trust money upon mortgage of properties consisting of an hotel and stables, and cottages and houses which were principally let at weekly rents. Valuers were employed, and the particulars of the several properties as furnished by the mortgagors were submitted to them, but the trustees did not make inquiries for the purpose of verifying the statements made by the mortgagors as to the value or nature of the properties, or whether they were all let, or what was the amount of the outgoings payable. In their instructions to the valuers, they told them that the mortgagees were trustees, but they did not tell them, according to the rule laid down for trustees in lending on the security of house property, that they did not desire to lend more than one-half the value. Neither did they call the attention of the valuers to circumstances which might affect the value. They also omitted to instruct the valuers to ascertain whether the particulars were correct, or what were the outgoings or average amount of repairs. In each case the valuers gave it as their opinion that a sum more than one-half of the value might be advanced on the security, and such a sum was in each case advanced. Shortly afterwards the mortgagors became insolvent. The several properties were put up for sale, but failed to realise the amounts advanced:—Held, that the investments were improper; that the trustees had been guilty of negligence in not making inquiries as to the particulars, and in not giving proper instructions to the valuers, and in acting upon valuations which under the circumstances they ought not to have acted upon, and they were jointly and severally liable for the money lost. Partington, In re, Partington v. Allen, 57 L. T. 654.

Valuation by Mortgagor's Surveyor.]—In 1873 trustees advanced 3,800*l.* trust moneys to B. upon the security of a freehold house and appurtenances in the occupation of B., and carried on by him as a school in partnership with S. By the deed of partnership B., as owner of the freehold, was to receive 300*l.* a year out of the profits of the school, and in the event of his death, S. was to take a lease at the same rental. The advance was made in reliance upon the report of a surveyor, instructed by one of the trustees in his capacity of solicitor to B., such report being made for the purposes of a previous mortgage negotiation with other trustees, which fell through. By this report the property was estimated at 5,800*l.* on the assumption that a responsible tenant was willing to take a lease of the property at a rental of 400*l.* a year. The security having proved insufficient:—Held, that the trustees had not acted as prudent men in making such an advance upon a valuation made on behalf of the borrower, and must restore the trust funds. Walcott v. Lyons, 54 L. T. 786; 50 J. P. 772.

Trustees empowered to invest on mortgage lent under the advice of their solicitors a sum of 5,000*l.* upon mortgage of a freehold house and grounds at Liverpool, valued to them at from 7,000*l.* to 8,000*l.* The trustees did not exercise their own judgment as to the choice of a valuer, but accepted the suggestion of their solicitors that a London surveyor who had introduced the security to them, and was in fact the agent of the mortgagor with a pecuniary interest in the completion of the mortgage, should value the property for the trustees, and they acted upon the report of this valuer, which was of an inflated character. The mortgagor afterwards became bankrupt, and the property would not realise the sum advanced:—Held, that the trustees were jointly and severally liable to replace the sum advanced, with interest at 4 per cent. from the date of the loan. Fry v. Tapson, 54 L. J., Ch. 224; 28 Ch. D. 268; 51 L. T. 326; 33 W. R. 113.

Trustees lent trust money on mortgage, upon a valuation made on behalf of the mortgagor. The security proved greatly deficient:—Held, that the trustees were personally liable for the loss. Ingle v. Partridge, 34 Beav. 411.

Introduction by Trustees of Valuer to Mortgagor.]—Trustees ought not to introduce the valuer, who is valuing property with a view to a mortgage by the trustees, to the mortgagor, or the mortgagor's agent, for the purpose of negotiating the amount of the fee for the valuation. Partington, In re, Partington v. Allen, 57 L. T. 654.

Trade Premises.]—Trustees had power to invest upon such securities as they should approve:—Held, that they were bound nevertheless to exercise a careful discretion in selecting a security as to value, and that an investment in trade buildings, not having ascertained that they were at least worth twice the money invested, was a breach of trust. Stretton v. Ashmall, 3 Drew. 9; 24 L. J., Ch. 277; 3 W. R. 4.

—— Brickyard.]—Trustees, having a power to invest on real securities, invested 3,500*l.* on a mortgage of a freehold brickyard with buildings, machinery and plant. Before doing so they obtained a report from a competent surveyor that the property formed a good security for the amount of the advance. The report did not state, and the trustees did not inquire, what value the surveyor placed upon the property, nor how that value was arrived at. In fact, the valuation was based on the brick business being carried on as a going concern, and the land was taken as worth 2,000*l.* only. The security having turned out insufficient, an action was brought against the trustees to have the trust fund replaced :—Held, that the trustees had not acted with proper care, and were liable to make good the loss, with interest at four per cent. from the last payment by the mortgagor :—Held, also, that the tenant for life could not be required to bring into account interest in excess of four per cent. received under the mortgage before default was made. Learoyd v. Whiteley, 57 L. J., Ch. 390 ; 12 App. Cas. 727 ; 58 L. T. 93 ; 36 W. R. 721—H. L. (E.)

A trustee advanced trust moneys to a brick-making firm upon the security of a first mortgage of their premises, freehold and leasehold, and some of the plant. In so doing he acted upon the advice of his solicitor, and upon a favourable report and valuation made by a respectable firm of architects and surveyors. A bank of good standing, moreover, consented to postpone a charge of theirs to his mortgage. The mortgagors failed three years afterwards, whereby their lease of that part of the property upon which was found most of the clay and shale necessary for the carrying on of the business, became forfeited. The remainder of the property proved unsalable, and rapidly went to ruin. An action was subsequently brought by the cestuis que trust to make the trustee liable for the loss sustained by them, and it appeared that the report and valuation proceeded, ex facie, in some respects upon faulty principles :—Held, nevertheless, that the trustee had acted as a prudent man would have acted in dealing with his own property, and was therefore not liable. Pearson, In re, Oxley v. Scarth, 51 L. T. 692.

China Clay Works.]—Where trustees invest a larger sum than is justified by the value of the property upon mortgage of undivided shares of real property, part of which consists of china-clay works, and part of which is let on leases for lives, one of the trustees being himself interested in other of the undivided shares, the investment is an improper one, and therefore will not be deemed an authorised investment for a smaller sum, under section 9, sub-section 1, of the Trustee Act, 1893. Turner, In re, Barker v. Irimey, 66 L. J., Ch. 282 ; [1897] 1 Ch. 536 ; 76 L. T. 116 ; 45 W. R. 495.

Freehold Houses in a Town.]—Power to trustees to invest on government or real security :—Held, not to authorise a loan by the trustees of part of the trust fund on the security of freehold houses in a town, the value of which depends upon their situation, and was besides liable to be diminished by the effect of covenants relating to other premises which were let with them. Phillipson v. Gatty, 7 Hare, 516; 13 Jur. 318. Affirmed, 2 Hall & Tw. 459.

Two executors were empowered by will to lend money on government, real or personal security. One of them, in 1815, lent part of the fund to the other executor and his partner in trade, upon mortgage. The mortgagors became bankrupt in 1831, and then the mortgaged property, which consisted in part of a windmill, a watermill, and a house in a town, being sold, produced considerably less than the sum advanced ; the executors were held liable for the deficiency. Semble, so much as two-thirds of the value should only be advanced upon property of a permanent value, as freehold land, and not upon houses or buildings ; still less upon buildings used in a trade, and whose value depends upon the absence of competition in that trade. Stickney v. Sewell, 1 Myl. & Cr. 8.

Mortgage for Five Years of Freeholds.]—A testatrix directed her executors, who were also her residuary legatees, to invest such a sum in the stocks or on freehold security, as would produce 150*l.* a year, and she bequeathed 150*l.* to A. for life ; and after his death, she gave the security on which the investment should have been made to B. The executors invested 3,530*l.* at 4½ per cent., on a mortgage for five years of freeholds, which were let for a long term on ground rents producing 176*l.* per annum. The value of the freeholds was about 4,344*l.*, but the property on which the rents were secured was of much greater value : —Held, that the investment was not improper. But held, that if the payment to the plaintiff should be delayed by the inability of the trustees to call in the mortgage for five years, the plaintiff was entitled to have the mortgage sold and the deficiency paid by the executors. Vickery v. Evans, 33 Beav. 376 ; 3 N. R. 286 ; 33 L. J., Ch. 261 ; 10 Jur. (N.S.) 30 ; 9 L. T. 822 ; 12 W. R. 237.

Freehold Ground Rents.]—A. by will directed her executors and trustees to invest such a sum of money as, when so invested, would produce 150*l.* per annum, and to pay the income to A. for life, and after A.'s death, to hold the stocks, funds, and securities in or upon which the investment should be made, for B. absolutely. The executors were made residuary legatees ; and the will also contained a clause directing that it should not be binding on the trustees to make such investment, if doing so involved selling the testatrix's freehold or leasehold property, or shares in public companies, or other investments ; the trustees having the fullest discretionary powers to sell such shares or other investments or not, and to retain them as long as they might think expedient so to do. The executors set apart capital, which, being invested at interest at 4½ per cent., was sufficient to meet the annuity ; and they invested such sum on a mortgage of freehold ground rents, more than sufficient in amount to raise the annuity, and reserved in respect of newly-erected building property. On a bill by B., challenging the amount of the appropriation as insufficient, and the investment as improper :—Held, that having regard to the bonâ fide exercise of the discretion reposed in the executors, the appropriation was sufficient, and that their being interested as residuary legatees did not prevent them from exercising such discretion in a manner which might prove beneficial to themselves. Ib.

Same Solicitor acting for Mortgagor and Mortgagee.]—If trustees lending money on mortgage have the same solicitor as the mortgagor, they must take the utmost precaution ; if they trust implicitly in the solicitor, however high his reputation, they will be held responsible for any loss which his fraud may occasion. The indemnity clause usually inserted in settlements will not protect them. Sutton v. Wilders, 41 L. J., Ch. 30 ; L. R. 12 Eq. 373 ; 25 L. T. 292 ; 19 W. R. 1021.

G. and H., trustees of a settlement, on the solicitation of D., the tenant for life of the settlement, lent the trust funds on a security which totally failed. G. was a solicitor, and in the transaction of the loan, no other solicitor was employed for the lenders, and no sufficient investigation of title was made:—Held, that the trustees were compellable to replace the trust fund. French v. Graham, 10 Ir. Ch. R. 522.

Held, also, that both being solvent, H. was bound to replace one moiety, and G. the other moiety, that G. was not entitled to be indemnified by the tenant for life, the onus of investigating the title having been cast upon him, but that H. was entitled to be recouped, by the tenant for life, the amount of his moiety. Ib.

When the same solicitor is employed to act both for mortgagor and mortgagee trustees there is imposed on the parties concerned in such transactions the onus of proving, and upon the court which has to investigate them, the duty of ascertaining with closer scrutiny, that the transaction has been a fair one, and that no advantage has been taken of one party by the other. Crampton v. Walker, 31 L. R. Ir. 437.

New Valuation.]—There is no hard and fast rule laid down as to procuring a new and special valuation in every particular transaction in order to protect trustees. Ib.

Negligence of Solicitor.]—A trustee is liable for the loss of a trust fund occasioned by his solicitor having neglected to take proper precautions on the occasion of the investment of the fund on mortgage. Hopgood v. Parkin, L. R. 11 Eq. 74; 22 L. T. 722; 18 W. R. 908.

Copyholds.]—A trustee taking a mortgage of copyholds without a power of sale does not thereby commit a breach of trust. Farrar v. Barraclough, 2 Sm. & G. 231; 2 W. R. 244.

Defendant, being trustee under a will containing no direction as to investment, lent part of the trust fund upon the security of unsurrendered copyholds, the deposit of a lease, and a bond. He was ordered to bring the money into court within six weeks. Wyatt v. Sharratt, 3 Beav. 498.

Building Speculation—Liability of Trustees and Law Agent—Beneficiary with Contingent Interest, Title to Sue.]—The defender M. was trustee under a marriage contract, by which the wife's property was settled on herself for life, excluding the jus mariti; and, in case she survived her husband, to her in fee; but, should she predecease her husband, to him for life or until his second marriage; and lastly, in the event of her predeceasing her husband, to her children in fee, after her husband's decease or second marriage. The defender M. and the husband and wife—who were also trustees—lent this trust fund on the security of unfinished houses in course of erection under a building speculation. The only valuation the trustees had before them was one by an architect, which had been obtained by the borrower, but they consulted the defender H., who was their law agent, and were informed by him that there was no objection to the investment. The deed contained an immunity clause exonerating the trustees from "omissions or neglect of diligence, or the insufficiency of securities, insolvency of debtors, or depreciation in the value of purchases." The pursuers, the children of the marriage, while both spouses were alive, brought an action for a declarator that the defender M. and the law agent were jointly and severally liable to restore the fund, which had been lost by the failure of the speculation:—Held, that there had been a positive breach of duty on the part of the defender M., and that he was liable—the pursuer's rights being contingent, and the husband and wife being barred from any relief against him—to restore the trust fund by paying it to a judicial factor appointed by the court to abide the event, if and when the pursuers became entitled. Rae v. Meek, 14 App. Cas. 558—H. L. (Sc.)

Held, also, that the law agent was not liable, for there was no evidence to prove that he had been employed by the pursuers or any person on their behalf. Ib.

Sub-mortgage—Building Estate.] — Under a settlement S. was tenant for life with an ultimate trust, in default of children (which happened), for her testamentary appointees. The trustees, having power to invest on leasehold securities, invested the trust funds, with S.'s consent, on separate sub-mortgages of leasehold houses, unfinished and unlet, on a building estate of which the roads and drainage were in a defective condition. The investment was made without an independent or reliable valuation, and more than half the value of the house was lent on each sub-mortgage. S. died, having by will disposed of the trust funds, and appointed executors. The executors, with the sanction of the chief clerk in an action establishing S.'s testamentary appointment, had the sub-mortgages transferred to them by the trustees, and subsequently, finding them an insufficient security, brought an action against the trustees to make them personally liable for the deficiency:—Held, that, although the sub-mortgages were not improper investments in point of form, the trustees having invested the trust funds on insufficient security of a speculative character, and without proper precautions, must make good the loss; and that the executors having taken the transfers in ignorance of the circumstances attending the investment, were not bound by adoption or acquiescence. Smethurst v. Hastings, 55 L. J., Ch. 173; 30 Ch. D. 490; 52 L. T. 567; 33 W. R. 496.

Second Mortgage of House Property.]—Trustees lent trust moneys on a second mortgage of house property greatly out of repair, and the principal part was lost:—Held, that they were liable as for a breach of trust, notwithstanding an indemnity clause declaring they should not be liable for the insufficiency or deficiency in value of any securities, except through their wilful default. Drosier v. Brereton, 15 Beav. 221.

Whether a trustee is justified in lending trust money on second mortgage, without obtaining the legal estate, quære. Norris v. Wright, 14 Beav. 291.

An estate of the value of 80,000*l.* was subject to a first mortgage of 40,000*l.*, and to two others for 11,000*l.* and 6,800*l.*, and between the second and third there was a dispute as to priority. A trustee advanced 1,908*l.* trust money on the security of an assignment of an equal amount of the 6,800*l.*:—Held, that this was a breach of trust. Ib.

Option to take Wrong Investment—Notice to Trustee.]—U., a trustee, who had power to invest on real security, invested on a mortgage of freehold houses, with power of sale, a larger sum of trust money than was justifiable. He afterwards retired from the trust, and transferred the mortgage to the new trustees. The security proving unproductive, the new trustees, with the privity of the plaintiff, who was a purchaser of a share in the trust funds, but without any notice to U., sold the mortgaged property at a considerable loss, but it was not established that the sale was unfair or improvident. The plaintiff then sued U. for the loss :—Held, by the court below, that a trustee who makes an improper investment is entitled, upon making good the trust fund, to have the investment returned to him ; that the plaintiff and the new trustees were therefore not justified in selling the property without notice to U., so that he might have an option of replacing the trust fund and taking to the mortgage, that U. therefore was not liable, and that the action must be dismissed :—But held, on appeal, that an investment on a security of a description authorised by the trust, where the breach of trust consists only in not exercising due caution in taking it, stands on an entirely different footing from an investment of an unauthorised description, which the cestuis que trust must either accept or reject ; that the mortgage here became part of the trust estate, that the cestuis que trust could not therefore be under any obligation to U. to give him notice whether they accepted or rejected it ; that the new trustees had a right to realise as they did without notice to U., and that he was liable for the deficiency. Salmon, In re, Priest v. Uppleby, 42 Ch. D. 351 ; 62 L. T. 270 ; 38 W. R. 150—C. A.

The trustees of a settlement, having invested the settled funds on a mortgage security, which turned out insufficient, and it not appearing that they took due precaution to ascertain whether the security was sufficient, were ordered to pay into court the whole amount of the trust funds, taking upon themselves the security. By the decree in the court below they were declared liable to pay so much only as the mortgaged premises, when sold, should prove insufficient to answer. Lockhart v. Reilly, 25 L. J., Ch. 697 ; 3 W. R. 227—L. C.

Contributory Mortgage.]—It is a breach of trust, in the absence of express authority in the instrument creating the trusts, where the trustees are directed to invest in their own names, to invest trust moneys upon a contributory mortgage. Webb v. Jonas, 57 L. J., Ch. 671 ; 39 Ch. D. 660 ; 58 L. T. 882 ; 36 W. R. 666.

—— Sale of Trust Funds—Liability of Trustees to replace Stock sold.]—The trustees of a settlement had power to invest in real securities, and to vary investments. In 1875 they sold a sum of consols forming part of the trust funds, and invested the proceeds of sale on a contributory mortgage of real estate subject to a jointure and portions. It was admitted that this mortgage was an improper investment. The tenant for life having died, the money on mortgage was called in. The whole of the principal was forthcoming, so that no loss would follow directly from the investment, but remaindermen, who were entitled to the capital, claimed that the trustees ought to replace the sum of consols sold in 1875, which at that time stood at a much lower price than the then present value :—Held, that, as the sale was made for the purpose of effecting another investment, if that purpose was improper, then the sale was improper also ; and that consequently the trustees were in this case liable either to replace the stock or to repay the proceeds of sale at the option of the cestuis que trust. Massingberd's Settlement, In re, Clarke v. Trewlawny, 59 L. J., Ch. 107 ; 60 L. T. 620. Affirmed, 63 L. T. 296—C. A.

By an antenuptial settlement a sum of stock was settled upon certain trusts for the benefit of the wife and children of the marriage. The settlement contained powers for the trustees to sell the trust fund, and reinvest the proceeds in government or real securities. By a contemporaneous memorandum, which was executed by the father, the wife, and the intended husband, and indorsed upon the deed of settlement, the trustees were empowered to advance any portion of the trust fund to the owners or lessees of Vauxhall gardens, upon mortgage, either as first, second, or third mortgagees, for such time and at such rate of interest as the trustees might think fit. The trustees lent the whole of the trust fund to three persons, who afterwards became the joint proprietors of, and partners in, Vauxhall gardens ; but no written security was then taken by the trustees. One of these proprietors subsequently retired from the partnership. Some time afterwards the trustees obtained a covenant from the two remaining partners to surrender the Vauxhall gardens by way of mortgage, subject to two prior charges. This mortgage eventually proving a wholly inadequate security for the trust fund, a suit was instituted to compel the trustees to reinstate the stock :—Held, that under the circumstances the trustees must be considered, in having made the advance without security, and in having afterwards accepted the covenant of two only of the three joint debtors, to have misapplied the trust fund, and that they had subjected themselves to the liability of replacing it. Fowler v. Reynal, 3 Mac. & G. 500 ; 21 L. J., Ch. 121 ; 15 Jur. 1019.

Depreciation in Mortgage Securities—Duty of Trustees as to calling in Mortgage—Discretion.]—When mortgaged freehold property, on the security of which trust money has been invested, has fallen in value, so that the mortgage debt has come to exceed two-thirds of the actual value of the mortgaged property, it is not the absolute duty of the trustees at once to call in the mortgage, but they have a discretion which they must exercise as practical men with a due regard to all the circumstances of the case, such as the position and solvency of the mortgagor. Medland, In re, Eland v. Medland, 58 L. J., Ch. 572 ; 41 Ch. D. 476 ; 60 L. T. 781 ; 37 W. R. 753.

—— Retaining Authorised Investments—Omission to Realise—Duty of obtaining Valuation.]—Trustees who retain mortgages on real property created by their testator and authorised as investments by the terms of his will, will not be held liable for loss occasioned by the depreciation in value of land where they have acted with reasonable care, prudence, and circumspection. Chapman, In re, Cocks v. Chapman, 65 L. J., Ch. 892 ; [1896] 2 Ch. 763 ; 75 L. T. 196 ; 45 W. R. 67—C. A.

Trustees and executors are not absolutely bound to call in within twelve months of their testator's death investments made by him. The duty of a trustee who has to consider whether he will retain an existing security is not similar to that of a trustee who is about to invest money in his hands. Ib.

It is not the absolute duty of trustees to have their mortgage securities valued by a professional valuer, and then to call upon the mortgagors to reduce the amount secured so as to bring it within the two-thirds limit. Ib.

There is no rule that trustees commit a breach of trust if they retain authorised securities in a falling market when they honestly believe that that is the best course for all parties; nor that they must be held liable for so doing unless they prove absolutely that no proceedings on their part could have been effectual to recover the funds. The question is what was best to be done at the time, and they must show that they had reasonable grounds for their inaction. Ib.

See Trustee Act, 1894, s. 4.

b. Leaseholds.

Statute.]—Trustee Act, 1893, s. 8.

Real Securities—Long Leaseholds.]—As a general rule long terms of years do not answer the description of "real securities," within the meaning of a power for trustees to lend on mortgage of "real securities." Boyd's Settled Estates, In re, 49 L. J., Ch. 808; 14 Ch. D. 626; 43 L. T. 348.

A power to invest in "real securities" does not authorise trustees to invest the trust funds upon long terms of years created in real estate for the purpose of raising portions. Leigh v. Leigh, 56 L. J., Ch. 125; 55 L. T. 634; 35 W. R. 121.

Under a power to invest in "real securities," trust funds were invested on mortgage of long leaseholds. The mortgagee of a one-sixth share of the trust fund commenced an action against the trustee to administer the trust estate, alleging that the investment was improper, and that the trust funds were in danger of being lost. Pending the action, the trustee paid the remaining five-sixth shares to the other persons entitled, who had not been made parties to the action in any way, and paid the plaintiff's share into court:—Held, that the trust funds had been improperly invested. Chennell, In re, Jones v. Chennell, 47 L. J., Ch. 583; 8 Ch. D. 492; 38 L. T. 494; 26 W. R. 595.

Held, also, that under the circumstances, the action had been instituted unnecessarily, and therefore that the trustee was justified in partly distributing the fund, and was entitled to be paid his costs of the action, and costs, charges and expenses as trustee out of the share in court.

Leaseholds with only Fourteen Years to run.]—Trustees being empowered under a settlement to invest moneys upon mortgage of freehold, copyhold, or leasehold estates, invested upon mortgage of leaseholds with only fourteen years to run; the court directed the mortgage to be called in, without prejudicing any question as to the liability of the trustees in the event of a loss. Pince v. Beattie, 2 N. R. 546; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 1119; 9 L. T. 315; 11 W. R. 979.

On Deposit of Lease.]—Defendant, being trustee under a will containing no direction as to investment, lent part of the trust fund upon the security of unsurrendered copyholds, the deposit of a lease, and a bond. He was ordered to bring the money into court within six weeks. Wyatt v. Sharratt, 3 Beav. 498.

Leaseholds for Lives.]—A power to invest trust moneys on real security in Ireland authorises a loan on leaseholds for lives, perpetually renewable, at a head rent. Macleod v. Annesley, 16 Beav. 600; 22 L. J., Ch. 633; 17 Jur. 608; 1 W. R. 250.

The general understanding is, that a trustee should only lend to the extent of two-thirds of the value on agricultural freeholds, and to the extent of one-half on freehold houses. Semble, also, that one-half is the limit in the case of a leasehold renewable for ever at a large head rent. Ib.

Trustee made liable for a loss on a mortgage investment, he not having taken due precautions to ascertain the value of the property mortgaged. Ib.

Under a power to trustees of a settlement "to lay out and invest the trust moneys upon government or real securities in England, Ireland, Scotland, or Wales," the trustee invested part of the trust moneys on leaseholds for lives in Ireland, with a covenant for perpetual renewal, subject to a headrent. The property at the time of the investment was subject to certain charges, after payment of which barely sufficient surplus rents were left to pay the interest on the mortgage debt, and afterwards it became much depreciated in value, and insufficient to answer the debt:—Held, in a suit instituted by one of the cestuis que trust to make the trustee liable for the loss arising from the investment, that leaseholds for lives in Ireland, with a covenant for perpetual renewal, if the same had been of adequate value, would not have been a breach of trust, but that, having regard to the value of the property, the investment was a breach of trust. Ib.

Judgments.]—A power to trustees to lay out money "in the public stocks or funds in Great Britain, or on any mortgage of freehold or leasehold estates, or any other real securities in England, Wales or Ireland," does not authorise them to lend it on the security of a judgment, even since the 3 & 4 Vict. c. 105, s. 22. Johnston v. Lloyd, 7 Ir. Eq. R. 252.

c. Railway Mortgages or Debentures.

Power to Invest "on Real Securities."]—Under a power to invest trust money "on real securities," a trustee lent it to a railway company, on the usual assignment of the "undertaking, tolls, &c., the principal not payable till seven years:—Held, that, whether real security or not, the investment was improper. Mant v. Leith, 15 Beav. 524; 21 L. J., Ch. 719; 16 Jur. 302.

A testator directed his trustees to invest in the funds, or on government securities, or upon the security by way of mortgage of any freehold, copyhold, or leasehold hereditaments in England or Wales:—Held, that this did not authorise an investment upon the security of railway mortgages made in conformity with the 8 & 9 Vict. c. 16, s. 38, or in Great Northern Railway debenture stock. Mortimore v. Mortimore, 4 De G. & J. 472; 28 L. J., Ch. 558; 7 W. R. 601.

d. Stock Mortgages.

Improper Investment.]—A trustee sold consols, forming part of the trust estate, and invested the proceeds in a stock mortgage:—

Held, that this was an improper investment. Whitney v. Smith, L. R. 4 Ch. 513; 20 L. T. 468; 17 W. R. 579.

The general rule, that where stock is standing in the names of trustees any party interested may have an order, ex debito justitiæ, to have it transferred into court, does not apply to a case where there are discretionary trusts still to be performed. Under the statutory power to vary securities, a stock mortgage is an improper investment. But where trust funds had been lent on stock mortgage, and retransferred before the institution of the suit:—Held, that this, though a mistake on the part of the trustees, was no reason for depriving them of the control of the fund. Bromley v. Kelly, 39 L. J., Ch. 274; 18 W. R. 374.

vii. Other Securities.

a. Loan on Personal Security.

General Rule.]—The investment of trust money on personal security is a breach of trust. Walker v. Symonds, 3 Swanst. 63; 19 R. R. 155.

Trustee charged with breach of trust for not putting out money at interest, nor on the best security, according to the trust in a deed. Money lent on a promissory note is not put out on a security. Ryder v. Bickerton, 3 Swanst. 80.

Trustees lending money on personal security, is not of itself such gross neglect as to amount to a breach of trust; and the legatee, and afterwards his assignee, having acquiesced in such loan, a bill to charge the trustees was dismissed. Harden v. Parsons, 1 Eden, 145.

Trustees may lend money on good personal security, until a proper purchase in land can be had, but are not justified in placing it out in a fluctuating or precarious fund. Emelie v. Emelie, 7 Bro. P. C. 259.

Where a testator authorises his three executors to lend money on personal security, it is a breach of trust if two of the executors lend it to the third. —— v. Walker, 5 Russ. 7.

Trustees and executors charged with a loss occasioned by a breach of trust, by joining in a transfer and sale, and lending the produce to a partnership, in which one of them was engaged, the others receiving no benefit. Decree against all to account for the funds. French v. Hobson, 9 Ves. 103.

Power to Lend on Real or Personal Security—Loan upon Bond.]—Power to lend trust money upon real or personal security, does not enable trustees to accommodate a trader with a loan upon his bond. Langston v. Ollivant, G. Cooper, 33; 14 R. R. 213.

By indenture of March 3, 1832, executed upon the marriage of J. H. and E. R., the sum of 400*l.*, the fortune of E. R., the intended wife, was assigned to the trustees, D. B. and C. B., upon trust, that they should invest the same, as soon as conveniently might be, either in some public bank, stocks, or fund, or else upon one or more good and sufficient securities, either real or personal, and in such manner as they, the said trustees, should in their discretion think fit. The money was paid to one of the trustees, C. B., and, shortly after the execution of the settlement, the trust fund was lent by the same trustee to Sir J. C., upon the security of his bond to both trustees, with warrant of attorney collateral. During the lifetime of Sir J. C. the interest was regularly paid; but upon his death, which was in 1835, the security proved worthless, and the trust fund was lost. In 1842 D. B. filed the present bill against his co-trustee, C. B., and J. H., and his wife, seeking a declaration that the trustee, C. B., was responsible for the breach of trust, and praying that he might be ordered to bring in said sum of 400*l.*, and invest same upon the trusts of the settlement. It appeared that J. H., the husband, was fully aware of the loan, and had concurred in it; but that the plaintiff, though not active in the breach of trust, was acquainted with all the circumstances of the affair shortly after its occurrence. E. H., the wife, was not in any manner implicated in the transaction:—Held, that though the conduct of the defendant, C. B., was free from any moral blame, yet that he was responsible for the consequences of the breach of trust, and was therefore bound to bring in sufficient funds to secure the wife in the event of her surviving her husband. Buckley v. Buckley, Dr. 375.

Private Security—Infants' Money.]—Trustees taking upon themselves to lend an infant's money on a private security, must in all cases be responsible in case of the failure of the security. Holmes v. Dring, 2 Cox, 1.

Promissory Note.]—One trustee suffering the other to have trust money under a note of hand, held liable. Keble v. Thompson, 3 Bro. C. C. 112.

Testator bequeathed 500*l.* to his executors, upon trust that they should lay out and invest the same in the public funds, or in such other security or in such other manner as to them should seem expedient, at interest, and apply the produce to a charitable purpose. One of the executors, who took the entire management of the estate, paid the debts, and most of the legacies of the testator, but neither specifically appropriated nor invested 500*l.* for the charity. He paid interest, however, on 500*l.* to the charity; at the same time receiving interest on the promissory note of a debtor to the estate, who was in good credit, but whose debt was the only fund available for payment of the legacy. The executor afterwards died. On the admission, by his representatives, that he had, in his lifetime, assented to the payment of the legacy to himself as trustee:—Held, that his estate was severally answerable as for a breach of trust. Att.-Gen. v. Higham, 2 Y. & C. C. C. 634.

Lodging Money in Banker's Hands.]—A trustee who lodges money in a banker's hands merely on personal security, at the same time that he takes a bond for his own money, is guilty of gross negligence, and liable on the failure of the banker; and it is no excuse that he could not get a good mortgage security. Anon., Lofft, 492.

Deposit Note.]—Semble, there is no impropriety in the temporary investment by trustees of trust money on a deposit note. Wilkins v. Hogg, 31 L. J., Ch. 41; 8 Jur. (N.S.) 25; 5 L. T. 467; 10 W. R. 47—L. C.

Trade Premises and Personal Security—Power to Lend on "Personal" Security—Immunity Clause—Law Agent Acting for both Parties.]—Trustees sold a tenement, the property of the trust, to one of seven beneficiaries under the trust deed, the price according to the terms of the contract being payable in May, 1874. In November, 1874, the purchaser being unable to pay 12,000*l.* of the price, was allowed to retain it on loan. As security for the loan he conveyed to the trustees three houses, including his purchase from the trust, upon each of which there were prior incumbrances, to an amount exceeding two-thirds of the estimated value as stated by the borrower. Besides these securities the trustees held the personal obligation of the borrower and his father-in-law, both of whom were engaged in trade. Some of the other beneficiaries remonstrated in 1874, and again in 1880; but the money was allowed to remain on these securities until 1884, when the borrower and his father-in-law became bankrupt, and about 10,000*l.* was lost to the trust. The trust deed contained (1), a clause empowering the trustees to lend out the proceeds and other funds of the trust on "such securities heritable or personal" as they might think proper; and (2), an immunity clause declaring that the trustees should not be liable for "omissions, errors, or neglect of management." The same law agent acted for the trustees and the borrower:—Held, that the trustees had not acted with perfect impartiality between the beneficiaries, nor had they brought to the management the same care and diligence which a man of ordinary prudence would have exercised in his own concerns, that in these circumstances neither the immunity clause nor the authority to lend on personal security were sufficient to protect them, and that they were personally liable to make good the deficiency in the trust funds. Knox v. Mackinnon, 13 App. Cas. 753—H. L. (Sc.)

Trading Firm—Change in Firm.]—Though the settlor should authorise the trustees to continue the trust funds upon the personal security of a trading firm, in which he had invested them, yet the trustees are guilty of a breach of trust, if, upon a change taking place in the firm, they permit the funds to remain upon the personal security of the new firm. Cummins v. Cummins, 3 Jo. & Lat. 64; 6 Ir. Eq. R. 723.

Measure of Liability.]—Where trustees may invest in stock or on real security, and they lend on personal security, they shall be answerable for the principal money only, and not for the value of the stock which might have been purchased. Marsh v. Hunter, 6 Madd. 295.

b. Exchequer Bills.

Government Security or Securities.]— The words "government security or securities":—Held, not to apply to exchequer bills. Chaplin, Ex parte, 3 Y. & C. 397; 3 Jur. 750.

Government or Real Security.]—Where the trustee was authorised to invest the fund in government or real security:—Held, that pending a treaty for a mortgage he was justified in investing in exchequer bills, but that having left them in a broker's hands, who misapplied them, he was personally liable for the value of the bills at the time of the loss, and not for the stock which the money would have purchased. Mathew v. Brise, 6 Beav. 239; 12 L. J., Ch. 263. Affirmed, 15 L. J., Ch. 39; 10 Jur. 105.

Cash under the Control of the Court—Money Paid into Court under Private Act.]—Money paid into court under a private act, and invested in exchequer bills, is "cash under the control of the court," within the meaning of the Act 23 & 24 Vict., c. 38, and the general order of February 1, 1861, and may be invested in any of the securities sanctioned by the court, although such private act directs the investment to be in exchequer bills. Jackson v. Tyas, 52 L. J., Ch. 830.

—— Prohibitive or Restrictive Words in Settlement.]—Trustees of settlements coming within the operation of Lord St. Leonards' Act, 1860 (23 & 24 Vict., c. 38), may invest the trust funds in any securities in which cash under the control of the court may be invested, notwithstanding prohibitive or restrictive words in the instrument creating the trust. Wedderburn, In re, 47 L. J., Ch. 743; 9 Ch. D. 112; 38 L. T. 904; 27 W. R. 53.

—— Stock in the Funds belonging to a Charity Incorporated by Act.]—Stock in the funds belonging to a charity incorporated by act of parliament, and having power to invest in the public funds, may, under 23 & 24 Vict. c. 38, s. 11, be sold out for the purpose of re-investment on any of the stocks, funds, and securities on which cash under the control of the court may be invested. Clergy Orphan Corporation, In re, L. R. 18 Eq. 280; 30 L. T. 809; 22 W. R. 789.

Such funds may also be sold out and re-invested on metropolitan consolidated stock under the Metropolitan Board of Works Loans Act, 1871, s. 13. Ib.

c. Foreign Bonds or Securities.

Shares in Foreign Adventure Bequeathed to Trustees.]—If shares in a foreign adventure are bequeathed to trustees, the court, unless asked to change the investment, will make no order as to the continuance of the shares as an investment. Bates v. Mackinley, 31 L. J., Ch. 389; 8 Jur. (N.S.) 299; 5 L. T. 783; 10 W. R. 241.

Victoria, Russian and Brazilian Bonds.]—Under a direction in a will that "all my personal property invested in government or other securities, in bonds or shares of whatever nature or kind, be held in the same or the like investments by and in the names of my trustees," Victoria, Russian, and Brazilian government bonds, which pass by delivery and were lodged for safety with a bank, and also railway stocks, are investments within the meaning of the will. Arnould v. Grinstead, 21 W. R. 155.

Securities of a Foreign Country—Bonds of a French Railway Co.]—Under a settlement the trustees were empowered to invest the trust funds in the "bonds, debentures, or other securities, or the stocks or funds of any colony or foreign country." The question arose whether they could properly invest in the bonds of a French railway company, the payment of the capital on which within fifty years was secured by a sinking fund guaranteed, together with interest in the meantime, by the imperial government:—Held, that these bonds were not "securities of a foreign country" within the meaning of the trust for investment. Langdale's Settlement Trusts, In re, L. R. 10 Eq. 39.

"Any Funds or Securities whatsoever"—Russian Railway and Egyptian Bonds.]—A testator by will gave all his residue to trustees upon trust to invest in the parliamentary stocks or funds, or upon real securities; and the will contained a proviso that, as often as the trustees should think it expedient so to do, they might sell out, transfer, or otherwise vary any of the trust moneys, funds, and securities, and invest the same in or on any other funds or securities whatsoever:—Held, that the sale of new 3*l.* per cent. annuities and the investment of the proceeds in Russian railway and Egyptian bonds was authorised, and not a breach of trust. Lewis v. Nobbs, 47 L. J., Ch. 662; 8 Ch. D. 591; 26 W. R. 631. And see Brown, In re, Brown v. Brown, 54 L. J., Ch. 1134; 29 Ch. D. 889; 52 L. T. 853; 33 W. R. 692.

—— Greek Bonds.]—Testator directed all his property, except ready money or moneys in the funds, to be converted into money, and the clear moneys arising from such conversion to be invested, in the names of the executors, in three per cent. consols, or other government securities in England:—Held, that "Greek bonds," though guaranteed by this country, were not comprehended in the word "funds," and that they were a proper subject of conversion under the terms of the will. Burnie v. Getting, 2 Coll. C. C. 324; 9 Jur. 937.

Bills and other Private Securities in Ireland.]—Where a sum of 4,000*l.* was vested in trustees upon certain trusts, with a power to invest it in land or in government securities in England, but they invested it in bills and othe private securities in Ireland, whereby a sum of 1,200*l.* remained unaccounted for by them:—Held, that although, from the nature of the trusts, none of the cestuis que trust had a present right to any part of the principal fund, yet that the sum unaccounted for was a debt due in equity, and demandable from the defendant as a defaulting trustee. Waller v. Fowler, Sau. & Sc. 274.

Direction to Appropriate Estate for Annuity—Personal Estate Invested in Foreign Funds.]—Where the testator directed his executors to set apart so much of his estate as would produce a certain annuity, and pay the interest to his widow for her life or widowhood, and that she should receive any surplus and bear any deficiency that might arise in the annual produce of the fund so set apart, and the principal afterwards to fall into his residuary estate, the conversion and investment were to be in the absolute discretion of the executors. At the time of his death the personal estate was invested in foreign funds; the court refused to direct any appropriation of the latter funds, but that the annuity should be raised by the purchase of consols, after a reference to ascertain which should be applied to that purpose; regard being had to the interests of other parties under the will. Prendergast v. Lushington, 5 Hare, 171. On appeal, 16 L. J., Ch. 125.

—Power to invest in the Trustees' Names—Securities to Bearer—Power to Postpone Conversion—Discretion—Majority.]—R., by will, gave his residuary estate to trustees upon trust to convert and to invest in their names upon the public stocks, funds, or securities of Great Britain or of any foreign or colonial government, and he gave them power to postpone for such time as should seem expedient the sale, conversion, or getting in of any part of the trust estate. The testator's estate consisted chiefly of foreign stocks and bonds, some of which were payable to bearer. The trustees retained these securities for some years, then one trustee wished to realise; the other three thought it best to further postpone the sale:—Held, on a summons taken out by the trustee who wished to realise, that under the power to invest in their names the trustees had not power to purchase foreign government bonds payable to bearer; that they had power to postpone the sale of such bonds possessed by the testator at his death, but that this power to postpone could only be exercised by the trustees unanimously, and if one trustee objected the bonds or other unauthorised securities must be converted. Roth, In re, Goldberger v. Roth, 74 L. T. 50.

d. Shares of Public Companies.

Shares Registered in Name of a Single Person.]—An investment in the shares or stock of a public company, which provides that the shares shall be registered in the name of a single person, is not a proper investment of trust funds. Consterdine v. Consterdine, 31 Beav. 330; 31 L. J., Ch. 807; 8 Jur. (N.S.) 906; 7 L. T. 122; 10 W. R. 727.

Shares which, by the rules of a company, could only be held in the name of a single person, were bequeathed specifically to three trustees for A. for life, with remainder over:—Held, that they might lawfully be held in the name of a single trustee. Ib.

A power to trustees to invest in stock or shares of a public company, authorises the purchase of shares or stock in an incorporated company bearing a fixed rate of interest. Ib.

Shares subject to Paramount Lien of Company for Moneys Owing.]—Semble, trustees having power to invest in the shares of trading companies ought not to invest in the shares of any company whose articles of association provide that the company should have a paramount lien and charge upon all the shares of any shareholder for all moneys owing to the company from him, alone or jointly with any other person, and that when a share is held by more persons than one, the company should have a lien and charge thereon in respect of all moneys so owing to them from all or any of the holders thereof, alone or jointly with any other persons. New London & Brazilian Bank v. Brocklebank, 51 L. J., Ch. 711; 21 Ch. D. 302.

Shares in Railway Company.]—A will authorised investments in "shares of any established railway in full operation":—Held, that investments in shares in railways within the United Kingdom, established by act of parliament, were authorised. Edwards v. Thompson, 38 L. J., Ch. 65.

—— Preference Railway Shares.]—A power to invest trust funds "upon the security of the funds of any company incorporated by act of parliament," does not warrant their investment in preference railway shares. Harris v. Harris, 29 Beav. 137; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 955; 9 W. R. 444.

"Railway or other Public Companies"—Things ejusdem generis.]—A testator directed his trustees to invest the residue of his estate (inter alia) "upon the debentures or securities of any railway or other public company carrying on business in any part of the United Kingdom." The trustees proposed to invest in the securities of certain companies incorporated under the companies acts:—Held, that the companies having been incorporated by public statute, the instruments forming their constitution being accessible to the public, and their shares being transferable to the public, they were public companies within the investment clause; and that the reference to the railway companies in the same clause did not restrict the meaning of the words "public companies." Sharp, In re, Rickett v. Sharp, 60 L. J., Ch. 38; 45 Ch. D. 286; 62 L. T. 777—C. A.

Company Incorporated by Act of Parliament—Royal Charter.]—A trustee empowered by will to invest in the shares of any company incorporated by act of parliament invested in the shares of "The London Assurance," a company created by royal charter granted in pursuance of an act of parliament, with rights and privileges which the crown could not have conceded apart from the act:—Held, that the company was a company incorporated by act of parliament within the meaning of the power. Elve v. Boyton, 60 L. J., Ch. 383; [1891] 1 Ch. 501; 64 L. T. 482—C. A.

—— Companies Act, 1862.]—A power for trustees to invest in the securities of any "company incorporated by act of parliament" does not authorise them to invest in the securities of a company incorporated by registration under the Companies Act, 1862. Smith, In re, Davidson v. Myrtle, 65 L. J., Ch. 761; [1896] 2 Ch. 590; 74 L. T. 810; 45 W. R. 29.

Such Securities as the Trustees shall "think fit."]—A power to trustees to invest in such securities as they "think fit" means as they "honestly think fit." Smith, In re, Smith v. Thompson, 65 L. J., Ch. 159; [1896] 1 Ch. 71; 73 L. T. 604; 44 W. R. 270.

—— Debentures to Bearer—Limited Company—Secret Commission—Liability to Account.]—Two trustees, A. and B., having power to invest in such securities as they thought fit, invested 3,000*l.* in debentures to bearer, issued by a limited company in the form of a floating security. A. received a commission of 300*l.* for procuring the trustees' application for these debentures. B., who was also tenant for life under the will, concurred in making the investment, but knew nothing of the commission paid to A.:—Held, that A. was liable for a breach of trust in making the investment, but that B. was not liable. Held also, that in addition to making good any loss arising on the investment, A. must account to the trust for the 300*l.* commission. Ib.

Bank Shares—Foreign and Colonial Bonds.]—A testator directed that his trustees should invest the moneys coming to their hands in respect of his estate in their names, or under their control, in such mode or modes of investment as they, in their uncontrolled discretion, should think fit. Before the commencement of an action to administer the testator's estate, the trustees (who were also executors) invested moneys forming part of it in the purchase of bonds of a foreign government, bonds of a colonial railway company, and shares of a bank on which there was a further liability. The chief clerk, in taking the accounts of the testator's estate, disallowed the trustees the sums which they had expended in the purchase of these bonds and shares. The shares in the bank had been previously sold at a profit:—Held, that though the investments in question ought not to be retained by the trustees, yet as they had acted bonâ fide, and no loss had resulted to the trust estate, they ought not to be disallowed the sums which they had laid out in making the investments. Brown, In re, Brown v. Brown, 54 L. J., Ch. 1134; 29 Ch. D. 889; 52 L. T. 853; 33 W. R. 692.

—— Altered Conditions.]—Where fully paid-up shares in a banking company were bequeathed to trustees, with power to retain the investment, and the shares after the testator's death were altered in amount and became liable to calls:—Held, that by reason of the changes that had taken place, the shares were no longer in the same state of investment as at the testator's death, but were in a state of investment unauthorised by the will, and that the trustees must convert them. Morris, In re, Bucknill v. Morris, 54 L. J., Ch. 388; 52 L. T. 462; 33 W. R. 445.

—— Shares not "Securities."]—A direction to executors to invest in such securities as they may think proper, does not warrant the purchase of shares in a limited banking company. Kavanagh, In re, Murphy v. Doyle, 27 L. R. Ir. 495.

—— New Shares in Respect of Old Shares.]—Certain old shares in a bank being in the name of one of two trustees, he received a circular asking him whether he would take new shares in respect of such old shares. The cestui que trust (a married woman, tenant for life without power of anticipation) urged him to take them, and she herself sent to the bank the form filled up by him. In the suit a call as to the old shares was directed to be paid out of the estate, but as to a call on the new shares:—Held, that he could not be indemnified. Sheriff v. Butler, 12 Jur. (N.S.) 329; 14 L. T. 510; 14 W. R. 629.

—— Unlimited Banking Company.]—A testator had, at the time of his death, one hundred shares in a bank with unlimited liability. By his will he directed his trustees and executors to convert his personal estate at their sole discretion, and at such time or times as they should think fit, and to invest the proceeds in shares in any public company incorporated by act of parliament and paying a dividend. The shares, which were very profitable, were retained by the sole trustee, who, subsequently, accepted twenty-five additional new shares allotted in respect of the old ones. The trustee then retired, and appointed two new trustees. Ultimately the bank stopped payment:—Held, that the original trustee had not committed a breach of trust in retaining the old shares, but had done so in accepting the new ones, and was liable to indemnify the testator's estate for losses incurred thereby. Edwards v. Edmunds, 34 L. T. 522.

A testator, by will dated in August, 1862, bequeathed his shares in a public company and the rest of his estate, to his trustees upon trust to convert, "immediately after his decease, or so soon thereafter as they might see fit to do so." Part of the estate consisted of thirty-six shares in an unlimited banking company. At his death the shares were at a premium, and considered a good and safe investment. Soon after his death the bank issued new shares, offering them to the original shareholders at par. Nine were offered to the trustees in respect of the testator's shares, and being at a premium were purchased by them, though the trust for investment did not authorise investment in shares. The old and new shares were held together by the trustees until July, 1866, when the bank broke:—Held, that the trustees should not have purchased the new shares, and should have sold the old shares in reasonable time after the testator's death; that reasonable time, in such case, if no cause is shown for delay, is a year after the testator's death; and that the trustees must replace, not only the amount of the calls made upon all the forty-six shares and the purchase money of the shares purchased, but also the loss to the testator's estate in respect of the shares having become valueless. Sculthorpe v. Tipper, 41 L. J., Ch. 266; L. R. 13 Eq. 232; 26 L. T. 119; 20 W. R. 276.

e. South Sea Stock.

Lottery Orders.]—A goldsmith, without any orders from the proprietors, subscribed lottery orders into the South Sea Company; he was held indemnified by the act 6 Geo. 1, c. 4, s. 23, empowering all trustees, guardians, executors, &c., to make such subscriptions, and it would have been the same if the cestui que trust had forbidden him to subscribe. Trenchard v. Wanley, 2 P. Wms. 165; 2 Eq. Cas. Abr. 724, pl. 2. And in the next term, in Weaver v. Fowler (2 P. Wms. 170), Ld. Macclesfield made the same resolution.

Laying out trust money in South Sea stock where it subjects the trust to a loss, is not a good security, for the directors may trade away the whole stock whilst they keep within the terms of the charter; South Sea annuities and bank annuities only, are proper and good security; for it is not in the power of the directors to bring any loss upon them. Trafford v. Boehm, 3 Atk. 444.

A., who is trustee for B. of 1,000*l.* South Sea stock, at the desire of B. borrows 4,000*l.* on this stock of the company, and B. receives the money; A. pays the 10 per cent. (under the 7 Geo. 1, sess. 2, s. 7) to be discharged of the loan; though B. forbade the payment, yet he is liable. Balsh v. Hyham, 2 P. Wms. 453; 2 Eq. Cas. Abr. 741, pl. 8.

viii. Non-Investment by Trustees in Specified Securities.

Legacy to be laid out in Stock.]—Where a person, executor and trustee of a legacy to be laid out in stock, has fully administered the estate and assented to the legacy, and retains the legacy in his hands not as assets but as trustee, he is liable for a breach of trust, and was ordered to purchase stock at the price of the time when he was first able to invest it. Byrchall v. Bradford, 6 Madd. 235; 23 R. R. 204.

Direction in Will to Invest in Consols and Accumulate.]—A trustee, who was directed by the will of the testator to invest the residue in consols, and to accumulate the dividends, invested it on mortgage of real estate; he was held liable to make good the amount of stock which would have been purchased in consols, together with the amount of accumulation which would have been produced by a proper investment of the dividends of such stock. Pride v. Fooks, 2 Beav. 430; 9 L. J., Ch. 234; 4 Jur. 213.

Omission to Invest Money to Satisfy Annuity —Rise in Stock.]—A trustee, by omitting to invest a sum of money sufficient to pay an annuity of 100*l.* a year to a party for life, is liable, when the parties in remainder become entitled to the fund, to make good any rise in the stock, assuming it had been purchased; and although the principal sum directed to be invested was paid, and a release obtained, still it was set aside, and the difference in value was directed to be paid to the cestuis que trust, who were illiterate and ignorant of their rights. Aspland v. Watte, 20 Beav. 474; 25 L. J., Ch. 53; 3 W. R. 526.

—— Inquiry as Sum to be Invested.]—A testator directed his trustees to invest a sufficient sum on government or real securities or railway stock to produce an annuity of 100*l.* a year, and after the death of the annuitant to call in and divide the principal among his brothers then living, or the children of such as should be then dead. The testator left three brothers; and the trustees (of whom the annuitant was one) provided for the annuity in part by appropriating a railway debenture for 1,500*l.*, which bore interest at first at 5*l.* per cent., and afterwards at 4*l.* per cent., and in part by interest paid by one of the brothers upon a loan to him of moneys of the testator. A child of another brother who was dead, having filed a bill, during the annuitant's life, against the surviving trustees, to have a sufficient fund properly invested:—Held, that he was entitled to an inquiry as to what sum should have been invested at the end of a year from the testator's death to meet the annuity, and to a declaration that the trustees were liable to make good the sum so ascertained. Starkey v. Dyson, 24 W. R. 37.

Falling off in Value of Stock.]—Where there is a falling off of stock, without the neglect of trustee, he is not liable to make good the deficiency, but is answerable only so far as the value, especially where it was specific stock. Jackson v. Jackson, 1 Atk. 513.

Option of Cestui que Trust—Rate of Interest.]—Where a testator directs his trustees to invest trust moneys in parliamentary stocks or funds, or on real securities, and they omit so to invest it, the cestuis que trust have not the option of charging them with the moneys which could have been produced if the moneys had been invested in the funds, but are only entitled to have the trust moneys replaced, with interest at 4 per cent. Robinson v. Robinson, 1 De G. M. & G. 247; 21 L. J., Ch. 111; 16 Jur. 255.

The testator directed his trustees to invest the residue of his personal estate in government or real securities. Some of the cestuis que trust and one of the trustees permitted the trust moneys to remain in the hands of the other trustee at interest:—Held, that, inasmuch as no investment was made, the trustees were chargeable with the whole amount of the trust funds possessed by them, with interest; but were not answerable for the amount of consols, or any other particular security, in which they might, according to the directions of the will, have invested the trust moneys. Shepherd v. Mould, 4 Hare, 500; 14 L. J., Ch. 366; 9 Jur. 506.

A trustee having, under a settlement, a power of sale, with a trust for interim investments in the funds or on real security, concurred in a sale, and permitted the tenant for life to receive the purchase money, which was not invested according to the trust :—Held, that the cestui que trust has not the option of requiring the trustee to replace the purchase money with interest, or to buy such a sum of stock as the proceeds of the sale would have purchased if invested at the time. Rees v. Williams, 1 De G. & Sm. 314.

—— Improper Exercise by Trustee of Option to Invest on Mortgage or Government Security.]—Where a trustee neglects to invest on real or government securities according to the trust, the cestui que trust has the right of selecting whether the trustee shall be answerable for the money or for the stock. A trustee, having the option of investing on mortgage or government security, improperly took an insufficient mortgage security. Being held answerable, the court decided that, having exercised his discretion, though improperly, he was answerable for the money lost, and not for the stock it might have produced. Ames v. Parkinson, 7 Beav. 379.

—— Investment of Sale Moneys on Personal Security.]—Husband and wife had a power to sell real estates, with the consent of the trustees ; the moneys were, with all convenient speed, to be laid out in the purchase of other lands ; and, until a convenient purchase could be effected, it was made lawful for the trustees, with the consent of the husband and wife, to invest the money in government or real securities. A sale took place in 1811, and in 1816 the produce was lent by the trustees on personal security :—Held, that the trustees were liable for the stock which the money would have produced in 1816. Held, also, that the trustees ought not to have consented to a sale without first providing the means of investing the purchase money. Watts v. Girdlestone, 6 Beav. 188 ; 12 L. J.,Ch. 363 ; 7 Jur. 501.

—— Trust Money Invested by Tenant for Life Contrary to Trusts.]—Trustees, authorised to lay out trust money in the public funds or on mortgage, invested it on a mortgage. The mortgage was paid off, and the amount was received by the tenant for life, who, contrary to the trusts, invested it in real estate :—Held, that the cestuis que trust had the option of charging the tenant for life, either with the sum sterling received, or with the amount of 3 per cents. which might have been purchased therewith at the time the breach of trust was committed. Ouseley v. Anstruther, 10 Beav. 456.

—— Option of Trustee.]—A trustee, with power to invest in consols or on real security, who makes an improper investment, has the option of replacing either the actual sum misapplied with interest at 4*l.* per cent. per annum, or the sum which would have been produced by an investment in consols. Robinson v. Robinson, supra. followed. Brown v. Gellatly (L. R. 2 Ch. 751) distinguished ; Fisher v. Gilpin, 38 L. J., Ch. 230.

Neglect to Convert—Interest Allowed to Tenant for Life.]—A testator gave the residue of his personal estate to trustees, directing them to convert it into money, and invest the proceeds in government or real securities, of which they were to stand possessed, upon trust for A. during her life, and, after her death, for B. The trustees permitted a share, which the testator had in an Indian loan, bearing interest at 10 per cent., to remain for several years on that security, during which time they paid to A. the interest at 10 per cent. which it yielded annually ; and, the loan being afterwards paid off, they invested the money in the 3 per cents. at a time when the funds were so low, that the amount of stock purchased was considerably greater than if the conversion had taken place at the end of a year from the testator's death :—Held, that the tenant for life was not entitled to the actual interest, which the money yielded, while it remained in the Indian security, but only to the dividends of so much 3 per cent. stock as would have been purchased with it at the end of a year from the testator's death. Dimes v. Scott, 4 Russ. 195 ; 28 R. R. 46 —L. C.

Held, also, that the trustees ought to be charged with the whole of the stock actually purchased, and all sums actually received in respect of the Indian rate of interest ; and that they ought to be allowed in their discharge, as payments to the tenant for life, not the sums which they had in fact paid her, but only a sum equal to what she would have received for dividends, if the money had been transferred from the Indian security and invested in the 3 per cent. stock at the end of a year from the testator's death. Ib.

ix. Improper Sale of Stock.

Option of Cestui que Trust.]—Trustee, mistaking his power, sold stock without authority ; decreed to replace it immediately : if at a less price, to invest the surplus in the same stock to the same uses. Powlett (Earl) v. Herbert, 1 Ves. 297.

Trustee of stock sells it ; the cestui que trust has an option to have the stock or the produce, with interest. Forrest v. Elwes, 4 Ves. 497 ; 4 R. R. 269. S. P., Harrison v. Harrison, 2 Atk. 121. And see Bostock v. Blakeney, infra.

Executor and trustee having been guilty of a breach of trust, by selling out stock and dealing improperly with the money, the cestui que trust have an option to have the stock replaced, or the money produced by the sales, with interest at 5 per cent. or more, if more has been made by it, and the costs occasioned by his misconduct. Pocock v. Reddington, 5 Ves. 749.

Trustee selling out stock, which was the trust fund, without corrupt motive, decreed to replace the stock with costs of so much of the suit as was occasioned by his act ; but no option given to the cestui que trust to have the money produced by the sale invested, as there would if the trustee made anything, or sought to make anything, by the sale. O'Brien v. O'Brien, 1 Moll. 533.

—— Bankrupt Trustee Selling.] — Where bankrupt trustee has sold out stock, the cestui que trust may either prove for the price or for the value at the time of the bankruptcy. Garner, Ex parte, Iveson, In re, 1 Mont. D. & D. 497.

Trustee Selling Stock and Investing on Improper Mortgage — Request of Married Woman.]—Where a trustee, at the request of the cestui que trust, a married woman, and tenant for life of the fund for her separate use, sold out the trust fund, and invested it on an improper security :—Held, in a suit by such tenant for life against the trustee to have the trust fund replaced in a proper state of investment, that no costs ought to be given, as between the plaintiff and the defendant, on either side ; held, also, that the costs of the parties entitled in remainder were to be paid by the plaintiff. Mant v. Leith, 15 Beav. 524; 21 L. J., Ch. 719; 16 Jur. 302.

Where a trustee, at the instance of a cestui que trust, a married woman, sold out stock, and placed the trust fund in an improper state of investment; he was charged only with the amount of the dividends which would have accrued due on the trust fund had it remained in its original investment. Ib.

Where the trusts are to invest in any of the public stocks or funds, or on real securities, railway debentures, though real securities, are not real securities within the terms of the trust. Ib.

Stock to be Replaced.]—Where trustees, having power to invest on government or real security, and vary such investment from time to time, sold out stock for the purpose of investing the produce of the stock in a mortgage, which they were not justified in taking, it was held, that the court could not treat the sale of the stock as lawful, and the investment as unlawful, so as to satisfy the trust by replacing the money; but that the whole must be treated as one unjustifiable transaction, and that the trustees must replace the stock. Phillipson v. Gatty, 2 Hall & Tw. 459. Affirming 7 Hare, 516; 13 Jur. 318.

Misapplication of Exchequer Bills by Broker.]—A trustee properly invested trust money in exchequer bills, but he kept them in the hands of a broker; upon a misapplication of them by the broker:—Held, that the trustee was personally liable for the value of the exchequer bills at the time of the loss, and not for the stock the money would have purchased. Mathew v. Brise, 6 Beav. 239; 12 L. J., Ch. 263. Affirmed, 15 L. J., Ch. 39; 10 Jur. 105.

Stock Sold Out just before Dividend was Payable.]—A trust fund is created by will to be laid out in the purchase of lands; an estate is purchased, and the trust money is laid out in repairs and improvements; this is a misapplication, and shall not be allowed. Part of the trust money was sold out just before a dividend was payable; no allowance can be made to the tenant for life (who would be entitled to the dividend) in the price. Where a trustee sells out trust money, the cestui que trust may elect whether he will have it replaced, or be paid the produce of it. Bostock v. Blakeney, 2 Bro. C. C. 653.

x. Funds in Court and Investment with Sanction of Court.

See R. S. C., November, 1888 (substituted for R. S. C., 1883, Ord. 22, r. 17).

Investment in Bank Stock and East India Stock.]—Where there was a power to invest trust funds in Government or real securities, the court sanctioned an investment in bank stock and in East India stock. Bishop v. Bishop, 30 L. J., Ch. 624; 4 L. T. 350; 9 W. R. 549.

—— Consols.]—Where a petition prayed an investment of 3 per cent. consols in bank stock or East India stock, the court directed the investment to be made in bank stock. Peillon v. Brooking, 4 L. T. 731.

The costs of all parties were ordered to be paid out of the capital of the trust fund; but several residuary legatees who had appeared by different counsel were allowed only one set of costs. Ib.

A trust fund invested in consols was paid into court under the Trustee Relief Act. On the petition of the tenant for life to change the investment into East India or bank stock, and for payment of the dividends to him, a transfer into bank stock was, under the circumstances, ordered; and, a petition being otherwise necessary, the costs were directed to be paid out of the corpus. Langford's Trusts, In re, 2 J. & H. 458; 31 L. J., Ch. 334; 8 Jur. (N.S.) 114; 5 L. T. 579; 10 W. R. 121.

On the application of a person who had a life interest in two funds invested in consols, the court, under the provisions of 22 & 23 Vict. c. 35, directed such funds to be sold by the accountant-general, and to be invested in bank stock. Cohen v. Waley, Newton v. Waley, 7 Jur. (N.S.) 937; 3 L. T. 436; 9 W. R. 137.

—— 23 & 24 Vict. c. 38—Interim Investment until suitable Investment in Land.]—A testator directed his trustees to convert his personal estate and invest it in the purchase of lands to be settled in strict settlement, and in the meantime to invest it in the funds and pay the dividends to the persons who would have been entitled to the rents of the lands if purchased. The testator died shortly before the passing of the statute 22 & 23 Vict. c. 35, possessed of considerable sums of bank stock and East India stock:—Held, after the passing of the stat. 23 & 24 Vict. c. 38, that the trustees were justified in retaining the above stocks in their present state and investing other moneys in like stocks until a suitable investment in land could be found, and that the tenant for life was entitled to the whole income arising from them subsequent to the passing of that statute. But held that for the period between the death of the testator and the passing of the stat. 23 & 24 Vict. c. 38, the tenant for life was entitled only to such income as she would have received had the stocks been converted at the testator's death and invested in consols; the last mentioned statute making s. 32 of 22 & 23 Vict. c. 35, retrospective for the purpose of making it apply to instruments coming into effect before it was passed, but not so as to affect rights accrued before the passing of the later act. Hume v. Richardson, 4 De G. F. & J. 29; 31 L. J., Ch. 713; 8 Jur. (N.S.) 686; 6 L. T. 624; 10 W. R. 528. And see Sowerby v. Clayton, 3 Hare, 430; 8 Jur. 597.

Section 32 of 22 & 23 Vict. c. 35, enabling trustees, in certain cases, to invest their trust funds in bank stock or East India stock, does not apply where the trust fund is already invested in bank annuities, and the trustee has no power, independently of the act, to vary any investment. Warde, In re, 2 J. & H. 191.

—— Sale by Husband of Part of Reversionary Interest.]—Circumstances under which the court will authorise the investment of trust funds in East India stock. A tenant for life, having a power to give a life interest to his wife, by his marriage settlement appointed certain hereditaments to trustees, during his wife's life, upon trust, if she survived him, to pay her an annuity of 500*l.* out of the rents and profits, during her life, for her jointure, in lieu of dower. He afterwards acquired the fee, and the hereditaments, subject to the jointure, being considered an insufficient security, the husband and wife joined in conveying the same, with other hereditaments, to trustees, discharged from the annuity, upon trust, to raise, by mortgage, sufficient money to purchase an annuity of 500*l.* for the life of the wife, if she survived him, or, if the money should not be raised by mortgage within three months, upon trust to sell the hereditaments, and invest a sufficient part thereof in 3 per cent. consols, or (if insufficient) to invest the whole of the moneys in the parliamentary stocks or public funds, or in government or real securities, with power of variation of securities, and after the decease of the tenant for life, to pay the income to the wife during her life in satisfaction of the annuity, and to stand possessed of the surplus in trust for the husband. The power to raise money by mortgage was not exercised, and the trust premises were sold and the proceeds invested in consols, but the whole income was insufficient to pay the annuity. Upon a bill filed by the wife after the death of the husband:—Held, that she was not entitled to have the deficiency of the income made good out of the corpus of the fund. Mortimer v. Picton, 4 De G. J. & S. 166; 3 N. R. 338; 33 L. J., Ch. 337; 10 Jur. (N.S.) 83; 9 L. T. 795; 12 W. R. 292.

Held, also, that the primary object of the trust being to secure the annuity, the court might properly, in the exercise of its statutory jurisdiction, direct the conversion of the trust fund into East India stock, notwithstanding that the husband had sold a portion of his reversionary interest. Ib.

—— Transfer of Fund in Court belonging to Married Woman.]—It is a matter of discretion vested in the court as to whether a transfer of a fund in court, belonging to a married woman equitably entitled for life, and which was invested in consols, should be laid out in East India stock, under 23 & 24 Vict. c. 38. Cockburn v. Peel, 30 L. J., Ch. 575; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 810; 4 L. T. 571; 9 W. R. 725.

Where, however, the fund is not in court, trustees making the transfer will be entitled to the protection of the court, if they act bonâ fide and to the best of their discretion. Ib.

—— Special Reason for Change of Investment.]—On an application by two unmarried women and a married woman and her husband to have certain sums of moneys, to which they were entitled for life under their father's will, transferred from the government new 3 per cent. stock to Bank of Ireland stock, the court will not permit such a transfer, except under special circumstances, showing either that the transfer will be beneficial to those entitled in remainder, or that it is necessary in order to carry out the primary object of the trust. The mere increase of income is not a sufficient ground for the transfer. Boyces' Minors, In re, Ir. R. 2 Eq. 255; 15 W. R. 827.

—— Fund for Maintenance—Infants nearly of Age.]—The court ordered a fund invested in consols, out of which maintenance had been allowed by an order of the court for infants in a suit, and which has become diminished, to be invested in East India stock, the infants having nearly attained their majority. Fluid v. Fluid, 7 L. T. 590. S. P., Hurd v. Hurd, 11 W. R. 50.

—— Application of Married Woman aged Fifty-one without Children.]—Where a woman, fifty-one years of age, who had been married thirty-four years without ever having had children, asked that a sum of consols which was settled upon herself for life, remainder to her children, remainder to herself absolutely, might be sold out and invested in East India stock, the court directed the change of investment, notwithstanding the opposition of the petitioner's husband, as the probability of there being any children to take under the settlement was extremely remote. Vidler v. Parratt, 4 N. R. 392; 10 L. T. 686; 12 W. R. 976.

—— Party very Poor.]—Where a party is very poor, the court will not only sanction the exchange from consols to bank stock, but will dispense with any provision in the order disenabling the party from receiving three dividends in one year. Ingram's Trust, In re, 8 L. T. 758; 11 W. R. 980.

—— Tenant for Life who was Settlor.]—An investment of settled trust funds in East India or bank stock sanctioned, upon the petition and at the cost of the tenant for life, who was the settlor. Equitable Assurance Co. v. Fuller, 1 J. & H. 379; 30 L. J., Ch. 848; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 307; 4 L. T. 50; 9 W. R. 400.

Administration of Trust Funds in Court—No Direction for Investment in East India Stock.]—In the administration of trust funds in court no direction will be made for the investment in East India stock, though the court gave the tenants for life permission to apply in chambers for leave to invest the funds on real security in England. Ungless v. Tuff, 30 L. J., Ch. 784; 9 W. R. 729.

Position of Stock while Company's Charter was in Force.]—While the 3 & 4 Will. 4. c. 85, for the regulation of the East India Company's charter, was in force, the capital stock of the company was not "a government or parliamentary stock or fund," nor was it "a foreign stock or fund." Brown v. Brown, 4 K. & J. 704; 6 W. R. 613.

New East India Stock.]—The court will in no case authorise trustees to invest trust money in the new East India stock. Fromow's Estate, In re, 8 W. R. 272.

Money having been paid into court in obedience to the Standing Orders, upon an intended application to parliament for a bill for the construction of a railway, the parties paying in the money applied that the same might be invested in the New East India 5 per cent. loan, raised under the powers of the 22 & 23 Vict. c. 39; but Wood, V.-C., was of opinion that such investment would not be East India stock within the meaning of the 22 & 23 Vict. c. 35, s. 32, and the full court of appeal concurred. Colne Valley and Halstead Ry. Bill, In re, 1 De G. & J. 53; 1 John. 528; 29 L. J., Ch. 33; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 1129; 1 L. T. 20, 26; 8 W. R. 18.

Such investment is not what the court of chancery would sanction; but if a trustee had so invested money, and were brought before the court as for a breach of trust, and he pleaded the provisions of the 22 & 23 Vict. c. 35, s. 32, the court would be bound to decide in his favour. Ib.

Where Special Securities Directed by the Trust.]—By an act of parliament, funds in court were, by way of interim investment, to be laid out in navy, victualling, or exchequer bills. But under 23 & 24 Vict. c. 38, and the General Orders of February 1, 1861, the court allowed them to be invested in consols. Birmingham Blue Coat School, In re, 35 Beav. 345; 35 L. J., Ch. 837; L. R. 1 Eq. 632.

The court of chancery may order the investment in East India stock of a fund paid into court under the provisions of a special act anterior to 23 & 24 Vict. c. 38, although such special act directs the investment to be in consols or 3*l.* per cent. reduced bank annuities. Wilkinson's Estate, In re, L. R. 9 Eq. 343.

An application for an order for investment of such a fund in bank stock or new East India stock (in which trustees are authorised to invest by 30 & 31 Vict. c. 132) refused. G. N. Ry., Ex parte, L. R. 9 Eq. 274.

Loans on Real Securities in Ireland.]—Section 3 of 4 & 5 Will. 4, c. 29, enacts that in certain cases loans on real securities in Ireland shall be made under the directions of the court of chancery or exchequer in England to be obtained in any cause upon petition in a summary way:—Held, that the concluding part of the section must be read thus: "in any cause, or upon petition in a summary way"; and that the proposed securities must be approved of by the master. French, Ex parte, 7 Sim. 510.

An application made under the 4 & 5 Will. 4, c. 29, to invest trust funds on Irish security, refused, for though for the benefit of the tenant for life, as increasing his income, it was otherwise as to those in remainder, as affording a less secure investment. Stuart v. Stuart, 3 Beav. 430; 10 L. J., Ch. 148; 5 Jur. 3.

Lynch's Act (4 & 5 Will. 4, c. 29) only relieves a trustee from liability in respect of an investment in Ireland instead of England, and therefore where, upon petition under the act, the court sanctioned an investment which was made without proper evidence of value, and without the consent of the necessary parties, and there was a loss, the trustees were held liable for the breach of trust. Norris v. Wright, 14 Beav. 291.

Pending a suit to make trustees liable for the improper investment of trust moneys on an Irish estate, the property was put up for sale under the Incumbered Estates Act, and an order was made giving the trustees liberty to buy, which they did:—Held, that this order did not relieve the trustees from any liability in the cause, although it was not expressed to be made "without prejudice." Ib.

Reference to Master to Inquire whether Change of Investment Beneficial to all Parties.]—Under the 4 & 5 Will. 4, c. 29, a trust to invest money in real securities in England or Wales or Great Britain, will authorise an investment on real securities in Ireland also; and although the money be already invested in Great Britain, the court will, on the application of the tenant for life of the fund, direct a reference to the master to inquire whether it will be for the benefit of all parties interested that that investment should be changed for one at a higher rate of interest in Ireland. Pawlett (Lord), Ex parte, 1 Ph. 570; 14 L. J., Ch. 321.

An order of reference, under the act 4 & 5 Will. 4, c. 29, as to whether it would be for the benefit of the parties beneficially interested in a settled fund to lend it on the security of freehold estates in Ireland, may be made ex parte; but the court will not confirm the master's report, finding that such a loan would be for the benefit of such parties, unless they all, as well those entitled in remainder as those entitled for life, have either been served with the petition or appeared before the master. Kirkpatrick's Trust, In re, 15 Jur. 941.

Securities other than Consols.]—The court will not, on the application of a tenant for life, except in special cases, order a fund in court to be invested in any other security but that of consols. Darwin v. Darwin, 22 L. J., Ch. 1007; 17 Jur. 781.

—— New Three per cent. Annuities.]—Sum of money paid into court under the Trustee Act allowed to be invested in new 3*l.* per cent. annuities. Dunster's Trusts, In re, 3 Eq. R. 449; 3 W. R. 267.

Under special circumstances the court permitted an infant's fund to be invested in new 3*l.* per cent. reduced bank annuities, instead of consols. Hanson v. Murray, 3 Eq. R. 758; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 917; 3 W. R. 557.

—— London and Westminster Bank Shares.] Trustees, under a power in a will, invested the residuary estate in London and Westminster Bank shares. An administration decree having been made, the remaindermen under the will applied to have the funds invested in consols; and it appearing that one of the trustees desired the change of investment, but was willing to retire from the trust, the court ordered the fund to be invested in consols, with liberty to apply with reference to any appointment of new trustees. Butler v. Withers, 1 J. & H. 332; 4 L. T. 736.

—— Freehold Houses.]—An investment of a fund in court in freehold houses will not, however eligible, be sanctioned by the court. Moore v. Walter, 8 L. T. 448; 11 W. R. 713.

—— Purchase of Land.]—Upon a petition by a tenant for life without impeachment of waste for the investment of 6,100*l.*, part of a large fund in court, in the purchase of land, the court approved of the purchase, notwithstanding the timber on the property was valued at 1,800*l.* Jones's Settled Estates, 3 Eq. R. 735; 24 L. J., Ch. 504; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 817; 3 W. R. 564.

—— Foreign Bonds.]—The court will allow the investment of a fund in court on foreign bonds where the interest is payable to bearer by coupons passing from hand to hand. Brackenbury's Trusts, In re, 31 L. T. 79; 22 W. R. 682.

Indian Railway Stock.]—A testator by his will gave 6,000*l.* on trust for C. for life, and after her death, in certain events, for R. for life. He directed the 6,000*l.* to be invested, inter alia, in the guaranteed stock of any railway company in India upon which a minimum rate of interest should be guaranteed by the government of India. All railways in India, not belonging to the Government, are leasehold. C. applied that the 6,000*l.* might be invested in East Indian Railway Stock Annuity B., and in Scinde, Punjaub, and Delhi Railway five per cent. guaranteed stock. R. opposed:—Held, that the court would approve of the proposed investment. Mansel, In re, Rhodes v. Jenkin, 45 L. T. 741 ; 30 W. R. 133.

Effect of Administration Decree.]—After an administration decree has been made all powers of management of the estate which may be vested in trustees are subject to the control of the court; and the judge who exercises such control must be personally satisfied of the propriety of the course proposed to be adopted by the trustees. Bethel v. Abraham, 43 L. J., Ch. 180 ; L. R. 17 Eq. 24 ; 29 L. T. 715 ; 22 W. R. 179.

American Funds.]—Trustees having power to invest certain moneys belonging to a testator's estate at their discretion, and having also power to continue or change securities from time to time, as to the majority should seem meet, applied to the court in a suit for the administration of the trust estate for liberty to invest the moneys in and to convert securities into American funds or railway stocks. Infants were interested in the trust estate :—Held, that if the trustees had the discretion they claimed (which was doubtful), the court ought not, in a case where infants were interested, to permit them to exercise that discretion in the way they proposed. Ib.

American Federal Securities.]—The trusts of a settlement as to two-thirds of the trust funds made it imperative on the trustees, and as to the remaining one-third left it discretionary with them, to invest in American securities. During the civil war in America two petitions were presented, seeking an authority from the court to make such investments, but, having regard to the then condition of the United States, the court directed an investment in British funds with liberty to apply. After the termination of the war a third petition was presented, which the court answered by authorising investments in American Federal securities, directing the costs to be paid out of the corpus. Knowles's Settlement, In re, 37 L. J., Ch. 840 ; 18 L. T. 809.

Practice on Application to Court.]—See R. S. C. 1883, Ord. XXII, r. 18.

Former Practice.]—On motion for application of money placed in bank by a former order, there must not only be a certificate that the money was paid into the bank, but that it is actually there at the time of the motion. Anon., 1 Atk. 519.

Notice of motion was given for the payment of money into court, but the notice did not proceed to state that any application would be made for its investment ; one of the parties did not appear on the motion :—Held, that no order for investment of the fund could be made. Robinson v. Wood, 1 Beav. 206.

When money is to be laid out under a marriage settlement in purchases, application must be made to the court upon each separate purchase. Harrington v. Fleming, 1 Bro. C. C. 74.

On a petition for the investment of stock and payment of the dividends, the court required an affidavit of title to be made by the petitioners. St. Mary's College, Winchester, Ex parte, 14 L. T. 550 ; 14 W. R. 788.

Upon an application for the investment of money paid into the bank, in the name of the accountant-general, to the credit of the copyhold commissioners, under s. 73 of the Copyhold Enfranchisement Act (4 & 5 Vict. c. 35), it is proper for the petitioner to serve the commissioners with notice of the application ; and, notwithstanding the act makes no provision for the payment of any costs, the court ordered the petitioner to pay the costs of the copyhold commissioners, and to add them to his own ; and that all such costs should be paid to the petitioner out of the fund, and said that this would be the rule for the future. Hereford (Bishop), Ex parte, 5 De G. & Sm. 265 ; 21 L. J., Ch. 608.

An order for the interim investment of money paid into court under a private act had been made by the Vice-Chancellor Kindersley :—Held, that an application for the payment out of court of part of the funds for the purposes of the same act, should be made before the same judge. Harman's Bowden Park Estate Act, In re, 1 Eq. R. 246 ; 1 W. R. 492.

The 23 & 24 Vict. c. 38 is an enabling act, and s. 10, which enacts that all orders for conversion of bank annuities into other funds or securities be made upon petition, to be presented by any of the parties in a summary way, does not preclude the court, in the exercise of its ordinary jurisdiction, from making such orders on a decree in a suit. Lucas v. Rudd, 16 W. R. 325.

When money is paid into court in consequence of a tenancy for life, and there is no provision in the private act under which it was paid in for service on any other person than the tenant for life, service on the trustees of the instrument under which he claims was dispensed with, and an investment was ordered in East India Stock under 23 & 24 Vict. c. 38, s. 10. Adam's Will, In re, 17 L. T. 641.

xi. Power to Vary Investments.

Statute.]—Trustee Act, 1893, s. 1.

Admission by Trustee of Sale of Part of Funds.]—A trustee, having power to vary trust funds, admitted that he had sold part of the funds, but did not show how the produce had been invested :—Held, on such an admission, that he was liable to make good the fund. Meyer v. Montrion, 5 Beav. 146 ; 11 L. J., Ch. 398.

Burden of Proof.]—It is the duty of a trustee who executes a power to show that he has complied with the exigencies required by it. So, where he varies the investment of the trust fund, the burden of proof lies on him to show that it is a fit and proper investment. Norris v. Wright, 14 Beav. 291.

Trust Legacy—Absence of Power to Vary.]—When specific property is bequeathed upon trust without any power being given to the trustees to alter the mode of investment, such trustees may, nevertheless, sell the property and invest the proceeds on any of the statutory investments, and vary such investment from time to time, provided that they never buy any redeemable security at a premium. Waite v. Littlewood, 41 L. J., Ch. 636.

—— Appropriation—Change of Investment.]—When a trust legacy has been appropriated it is a breach of trust to vary the investment without reasonable cause; and upon the legacy falling into possession, the trustee is liable to indemnify the legatee against any loss resulting from the change of investment. The duties of trustees with respect to the appropriation and investment of trust legacies considered. Walker, In re, Walker v. Walker, 59 L. J., Ch. 386; 62 L. T. 449.

Consols—National Debt Conversion.]—Trustees of a will containing directions to invest in consols, but no direction to change or vary the investment, may, under the National Debt (Conversion) Act, 1888, sell original stock and invest the proceeds in authorised securities. Tuckett's Trusts, In re, 57 L. J., Ch. 760; 58 L. T. 719; 36 W. R. 542.

Trust Investment Act, 1889.]—The power to vary investments in s. 3 of the Trust Investment Act, 1889, applies to all investments authorised by the act, whether made under the act or not. Therefore, where trust funds were invested in securities authorised by the act under an instrument which contained no power to vary:—Held, that the trustees had power to sell out such securities for the purpose of investing the proceeds in other securities authorised by the act. Hume v. Lopes, 61 L. J., Ch. 423; [1892] A. C. 112; 66 L. T. 425: 40 W. R. 593—H. L. (E.)

The expression "trust funds" in s. 3 of the act includes money invested on security as well as uninvested cash. Ib.—By Lord Watson and Lord Macnaghten.

—— Appropriation to Particular Legacy.]—The power given to trustees by s. 3 of the Trust Investment Act, 1889, to invest trust funds in any of the stocks therein mentioned, does not extend to authorising them to set apart or appropriate any of such stocks to answer a particular purpose, as, for instance, to provide for an annuity given by will, so as to facilitate the distribution of the rest of the testator's estate. Owthwaite, In re, Owthwaite v. Taylor, 60 L. J., Ch. 854; [1891] 3 Ch. 494; 65 L. T. 144; 40 W. R. 38.

—— Corporation holding Funds for Charitable Purposes—Varying Investments.]—A corporation incorporated by special act of parliament and holding funds for charitable purposes is a trustee within the meaning of the Trust Investment Act, 1889, and consequently is entitled to invest any trust moneys in its hands on any of the securities specified or referred to in s. 3 of the act, unless expressly forbidden to do so by the instrument creating the trust. A trustee, however, who has not, under the instrument creating his trust, power to vary the investments comprised in such instrument, cannot sell existing investments for the purpose of reinvesting the proceeds in the securities specified or referred to in s. 3 of the act. Manchester Royal Infirmary v. Att.-Gen., 59 L. J., Ch. 370; 43 Ch. D. 420; 62 L. T. 419; 38 W. R. 460. But see Hume v. Lopes, supra.

—— Scope of Act—Building Society.]—The powers of investment conferred on trustees by the Trust Investment Act, 1889, are not applicable n the case of the funds of a building society incorporated under the Building Societies Act, 1874, whether such funds are standing in the name of the society or in the names of its trustees. Those powers are only exercisable by trustees who have funds in their hands for the purpose of investment. National Permanent Building Society, In re, 59 L. J., Ch. 403; 43 Ch. D. 431; 62 L. T. 596; 38 W. R. 475.

7. Indemnity, Lien and Reimbursement.

Statute.]—Trustee Act, 1893, ss. 24, 49.

a. Indemnity Clause.

Trustees Joining in Receipts.]—L., by will, in 1854, after appointing three trustees, declared "such" (sic in the will, but "each" in the draft) trustee should be answerable only for losses arising from his own default, and not for involuntary acts, or for the acts or defaults of his co-trustees or trustee, and particularly that any trustee who should pay over to his co-trustee, or should do or concur in any act enabling his co-trustee to receive any moneys for the general purposes of her will, should not be obliged to see to the due application thereof, nor should such trustee be subsequently rendered responsible by an express notice or intimation of the actual misapplication of the same moneys. The three trustees joined in signing and giving receipts to two insurance companies for the two sums of money paid by them, but two of the trustees permitted their co-trustee to obtain the money without ascertaining whether he had duly invested it. That trustee having misapplied the money, a bill was filed for the purpose of making his co-trustees personally liable:—Held, that according to the true construction of the indemnity clause contained in the will, their concurrence in enabling their co-trustee to receive the money did not make them liable for the misapplication of the fund. Wilkins v. Hogg, 3 Giff. 116; 31 L. J., Ch. 41; 8 Jur. (N.S.) 25; 5 L. T. 467; 10 W. R. 47—L. C.

There are three modes in which a trustee may become liable, according to the ordinary rules of the court: first, where one trustee receives trust money, and hands it over to a co-trustee without securing its due application; secondly, where he permits a co-trustee to receive trust money without making due inquiry as to his dealing with it; thirdly, where he becomes aware of a breach of trust, either committed or meditated, and abstains from taking the necessary steps to obtain restitution; but the operation of these rules was excluded by the indemnity clause contained in the will. Ib.

Authorising Bank to Honour Signature of One Trustee.]—A testator authorised his two trustees and executors, A. and D., to carry on his business, giving them full discretion as to its management, and power to employ collectors of debts and accountants. The will contained an indemnity clause, that each trustee should be answerable only for losses arising from his own default, and that any trustee who should pay over to his co-trustee, or should concur in any act enabling him to receive any moneys for the purposes of the will, should not be obliged to see to the application thereof, nor should such trustee be rendered responsible by an express notice of the actual misapplication of the same moneys. The business was carried on, with the consent of the beneficiaries, by one trustee, A., the testator's son, and an account was opened at the bank, and a letter signed by both executors and trustees, authorising the bank to honour the signature of the one trustee, viz. A., the son. Under this authority the trustee, A., drew out, nominally for the business, large sums of money, which he misappropriated to his own purposes:—Held (following Wilkins v. Hogg, supra), that in the absence of proof of gross negligence or personal misconduct on the part of the trustee D., he was fully protected by the indemnity clause, from liability in respect of the loss to the estate occasioned by the defalcations of his co-trustee, A. Pass v. Dundas, 43 L. T. 665; 29 W. R. 332.

Co-Executors Executing Assignment of Mortgage.]—Where testator had directed that his executors should be liable for each other's acts, one of them, who was in good credit at the time, having called in a mortgage, and received the money, sends round the assignment to his co-executors, who execute it and sign a receipt:—Held, that as no part of the money had come to their hands, they should not be answerable. Westley v. Clarke, 1 Eden, 356.

Trustee Neglecting to take Necessary Steps to Secure Trust Fund.]—The ordinary trustee indemnity clause affords no security to a trustee who neglects to take the necessary steps to secure the trust fund. Dix v. Burford, 19 Beav. 409.

Where a person nominated executor accepts the executorship, and assents to a bequest, and thereby becomes a trustee of the fund bequeathed, the rule as to the non-liability of executors for the receipts of their co-executors ceases to apply, and it becomes the duty of the trustee, by notice or otherwise, to make it impossible for a co-trustee to receive and misapply the fund, and he will not be protected against the consequences of neglect so to do by the ordinary trustee indemnity clause. Ib.

Consequences of Breach of Trust.]—Trustees made personally responsible for the consequences of their neglect to enforce a covenant contained in a marriage settlement. By a marriage settlement it was covenanted and agreed that 5,000*l.* consols, part of the wife's property, should be transferred to trustees, upon certain trusts for the husband, and wife, and children. At the time of the settlement, a sum of 4,946*l.* was standing in the name of the wife; but the trustees took no steps to enforce a transfer, and it was sold out and misapplied by the husband:—Held, that the trustees were personally responsible for the loss; and, secondly, that they were not relieved from their liability by the trustee indemnity clause declaring that they shall not be liable "for any casual or involuntary loss" without their wilful default, but "for such moneys only as should actually come to their hands." Fenwick v. Greenwell, 10 Beav. 412; 11 Jur. 620.

A clause in a marriage settlement, "that the trustee should not be chargeable with, or accountable for, any money arising in execution of the trusts, but what the person or persons so to be accountable should actually receive," does not bind the trustees as a covenant, but is a clause of indemnity, to take away that responsibility which each would be subject to for the acts of the others, were it not for this clause; and only leaves each of them accountable for what he actually receives as for a simple contract debt. Bartlett v. Hodgson, 1 Term Rep. 252.

The trustee indemnity clause does not exonerate a trustee from the consequences of a breach of trust. Brumridge v. Brumridge, 27 Beav. 5.

An executor and trustee, having adopted a loss which happened through the failure of an agent—by suppressing the fact of his having allowed the agent to receive the money—by declaring to his co-trustees the money to be in his own hands—by taking securities and proving them in the agent's estate—by actually replacing the amount by the investment of his own money and by charging himself, in an answer in chancery, with the amount as received by him; was not allowed, afterwards, to throw the loss on the trust estate, on the ground that the indemnity clause in the will would have saved him from liability; the court held, that by his conduct, the same loss was to be deemed not the money of the trust, but his own. Abercrombie v. Gordon, 1 L. J., Ch. 33.

Placing Trust Money with Bankers on a Deposit Account.]—Trustees made personally liable for loss arising from placing trust moneys with bankers on a deposit account, which was not authorised by the will, and that, notwithstanding a trustee indemnity clause against losses by a banker of moneys deposited for safe custody. Behden v. Wesley, 29 Beav. 213.

Power to Forbear Enforcing Payment of Debt.]—Construction of a clause, giving trustees liberty to forbear enforcing payment; that it was for their indemnity, as, if with a view to insolvency, it might amount to fraud. Alcock, Ex parte, 1 V. & B. 179.

The usual indemnity clause does not exonerate one of two trustees, from a loss occasioned by a debt due from the other having been suffered to remain outstanding. Mucklow v. Fuller, Jacob, 198; 23 R. R. 29.

Each Trustee to be Answerable only for One Moiety.]—Where it is a term of the trust deed that each trustee shall be answerable only for one moiety, the court will not extend the liability. Birls v. Betty, 6 Madd. 90; 22 R. R. 246.

Lending Trust Moneys on Second Mortgage of House greatly out of Repair.]—Trustees lent trust moneys on a second mortgage of house property greatly out of repair, and the principal part was lost:—Held, that they were liable as for a breach of trust, notwithstanding a trustee indemnity clause declaring they should not be liable for the insufficiency or deficiency in value of any securities, except through their wilful default. Drosier v. Brereton, 15 Beav. 221.

In charging trustees for breaches of trust and the costs of suit, it is immaterial how the trust was created, and whether for valuable consideration or by the voluntary gift of the trustees themselves. Ib.

Persons Employed by Trustees.]—The indemnity of the trustees under a deed of trust does not give the persons employed by them a right as creditors against the trust fund. Worrall v. Harford, 8 Ves. 4.

Trustee-Mortgagee employing same Solicitor as Mortgagor—Fraud of Solicitor.]—If trustees lending money on mortgage have the same solicitor as the mortgagor, they must take the utmost precaution; if they trust implicitly in the solicitor, however high his reputation, they will be held responsible for any loss which his fraud may occasion. The indemnity clause usually inserted in settlements will not protect them. Sutton v. Wilders, 41 L. J., Ch. 30; L. R. 12 Eq. 373; 25 L. T. 292; 19 W. R. 1021.

Costs—Priority—Trustees and Mortgagors of Harbour Rates—Commissioners Clauses Act, 1847.]—An action was brought by a creditor against incumbrancers and the Dartmouth Harbour Commissioners, who were trustees and mortgagors of the tolls and rates raised under their act of parliament. A receiver had been appointed and priorities determined, and money paid into court in the course of the action. The court directed the taxing-master in taxing the plaintiffs' costs to distinguish the costs of which the other incumbrancers (except the commissioners) had had the benefit in securing the fund in court or in determining the rights of the parties to it, and ordered these costs to be paid to the plaintiffs in priority to all other incumbrancers, the plaintiffs to add the rest of their costs to their security:—Held, that by the Commissioners Clauses Act, 1847, s. 60, the commissioners were entitled to be indemnified out of the rates and other moneys coming to the hands of the commissioners by virtue of that and the special acts for all payments made or liability incurred in respect of any acts done by them, and for all losses, costs, and damages incurred by them in the litigation, and that this provision applied to the funds now in court, and that the fact that the commissioners were in the position of mortgagors did not affect their rights as trustees to reimbursement under this provision. Therefore, they were entitled to their costs as between solicitor and client in priority to the plaintiffs and other incumbrancers. Batten v. Dartmouth Harbour Commissioners, 59 L. J., Ch. 700; 45 Ch. D. 612; 62 L. T. 861; 38 W. R. 603.

Bond of Indemnity to Co-trustee.]—A., being trustee with B. of a legacy of 10,000*l*., applied to B. to be allowed to employ it in his private business; B. gave his consent, on receiving from A. a bond, conditioned to keep him harmless and indemnified against all actions, suits, proceedings, claims, demands, loss, costs, charges, damages and expenses, on account of the legacy, or by reason of A.'s being permitted to hold the same. The legacy not having been accounted for or paid by A. to the cestuis que trust, the latter filed a bill against the executors of A. and B., and obtained a decree, which declared that A. and B. had become jointly and severally liable to make good the legacy, and ordered them to do so. A charge had been carried in against the estate of B., but no sum had been paid with the exception of 10*l*. for costs of suit:—Held, first, that the bond was not illegal. Secondly, that the representatives of B. were entitled to recover from the representatives of A. 10,000*l*., with interest and costs of suit. Warwick v. Richardson, 10 M. & W. 282; 11 L. J., Ex. 351.

b. Express Agreements by Cestuis que Trust to Indemnify Trustees.

Statute.]—Trustee Act, 1893, s. 24.

Covenant of Indemnity — Trustee of two separate Funds Paying over one Fund.]—A trustee of two separate funds held not entitled to require from the cestui que trust of both funds a covenant of indemnity in respect of dealings with one of the funds before paying over the other fund, as to which there was no question; and the trustee was made to pay the costs of a suit instituted by the cestui que trust to obtain payment of the latter fund without any such indemnity. Price v. Loaden, 21 Beav. 508.

Separate Covenants—Suit against Cestuis que Trust Jointly.]—Where cestuis que trust have entered into separate covenants with the trustees to pay, in certain proportions, the expenses of the trustees, and to indemnify them against liabilities incurred in the execution of trusts necessarily involving expense on their part, the trustees are entitled to file a bill against such cestuis que trust jointly for a general account of the trust, in order that, if the assets are exhausted, the liability of the cestuis que trust, under the covenants, may be ascertained once for all. Singleton v. Selwyn, 3 N. R. 27; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 1149; 9 L. T. 408; 12 W. R. 98.

The existence in such a case of a creditors' suit for administering the trust does not necessarily prevent the trustees from instituting such suit on their own behalf. Ib.

Request by Cestui que Trust to Call in Settled Debt.]—Where, by the terms of a marriage settlement, it was declared that a trustee should stand possessed of a debt, upon trust, in the first instance, to call in or compel payment of such debt, unless the cestuis que trust consented to its remaining outstanding, and the trustee is requested by the cestuis que trust to call in the debt, he is not entitled to an indemnity from them previously to his bringing an action, if necessary, for the same; and a trustee, under such circumstances, was made to pay the costs of a suit made necessary by his neglecting to bring the action. Kirby v. Mash, 3 Y. & C. 295; 8 L. J., Ex. Eq. 33; 3 Jur. 221.

Indemnity given by Solicitor of Married Woman for Breach of Trust before her Marriage.]—A marriage being in contemplation, A. B., the intended wife, conveyed property to trustees for herself until marriage, and then for her separate use for life, without power of anticipation, and, subject to certain interests to her husband and children, if any, for herself. Before the marriage took effect the trustees committed a breach of trust, against which A. B., by her solicitor, gave an indemnity. The marriage took effect two years after the settlement, and the husband died without children:—Held, that the indemnity was valid and subsisting, and that the trustees had been released from their liability. Ghost v. Waller, 9 Beav. 497.

Transfer to New Trustees who were Americans—Deposit of Tobacco Warrants with Liberty to Sell.]—Trustees of a marriage settlement transferred the trust fund to new trustees who were Americans, and apprehending this to be a breach of trust, they got from the husband a deposit of tobacco warrants, with liberty to sell. The trustees sold the tobacco warrants, and invested the produce in exchequer bills, but it was afterwards decided, by a court of equity in England, that at the time of the execution of the deposit, no breach of trust had been committed, and that the old trustees had then no interest in the fund:—Held, that as there was no consideration for the deposit or agreement, the old trustees had no right, as against the husband or his representatives, to retain the exchequer bills for the benefit of the infant children of the marriage. Meinertzhagen v. Davis, 1 Coll. C. C. 353; 13 L. J., Ch. 457; 8 Jur. 973.

Distributing Trust Fund among Strangers at Request of One Beneficiary—Trustee subsequently becoming Beneficially Entitled.]—A trustee who distributes a trust fund among strangers at the request of one of the beneficiaries, from whom he takes a covenant of indemnity, cannot afterwards recover under the covenant for the loss of a beneficial interest, to which he has subsequently become entitled, in the fund. The effect of active concurrence by a person in a breach of trust upon a beneficial interest to which he subsequently becomes entitled in the trust fund considered. Evans v. Benyon, 37 Ch. D. 329; 58 L. T. 700—C. A.

A. was sole trustee of a fund held in trust for B. for life, then for Mrs. B. for life, then if she died in B.'s lifetime, in trust as she should appoint by will, and in default for her next of kin. A., at the request of B. and his wife, raised 5,000*l.* out of the fund, paid 1,000*l.* to each of the four adult daughters of C., and 1,000*l.* to C. in trust for his infant daughter. B. covenanted with A. to indemnify him against "all consequences" of this distribution of the 5,000*l.* Mrs. B. died in B.'s lifetime intestate, and her next of kin were A. and C. On the death of B., A.'s representative sued B.'s representative to compel him to replace the £ 000*l.*:—Held, that the object of the covenant was only to indemnify A. from demands against him, as trustee, for breach of trust, and that it ought not to be construed as an undertaking to make good to him any loss which he, as a beneficiary, might sustain by the diminution of the trust fund; and that since A., as next of kin, could not have made a claim against himself as trustee in respect of the breach of trust, there was no claim against A.'s estate in respect of which his representative could claim indemnity from B.'s estate so far as regarded A.'s interest as one of the next of kin; that C., having actively concurred in the distribution, could not have made any claim against A. or his estate in respect of it, even if he had not known, as the court was satisfied he did know, that he had a possible interest in the trust fund, and that the distribution of it was a breach of trust; and, therefore, that as regarded C.'s interest as one of the next of kin, there was no claim against B.'s estate under the covenant. Ib.

c. Right of Trustee in other Cases.

Concurrence in Breach of Trust—Liability of Interest of Cestui que Trust.]—The interest of a cestui que trust, who concurs with a trustee in a breach of trust, is liable to indemnify the trustee. Booth v. Booth, 1 Beav. 125; 8 L. J., Ch. 39; 2 Jur. 938.

Where a cestui que trust, who is party to a breach of trust, is a married woman, and the trustees claim a right of retainer against her life interest in the settled funds to indemnify them against their breach of trust, they are bound to show that she acted for herself in the breach of trust, and was fully informed of the state of the case. Sawyer v. Sawyer, 54 L. J., Ch. 444; 28 Ch. D. 595; 52 L. T. 292; 33 W. R. 403—C. A.

Equity will endeavour to deliver a trustee from a misapplication of trust money, where he errs in the management only; but if he goes out of it with the approbation of the cestui que trust, it must be first made good out of the person's estate who consented. Trafford v. Boehm, 3 Atk. 444.

Tenant for life, who had obtained the benefit of a breach of trust, made responsible upon a bill for that purpose, instituted by the trustees. M'Gachen v. Dew, 15 Beav. 84.

In a suit by children against trustees, to make them liable for a breach of trust, it was alleged by the trustees that their co-defendant, the tenant for life, had concurred; the decree was made against the trustees, without prejudice to any right or remedy they might have against the tenant for life. Meyer v. Montriou, 9 Beav. 521.

The representatives of a surviving trustee who had concurred with his co-trustee in a breach of trust by lending to the tenant for life on his promissory note, were held entitled to file a bill against such tenant for life, and the other cestuis que trust, for replacing the funds, and the appointment of new trustee, with costs against the tenant for life, or out of the fund. Greenwood v. Wakeford, 1 Beav. 576; 8 L. J., Ch. 333.

Trustees who had improperly allowed perishable property to remain in specie, and to be enjoyed by the tenant for life, being made liable, were allowed, by means of an inquiry, in the same suit, to recover back against the estate of the tenant for life the amount overpaid to him. Hood v. Clapham, 19 Beav. 90; 24 L. J., Ch. 193; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 78; 3 W. R. 78.

—— Interest on Moneys replaced by Trustee.]—Trustees, who, with the concurrence of the tenant for life, had committed a breach of trust, by lending the trust moneys on an improper security, were directed to replace the amount, and to reimburse themselves out of the life interest of the tenant for life:—Held, that they were not entitled to charge interest on the money replaced by them, from the time of replacing it to the time of the repayment, out of the life interest. Monk v. Druce, 4 L. J., Ex. Eq. 61.

—— Trust Money advanced to One Cestui que Trust with Sanction of Other.]—The trustees of a sum of stock were empowered by the settlement to invest the trust fund in government or real securities. They, with the sanction of one of the cestuis que trust, sold out part of the stock, and lent the proceeds to another cestui que trust upon his personal security. The trustees were held liable to replace the stock sold out, but were allowed an indemnity with regard to the sum advanced out of the interest in the trust property of the cestuis que trust receiving and sanctioning the advance. Phillipson v. Gatty, 7 Hare, 516; 13 Jur. 318.

—— Waiver of Right to retain Life Interest.]—Where a trustee had permitted a tenant for life to possess himself of the fund, in breach of the trust:—Held, that he could not waive his right to resort to the interest of the tenant for life to replace the fund, and having, by joining in a creditor's deed, by which the life interest was made applicable to the payment of debts, &c., inter alia, a debt due to the trustees, which he afterwards received, he was not precluded thereby from retaining the life interest, in order to make good the trust fund. Fuller v. Knight, 6 Beav. 205 ; 12 L. J., Ch. 182.

—— Interest under Settlement effected by Distinct Deeds.]—The interest which a party takes under a settlement, is liable to make good any breach of trust or other liability which he may have incurred under it, and that though the settlement is effected by distinct deeds. Woodyatt v. Gresley, 8 Sim. 180.

—— Solicitor Trustee not investigating Title.] —G. and H., trustees of a settlement, on the solicitation of D., the tenant for life of the settlement, lent the trust funds on a security which totally failed. G. was a solicitor, and in the transaction of the loan, no other solicitor was employed for the lenders, and no sufficient investigation of title was made :—Held, that the trustees were compellable to replace the trust fund. French v. Graham, 10 Ir. Ch. R. 522.

Held, also, that both being solvent, H. was bound to replace one moiety, and G. the other moiety, that G. was not entitled to be indemnified by the tenant for life, the onus of investigating the title having been cast upon him, but that H. was entitled to be recouped, by the tenant for life, the amount of his moiety. Ib.

—— Persons who have ceased to be Trustees entitled to be Recouped.]—Where trustees are made liable for a breach of trust, the tenant for life having received the benefit, they are entitled to be recouped out of the interest of the tenant for life, although they have since ceased to be trustees. Barratt v. Wyatt, 30 Beav. 442 ; 31 L. J., Ch. 652 ; 8 Jur. (N.S.) 1045 ; 10 W. R. 454.

Indemnity against Expense of Rendering Accounts.] — Trustees are entitled, on being required by a person claiming to be a cestui que trust to furnish accounts and information in respect of the trust estate, to demand that they should be guaranteed against the expense of complying with the requisition ; and this rule is not affected by the circumstance that one of the trustees happens to be a solicitor. Bosworth, In re, Martin v. Lamb, 58 L. J., Ch. 432.

Extent of Trustee's Right of Indemnity.]—The right of a trustee to be indemnified out of his trust fund for money expended by him in its preservation, is strictly limited to the trust fund. Leslie, In re (23 Ch. D. 552), explained. Winchilsea's (Earl) Policy Trusts, In re, 58 L. J., Ch. 20 ; 39 Ch. D. 168 ; 59 L. T. 167 ; 37 W. R. 77.

The right of a trustee to be indemnified out of the trust estate covers not only payments actually made by him, but also his liability to pay ; and by virtue of this right of indemnity a trustee is entitled to resort in the first instance to the trust estate for necessary expenses. Blundell, In re, Blundell v. Blundell, 57 L. J., Ch. 730 ; 40 Ch. D. 370 ; 58 L. T. 933 ; 36 W. R. 779.

A bond was settled on B. for life, remainder to his wife M. for life, remainder to their children. The trustees permitted B. to receive the produce of the fund, and invest it in the purchase of a leasehold interest, not justified by the trusts of the settlement. B. having died, M., with a knowledge of all the facts, continued to receive the rents of the leaseholds, which produced a larger income than could have been derived from a proper investment. M., having died, and the leasehold having expired, a suit was instituted to compel the representative of the surviving trustee to pay to the children the amount misapplied. The surviving trustee during his life, and his representative, by their answer, asserted that the investment was proper within the trusts of the settlement :—Held, that the trustee had not a right to be indemnified out of the assets of M. to any greater amount than the excess of the rents received by M. over what would have been the produce of the fund if rightly invested. Bentley v. Robinson, 10 Ir. Ch. R. 287.

Trustees, having no express authority to invest on mortgage, at the instance and for the benefit of some, but without regard to the interest of others, of their cestuis que trust, invested part of their trust fund on mortgage of real estate. A loss having arisen from the investment :—Held, that the trustees were bound to make good the loss to the trust estate, but that they were entitled to be recouped by each of the cestuis que trust who had induced them to make the investments, out of his estate and his interest in the trust fund, to the extent of the amount actually received by such cestui que trust from the trustees in consequence of such breach of trust. Raby v. Ridehalgh, 7 De G. M. & G. 104 ; 3 Eq. R. 601 ; 24 L. J., Ch. 528 ; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 363 ; 3 W. R. 344.

The notion that in any case trustees to whom no direction has been given to invest in any particular kind of security can safely invest on mortgage, not encouraged. Ib.

By a marriage settlement in 1834 the husband gave a bond for 2,000*l.* to the trustees, to be paid within six months of the marriage, to be left outstanding with the consent in writing of the wife and husband, and to be called in with the like consent. Another debt of 4,000*l.* was included in the settlement. The 2,000*l.* was never got in. The husband became bankrupt in 1836. The trustees proved for the debt, but afterwards joined in a supersedeas, on the bankrupt guaranteeing to his creditors 16*s.* 6*d.* in the pound. The other creditors were so paid ; the trustees never took their composition. In 1838 the wife and husband gave a written consent that the debt should remain out on the husband's bond. No other consent was ever given. The husband was again bankrupt in 1847. In 1834 the trustees had, at the instance of the husband (having no power to invest in the purchase of lands), purchased copyhold land and buildings with part of the 4,000*l.* The husband erected new and valuable buildings on the land at his own expense, increasing its value far more than 2,000*l.* There was no evidence to connect this outlay with the discharge of the bond debt :—Held, that the trustees could not be indemnified out of the increase of value of the land, caused by the husband's outlay upon it. Wiles v. Gresham, 2 Drew. 258 ; 2 Eq. R. 560 ; 23 L. J., Ch. 667 ; 2 W. R. 355. Affirmed on appeal on one point, 5 De G. M. & G. 770 ; 3 Eq. R. 116 ; 24 L. J., Ch. 264 ; 3 W. R. 87. See ante, col. 668.

—— Funds severed for Investment for Distinct Legatees.]—A testatrix directed her trustees to pay the interest or annual rent of 2,000*l.* to Mrs. A. during her life and after her death to divide that sum among her children ; and to pay the interest or annual rent of a similar amount to Mrs. B. in life-rent, with the fee to her children. The trustees were empowered by the deed to realise, or to continue to "hold any or all of such shares or stocks" as might belong to the testatrix at her decease, "should they consider it advisable or expedient to do so without any personal responsibility for loss, if any, thereby sustained"; with power also "to lend or place out on such securities, heritable or moveable, as they shall consider advantageous, the foresaid legacies of 2,000*l.* and 2,000*l.* respectively, the securities to be conceived in favour of my trustees, and that for the purpose of this trust and no otherwise." The testatrix at her death held 850*l.* stock of an unlimited bank. The trustees, at the desire of Mrs. A. and without consulting Mrs. B., set 200*l.* of this stock aside as part of the fund appropriated to Mrs. A., and realised the remainder. They afterwards, on the narrative of the purposes of the trust deed, and of the sums invested for the two specific legacies of 2,000*l.*, and that they had paid the residue, received their discharge from Mrs. A. and Mrs. B. Statements and separate accounts of interest on the investments allocated to each were sent half-yearly to Mrs. A. and Mrs. B. All the investments stood in the names of the testatrix's trustees. The bank became solvent, and calls were made upon the trustees in respect of the 200*l.* stock. They sought to indemnify themselves for payment of the calls out of the whole trust estate. Mrs. B. objected to any portion of her legacy being taken:—Held, that the trustees had the power to sever and had severed the two legacies, and had placed them in separate investments for behoof of the respective beneficiaries, and therefore the trustees had no right to relief from the investments allotted to Mrs. B. and her family for liabilities incurred on those allotted to Mrs. A. and her family. Garland, Ex parte (10 Ves. 110) followed. Fraser or Robinson v. Murdoch, 6 App. Cas. 855; 45 L. T. 417; 30 W. R. 162—H. L. (Sc.)

Indemnity for Costs—"Outlay in Strict Line of Duty."]—Costs incurred by an executor, who, to meet a possible charge of devastavit, separately defends an action brought jointly against residuary legatees and himself, are not "an outlay in the strict line of his duty" towards his cestuis que trust; and he cannot call upon them to indemnify him in respect of his expenditure. Hosegood v. Pedler, 66 L. J., Q. B. 18.

Trustees Acting under Direction of Court.]—Though trustees are protected in acting under the decision of a competent tribunal, the protection does not extend to persons receiving payments out of a fund for themselves; and though the decision has been long acted on, it is no protection to such persons against the claims of others not bound by it. Foster v. M'Mahon, 11 Ir. Eq. R. 287.

Where the court administers the assets, the trustees are protected against all claims on the testator's estate, but legatees still remain liable in respect of the beneficial interest. Underwood v. Hatton, 5 Beav. 36.

Where trustees distribute a fund under the direction of the court, they require no indemnity. Smith v. Smith, 1 Dr. & Sm. 384; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 652; 4 L. T. 44; 9 W. R. 406.

——Right of Lessor.]—A lessor of a testator has not a right to require the court to retain part of the testator's assets by way of indemnity against future breaches of covenant in the lease. Ib.

Right of Indemnity in respect of Shares—Calls.]—The right of a trustee, in whose name shares in a company in liquidation were standing, to an indemnity from his cestui que trust, enforced. Hemming v. Maddick, 41 L. J., Ch. 522; L. R. 7 Ch. 395; 26 L. T. 565; 20 W. R. 433.

It is a general rule of equity that when a person accepts a trust at the request of another, and that other is a cestui que trust, the cestui que trust is liable personally to indemnify the trustee against all losses accruing in the due execution of the trust. Jervis v. Wolferstan, 43 L. J., Ch. 809; L. R. 18 Eq. 18; 30 L. T. 452.

Where the loss in respect of which such indemnity is sought occurs after the death of the cestui que trust the trustee is in the position of a creditor of the cestui que trust, and entitled to recover as a creditor from legatees to whom his estate has been paid. Ib.

J. and P., at the request of a settlor, accepted transfers of shares in an unlimited company upon trust for a tenant for life and remaindermen. J. and P. were executors of the will of the settlor, and distributed the residue of his estate. Subsequently in the lifetime of the tenant for life, large calls were made on the shares, and the remaindermen under the settlement disclaimed:—Held, that J. and P. as trustees were entitled to be indemnified against the liability out of the settlor's residuary estate, and to recover the capital which they had distributed among the residuary legatees. Ib.

—— Directors holding Shares for Company.]—Directors who hold shares in a company as trustees for the company are to be treated in the same manner as any other trustees whose cestui que trust has become bankrupt, and are primarily liable to pay the calls made on the shares in respect of which they are on the register, but they are entitled to be indemnified out of the assets of the company. Universal Banking Corporation, In re, Challis, Ex parte, 17 L. T. 637; 16 W. R. 451.

——. Deposit of Shares—Trustee for Banking Company.]—C. being indebted to B., B. and P., and the N. Banking Co., certain shares the property of C., and two debts owing to him are assigned to B., for the benefit of B. and P. B. and P. request B. by letter to hand over their share of the proceeds of the shares to the bank, and B. agrees, also by letter, to do so. Calls are made on the shares, and B., having applied to the bank to know whether they gave up all claim, which was answered in the negative, without any further agreement, pays several calls. The debts become valueless, and the company in which the shares are held is wound up. The bank fails, and is voluntarily wound up, and B. claims as a creditor under the Winding Up Act, 1857, in respect of the calls paid by him. On the question whether the relation of trustee and cestui que trust existed between him and the bank:—Held, that it did not except as to the net proceeds of the shares when realised, and that he was therefore not entitled to go in as a creditor in the winding up. Northumberland and Durham District Mining Co., In re, Briggs, Ex parte, 8 W. R. 110.

—— Action against Cestui que Trust before Call.]—Certain moneys belonging to A. were invested in shares in a banking company in the joint names of A. and B., the ultimate trust being for the estate of A., who predeceased B. The company went into liquidation and calls would be made upon the shareholders, on the list of whom the executor of B. would be put:—Held, that the executor of B. was entitled to be indemnified by the estate of A., and might bring an action for and obtain a declaration of indemnity before he was placed on the list and before any call was made on him. Fraser v. Murdoch, supra, col. 723, discussed. Hughes-Hallett v. Indian Mammoth Gold Mines Co., infra, distinguished. Hobbs v. Wayet, 36 Ch. D. 256; 57 L. T. 225; 36 W. R. 73.

—— Against future Liability—Quia Timet Action.]—A trustee held shares in a company on trust for an adult cestui que trust. He had applied for them at the request of the cestui que trust, who paid the money due to the company on the application and allotment. The trustee executed a transfer of the shares to the cestui que trust, and the latter sent it to the company for registration, but the directors refused to register it, and when an order was made to wind up the company the name of the trustee remained on the company's register as the holder of the shares. No further call had been made on them. The trustee brought an action against the cestui que trust, claiming an indemnity against liability on the shares. There was no evidence to show whether calls were likely to be made in the winding up: Held, that the action was a mere quia timet one, and that it was premature and could not be maintained. Ranelagh (Lord) v. Hayes (1 Vern. 189), not followed. Hughes-Hallett v. Indian Mammoth Gold Mines Co., 52 L. J., Ch. 418; 22 Ch. D. 561; 48 L. T. 107; 31 W. R. 285. But see Blyth v. Fladgate, 60 L. J., Ch. 66; [1891] 1 Ch. 337; 63 L. T. 546; 39 W. R. 422.

Power to Purchase Land—Advance by Trustee of Part of Purchase Money—Lien.]—Under a marriage settlement the trustees were empowered, at the request of the husband and wife, to invest the trust fund in the purchase of real estate, and to resell the same. In exercise of this power the trustees, at the request of the husband and wife, bought certain real estate at a price which exceeded the whole of the trust fund, the husband promising to provide the balance out of his own moneys. The husband could not fulfil his promise, and C. P., one of the trustees, at the request of the husband and wife, borrowed the sum necessary to complete the purchase from a bank, and deposited with them the title-deeds of the estate. C. P. died, and the husband was unable to repay the loan. In an action brought by the bank for an account and the realisation of their security, and for administration of C. P.'s estate:—Held, that the trust estate was entitled to a first charge upon the real estate purchased for the full amount of the trust fund; that subject to such charge the estate of C. P. was entitled to be indemnified out of such real estate for the amount borrowed by him, and actually invested in or about the purchase, and to enforce such indemnity by sale of such real estate without the consent of the husband and wife; the bank being entitled to stand in the place of C. P. as against the trust estate for the amount due to them. Pumfrey, In re, Worcester City and County Banking Co. v. Blick, 52 L. J., Ch. 228; 22 Ch. D. 255; 48 L. T. 516; 31 W. R. 195.

Lien on Deeds of Chapel for Money borrowed for Rebuilding.]—The rebuilding of a dissenting chapel was entrusted to three of the several trustees in whom the estate was vested. There being a deficiency of money, they borrowed, on a deposit of the deeds of the chapel, a sum of money which they paid. Interest was for a long time paid out of the chapel funds, but ultimately the representatives of the trustees were compelled to pay the money. The legal estate was vested in new trustees:—Held, that the representatives of the persons who had paid the money borrowed had a lien on the deeds, but that they were not entitled to a decree for foreclosure or sale, as by granting such relief the trust would be altogether destroyed. Drake, or Darke, v. Williamson, 25 Beav. 622; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 1009; 6 W. R. 824.

Trustee Entering into Account with Tenant for Life, and Acting as her Solicitor.]—A trustee of a marriage settlement, after the death of the husband, entered into an account with the widow, acting also as her solicitor:—Held, that the trustee was entitled to retain out of the dividends upon the trust fund the balance due upon such account. Russel v. Buchanan, 4 Jur. 430.

Transfer of Fund to New Trustees—Claim by Old Trustee of Lien for Charges.]—Where a trustee is required to make a transfer of a fund to new trustees, and he alleges that he has a lien for charges (though he may have a right, under the act of parliament under which he acts, or by agreement, to recover payment), he has no right to interpose any delay in the way of making the transfer in respect of his alleged claim. Wilson v. Parker, 10 Jur. 979.

Legacy in Trust for Sons—Deed of Composition — Legacy Transferred to Son.]—Legacy intrust for the testator's son for his own use and benefit, provided no misfortune in business shall in the meantime have happened to him, so as to deprive him or his family of the benefit of it; the testator declaring his intention, his son's fortune being amply sufficient, by this fund to form a certain and permanent provision for him or his family: but in case he fail in business at any time before the age of thirty-two, then in trust for the support of him, his wife, and children, as the trustees think proper, so long as he shall labour under the effects of any misfortune in trade; but as soon as he shall be freed and absolutely discharged from the effects of any misfortune or failure in trade, then (but not before) to be paid to him: otherwise the interest to be continued to be paid for the support of him, his wife and children, for his life; and if, at his death, he shall be under any difficulty from misfortune or failure in business, in trust for his wife and children according to his appointment by will; and if he shall leave no widow or child, according to his disposition. There was a considerable settlement. The son, in the twenty-eighth year of his age, being discharged under a deed of composition, the legacy was decreed to him, the trustees and his children not opposing it; but the court observed that, if he should not be discharged, as in case it should end in a bankruptcy, the trustees would not be indemnified. De Mierre v. Turner, 5 Ves. 306.

Fund paid over to Tenant for Life on an Indemnity and subsequently Appointed.]—A. B. was tenant for life of a trust fund, with a general power to appoint by will, and, in default, it was settled on the plaintiff. A. B. ordered the trustees to pay over the fund to her on an indemnity, and she afterwards appointed the fund to the plaintiff and others, who filed a bill to make the trustees liable for a breach of trust:—Held, that, by the appointment, the fund became assets for answering A. B.'s liabilities, of which the indemnity was one, and that, therefore, the trustees were not liable. Williams v. Lomas, 16 Beav. 1.

Priority of Trustee's Claim to be Indemnified.]—The right of a trustee to be indemnified out of the trust property is the first charge thereon, and it has priority to any charge created upon it by the cestuis que trust. And, consequently, the right of a trustee of a public company to be indemnified out of the property has priority over the debenture creditors. Erhall Coal Co., In re, Bleckley, In re, 35 Beav. 449; 12 Jur. (N.S.) 757; 14 L. T. 280; 14 W. R. 599.

A trustee has a primary charge (in priority of the general creditors) to be recouped, out of the life estate of a deceased tenant for life, the amount of trust money wrongfully received by him and for the costs of suit. Williams v. Allen, 32 Beav. 650.

Trustee Acting bonâ fide under Invalid Will.]—A trustee, acting bonâ fide and with the concurrence of the heir at law, under a will which was supposed to be valid, but turns out to be invalid, is entitled to be indemnified out of the personal estate. Edgecumbe v. Carpenter, 1 Beav. 171; 8 L. J., Ch. 17.

Indemnity to Trustee for Liability for Torts.]—A trustee, in due execution of his trust, directed the bailiff employed on the settled estate to have certain trees felled. The bailiff ordered the woodcutters usually employed on the estate to fell the trees. In doing so they allowed a bough to fall upon a passer by, who brought an action against the trustee and recovered heavy damages:—Held, that the trustee was entitled to an indemnity out of the trust estate. Benett v. Wyndham, 4 De G. F. & J. 259.

Trustee's Right of Retainer—In respect of Debts.]—A trustee of an estate devised or conveyed to him for the purpose of paying debts has no right of retainer thereout, whether he is executor or not. Bain v. Sadler, 40 L. J., Ch. 791; L. R. 12 Eq. 570; 25 L. T. 202; 19 W. R. 1077.

An executor, who was also trustee for sale of an estate for the payment of debts, was a creditor of his testator, who died insolvent, and had received personal estate which he had retained in part satisfaction of his debt. The real estate was sold, a portion before the time when a creditor's suit was instituted, and the remainder under the decree, and the proceeds as to part were in the executor's hands, and the remainder in court:—Held, that the other creditors must be paid out of the proceeds of sale up to an equality with the executor, and that there must then be a rateable distribution. Ib.

A trustee, in answer to a request for money by his cestui que trust, refused to make any further advances until he had reduced a balance found due to him on an account previously stated between them, and subsequently, with the acquiescence of the cestui que trust, continued in receipt of the income of the trust property without furnishing any account, but, after a considerable lapse of time, giving various sums of money to the cestui que trust:—Held, that there was evidence from which it might be inferred that the trustee had, with the authority of his cestui que trust, applied the income in liquidation of the balance due to himself. Stewart v. Connick, 5 Ir. C. L. R. 562.

—— Of Moneys to make good Breach of Trust by Defaulting Cestui que Trust.]—A policy of assurance on the life of H. was taken in the names of trustees and a settlement was executed by virtue of which the bonuses payable on the policy were to be held upon trust for H., and the money assured, on the trusts of the settlement. H. obtained possession of and misappropriated a portion of the trust funds:—Held, that the trustees were not entitled as against H.'s executrix to impound or retain the bonuses to make good the trust funds misappropriated by H., not as being settled properly, because there was a prior resulting trust of them for H.: not by way of set-off, because they were not payable till after H.'s death. Hallett v. Hallett, 49 L. J., Ch. 61; 13 Ch. D. 232; 41 L. T. 725; 28 W. R. 321.

A trustee allowed one of his cestuis que trust to have the trust fund, with a view to its investment in foreign funds. The cestui que trust went to America, and invested it in his own name; he afterwards sold out a part, and, remitting the moiety to agents in England, came home. The trustee impounded the money so remitted, in the lord mayor's court, and this court granted an injunction, restraining proceedings on the part of the cestui que trust to get it out. Hipkins v. Newton, 9 L. J. (O.S.) 1 Ch. 227.

Interest on Sums Advanced.]—A trustee will be allowed interest upon money advanced by him, and applied in payment of his testator's debts, or otherwise on account of his personal estate. Finch v. Prescott, 43 L. J., Ch. 728; L. R. 17 Eq. 554; 30 L. T. 156; 22 W. R. 437.

The trustee of real estate, on which a dwelling-house was situate, who was empowered to lay out the rents in repairing the house, but was not empowered to borrow money for the purpose, pulled down and rebuilt the house, and borrowed money at interest for the purpose, which he afterwards repaid out of the rents:—Held, that his claim for interest on the sum borrowed must be disallowed. Fazakerley v. Culshaw, 24 L. T. 773; 19 W. R. 793.

Rights of Defaulting Trustee.]—A defaulting trustee cannot claim, as against his cestuis que trust, any beneficial interest in the trust estate, even although he may have become entitled thereto derivatively, for example, as being one of the next of kin of a cestui que trust who has died intestate. Jacobs v. Rylance, 43 L. J., Ch. 280; L. R. 17 Eq. 341.

Title-Deed of Property in Hands of Trustee for Ancestor's Widow—Right to Possession of, as between Trustee and Heir-at-Law.]—Plaintiff, as heir-at-law of C., sued defendant to recover possession of a title-deed under the following circumstances: By a conveyance of the 12th November, 1862, certain freehold property was conveyed to C. in fee. On the 13th July, 1865, C., by an ante-nuptial settlement of that date, in consideration of his intended marriage with the defendant's sister, charged the said property with the payment, after his death, of a yearly annuity of 12*l.* to her during her life, and secured the same by a grant of the said property to the defendant, as trustee for his sister, for a term of 100 years, with the usual powers of distress and entry, &c., in case of the quarterly payments of the annuity being in arrear. Upon the execution of the settlement C. handed the deed of conveyance of the 12th November, 1862, to the defendant and said to him, "You shall have the deed of the house to hold in your possession for the safety of your sister," and at the same time a written acknowledgment of the receipt of the conveyance, and an undertaking to deliver it to C. or his assigns, on the fulfilment of the trusts of the settlement, was signed by the defendant. The marriage took place, and on C.'s subsequent death, in December, 1875, the plaintiff, as his eldest son and heir-at-law, brought an action in the county court against the defendant to recover possession of the conveyance of 12th November, 1862. The county court judge held, in favour of the plaintiff, that he was entitled to recover the deed in question:—Held, that the defendant, as trustee of the settlement, was entitled to retain possession of the deed of conveyance in question during the continuance of the trusts of the settlement on the ground that it was delivered to him by C., the settlor, as a further security for the payment of the annuity, and that the possession of it enabled him the better to perform the trusts of the settlement with the execution of which he was charged. Corin v. Thomas, 46 L. T. 916.

Claim against Estate of Married Woman—Clause against Anticipation—Payment of Income in Advance.]—Where there is a clause against anticipation, and trustees pay the income to a married woman in advance, they are liable to pay it over again, and are not entitled to be reimbursed out of the subsequent income. Leach v. Way, 5 L. J., Ch. 100.

—— Accepting Allotment of New Shares.]—A trustee under a marriage settlement accepted an allotment of new shares in a bank, which afterwards failed. The settlement contained a clause against anticipation:—Held, that he had no claim to be indemnified out of the trust estate. Sheriff v. Butler, 12 Jur. (N.S.) 329; 14 L. T. 510; 14 W. R. 629.

—— Savings from Separate Estate—Calls.]—One of two trustees of a marriage settlement, under which the wife took a separate estate for life without power of anticipation, having shares in a bank vested in him upon the trusts of the settlement, obtained an allotment of new shares at the request of the wife, and upon the faith of her representation that the purchase money should be paid out of certain savings of her separate estate. The bank failed, and calls were made upon the trustee, who filed a bill to enforce payment out of the wife's savings:—Held, that the savings of the wife's separate estate were liable to indemnify the trustee against all calls and liabilities incurred on her behalf in respect of the shares. Butler v. Cumpston, 38 L. J., Ch. 35; L. R. 7 Eq. 16; 19 L. T. 274; 17 W. R. 24.

Held, also, that money arising from savings of separate estate which had been invested by the wife in the names of the trustees of the settlement without any intimation that it was to be held on the trusts of the settlement, was liable to indemnify the trustees of the shares. Ib.

—— Advance to Husband without Written Consent of Wife or Bond of Husband.]—By a marriage settlement the interest of a trust fund was limited to a wife for life, for her separate use, with power to the trustees, upon her consent in writing, to advance the trust fund to her husband, upon the security of his bond; if the trustees, with consent of the wife, advance the fund to the husband, but without her written consent, and without the husband's bond, and if the trust fund be lost by his subsequent bankruptcy, the trustees are entitled to be indemnified to the extent of the wife's interest. Cocker v. Quayle, 1 Russ. & M. 535.

—— Instigation of Tenant for Life—Mode of Enforcing Indemnity.]—The executors of the trustees of a marriage settlement were sued by the remaindermen under the settlement for restoration of the trust fund, which had been advanced by the trustees to the husband and wife in breach of trust. The wife, who was tenant for life with restraint on anticipation, was a defendant, but no relief was asked by the plaintiffs against her. The executors did not deny the breach, but they pleaded that the advance was made at the instigation of the tenant for life, and claimed indemnity out of her life estate:—Held, that it was not necessary to bring a fresh action to enforce the indemnity, but that the executors should be given liberty to apply in chambers as to determining and enforcing their right, if any, against the tenant for life. Holt, In re, Holt v. Holt, 66 L. J., Ch. 734; [1897] 2 Ch. 525; 76 L. T. 776; 45 W. R. 650.

—— Scotch Settlement.] — R., by deed, assigned property in Scotland to B., as trustee, with a direction to pay to his sister Mrs. R., a married woman, during her life, the net income of the property, or such part of it as he might deem necessary for the support of her and her family; and he thereby declared the provision for Mrs. R. to be purely alimentary, and exclusive of the marital right of her then or any future husband, and that it should not be assignable, or subject to any deed which either she or such husband might grant in relation thereto, or debts which they might contract. Advances were made by A. to the husband of Mrs. R., for the support of his family, and on other accounts; to secure the repayment of which, B., with Mrs. R.'s consent, executed to A. a deed of assignation of her interest in the trust property, reserving 60*l.* per annum for aliment to Mrs. R. and her family. Upon appeal from, and reversing the decision of the court of session:—Held, that the execution of the deed of assignation was ultra vires of B., and a breach of trust on his part, and that the deed was wholly invalid as against Mrs. R. Ritchie v. Rennie, 9 Jur. 435.

—— Married Woman Annuitant under Will appointed Executrix not obtaining Probate but taking Possession of Estate.]—A married woman who is an annuitant under a will for life, for her separate use, without power of anticipation, is appointed executrix; but failing in obtaining probate, takes possession of and misappropriates the estate. In an administration suit asking the usual accounts against her, but not referring to her separate estate:—Held, that the arrears of the annuity were applicable to make good her misfeasances, but not the accruing payments. Pemberton v. M'Gill, 8 W. R. 290.

—— When Separate Estate liable for General Torts and Breaches of Trust.]—The separate estate of a married woman is not liable for general torts committed by her, nor for breaches of trust, unless the breaches of trust consist in appropriation of trust funds comprised in the same settlement as that creating her separate estate. Wainford v. Heyl, 44 L. J., Ch. 567; L. R. 20 Eq. 321; 33 L. T. 155; 23 W. R. 848.

A woman, on her marriage, settled a necklace upon trust for herself for life, with remainder to her eldest son. She also settled other property to her separate use for life, as to part of such property with, and as to other part without, restraint upon anticipation. She afterwards, in fraud of the settlement, sold the necklace, and appropriated the money to her own use:—Held, that the property settled to her separate use, with restraint upon anticipation, was not chargeable with the value of the necklace, but that the property settled without such restraint was so chargeable. Clive v. Carew, 1 J. & H. 199; 28 L. J., Ch. 685; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 487; 7 W. R. 433.

—— Fund Settled to Separate Use of Wife—Lien Agreed to before Marriage.]—Trustee of a settlement not entitled, by an agreement with the husband before the marriage, to a lien on the fund, settled to the separate use of the wife during the joint lives of the husband and wife, with remainder to the survivor, in opposition to a joint appointment made by them, under a power reserved to them in the settlement. Morris v. Clarkson, 1 J. & W. 107.

d. Statutory Power of Court to Impound Interest of Beneficiary.

Statute.]—Trustee Act, 1893, s. 45.

Impounding Interest—Consent of Beneficiary—Trustee Act, 1888, s. 6.]—In order to give a court power under s. 6 of the Trustee Act, 1888, to impound the interest of a beneficiary by way of indemnity to trustees, the beneficiary must "instigate," "request," or "consent in writing," to some act or omission which is itself to his knowledge a breach of trust, and not to some act or omission which only becomes a breach of trust by reason of want of care on the part of the trustees. Somerset, In re, Somerset v. Poulett (Earl), 63 L. J., Ch. 41; [1894] 1 Ch. 231; 7 R. 34; 69 L. T. 744; 42 W. R. 145—C. A.

—— Breach of Trust committed "at the Instigation or Request or with the Consent in Writing of a Beneficiary"—Request without Writing.]—In s. 6 of the Trustee Act, 1888 (51 & 52 Vict. c. 59), providing for indemnity to a trustee who has committed a breach of trust "at the instigation or request or with the consent in writing of a beneficiary," the words "in writing" apply only to "consent," and not to "instigation" or "request." Griffith v. Hughes, 62 L. J., Ch. 135; [1892] 3 Ch. 105; 66 L. T. 760; 40 W. R. 524.

The discretion which the section confers upon the court of ordering that the interest of the beneficiary be impounded by way of indemnity to the trustee ought to be exercised in a case where both the trustee and the instigating beneficiary were aware of the facts which constitute the breach of trust. Ib.

Where a trustee for a married woman, tenant for life restrained from anticipation, advanced part of the capital to her upon her verbal request and statement that the money was needed to prevent her home from being sold up: Held, that the trustee, upon making good to the estate the money so advanced, ought to be indemnified out of the income payable to the married woman. Ricketts v. Ricketts, infra, distinguished. Ib.

—— Right to impound Interest of Instigating Beneficiary in Hands of Assignee for Value—Married Woman restrained from Anticipation—Trustee's Duties towards—Knowledge of Trustee a Fact for Consideration.]—Section 6 of the Trustee Act, 1888, which is substantially repeated by s. 45 of the Trustee Act, 1893, was intended to enlarge the power of the court as to indemnifying trustees, and to give greater relief to trustees, and did not operate to curtail the previously existing rights and remedies of trustees or to alter the law except by giving greater power to the court. The discretion given to the court by s. 6 as to whether it will impound or not is a judicial discretion, and if, prior to the act, the court would in a proper case enforce the equity of a trustee to have the interest of a beneficiary, who has instigated a breach of trust and receive money advanced in pursuance of it, impounded, and would impound that interest in the hands of an assignee, it will equally since the act "think fit" to enforce the equity in a similar case and impound. The fact that the trustee has been offered and has not taken an express charge upon the beneficiary's interest does not amount to an abandonment of the right to enforce the equity. The trustee does not lose his right because he first replaces the money. Bolton v. Curre, 64 L. J., Ch. 164; [1895] 1 Ch. 544; 13 R. 174; 71 L. T. 752; 43 W. R. 521.

Where an assignee of the beneficiary's interest knows at the date of his purchase that the beneficiary is a debtor to the trust estate in respect of moneys borrowed, he is bound in law to have knowledge of all equities arising out of the circumstances of the borrowing. Ib.

The court declined to remove a restraint on anticipation in order to enable trustees to impound a married woman's life interest, where she had consented in writing to the change of an investment, but had not instigated the change and did not know that the new investment was a breach of trust, and the trustees had not explained to her that the proposed new investment was improper in any way. It is the duty of a trustee to protect a married woman against herself, when she, as a beneficiary restrained from anticipation, asks him to commit a breach of trust, and he must not deliberately commit a breach of trust at the request or with the consent of such a beneficiary in the hope that the court will afterwards assist him by removing the restraint. One of the facts to be borne in mind by the court in the exercise of its discretion, is whether the breach of trust was committed by the trustee knowingly, but it is incorrect to say that a trustee who knowingly committed a breach of trust can never have his beneficiary's interest impounded. Ricketts v. Ricketts, infra, explained. Ib.

—— Reversionary Interest of Married Woman —"Beneficiary in the Trust Estate."]—R. was entitled absolutely in remainder to the trust funds of his mother's marriage settlement, which she had appointed to him by deed, subject to her own life interest. By his own marriage settlement R. covenanted to pay 10,000*l.* to his trustees within six months after his mother's death, and, in case of his death in his mother's lifetime, that his executors should pay his trustees, during his mother's life, 400*l.* per annum, to be applied as if it were income of the 10,000*l.* R. took the first life interest under his settlement, with remainder to his wife for life. R. assigned to his trustees, as security, the trust funds of his mother's settlement. The trustees of the mother's settlement had notice of the assignment. R. having become embarrassed, the trustees of the mother's settlement were induced, on the entreaty of R., his mother and his wife, to apply a large portion of the trust funds in discharge of R.'s debts. The trustees of R.'s settlement brought an action against the trustees of the mother's settlement for breach of trust, claiming that they might replace the funds. The defendants counterclaimed (inter alia) that the interest of R. and his wife in the funds might be impounded and declared liable to indemnify them:—Held, (1) that there was no right of indemnity to the defendants out of the interest of either R. or his wife under R.'s settlement, such interest not being an interest of a "beneficiary in the trust estate" of which the defendants were trustees, so as to come within the Trustee Act, 1888, s. 6; (2) that, even if the interest of R.'s wife had been such an interest, the court would not in its discretion under the act have impounded it, there having been no misrepresentation on the part of R.'s wife, and as the defendants must be taken to know that she could not validly deal with her reversionary interest. Ricketts v. Ricketts, 64 L. T. 263.

8. RELEASE.

Acknowledgment or Deed.]—Trustees have a a right to some sort of discharge from their cestui que trust, not, perhaps, a release, unless the instrument creating the trust was under seal. Wright's Trusts, In re, 3 K. & J. 419.

A trustee paying the trust money in strict accordance with the tenor of the trusts is not entitled to a release by deed; secus, if he is called upon to depart from the strictly expressed trusts. King v. Mullins, 1 Drew. 308.

Where a trust was created by parol for A. for life, and to provide for her funeral expenses, remainder to her two children and the tenant for life, and remainderman called for payment:—Held, that the trustee might lawfully insist on a release under seal. Ib.

—— Transfer of Stock to Cestui que Trust.]—Trustee of stock, on transferring the stock to his cestui que trust:—Held, under the circumstances of the case, entitled to an acknowledgment by the cestui que trust of the stock being received in full of all demands, though not entitled to a release under seal. And inasmuch as the cestui que trust declined to make the acknowledgment, the court directed a general administration account to be taken of the real and personal estate of the testator from whose real and personal estate the stock was derived, although no account but a mere transfer of the stock was prayed by the bill, and no open unsettled account suggested by the answer. Chadwick v. Heatley, 2 Coll. C. C. 137; 9 Jur. 504.

—— Transfer to Other Trustees.]—Trustees, on receipt from other trustees of trust moneys, are not bound to execute a release; all that can be required from them is a written acknowledgment of the receipt of the money. Cater's Trusts, In re, 25 Beav. 366.

Partial Release—Surviving Partners.]—Where the defendants were surviving partners, and executors and guardians of their deceased partner:—Held, that the cestui que trust were not barred by the lapse of thirty years, nor by partial releases executed on insufficient knowledge of the partnership affairs and state of accounts, from calling for inquiry and account, and claiming a share in the profits arising from the estate of the deceased having been continued and used in the partnership, although during successive changes in the firm. Semble, time is only a bar in cases of trust when there has been a direct and independent dealing between the trustees and cestuis que trust, and upon full information and examination of all the documents and evidence after that relation has terminated. Wedderburn v. Wedderburn, 2 Keen, 722. Affirmed, 4 Myl. & Cr. 41; 8 L. J., Ch. 177; 3 Jur. 596.

Release of Breach of Trust—Onus of Proof of Knowledge.]—When a breach of trust has been committed, from which a trustee alleges that he has been released, it is incumbent upon him to show that such release was given by the cestui que trust deliberately and advisedly, with full knowledge of all the circumstances, and of his own rights and claims against the trustee. Farrant v. Blanchford, 1 De G. J. & S. 107; 32 L. J., Ch. 237; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 423; 7 L. T. 770; 11 W. R. 294.

A release by cestuis que trust to trustees after a breach of trust, and whilst ignorant thereof, is invalid. Munch v. Cockerell, 5 Myl. & Cr. 179; 9 Sim. 339; 9 L. J., Ch. 153; 4 Jur. 140.

—— Independent Solicitor.]—Where the trustee (a solicitor) came to a final settlement of accounts with his cestuis que trust and a general release was executed, the accounts containing credits for his professional bills of costs, which were perused by an independent solicitor, acting for the cestuis que trust:—Held, that the defendant was entitled to the benefit of the release; and in the absence of any fraudulent advantage having been taken over ignorant parties, the plaintiffs were bound by it. Stanes v. Parker, 9 Beav. 385; 10 Jur. 603.

Releases given to trustees by their cestuis que trust in respect of breaches of trust set aside on the ground of the releases having been obtained by the improper influence of the person for whose benefit the breaches of trust have been committed, and of the cestuis que trust not having had independent professional advice in the matter of such release. Lloyd v. Attwood, 3 De G. & J. 614; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 1322.

Although cestuis que trust acting by an independent solicitor, to whom all the facts of the case are known, may be bound by a release given to their trustees under the advice of that solicitor, it rests upon the trustees to show that the cestuis que trust acted in relation to such release by an independent solicitor. Ib.

—— Deed of Confirmation.]—Where cestuis que trust, in ignorance of their rights, give a release to their trustees, even a deed of confirmation, also executed under the same circumstances, will operate nothing. Ib.

Two ladies, entitled to a trust fund which had been improperly lent by the trustees to A., who stood towards those ladies in loco parentis, were induced by A., not long after their coming of age, to execute releases to the trustees, taking from him a security for the money, which security was known by him to be worthless. No direct communication took place between the ladies and the trustees, nor did the trustees render any account to them, but the ladies were represented in the transaction by B., a solicitor, who was known to the trustees to have been for years the confidential adviser of A., and the transaction was conducted by B. and A.'s solicitors. B. was never, in fact, authorised by the ladies themselves to act for them, but was nominated by A., and the ladies did not consider him to be acting for them :—Held, that under the circumstances the trustees could not avail themselves of the releases. Ib.

—— Setting Aside Release.]—A release was executed in 1859 by two ladies in favour of the trustees of the will under which the ladies were residuary legatees. The ladies and their husbands applied on summons to have the release set aside on the ground that they had no independent advice, and had acted in ignorance of the fact that they were residuary legatees, instead of, as they had supposed, entitled to legacies only, and had been induced to give an absolute release in consideration of a sum far less than that to which it turned out they were entitled. The evidence in support of their claim was uncontradicted :—Held, that the release could not be set aside on the materials before the court. Garnett, In re, Gandy v. Macaulay, 32 W. R. 474.

—— Release Executed under Mistake.]—A. executed a bond to B. and C., conditioned for payment of an annuity of 100*l.* to D. for life, and assigned an annuity of 120*l.* for the life of one M., and a policy of insurance for 700*l.* on M.'s life, to B. and C., upon certain trusts for further securing the annuity of 100*l.* M. died, and A. died shortly afterwards, having, as was then believed, received the 700*l.* and applied it to his own use. Shortly afterwards, D., in consideration of 500*l.*, released A.'s personal representative and B. and C. from the annuity of 100*l.* and the securities for it. Some years afterwards it was discovered that A. had placed the 700*l.* in a bank, in the names of B. and C., where it still remained :—Held, that the release having been executed under a mistake, was inoperative, and that the 700*l.* remained impressed with the trusts for securing the annuity of 100*l.* Hore v. Becher, 12 Sim. 465 ; 11 L. J., Ch. 153 ; 6 Jur. 93.

—— Deed of Compromise with Representatives and Creditors of Deceased Trustee.]—A deed of compromise executed by cestui que trust, with the representatives and creditors of a deceased trustee, guilty of a breach of trust, rescinded, and co-trustees declared responsible. Walker v. Symonds, 3 Swanst. 2 ; 19 R. R. 155.

Release by Infant.]—A release executed by an infant to the trustee of all demands in respect of the trust :—Held, not to be a bar to a suit by the same cestui que trust against the trustee, although such suit was not brought until seven years after the cestui que trust had attained twenty-one. Overton v. Banister, 3 Hare, 503 ; 9 Jur. 906.

Release by Married Woman.]—A sum of money charged upon lands was, by a marriage settlement, assigned to trustees, to pay the interest to A., the husband, for his life, and after his death to pay the wife a jointure of 200*l.* a year ; provided that it should be lawful for A., with the consent of the trustees in writing, to call in the fund, and lay out and dispose of the same in the purchase of an estate of inheritance or freehold, for a term of at least three lives, or of a lease for a term of years, whereof ninety-nine years shall be unexpired, or otherwise advantageously, which purchase or disposal, when so made, should be settled and vested to the several uses, trusts, intents, and purposes thereinbefore mentioned in respect to the said sums. A portion of the fund was paid to the surviving trustee, who lent it to A., on a release being executed by A. and the wife B. and C. their son, and acknowledged by her :—Held, after the death of A., in a suit by B. to replace the trust fund, that the release as to her was inoperative. Smithwick v. Smithwick, 12 Ir. Ch. R. 181.

—— Recital in Settlement on Second Marriage of Wish to give Credit to Trustees for all Payments made at her Request.]—Personal estate was by settlement vested in trustees for R., a married woman, for life, without power of anticipation ; and in case there should be no issue of the marriage, in case M., her husband, should survive her, as she should by deed or will appoint, and in case she should survive, for her absolutely. W., the acting trustee of the settlement, at the instance of the wife applied the property in discharge of her husband's liabilities. M. died, and by R.'s request the trustee took no steps to realize his assets. R. married again after the lapse of some years, and in her marriage settlement recited her wish to give credit to W. for all payments made by the trustees at her request :—Held, that R. had lost her right to make the trustee liable for his breaches of trust. Rutherfoord v. Maziere, 13 Ir. Ch. R. 204.

Release by Person just of Age.]—The court looks with considerable jealousy at a release executed by a young lady, at or shortly after attaining twenty-one, upon a settlement of accounts between her and her trustees. Parker v. Bloxam, 20 Beav. 295.

A suit for impeachment of such a release must be instituted quickly. Ib.

Observations on the jealousy with which the court looks at a release executed by a person who has just come of age, and on the effect of the particular circumstances under which the release is given. Ib.

By a marriage settlement in 1832, real and personal estate of H., the intended wife, was conveyed to trustees in trust for R., the intended husband for life, and after the death of the survivor of R. and H. in trust for the children of the marriage, as R. and H. or the survivor should appoint, and in default of appointment for the children equally. The trustees allowed R. to obtain possession of the trust fund which he mixed with moneys of his own, and in 1861 one of the trustees commenced a suit to compel him to replace the fund. By arrangement of the trustees with R., he and H., by deed of the 25th September, 1861, irrevocably appointed the fund equally among the children, four of whom were of age, and one (the plaintiff) a minor. On the following day the four adult children, and two years afterwards the plaintiff, when of age, executed a deed releasing the trustees from the trusts of the settlement. The children executed the release by the direction of their father, without any professional advice or assistance, and in ignorance of its contents or effect, and of their rights under the settlement. R. from time to time paid sums of money for the plaintiff. He purchased for the plaintiff a commission in the army, paid for his outfit, &c., made him an adequate yearly allowance, and paid a large sum for his promotion. No one of the sums so advanced was equal in amount to the plaintiff's share of the trust fund, nor was there any evidence that it was stated at the time of the advances, or understood between the plaintiff and R., that they were made out of the trust fund in R.'s hands: —Held, first, that the release should be set aside; second, that R.'s position was that of a debtor to his five children for their respective shares of the trust fund; third, that the sums advanced, being respectively less in amount than the plaintiff's share, were not a satisfaction of it pro tanto, and that R. was not entitled to credit for them. Reade v. Reade, 9 L. R., Ir. 409. And see Wade v. Cox, 4 L. J., Ch. 105.

Release to One of Several Trustees.]—A release to one trustee in respect of a breach of trust committed in the investment of part of the trust funds:—Held, to be a release to the other trustee, the release operating as an acceptance of the securities upon which the funds had been invested. Blackwood v. Borrowes, 2 Con. & L. 459; 4 Dr. & War. 441.

Release by the Court.]—On motion, reference directed to inquire whether defendant, a trustee, remains accountable for any acts done by him as trustee, and, if not, to settle release. —— v. Osborne, 6 Ves. 455.

See also DEED and BOND.

9. CONTRIBUTION FROM CO-TRUSTEE.

Assignees in Bankruptcy.]—Contribution enforced among assignees in bankruptcy to reimburse a payment by one under an order for a loss, occasioned by their joint act; and the objection that the defendants acted only for conformity upon the representation and advice of the plaintiff, did not prevail. Lingard v. Bromley, 1 V. & B. 114; 12 R. R. 195.

Suit against Trustees to Repair Breach of Trust.]—Contribution between trustees cannot be enforced in a suit instituted against them to repair a breach of trust for which they are all liable. Fletcher v. Green, 33 Beav. 513.

As to the right of co-trustees, who had committed a breach of trust, to contribution in a suit to make them replace the trust fund. Ib.

Right to Bring Action.]—If A. and B., two trustees, have committed a breach of trust and are equally liable, but B. received the produce, A. may sustain a bill against B. alone to recover the amount, for the benefit of the trust. Baynard v. Woolley, 20 Beav. 583.

H. assigned property to B. and W. to be invested in the public funds or other securities upon trust for himself for life, remainder to his wife for life, remainder to his son. After H.'s death the trustees, having received 400*l.* of the trust money, lent it to W., who already owed H. 100*l.*, and who thereupon signed an informal memorandum, stating that the title-deeds of his house, &c., were held as a collateral security. These deeds were in B.'s possession in respect of a debt due to another person, and secured by a term of 500 years. The widow was informed of this transaction, and received interest on the 500*l.* at 4 per cent., subsequently, at her request, raised to 5*l.* per cent. W., having conveyed all his real and personal estate to L. for the benefit of his creditors, and having afterwards ceased to pay interest on the 500*l.*, a bill was filed against him by B. (the widow and the son of H. and L. being also made defendants) for the recovery of the 500*l.*, &c.:—Held (1) that B. was entitled to file such bill against his co-trustee, notwithstanding that he had himself been guilty of a breach of trust; (2) that he was himself liable to replace the whole trust fund, if it could not be recovered from W.; (3) that the acknowledgment signed by W. constituted an equitable mortgage; (4) that the legal estate in the hereditaments therein comprised being vested in B., the subsequent assignment to L. did not affect the term of 500 years; (5) that the widow was liable to account to the trust fund for interest received by her in excess of 4*l.* per cent. Ib.

—— Insufficient Security—One Trustee acting Honestly but Erroneously—Other Trustee doing Nothing.]—H., C., and T., trustees, invested a sum on mortgage. The security turned out to be insufficient, and a loss was sustained. In a suit instituted by the beneficiaries it was declared that T., C. and her husband, and the estate of H. were jointly liable to make this loss good, and numerous orders were made directing C. and her husband and T. to pay certain sums into court, and eventually the plaintiffs, who were the trustees of a settlement which comprised certain portions of H.'s estate, paid the whole sum into court. The plaintiffs then sued T. for his one-third contribution, and obtained judgment, but by reason of his insolvency recovered nothing. They then sued Mr. and Mrs. C. for half contribution. There was an arrangement between the trustees that Mr. and Mrs. C., who were resident abroad, should not be troubled about the trusts, and, as a fact, they did nothing therein:—Held, that this was no bar to contribution, for where one trustee acts honestly though erroneously, the other trustee who by doing nothing neglects his duty more than the acting trustee, is not entitled to indemnity. Bacon v. Camphausen, 58 L. T. 851.

Improper Investments — Solicitor-Trustee Guilty of Negligence.]—Trustees were held liable to replace sums improperly invested by them. One of the trustees, A., was a solicitor, authorised to make professional charges for work done for the trust. The other was the widow of the testator, and the tenant for life under his will of the trust funds. A. took the more active part in making the investments, and was paid costs for his professional work, charging scale fees both for negotiating the loans, deducing the title, and preparing and completing the mortgages; and he did not, in the opinion of the court, communicate what he did to his co-trustee in such a way as to enable her to exercise her judgment upon the investments, and make them her acts as well as his own:—Held, that A. had undertaken to find proper investments, and that the widow had joined in advancing the fund on the faith that the investments were proper ones which had been looked into by A., as solicitor; that she had been misled by him, and he had been guilty of negligence in his duty as a solicitor; and that, as between A. and the widow, A. was primarily liable for the breach of trust. Partington, In re, Partington v. Allen, 57 L. T. 654.

—— Advance to Builder on Mortgage of Land—Money Advanced applied in Payment to One Trustee of Price of Land.]—Two trustees advanced to a builder money on mortgage of land and houses thereon. The land had belonged to the defendant, one of the trustees, and part of the money advanced was applied by the builder in payment of the price of the land and of other money due from him to the defendant. The other trustee filed a bill against the defendant, alleging that the security was insufficient, and asking that the security might be realised, and that the defendant should make good any deficiency:—Held, that the plaintiff had no equity to make his co-trustee primarily liable; and that the court would not direct a sale of the property in the absence of the cestuis que trust. Butler v. Butler, 47 L. J., Ch. 77; 7 Ch. D. 116; 37 L. T. 518; 26 W. R. 85—C. A.

—— Legacy paid to Solicitor of Trustees—Misappropriated by One Trustee.]—P., by his will, gave a legacy to Mrs. W., defendant, which legacy was, on her marriage settled in the usual way, being then still unpaid, the testator's estate being very deficient. Afterwards, Mrs. P., the widow of the testator, by her will directed her trustees to pay and make good, out of her assets, all the legacies given by her late husband, "upon condition that all parties concerned should abstain from requiring any claim against her late husband's estate, &c., and should also execute any releases which her said husband's executors might require in respect thereof." Mrs. P.'s estate being ample, the legacy was ready to be paid, but the executors required the discharge of three trustees of Mrs. W.'s settlement. There was at that time but one trustee. Mr. W. procured A. and another person to be trustees; and the legacy having been paid to the solicitor of all three trustees, he paid it over to A., who immediately misapplied it, by suffering W. to convert it to his own use. On a bill filed by the other two trustees against A. and Mr. and Mrs. W. to have the fund brought back:—Held, first, that the legacy under Mrs. P.'s will was bound by the trusts of the settlement. Gray v. Addison, 2 Jur. (N.S.) 662.

Held, secondly, that the two plaintiffs had been guilty of no conduct, by laches or otherwise, to deprive them of their right to relief. Ib.

Held, thirdly, that they had a right to have the whole fund replaced by A., and not for contribution only. Ib.

Assignment of Money due to Settlor by Firm to Trustees, one being a Partner in the Firm.]—By a settlement made in contemplation of marriage, a lady assigned a certain sum of money and interest, due to her from a trading firm, to one of the partners in the firm and the plaintiff, as trustees, upon trust, to permit the fund to remain in the hands of the firm until the trustees should be requested by the settlor, in writing, to call it in, and upon such request to call in and compel payment of the same, and invest it, and to hold such sum and the investment upon the trusts therein mentioned; and it was provided, that it should be lawful for the trustees, with the consent of the settlor, after giving to the partner trustee, or any other member of the firm, three months' notice in writing, to call in the said fund; but that, so long as it remained in the hands of the firm with the consent of the settlor, the trustees were not to be answerable for any insufficiency thereof. The firm suspended payment, and made a composition with their creditors: and after such suspension, the settlor, for the first time, requested the trustees to call in the fund. The plaintiff thereupon requested his co-trustee to pay the money. Upon his refusal to do so, the plaintiff filed his bill against his co-trustee and the cestuis que trust, to have the trust executed by the court, and himself indemnified:—Held, that the partner trustee must be considered as having the fund in his hands from the expiration of three months after the notice requiring him to pay it; and that, therefore, a decree for payment of the debt might be made against him, although the other partner in the firm was not a party to the suit. Norton v. Steinkopf, Kay, 45; 23 L. J., Ch. 35; 2 W. R. 34.

If adult cestuis que trust insist upon their strict rights, the court will not exercise any discretion for the benefit of other cestuis que trust who are infants. Ib.

Directors — Breach of Trust — Liability of Executor.]—The directors of a company advanced moneys of the company upon an unauthorised security, and two sums of 600*l.* and 400*l.* so lent were lost. The 600*l.* formed part of a loan of 800*l.*, and the 400*l.* formed part of a loan of 1,000*l.* which was granted by the board of directors, and of which 400*l.* was actually advanced and repaid, and a second 400*l.* was advanced and not repaid. In an action by the company against one of the directors who had taken part in granting the loans, he was held liable to pay the two sums of 600*l.* and 400*l.* to the company, and, having paid them, he sued three of his co-directors for contribution. One of the defendants was not present at the meeting at which the loan of 800*l.* was granted, and at which a cheque for the 800*l.* was drawn, but he was present at a subsequent meeting at which the minutes of the former meeting were read and confirmed. The 800*l.* had been already paid to the borrower:—Held, that, whether the defendant would or would not have been liable to the company, there was no equity to compel him to contribute to the plaintiff in respect of the 600*l.* Ramskill v. Edwards, 55 L. J., Ch. 81; 31 Ch. D. 100; 53 L. T. 949; 34 W. R. 96.

The same defendant was present at the meeting at which the loan of 1,000*l.* was granted, when he protested strongly against it. He was present at a subsequent meeting at which the minutes of the first meeting were read and confirmed, and he then signed a cheque which was drawn for the first 400*l.* :—Held, that by signing the cheque he had adopted the whole loan of 1,000*l.*, and that he was therefore liable to contribute in respect of the second 400*l.* which was lost. Ib.

The third defendant died after the commencement of the action, and his administrator was then made a defendant :—Held, that the liability to contribute survived against the defendant's estate. Ib.

Breach of Trust—Decree against Executor and Estate of Deceased Executor—Payment by Surviving Executor.]—When a decree has been made against an executor, and the estate of a deceased executor, to make good a breach of trust, payment by the surviving executor of the whole amount due is a complete discharge of the deceased executor's estate, and it is not competent for the court to enforce payment against the deceased executor's estate in order to establish contribution. Micklethwait v. Winstanley, 5 N. R. 204 ; 34 L. J., Ch. 281 ; 11 L. T. 582 ; 13 W. R. 210—L.JJ.

Improper and Improvident Investment—Indemnity—Co-Trustee.]—Where one of two trustees actively manages the trust fund, and is solicitor to the trust estate, he must indemnify his co-trustee against loss caused to the trust fund from an improper investment made at his instance and under his advice. Turner, In re, Barker v. Iximey, 66 L. J., Ch. 282 ; [1897] 1 Ch. 536 ; 76 L. T. 116 ; 45 W. R. 495.

—— Trustee Beneficiary.]—Where two trustees are equally to blame for a breach of trust for which they have been made jointly and severally liable to the cestuis que trust, and one trustee alone has made good the loss, he is entitled to contribution from his co-trustee ; but if one of the trustees is also a cestui que trust and has derived an exclusive benefit from the breach of trust, he is bound to indemnify his co-trustee to the extent of his interest in the trust property ; and this rule applies although the trustee does not become a cestui que trust until after the breach of trust is committed. Chillingworth v. Chambers, 65 L. J., Ch. 343 ; [1896] 1 Ch. 685 ; 74 L. T. 34 ; 44 W. R. 388—C. A.

Therefore, where two trustees were held liable for a loss to the trust estate arising from improper investments, and after some of the investments had been made, one of the trustees became beneficially entitled to a share in the trust estate exceeding the loss:—Held, that the whole of the loss must be borne out of his share, and that he was not entitled to contribution from his co-trustee. Ib.

—— Employment of Outside Broker—Loss of Trust Funds—Statute of Limitations—Time when Statute begins to run.]—Where a trustee, to whom his co-trustee had in 1885 handed over a sum of money to be invested in accordance with the terms of the settlement, leaving the management of the trust to him, gave the money to an outside broker for investment, who misappropriated a portion of the same so that it was irrevocably lost in 1888, both trustees were held liable for the lost trust money, and the active trustee was, on the authority of Chillingworth v. Chambers, supra, declared to be entitled to contribution from the passive trustee. Robinson v. Harkin, 65 L. J., Ch. 773 ; [1896] 2 Ch. 415 ; 74 L. T. 777 ; 44 W. R. 702.

The principles laid down in Dering v. Winchelsea (Earl) (1 Cox, 318 ; 2 Bos. & P. 270) as to contribution between co-sureties apply equally to contribution between co-trustees. The law as stated in Wolmershausen v. Gullick (62 L. J., Ch. 773 ; [1893] 2 Ch. 514 ; 3 R. 610 ; 68 L. T. 753), that in a case of contribution between two co-sureties time does not begin to run under the statute of limitations until the liability of one of the sureties is ascertained, is applicable to the case of co-trustees, and consequently time would only begin to run in the present case as between the co-trustees when the claim of the cestuis que trust was established by the judgment in the action. Ib.

10. Solicitor-Trustee.

Right to Costs Generally.]—The rule, that a solicitor, being also a trustee and a party to a cause, is not entitled to charge costs, except costs out of pocket, does not extend beyond his acting as solicitor for himself alone. Cradock v. Piper, 1 Mac. & G. 664 ; 1 Hall & Tw. 617 ; 19 L. J., Ch. 107 ; 14 Jur. 97.

A solicitor who accepts a trust under a will or settlement is not entitled to charge for work and labour done by him as a solicitor in executing the trust. New v. Jones, 1 Mac. & G. 668, n. ; 1 Hall & Tw. 632, n.

The rule which allows a solicitor, being also a trustee and a party to a cause, to charge full costs, where he acts in the suit for a body of trustees, of which he himself is one, does not apply to the case of a solicitor being a trustee and acting as solicitor for himself and his co-trustees in the administration of the trust estate out of court. Lincoln v. Windsor, 9 Hare, 158 ; 20 L. J., Ch. 531 ; 15 Jur. 765.

Where one of a set of trustees is a solicitor, and by the direction of his co-trustees acts professionally in matters relating to the trust (such business being done out of court, and not in a cause in chancery), he will not be allowed any remuneration for professional services, but only be entitled to costs out of pocket. Broughton v. Broughton, 5 De G. M. & G. 160 ; 25 L. J., Ch. 250 ; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 965 ; 3 W. R. 603.

Where one of a set of trustees is one of a firm of solicitors, and the firm acts, by the direction of the trustees, professionally in the matters of the trust estate (such business being done out of court, and not in a cause in chancery), the firm will not be allowed any remuneration for their professional services, but only be entitled to costs out of pocket. Ib.

Profit Costs.]—A trustee solicitor is entitled to be allowed profit costs where he has agreed with his partner that such partner shall act as solicitor to the trust, and receive the profits for his own benefit. Clack v. Carlon, 30 L. J., Ch. 639 ; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 441 ; 4 L. T. 361 ; 9 W. R. 568.

E., a partner in a firm of country solicitors, was one of two trustees of a will which contained no power to charge for professional services. E. and his co-trustee were respondents to an application for maintenance by a next friend on behalf of an infant under the summary procedure of the court, and E.'s firm, through their London agents, acted as solicitors for E. and his co-trustee and made profit costs :—Held, that E.'s firm were entitled to receive those profit costs as coming within the exception laid down in Cradock v. Piper, supra. Although that case has been often disapproved, it has been so long acted on as a binding authority that it ought not now to be overruled. The exception applies not only to proceedings in a hostile suit, but to friendly proceedings in chambers, such as an application for maintenance of an infant. Corsellis, In re, Lawton v. Elwes, 56 L. J., Ch. 294; 34 Ch. D. 675; 56 L. T. 411; 35 W. R. 309; 51 J. P. 597—C. A.

After the death of E.'s co-trustee, E. was made defendant to an administration action in which a receiver was appointed, and E.'s firm, through their London agents, acted for the receiver and made profit costs:—Held, that these profit costs could not be retained by the firm; on the principle that a trustee must not place himself in a position in which his interest conflicts with his duty. Ib.

—— Preparing Leases.]—E. and his firm made profit costs by preparing leases and agreements for leases of portions of the trust estate, which costs were paid by the lessees:—Held, that although the costs were paid by the lessees, the solicitors were employed on behalf of the trust estate, and that E. and his firm must account to the estate for the costs. Ib.

—— Fees of Steward of Manor.]—E. and his co-trustee appointed E.'s partner steward of a manor which formed part of the trust estate, and fees for manorial business were paid to the steward by the tenants and brought into the partnership accounts:—Held, that the fees, not being received by the steward in his character of solicitor, were not liable to be accounted for to the trust estate. Ib.

—— Declaration in Will—Solicitor—Attesting Witness.]—A declaration in a will that a solicitor, who is an executor-trustee of the will, may charge profit costs for work done for the testator's estate, confers a beneficial gift or interest on him, within s. 15 of the Wills Act, 1837, and is therefore void where the solicitor-trustee has been one of the attesting witnesses of the will. Pooley, In re, 58 L. J., Ch. 1; 40 Ch. D. 1; 60 L. T. 73; 37 W. R. 17—C. A.

A testatrix, after appointing V. and H., who was a solicitor and also one of the attesting witnesses to the will, executors and trustees of her will, declared that H. should be entitled to charge and to receive payment for all professional business to be transacted by him under the will in the same manner as he might have done if he had not been an executor. V. proved the will, and a creditor's action was instituted against her. V. employed the firm of solicitors, in which H. was a partner, as her solicitors in the action. H. afterwards proved the will, and was made a defendant to the action. When the action came on for further consideration, a question arose whether H. was entitled to his profit costs, and an order was made declaring that he was not entitled to claim payment of profit costs by virtue of the declaration in the will, he being one of the attesting witnesses thereto, such declaration to be without prejudice to any of his rights apart from the clause in the will. The taxing-master disallowed H.'s profit costs of action, on the ground that he was a solicitor-trustee, and as such not entitled to make a profit out of his trust:—Held, on a summons to review the taxation, that H. was entitled to profit costs of action, but that he was not entitled to profit costs for business not done in the action, and that the rule applied as well to costs incurred before as after he proved the will. Cradock v. Piper, supra, discussed, and held not to have been overruled. Broughton v. Broughton, supra, discussed. Barber, In re, Burgess v. Vinicome, 56 L. J., Ch. 216; 34 Ch. D. 77; 55 L. T. 882; 35 W. R. 326.

Professional Charges—Opening Settled Account.]—S. and S., the trustees and executors of a will, who were solicitors carrying on business in partnership, and were authorised by the will to charge for professional business done by them for the estate, wound up the estate and sent an account to the five residuary legatees with a letter saying that, if they would call at the office of the executors on a day named, the executors would give them any explanations they might require, and would hand them over cheques for their shares of the residue. The account was not a complicated one, and among the items was, "Paid Messrs. S. & Co. costs relating to executorship and counsel's fees and payments made by them, 116*l.* 17*s.* 2*d.*" The ultimate balance shown was 331*l.* 3*s.* 4*d.*, the bulk of the testator's property having been disposed of by specific bequests. The residuary legatees attended, signed at the foot of the account a memorandum, "We have examined and approve of the foregoing account," received cheques for their shares, and executed a release to the trustees and executors. The trustees and executors never informed the residuary legatees that they were entitled to have a bill of costs delivered, and to have it taxed if they thought fit. Nine years afterwards three of the residuary legatees brought an action to have it declared that the release was not binding on them, and to have a bill of costs delivered and taxed. On production of documents there were found in the costs ledger of the solicitors items which came to more than the amount charged for costs in their account, there was no evidence of excessive charge beyond a deposition by an experienced solicitor's clerk, that in his opinion at least one-sixth would be taxed off the amount of costs appearing in the ledger, and there was no proof of error in the rest of the account. Romer, J., dismissed the action:—Held, on appeal, that although it was the duty of the solicitor-trustees to have informed the residuary legatees that they were entitled to have a bill of costs, and if they thought fit to have it taxed or moderated, the omission to do so was not by itself a sufficient ground for opening a settled account; that in order to do so it was necessary to show that injustice would be done by allowing the settled account to stand; that if excessive charges had been shown, the account must have been opened; but that as no error had been shown, the action had rightly been dismissed. Webb, In re, Lambert v. Still, 63 L. J., Ch. 145; [1894] 1 Ch. 73; 70 L. T. 318—C. A.

——Power to charge for Professional Services, and also for Work done as Trustee.]—A testator, having by his will appointed a solicitor one of his executors and trustees, and bequeathed 200*l.* to him if he should accept the office, declared that he and "every other person to be thereafter appointed a trustee of his will who might be a solicitor should be entitled to receive his usual professional costs and charges as well by way of remuneration for business transacted (including all business of whatever kind not strictly professional but which might have been performed by a trustee not being a solicitor) as costs and charges out of pocket in the same manner as if he had not been a trustee but had been employed by the trustees in the matter of the trusts" :—Held, that notwithstanding the legacy of 200*l.*, the defendant was entitled to charge not only for his professional services, but also for his trouble as a trustee for what was not properly solicitor's work. Fish, In re, Bennett v. Bennett, 62 L. J., Ch. 977; [1893] 2 Ch. 413; 2 R. 467; 69 L. T. 233—C. A.

—— Charges not strictly Professional.]—A testatrix by her will appointed her solicitor (who prepared her will) one of her two executors and trustees, and, stating that it was her desire that he should continue to act as solicitor in relation to her property and affairs, and should "make the usual professional charges," expressly directed that notwithstanding his acceptance of the office of trustee and executor, he should be entitled to make the same professional charges, and to receive the same pecuniary emoluments and remuneration for all business done by him, and all attendances, time, and trouble given and bestowed by him in or about the execution of the trusts and powers of the will, and the management and administration of the trust estate, real or personal, as if he, not being himself a trustee or executor, were employed by the trustee or executor. Under this direction the solicitor-executor delivered bills of costs, which included charges for all business done by him, whether such business was strictly professional, or could have been transacted by a lay executor without the assistance of a solicitor :—Held, that all items which were not of a strictly professional character ought to be disallowed. Chapple, In re, Newton v. Chapman, 27 Ch. D. 584; 51 L. T. 748; 33 W. R. 336.

A testator by his will authorised any trustee thereof, who might be a solicitor, to make the usual professional or other proper and reasonable charges, for all business done and time expended in relation to the trusts of the will, whether such business was usually within the business of a solicitor or not. On the further consideration of an action for the administration of the testator's estate, an order was made for the taxation of the costs, charges, and expenses of the trustees, and it was directed that the taxing-master should have regard to the terms of the will as to the costs of the trustees :—Held, that the taxing-master had power to allow to a trustee, who was a solicitor, the proper charges for business, not strictly of a professional nature, transacted by him in relation to the trust estate. Ames, In re, Ames v. Taylor, 25 Ch. D. 72; 32 W. R. 287.

A solicitor was appointed executor, and was to be at liberty to charge for his professional services :—Held, that he was only entitled to charge for services strictly professional, and not for matters which an executor ought to have done, without the intervention of a solicitor; such as for attendances to pay premiums on policies, attending at the bank to make transfers, and attendances on proctors, auctioneers, legatees, and creditors. Harbin v. Darby, 28 Beav. 325; 29 L. J., Ch. 622; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 906; 2 L. T. 531; 8 W. R. 512.

—— Remuneration.]—Where estates were devised to a near relative and a family solicitor until B. attained the age of twenty-eight years, upon trust to receive the rents and manage the estate, and the will empowered any trustee being a solicitor to charge and be paid for all business done by him as a solicitor in respect of such estate, and a legacy of 100*l.* was given to each trustee, and the trustees managed the estates, consisting of 2,000 acres partly unlet for fifteen years, paying themselves a salary of 100*l.* a year each for the trouble of such management, amounting in all to 3,000*l.*; on an originating summons on behalf of the tenant for life and the infant remainderman :—Held, that such payments of 200*l.* a year were unauthorised by the will; the trustees might at any time have applied to the court, but they neglected to do so: that it was not a case to follow the course adopted in Marshall v. Holloway (2 Swanst. 432), where an inquiry was directed as to whether any and what sum should be allowed to the trustees for their trouble. The salary was disallowed, and an order made for payment into court, without interest, within six months. Bedingfield, In re, Bedingfield v. D'Eye, 57 L. T. 332.

11. Liabilities of Trustees for Breaches of Trust.

a. Nature of Breach of Trust.

Statute.]—32 & 33 Vict. c. 46—Abolished distinction between specialty and simple contract debts.

When Simple Contract Debt.]—Breach of trust can fall only on the personal estate of a trustee. Vernon v. Vawdry, 2 Atk. 119; Barnard. 280.

A cestui que trust, claiming compensation for a breach of trust against the representatives of the trustee, can only come in as a simple contract creditor. Kearnan v. Fitzsimon, 3 Ridgw. 1.

—— Creditors' Suit.]—The creditors of a bankrupt appoint the Bank of England as the place where the estate shall be deposited. A dividend is declared; two of three assignees sign drafts for the dividends, which they forward to the other assignee for his signature; he also signs them, and receives the money, which he applies to his own purposes. Upon his death a creditor's suit is instituted for the administration of the assets :—Held, first, that under the covenant which the assignees entered into with the commissioners, the misapplied dividends were a special contract debt due from the estate of the assignee who had misapplied them to the estate of the bankrupt; secondly, that the estate of the assignee was liable, under 49 Geo. 3, c. 121, s. 4, to pay 20 per cent. upon the funds misapplied; thirdly, that the 20 per cent. was not a specialty, but a simple contract debt; fourthly, that the 20 per cent. was part of the general estate of the bankrupt, and did not belong to the creditors entitled to the misapplied dividends. Wackerbarth v. Powell, Buck. 495, in part reversed on appeal, 2 Glyn & J. 151.

Under the usual decree, in a creditors' suit, the master has no jurisdiction to enter a claim founded on an alleged breach of trust committed by the testator, by investing the trust funds on improper securities. Casterton v. Casterton, 2 Keen, 774; 7 L. J., Ch. 302.

—— Two Creditors' Suits—Priority.]—Where a bill was filed against A .and B., on an admitted breach of trust by B., and the accounts prayed to be taken and the real estate of B. applied in payment of the plaintiff's claim and the other creditors; afterwards a creditors' suit was instituted against the representatives of B., and the usual decree made; the plaintiffs in the first suit claimed priority over the plaintiffs in the second suit, as to the fund in court, but held that after the payment of costs in the first suit, the fund was to be applied amongst all the creditors of B. Smith v. Birch, 3 Beav. 10; 9 L. J., Ch. 349; 4 Jur. 670.

—— Trust Deed—No Express Agreement or Declaration by Trustees.]—A deed, appointing new trustees, recited, that they had agreed to become trustees, and then assigned the trust premises to them to hold on the trusts of the original deed. There was no express agreement or declaration that they would execute the trusts:—Held, that a debt created by a breach of trust was not a specialty debt. Wynch v. Grant, 2 Drew. 312; 2 Eq. R. 1135; 23 L. J., Ch. 834; 2 W. R. 486.

A breach of trust will constitute merely a simple contract debt, unless there is something in the creation of the trust to raise a liability on covenant against the trustee. Adey v. Arnold, 2 De G. M. & G. 432; 16 Jur. 1123.

By deed of indorsement under seal, appointing new trustees, and executed by them, a trust fund was assigned to the new trustees, "to hold unto them, their executors, administrators, and assigns, as their own money, property, and effects, but nevertheless upon the trusts and for the ends, intents, and purposes declared by the within indenture;" but there was no declaration of trust by the trustees:—Held, that a loss which occurred by a breach of trust did not constitute a specialty debt. Ib.

Semble, a declaration by trustees in a deed executed by them, that they will apply a trust fund in a particular manner, will be construed to amount to a covenant; and any loss to the trust fund arising from a breach of trust will constitute a specialty debt. Ib.

—— Trustee not executing Trust Deed.]—A trustee under a deed, the terms of which would amount to the creation of a contract, is not a specialty debtor if he has not executed the deed, although he has acted under it. Richardson v. Jenkins, 1 Drew. 477. S. C., nom. Jenkins v. Robertson, 1 Eq. R. 123; 22 L. J., Ch. 874; 17 Jur. 446, 1 W. R. 298.

The words "covenant or agree" are not necessary in a trust deed to constitute a specialty contract. A declaration by the trustee that he will stand possessed on certain trusts, &c., is sufficient. Ib.

—— Trustee executing Trust Deed.]—A trustee executed a deed acknowledging that he had trust money in his hands, and that he intended to secure it on property in which he had a reversionary interest. The deed contained no covenant to pay the money:—Held, that having regard to the absence of a covenant in the deed to repay the debt, and to the fact of the existence of an antecedent liability on the part of the trustee to pay, and also to the principle of construction laid down in Courtney v. Taylor (6 Man. & G. 851; 7 Scott (N.S.) 749; 12 L. J., C. P. 330) and Adey v. Arnold, supra, the debt had not been converted by the deed into a specialty debt. Brook v. Harwood, Isaacson v. Harwood, 37 L. J., Ch. 209; L. R. 3 Ch. 225; 18 L. T. 622; 16 W. R. 410.

Where a trustee, by deed under his hand and seal, accepted the trusts of a will, and afterwards committed a breach of trust, and died insolvent:—Held, that the cestuis que trust were not entitled to rank as specialty creditors in the administration of his assets. Holland v. Holland, 38 L. J., Ch. 398; L. R. 4 Ch. 449; 17 W. R. 657.

—— Costs of One Trustee against Guilty Trustee.]—A. and B. were trustees of a settlement, and a breach of trust was committed, B. being the guilty party. The trust fund was ultimately restored, and A.'s costs were directed to be paid out of B.'s estate:—Held, that these costs were not a specialty debt, as against B.'s estate. Lockhart v. Reilly, 1 De G. & J. 464; 27 L. J., Ch. 54.

A. paid a sum on account of his costs, after the 19 & 20 Vict. c. 97, and it was held that the sum was paid in the character of surety, and therefore that, under s. 5, he was entitled to claim as a specialty creditor on account of it. Ib.

Held, also, that the Mercantile Law Amendment Act had a retrospective operation so as to be applicable to obligations incurred prior to the passing of the act, and applied to that portion of the costs of A. which he had paid since the passing of the act. Ib.

—— Right to Contribution against Estate of Deceased Trustee.]—By the decree, the estates of two deceased trustees were declared severally liable to replace a fund. The representatives of one only admitted assets, and the decree directed payment by them, and an account of the estate of the other. The whole being paid by the former:—Held, that their right to contribution against the estate of the latter constituted a mere simple contract debt, although as against both estates, the demand was a specialty debt. Priestman v. Tindall, 24 Beav. 244.

When Specialty Debt—Trust created by Instrument under Seal.]—The money due in respect of a breach of trust, where the trust is created by instrument under seal, is a specialty debt. Wood v. Hardisty, 2 Coll. C. C. 542; 15 L. J., Ch. 328.

A. and B. are trustees under a deed, by which neither of them is to answer for the other; A. receives a sum of money under the trust, and gives a writing under hand and seal acknowledging it, and that B. had received no part of it; A. never placed out the money, and dies; this writing is a specialty and good against the executor, but not against the heir of A., he not being mentioned in it. Gifford v. Manley, Cas. t. Talb. 109.

—— Words in Deed, "It is Declared."]—Trust property being vested in three trustees, a part of which is outstanding upon mortgage, the mortgage is called in, the money received by one, and applied to his own use. He lives many years, and his executors, after his death, continue to pay the interest. His estate is insufficient even to pay specialty debts; and the master, in a suit in which his estate is administered, finds that the money so misapplied is a specialty debt due to the representatives of the surviving co-trustee. The trust deed which was executed by the trustees contained the words, "And it is hereby declared and agreed between and by all the said parties hereto," that the property should be held upon certain trusts. Exceptions are taken to the master's finding, for that he should have found that there was no debt, or if there was, that it was not a specialty debt: —Held, that the trust deed constituted a covenant, being under hand and seal, and a contract between all the parties to it; and there being a clear right to sue at law, this court, in declaring that there was a covenant, could also allow such money so received and misapplied as a specialty debt due from the estate of the deceased trustee, who received the money, to the estate of his surviving co-trustee. The breach of trust, if any, was not in allowing the receipt of the money, but in the misapplication of it. Exceptions overruled with costs. Alexander v. Foster, 5 W. R. 33.

—— Covenant by Trustee to hold Money on Trusts.]—N., reciting that he was entitled to a simple contract debt due to him by his sons, A., B., C., and D., who were partners in trade, assigned it to A. and B. upon trust, if they should think fit to call in the same, to invest it on good and solvent security, and hold same upon certain trusts. A. and B. sealed and delivered the deed, and afterwards misapplied the trust moneys:—Held, that the breach of trust was a debt of A. and B. by specialty, not binding their heirs. Cumming v. Cumming, 3 Jo. & Lat. 64; 8 Ir. Eq. R. 723.

By marriage settlement, a sum of 5,000*l.* was vested in trustees upon trust to permit the wife, in case she should survive her husband, to receive the interest thereof during her life; and in case there should be no issue of the marriage, in trust for the husband absolutely: with power to the trustees, with the consent of the husband and wife, to invest the money in government or on real security. The money was afterwards, with the consent of the husband and wife, lent upon mortgage. The husband died without issue; and by his will bequeathed his interest in the 5,000*l.* to A. upon certain trusts, and appointed him his executor. The wife afterwards married B.; and upon her marriage, the interest on the 5,000*l.* was assigned to A. upon trust to pay the yearly interest on the 5,000*l.* to the wife for life; and A. covenanted with the wife that he, his executors, &c., would stand possessed of the premises assigned to him upon the trusts therein mentioned. The 5,000*l.* was paid to A. out of the produce of a sale had in a suit in which he was a defendant; and A. represented to B.'s wife that he had invested the money upon government security; and paid her interest according to the rate it would have borne if it had been so invested. The money was not, in fact, so invested, but was applied by A. to his own use:—Held, in a suit for the administration of A.'s assets, that the new trustee of B.'s last marriage settlement was entitled to rank as a specialty creditor for the difference between the amount of the interest actually paid by A., and interest upon the 5,000*l.*, calculated at 6*l.* per cent.: and also (there being a deficiency of the assets to pay the 5,000*l.*, which was a debt by simple contract), as a specialty creditor for any future deficiency in the interest, calculated at 6*l.* per cent. Jameson v. Farrer, 3 Ir. Eq. R. 346.

—— Covenant to Settle Property on Trusts.]—By marriage articles, the intended husband covenanted with the trustees, that a certain sum of money should be vested in the trustees, and the survivor of them, and the executors and administrators of such survivor for ever, upon the trusts specified in the articles. The marriage was celebrated, and the husband, with the assent of the trustees, obtained possession of the money: —Held, in a suit for the administration of the assets of the husband, that the trustees were entitled to rank as specialty creditors of the husband, in respect of that sum of money. Ib. S. P., Hawksworth, In re, Lovell v. Sherwin, 2 Eq. R. 329; 2 W. R. 34.

By deed between A. and B., it was agreed that a sum in the hands of A., but belonging to B., should be laid out in the funds in A.'s name, and in trust for B. A. died, never having vested the money:—Held, that B. was a specialty creditor of A. for the amount. Mavor v. Davenport, 2 Sim. 227.

A. and B., solicitors, in partnership, jointly attended to the management of certain settled funds, of which A. and E. were trustees, who had executed the settlement. E. was the client of A., who represented to E. that he had a good mortgage security on which to invest a portion of the trust moneys; and E., accordingly, assented to his making such investment. A. did not, however, invest the money on the mortgage, but paid it into the bank of his firm, to their partnership account there; the proceeds being applied, with the knowledge of B., to the use of the firm. A. died in insolvent circumstances, leaving B. him surviving:—Held, that B. was personally liable to E. for the money; and that E. was pro tanto a specialty creditor of A.'s estate. Eager v. Barnes, 31 Beav. 579; 7 L. T. 408.

b. Personal Liability of Trustees.

i. In General.

General Principles.]—In charging trustees for breaches of trust and costs of suit, it is immaterial how the trust was created, and whether for valuable consideration, or by the voluntary gift of the trustees themselves. Drosier v. Brereton, 15 Beav. 221.

Trustee not to be charged with imaginary values, but only as a bailiff. Palmer v. Jones, 1 Vern. 144.

Trustee, investing money at his own discretion, runs risk of depreciation. Hancom v. Allen, Dick. 498.

Trustees investing trust money on an unauthorised security are responsible for any future loss, traceable to that first error. Fyler v. Fyler, 3 Beav. 550; 5 Jur. 187.

No Benefit derived by Trustee.]—Trustees and their representatives chargeable in equity for a breach of trust, though no benefit derived from it. Adair v. Shaw, 1 Sch. & Lef. 272.

A trustee is not answerable for an innocent mistake, and from which he derived no advantage; and a court of equity will grant a perpetual injunction to prevent any proceedings at law, grounded on such mistake. Crookshanks v. Turner, 7 Bro. P. C. 255.

Trustees Acting Honestly.]—Where trustees of a charity under an instrument of doubtful construction have acted honestly, though erroneously, they will not be charged in respect of past misapplication of the funds. Att.-Gen. v. Exeter Corporation, 2 Russ. 45; 26 R. R. 2.

Trustees not answerable for having applied the trust property, even to what turned out a losing adventure, if without fraud or negligence. Wilkinson v. Stafford, 1 Ves. 41.

Trustee not answerable for having engaged the infant's name in an adventure, if, afraid of the consequences, he does not engage the property. Contrà, Eden's case in the house of lords cited. Ib.

Trustees will not be charged with loss to the trust estate, arising from acts done by them in the honest exercise of a discretion conferred upon them by the author of the trust, though in opposition to the judgment or wish of the cestui que trust. Selby v. Bowie, 2 N. R. 2; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 432; 8 L. T. 372; 11 W. R. 606.

—— Judicial Trustees Act, 1896—Acting "Honestly and Reasonably"—"Fairly to be excused."]—Where the trustee of a deceased solicitor was bonâ fide and on reasonable grounds satisfied that he could not maintain an action against a client personally for costs in an administration owing to an arrangement which had been come to between the solicitor and such client, it was held that the principle of Clack v. Holland (19 Beav. 262) was applicable, and that the executor was not guilty of any wilful default; but that even if the executor was technically liable for a breach of trust, then under s. 3 of the Judicial Trustees Act, 1896, he, having acted honestly and reasonably, ought fairly to be excused. Roberts, In re, Knight v. Roberts, 76 L. T. 479—C. A.

—— Improper Investment—Relief—"Reasonable" Conduct.]—The burden lies on a trustee, asking the court to exercise the jurisdiction given by s. 3 of the Judicial Trustees Act, 1896, so as to relieve him from personal liability for a breach of trust, of shewing that he has acted "reasonably" in the matter in which he committed the breach; and, in determining whether he has acted reasonably or not, the court will consider whether it is probable that he would have acted in the matter as he did if it had been a matter of his own. Stuart, In re, Smith v. Stuart, 66 L. J., Ch. 780; [1897] 2 Ch. 583; 77 L. T. 128; 46 W. R. 41.

A trustee invested trust funds upon mortgage on the advice of his solicitor, and in reliance upon him and valuations of surveyors employed by him. The valuations did not satisfy the requirements of s. 8 of the Trustee Act, 1893—first, because the solicitor acted in respect of the mortgages on behalf also of the mortgagors, and the surveyors employed by him were not instructed and employed independently of the mortgagors, and it did not appear that the trustee reasonably believed that they were instructed and employed independently of the mortgagors; and, secondly, because in all the valuations, except one, no values were stated of the properties proposed to be mortgaged, all that was given being the amounts respectively for which the valuers considered the properties to be good securities, and in the case of the one in which the value was given the amount lent exceeded two-thirds of that value. The mortgages proved insufficient, and no special circumstances were put forward:—Held, that the trustee, if acting as a reasonable man, would not have advanced the money without further inquiry if he had been dealing with money of his own, and that it was not a case for the court to exercise its jurisdiction under the Judicial Trustees Act, 1896, to give him relief. Ib.

—— Devastavit.]—A testator, who at the date of his death was of high reputation, and apparently abundantly solvent, after bequeathing to his widow a sum of 300*l.*, payable immediately after his death, gave the rest of his property to his widow for life, and after her death to his children. The executor, who had reason to believe that the testator's net assets would amount to at least 20,000*l.*, paid the 300*l.* legacy at once, and also paid some small sums out of income. Four months after the testator's death the executor proved the will and advertised in the usual way for creditors. The claims against the estate, with one exception, were of a trifling character. The testator had for many years acted as agent of very large estates, and the present owner of the estates had, previously to the advertisement for creditors, sent in a claim for sums due to him from the testator as his agent. Immediately after the advertisement an action was instituted against the executor by the present owner and the representatives of his predecessor alleging defalcations by the testator as agent. The executor, notwithstanding the action, continued to make payments of income to the widow. Judgment having been given for the plaintiffs for a sum which more than exhausted the whole assets of the testator, relief was claimed by the executor under the Judicial Trustees Act, 1896, in respect of the payments he had made to the widow:—Held, that, under the circumstances, the executor was entitled to be relieved in respect of the payment of the 300*l.* legacy and other sums paid by him before the issue of the writ in the action, but not in respect of sums paid subsequently to the writ. Kay, In re, Mosley v. Keyworth, 66 L. J., Ch. 759; [1897] 2 Ch. 518; 46 W. R. 74.

Failure to fulfil Trust Directions — Culpa Lata.]—Where a testator gives power to his trustees to appoint a factor to the estate who may be one of themselves, but directs them to require annual accounts, the trustees are guilty of culpa lata if they fail to call for annual accounts. Carruthers v. Carruthers, [1896] A. C. 659—H. L. (Sc.)

Notice of Claims not under Deed of Settlement.]—Quære, how far a trustee is bound by notice of claims not under the deed of settlement. Croyden's Trust, In re, 19 L. J., Ch. 172; 14 Jur. 54.

Trustee of Lunatic renewing Lease for his own Benefit.]—Trustee of lunatic renewing lease for his own benefit, declared guilty of breach of trust, and discharged. Phelps, Ex parte, 9 Mod. 357.

Release of Recognisance without Consideration.]—A trustee in a recognisance releases it without any consideration; decreed to pay the principal and interest not exceeding the penalty. Jevon v. Bush, 1 Vern. 342.

Misrepresentation to Purchaser.] — Trustee charged in respect of a misrepresentation to a purchaser having notice, and alleging only that he did not recollect the fact. Burrowes v. Lock, 10 Ves. 470; 8 R. R. 33, 856.

Deviation from Trust, Necessary or Beneficial.]—A trustee is not in all cases to be made liable, upon the mere ground of having deviated from the strict letter of his trust, for such deviation may be necessary or beneficial to the interests of the cestuis que trust; but when a trustee ventures to deviate from the letter of his trust, he does so under the obligation and at the peril of afterwards satisfying the court that the deviation was necessary or beneficial. Harrison v. Randall, 9 Hare, 397; 21 L. J., Ch. 294; 16 Jur. 72.

A trustee who, having good reason to doubt the validity of an appointment, thinks proper to act upon it, must be affected by the consequences which follow upon the act. Id. 407.

Non-performance of Unknown Trust.] — A trustee was held not liable for the non-performance of a trust of which he was ignorant, but inasmuch as he had been guilty of negligence in not ascertaining the nature of certain deeds in his possession, or giving his cestuis que trust an opportunity of doing so, the bill against him was dismissed without costs. Youde v. Cloud, 44 L. J., Ch. 93; L. R. 18 Eq. 634; 22 W. R. 764.

A lady who accepts a trust, although not formally appointed trustee, is accountable for moneys actually received by her as such trustee, and cannot plead ignorance of the trust. Pearce v. Pearce, 22 Beav. 248; 25 L. J., Ch. 893; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 843.

Suggestion of Invalidity of Trust Deed.]—A suggestion by the trustees of a fund, that the administrator of one of the cestuis que trust, who, in that character, was entitled to a distributive share of the fund, has unfairly obtained the letters of administration under which he claimed such share, is no defence in this court to the claim of the administrator; nor is it a defence for trustees to suggest that a deed, under which the plaintiff derives his title from the cestui que trust, was founded on mistake, or is otherwise subject to be displaced; for it is contrary to the course of the court to direct an inquiry as to the validity or invalidity of a deed, upon a suggestion in the answer of defendants, the trustees of the fund to which it relates, where the ascertainment of the validity or invalidity of the deed is not essential to the safety of the defendants; and the fact of a bill having been filed to set aside the deed under which the claim is made, or to exclude the fund in question from its operation, is not a ground upon which the trustees can resist the legal title to receive the fund; for the court cannot give the plaintiff in such other suit the benefit of an injunction to protect the fund upon the suggestion in the answer of the trustees; but the existence of such other suit entitles the trustees to retain such a portion of the trust fund as may be sufficient to answer their costs of such other suit. Devey v. Thornton, 9 Hare, 222.

A husband and wife made a post-nuptial settlement of the wife's reversionary chose in action. The wife survived her husband, and it afterwards fell into possession. The wife having done no act to repudiate the settlement:—Held, in a suit to charge the trustees with a breach of trust, that it was no answer to say, that the settlement was void as against the feme coverte. Thompson v. Finch, 22 Beav. 316. Affirmed 25 L. J., Ch. 681—L.J.J.

Insolvent Trustee.]—A demand in respect of a breach of trust may be proved against the estate of an insolvent trustee. Ib.

Devise to Trustee—Legal Estate.]—A trustee and executor, who took a life interest in his testator's residuary real and personal estate, misappropriated and wasted portions of the estates specifically devised and bequeathed, and subsequently became bankrupt:—Held, that his estate in the residuary realty being legal could not be applied in making good his breaches of trust. Fox v. Buckley, 3 Ch. D. 508; 25 W. R. 170—C. A.

Legacy.]—Legacy to an executor held liable to make good his breach of trust by preventing the appropriation of stock to answer a gift to a legatee for his life. Morris v. Livie, 1 Y. & C. C. C. 380; 11 L. J., Ch. 172.

Trustee Advancing Money—Following Solicitor's Advice.]—Under a power contained in a will to apply for A.'s advancement in life a portion of his reversionary share, B., the trustee, raised money by mortgage of the share, in order to pay A.'s apprentice premium to an apothecary. It was intended to apprentice A. to X., but it being discovered that X. was not a licensed apothecary, it was arranged by the solicitor acting in the matter that A. should be nominally apprenticed to Y., a licensed apothecary, but actually serve his time with X. The receipt for the whole amount was signed by Y., but only half was paid, and that to X., the remaining half being handed over to A.'s father, who gave Y. his promissory note for the amount, but never discharged the obligation. The purpose for which the money was raised having failed:—Held, that B., although not shown to have been guilty of more than negligence in following his solicitor's advice, was bound to bear the consequences of the mistake, and to replace the money borrowed on the security of A.'s reversionary share. Simpson v. Brown, 11 L. T. 593; 13 W. R. 312.

New Trustees.]—As to liability of new trustees for breach of trust. See Geares, Ex parte, Strahan, In re, 8 De G. M. & G. 291; 25 L. J., Bk. 53; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 651; 4 W. R. 536.

Partial Acceptance of Trust.]—E., who was named as trustee in a marriage settlement, never executed the deed; nor did he, for upwards of twenty years, interfere in carrying out the trusts thereof. Ultimately he signed a memorandum, indorsed upon the indenture of settlement, relating to one particular portion of the trust property:—Held, that in respect of the property comprised in such memorandum, he was liable to answer for the negligence of himself and his co-trustees; but that the mere signing the memorandum above stated did not operate to extend his liability, so as to make him answerable for the entire amount of property comprised in the settlement. Malzy v. Edge, 2 Jur. (N.S.) 80; 4 W. R. 213.

Trustee Submitting to Arbitration.]—Trustees, by submitting matters to arbitration, do not make themselves personally liable. Davies v. Ridge, 3 Esp. 101; 6 R. R. 817.

And an admission by one trustee will not bind his co-trustees; aliter where parties are personally liable. Ib.

Accepting New Shares.]—A testator had, at the time of his death, one hundred shares in a bank with unlimited liability. By his will he directed his trustees and executors to convert his personal estate at their sole discretion, and at such time or times as they should think fit, and to invest the proceeds in shares in any public company incorporated by act of parliament and paying a dividend. The shares, which were very profitable, were retained by the sole trustee, who subsequently accepted twenty-five additional new shares allotted in respect of the old ones. The trustee then retired, and appointed two new trustees. Ultimately the bank stopped payment:—Held, that the original trustee had not committed a breach of trust in retaining the old shares, but had done so in accepting the new ones, and was liable to indemnify the testator's estate for losses incurred thereby. Edwards v. Edmunds, 34 L. T. 522.

Assigning to Single Trustee.]—By a marriage settlement the husband assigned a policy of assurance on his life to the two trustees of the settlement, and covenanted to pay the premiums. One trustee disclaimed, and the other, by assigning the policy to a single new trustee, enabled the husband to mortgage and dispose of the policy and a bonus thereon:—Held, that such breach of trust being an act of commission and not of omission only, the trustee so assigning to the new trustee was liable to pay to the trust estate the money actually received for the policy. Kingdon v. Castleman, 46 L. J., Ch. 448; 36 L. T. 141; 25 W. R. 345.

Trustee Setting up Rival Business.] — A trustee of a will carrying on the business of his testator is not guilty of a breach of trust in setting up for himself in a similar line of business in the neighbourhood, provided that he does not resort to deception, or solicitation of custom from persons dealing at the old shop. A trustee and manager of a business was removed, however, under such circumstances from being such trustee and manager. Moore v. M'Glynn, [1894] 1 Ir. R. 74.

Reconveyance of Mortgage — Executors of Person absolutely Entitled.]—A trustee of the legal estate in a mortgage in trust for A. absolutely, executed a reconveyance, and signed a receipt for the mortgage money, and handed it to one of A.'s executors, who was also his own solicitor, and who afterwards misapplied the money:—Held, that the money having got into the hands of the executor, the trustee was not liable. Waugh v. Wyche, 2 Drew. 318; 23 L. J., Ch. 833; 2 W. R. 485.

Liability of Husband for Wife's Breaches of Trust prior to 1883.]—The defaults of a feme trustee during coverture are chargeable to her husband. Smith's Estate, In re, Clifford v. Washington, 48 L. J., Ch. 205.

A testator appointed his wife and two others executors and trustees; directed his business and a leasehold house to be sold, and gave the residue (which was principally leasehold property) to his wife, directing that if she married again it should be settled to her separate use for life,—then he bequeathed the house "if not sold, and the money settled as above stated that all money, &c., so settled upon her for her lifetime" to certain other persons; but if his wife should not marry again he left the property to her own disposal at her death The widow married again two years after the testator's death; the leaseholds were not converted, and she received the entire income till her death, twenty-nine years afterwards, by which time the greater portion of the term of years had run out. Her second husband, who survived his wife and her co-trustees, never acted in the trust:—Held, that the leaseholds ought to have been converted upon the widow's second marriage, and that the second husband was liable as a trustee having legal control over the trust property, for a breach of trust in permitting the tenant for life to receive the entire income of the unconverted property. Ib.

The husband was ordered to recoup to the trust estate the difference between the income of the leaseholds received by himself or his wife during the coverture, and the dividends which would have been produced by a sale thereof at the time of her marriage and investment of the proceeds in consols. Ib.

Semble, that the excess of income thus received by the tenant for life must be held as received by her husband through her hands. Ib.

Liability of Husband for the Breach of Trust of his Wife before Marriage.]—See Palmer v. Wakefield, 3 Beav. 227.

—— Extent of Liability.] — A husband's liability for his wife's breaches of trust extends to breaches of trust arising from negligence, and is not confined to losses caused by her active misconduct. Bahin v. Hughes, 55 L. J., Ch. 472; 31 Ch. D. 390; 54 L. T. 188; 34 W. R. 311 — C. A.

See now Married Women's Property Act, 1882 (45 & 46 Vict. c. 75), s. 24.

ii. Trustees de facto.

Person assuming Character of Trustee.]—A person who assumes the character of a trustee incurs the responsibility of a trustee. Rackham v. Siddall, 16 Sim. 297; 1 Mac. & G. 607; 2 Hall & Tw. 44; 12 Jur. 640.

A party assuming to act as heir or devisee of a trustee, and committing an act which, if done by the trustee, would have been a breach of trust, cannot relieve himself of liability by asserting that he was not acting as trustee. Ib.

A person taking upon himself to act as trustee cannot set up as an excuse for a breach of trust that he did not know what the trusts were, or what were the legal consequences of the acts done by him in relation to the trust estate. Pearce v. Pearce, 22 Beav. 248; 25 L. J., Ch. 893; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 843.

—— Constructive Trustee—Solicitor acting for Trustee.]—Although the responsibility of trustees may be extended in equity to persons who are not properly trustees, if they are found either making themselves trustees de son tort, or actively participating in any fraudulent conduct of the trustee, to the injury of the cestui que trust, yet strangers are not to be made constructive trustees, merely because they act as agents of trustees in transactions within their legal power, even though such transactions may be such as the court would not approve of. Barnes v. Addy, 43 L. J., Ch. 513; L. R. 9 Ch. 244; 30 L. T. 4; 22 W. R. 505.

It is not within the scope of the implied authority of a member of a firm of solicitors to make himself a constructive trustee so as to make his partners liable. Mara v. Browne, 65 L. J., Ch. 225; [1896] 1 Ch. 199; 73 L. T. 638; 44 W. R. 330—C. A.

—— Persons Assisting Executrix in Carrying on Testator's Business in Breach of Trust—Receipt of Trust Moneys for Goods supplied—Creditor's Deed—Liability of Trustee under.]—On the testator's death in 1883, his widow, who was sole executrix, employed his residuary estate, which was bequeathed in trust for herself for life, with remainder in trust for his children, in continuing the testator's business of a miller, without any power under his will to do so. An arrangement was made under which she was assisted by M. and A., who attended occasionally at the mill and bought wheat for her in the market. A banking account was opened in the name of the widow alone, but her cheques were not to be honoured by the bank unless initialled by M. and A. The business was carried on in this way till 1886, and goods for the purposes of the business were sold by M. and A. themselves to the widow, and paid for by cheques so drawn and initialled. In 1886 M. and A. ceased to assist or to initial the cheques. The business ultimately failed, and a creditor's deed was executed by the widow, by which all her property, including the stock-in-trade and assets of the mill, were assigned to M. as trustee, by whom they were sold and the proceeds paid to the creditors. M. and A. were aware of the breach of trust involved in employing the testator's estate in the business. In an action by the children of the testator to render M. and A. liable for the testator's estate come to their hands or employed by them in the business:—Held, that M. and A. had not had such control of the trust estate as to render them liable as trustees de son tort; that they were not liable for the actual moneys paid to them in payment of goods supplied by them; and, that M. was not liable for the moneys received and paid away by him as trustee under the creditor's deed. Barney, In re, Barney v. Barney, 61 L. J., Ch. 585; [1892] 2 Ch. 265; 67 L. T. 23; 40 W. R. 637.

—— Undertaking to pay Annuity in Consideration of Assignments of Produce.]—The plaintiff, being entitled to an annuity of 300*l.* charged upon plantations in the West Indies belonging to K., entered (as agent for K.) into an agreement with D., by which D., in consideration of having the produce consigned to him until his advances were satisfied, was to ship supplies to the plantations, and honour bills drawn upon him (D.) by K. for the expenses of management, and also to pay the plaintiff's annuity. The consignments were made, and D. paid the plaintiff's annuity for one year, and then discontinued the payment, although he received subsequent consignments. The bill prayed that D. might be ordered to pay the annuity so long as he continued to receive the consignments:—Held, on demurrer, that without deciding whether the plaintiff could, with reference to the decision in the case of Garrard v. Lauderdale (Lord) (3 Sim. 1; 2 Russ. & M. 451), sustain a suit to enforce the agreement as against D., D. could not, after the payment of the annuity which he made under the contract, withhold from the plaintiff the benefit of the contract for the further payment of the annuity. Kirwan v. Daniel, 5 Hare, 493; 16 L. J., Ch. 191; 11 Jur. 235.

—— Abstraction of Trust Funds — Relief against Receiver.]—A fraudulent abstraction of trust property by the trustee, and a fraudulent receipt and appropriation of it by another person for his own personal benefit, place the receiver in the same situation as the trustee from whom he received it, and he becomes subject in a court of equity to the same rights and remedies as may be enforced by the parties beneficially entitled against the fraudulent trustee himself; and when it is said that the person who receives under such circumstances is converted by the court into a trustee, the expression is used for the purpose of describing the nature and extent of the remedy against him and denotes that the parties entitled beneficially have the same rights and remedies against him as they would be entitled to against an express trustee who had fraudulently committed a breach of trust. Rolfe v. Gregory, 4 De G. J. & S. 576; 34 L. J., Ch. 274; 11 Jur. (N.S.) 98; 12 L. T. 162; 13 W. R. 355.

But the relief against the receiver in such cases is founded on fraud and not constructive trust, and therefore the right of the party defrauded is not affected by lapse of time, or, generally speaking, by anything done or omitted to be done so long as he remains without any fault of his own in ignorance of the fraud that has been committed. Ib.

iii. Deceased Trustees.

Breach of Trust — Liability of Deceased Trustee's Estate.]—The estate of a deceased trustee is not liable for a breach of trust committed after his death where he has left the trust funds in a proper state of investment at his death. Palk, In re, Chamberlain v. Drake, 41 W. R. 28.

Breach of trust can fall only on the personal estate of a trustee. Vernon v. Vawdry, 2 Atk. 119.

Where one of two trustees commits a breach of trust, the representatives of such trustee are liable. Jenkins v. Robertson, 1 Eq. R. 123; 1 W. R. 298.

Trustees of stock sold it, and lent the money to the tenant for life on improper security. One of them died, and the survivor received the money lent, and invested it in a different security, and shortly afterwards sold it out and again lent it to the tenant for life. The fund was lost:—Held, that the original breach of trust was not cured, and the estate of the deceased trustee was liable for the whole fund. Lander v. Weston, 3 Drew. 389; 25 L. J., Ch. 235; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 58; 4 W. R. 158.

D. appointed her bankers, A., B. and C., who were partners, to be her executors. They then owed her 20,400*l.*, without any agreement as to any particular rate of interest. Six weeks afterwards A. died, before probate of D.'s will or collecting any of her assets. He appointed B. and C. his executors. B. and C. continued in trade, and ultimately died, without having ever paid the 20,400*l.*:—Held, that the estate of A. was only chargeable, in aid of the estates of B. and C., with simple interest at 4*l.* per cent. on the principal sum unpaid. Penny v. Avison, 3 Jur. (N.S.) 62.

Two trustees allowed funds which ought to have been invested on real or government security to remain for several years in a bank to their joint account. After the death of one of the trustees the survivor appropriated the balance of the fund, and afterwards became insolvent:—Held, that the estate of the deceased trustee was liable to make good the amount. Gibbins v. Taylor, 4 W. R. 432.

Jurisdiction of Court to Order immediate Sale of Trustee's Real Estate.]—In a suit to render the estate of a deceased trustee of a will liable for certain breaches of trust, a decree was made declaring the liability of the estate to make good what should be found due in respect of such breaches of trust, and directing accounts and inquiries. Before the chief clerk had made his certificate, but it having appeared in the course of taking the accounts and inquiries that the estate was liable for a considerable amount which the personal estate was insufficient to satisfy, the cestuis que trust applied by petition, under 15 & 16 Vict. c. 86, s. 55, for the sale of certain real estate belonging to the deceased trustee, a mortgage on which had been redeemed by the existing trustee of the will:—Held, that the court had jurisdiction to order the sale, and that it was in accordance with the practice of the court in such a case, when once it had been ascertained that the real estate would have to be resorted to, to make an order for the sale of the real estate without waiting for further consideration. Bell v. Turner, 45 L. J., Ch. 681; 2 Ch. D. 409; 24 W. R. 451.

Non-Appropriation to Charitable Legacy by Executor-Trustee.]—Testator bequeathed 500*l.* to his executors, upon trust that they should lay out and invest the same in the public funds, or in such other security or in such other manner as to them should seem expedient, at interest, and apply the produce to a charitable purpose. One of the executors, who took the entire management of the estate, paid the debts, and most of the legacies of the testator, but neither specifically appropriated nor invested 500*l.* for the charity. He paid interest, however, on 500*l.* to the charity; at the same time receiving interest on the promissory note of a debtor to the estate, who was in good credit, but whose debt was the only fund available for payment of the legacy. The executor afterwards died. On the admission, by his representatives, that he had, in his lifetime, assented to the payment of the legacy to himself as trustee:—Held, that his estate was severally answerable as for a breach of trust. Att.-Gen. v. Higham, 2 Y. & C. C. C. 634.

Admission of Assets by Executors.]—The executors of a deceased trustee, having admitted the receipt of assets which would have been sufficient to satisfy a particular breach of trust committed by their testator, besides his other debts, held chargeable with the loss occasioned by such breach of trust, although they had paid all his debts of which they had any knowledge out of the assets, and had distributed the whole surplus among his residuary legatees many years before, and at a time when they had no notice of the breach of trust, or of any claim in respect of it. Knatchbull v. Fearnhead, 3 Myl. & Cr. 122; 1 Jur. 687. See 6 L. J., Ch. 13, n.

—— Non-enforcement of Covenant—Administrator Ad Litem of Deceased Trustee.]—A marriage settlement, executed in 1817, contained a covenant by the husband with a trustee to pay to the trustee within three years 3,000*l.* to be held upon the usual trusts in favour of the husband and wife and the issue of the marriage, or else to secure that sum by mortgage. The money was neither paid nor secured, and the trustee never attempted to enforce the covenant, but acted as solicitor to the purchaser on a sale in 1846 by the covenantor for his own benefit of the property he had covenanted to mortgage. The trustee died in 1848; his sons had notice of the settlement in 1851. The covenantor became bankrupt in 1852, and applied to the widow and executrix of the trustee to prove for the 3,000*l.*, which she declined to do. Dividends of 11*s.* in the pound were declared in the bankruptcy, and new trustees of the settlement were appointed by the court, whose proof was rejected as too late. The widow and executrix of the trustee died in 1865, and his sons entered into possession of his property as devisees and legatees under his will, but when cited to take out letters of administration to their father, they declined to do so. Upon a bill filed in 1867, by the widow and children of the covenantor and the new trustees, against the sons and administrator ad litem of the deceased trustee, in answer to which the sons admitted assets:—Held, first, that the sons having admitted assets, the administrator ad litem represented the deceased trustee sufficiently for the purposes of the suit. Woodhouse v. Woodhouse, 38 L. J., Ch. 481; 20 L. T. 209; 17 W. R. 583.

Held, secondly, that the rights of the plaintiffs were not barred by lapse of time, and that the sons were liable to make good the loss occasioned by the breach of trust to the extent of the assets of their father in their hands. Ib.

Statute of Limitations.]—Where a breach of trust is committed by a trustee holding property upon an express trust, his assets in the hands of his personal representatives continue liable to the cestui que trust even after a lapse of six years from his death. Obee v. Bishop, 1 De G. F. & J. 137; 29 L. J., Ch. 148; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 132; 1 L. T. 151; 8 W. R. 102.

—— Covenant to Settle—Settlor Trustee.]—By a post-nuptial settlement executed in 1814, after reciting that J. S., the husband, had before marriage agreed to settle 1,000*l.*, and had paid that sum to R. G.; R. G. covenanted that he would stand possessed of the money upon trust with the approbation of J. S. to invest it in the names of J. S. and R. G., and trusts were declared of the fund for the benefit of the husband and wife successively for life, with remainder to the children of the marriage. By the same deed J. S. covenanted with R. G. to pay to him a further sum of 1,000*l.*, to be held upon the same trusts as the first-mentioned 1,000*l.* Neither of the two sums of 1,000*l.* was, in fact, ever paid. J. S. survived his wife, and died in 1868. In a suit instituted for the administration of the estate of J. S., the children of the marriage claimed to rank as creditors for both sums of 1,000*l.*:—Held, that as to the first-mentioned sum of 1,000*l.* J. S. had constituted himself a trustee of the settlement, and that his estate was liable for the amount, but that the claim to the other 1,000*l.* rested upon a mere legal obligation, which was barred by the Statute of Limitations. Stone v. Stone, 39 L. J., Ch. 196; L. R. 5 Ch. 74; 22 L. T. 182.

Guardian in Socage.]—Defendants, executors to their father, who was guardian in socage to plaintiff, ordered to answer for profits taken by him. Burgh v. Wentworth, 1 Vern. 54.

Right of Cestui que Trust to Sue Surviving Trustees alone.]—Where one of several trustees has died, the cestui que trust may generally sue the surviving trustees for an account without making the representatives of the deceased trustee a party, it being the duty of the surviving trustees to place the fund in a proper position, and recover from the estate of the deceased any portion of the trust money that may have remained in his hands, semble. Beattie v. Johnstone, 8 Hare, 169.

Where one of several trustees dies pending a suit which does not seek to charge them personally in that character, his representatives are not necessary parties; for the trusteeship survives. London Gas Light Co. v. Spottiswoode, 14 Beav. 264.

One trustee of a deed of settlement was dead, and a bill for an account was filed against the surviving trustees, but no allegation was made against the deceased trustee, whose legal personal representatives were never parties to the suit, and no account was prayed with regard to him. The surviving trustees, however, alleged in their answer, that he had taken an active part with them in the execution of the trusts:—Held, that the decree must go against the estate of the deceased trustee. Elwes v. Barnard, 11 Jur. (N.S.) 1035; 13 L. T. 426.

Right of Surviving Trustee to Sue.] — A testator devised his residuary real and personal estate to A. and B., on trusts in which B. was beneficially interested. B. received part of the assets, and died:—Held, that a bill could not be maintained by the surviving trustee against the representatives of B. alone to recover the trust fund received by him, but that the bill ought to seek the general administration of the testator's estate. Chancellor v. Morecraft, 11 Beav. 262; 17 L. J., Ch. 11.

Surviving Trustee not Specialty Creditor of Deceased Trustee.]—A. and B. were trustees of a settlement, and a breach of trust was committed, B. being the guilty party. The trust fund was ultimately restored, and A.'s costs were directed to be paid out of B.'s estate:—Held, that these costs were not a specialty debt as against B.'s estate. Lockhart v. Reilly, 1 De G. & J. 464; 27 L. J., Ch. 54.

A. paid a sum on account of his costs, after the passing of the 19 & 20 Vict. c. 97, and it was held that the sum was paid in the character of surety, and therefore that, under s. 5 of that act, he was entitled to claim as a specialty creditor on account of it. Ib.

Right of Representative of Deceased Trustee on Transfer of Trust Property to New Trustee.]—The representative of a deceased trustee, who is called upon to transfer the trust property to new trustees, is not entitled to be furnished at the expense of the fund with a duplicate of the instrument appointing such new trustees, nor is he entitled at the expense of the fund to an attested copy of the deed creating the trust. Warter v. Anderson, 11 Hare, 301; 1 Eq. R. 266; 1 W. R. 493.

Recital in Settlement that Trust Fund had been Received by Trustees when it was never so Received—Lapse of Time.]—In 1828 two trustees executed a marriage settlement, which recited that a sum of money (for which they also signed an indorsed receipt) had been paid to them as such trustees. The trustees had never in fact received the money, and by their neglect to do so it was ultimately lost. The trustees died, having left all their property upon trust for the payment of their debts:—Held, that a breach of trust had been committed, for which the estates of the deceased trustees were liable. Westmoreland v. Holland, 23 L. T. 797; 19 W. R. 302.

In a marriage settlement, dated in 1807, a recital was contained to the effect that a sum of stock had been transferred into the names of the trustees. The deed was executed by all parties. The stock never was transferred, and the person who ought to have transferred it became bankrupt in 1848. Both the trustees were dead. On bill filed in 1855, by a cestui que trust under the settlement, who came of age in 1839, to have the trust fund made good:—Held, that he was not too late, and the estates of the trustees declared to be jointly and severally liable to make good the fund. Story v. Gape, 2 Jur. (N.S.) 706.

By deed made on the marriage of A. and B., C., the father of B., settled 1,000*l.* upon A. and B. and their issue, which sum was recited as having been paid to the trustees, and covenanted to pay another 1,000*l.* upon his decease, upon the same trusts. Shortly before C.'s death, he, by deed, gave to other trustees 5,000*l.* upon trusts nearly identical with the trusts of the settlement for A. and B. and their issue; and by his will, of the same date, he declared that what he had given to B. should be taken in full satisfaction and discharge of all claims and demands upon him in any right or manner whatsoever. The trustees of the settlement never received the 1,000*l.* under the covenant of C., and C.'s estate had long been administered. Bill by one of the children of A. and B. against the representative of one of the trustees of the settlement, claiming a portion of the two sums of 1,000*l.* and 1,000*l.* Defence, that the trustees never received either 1,000*l.*, and that the 5,000*l.* was in satisfaction:—Held, first, that the 5,000*l.* was to be taken in satisfaction of the 1,000*l.* covenanted to be paid. Davis v. Chambers, 7 De G. M. & G. 386; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 297; 5 W. R. 245.

Held, secondly, that although primâ facie the recital in the settlement of payment to trustees is the strongest possible evidence to charge them, yet that the circumstances of this case negatived the receipt by the trustees. Ib.

Neglect to Register Bond in Ireland by Guardian—Acquiescence.]—A testator died in 1810 in India, having bequeathed his English property to two infants, whom he acknowledged as his natural children; and having appointed his nephew, E., to be their guardian. Part of his property consisted of a bond, dated in 1810, in which he was obligee, the obligor being seised of real estate in Ireland. In 1811 E. obtained possession of the bond from the testator's executor; but he did not register it, nor did he ever take any steps towards realising the security.

In 1821 the elder of the infants attained twenty-one; in 1832 she married; and in 1833, when the bond had become irrevocable, E., for the first time, informed the elder child and her husband of the existence of the bond; and upon finding it was then too late to register it, he handed it to the husband, directing him to see to it. No step was taken until E.'s death in 1870, after which, in 1871, a bill was filed, seeking to make E.'s estate liable as for a breach of trust. At this time the younger infant was dead, and had no legal personal representative; but his son, who was entitled to administer, was made a defendant. Semble, that E. was not at any time liable for any breach of trust. Sleeman v. Wilson, L. R. 13 Eq. 36; 25 L. T. 408; 20 W. R. 109.

Held, that the parties, by acquiescing for thirty-eight years, and waiting till E.'s death, had lost their right to make any claim against his estate. Ib.

iv. Loss of Trust Property.

By Negligence.]—Trustees charged with loss occasioned by mere negligence, and costs follow of course. Caffrey v. Darby, 6 Ves. 488.

Unexplained loss of property by trustee or bailee attributed to negligence. Brown v. Sewell, 11 Hare, 53; 22 L. J., Ch. 1063; 17 Jur. 708.

Certain gas shares were settled upon trust for a woman for life, then for her husband for life, and then for their children. New shares were allotted in respect of the original shares, and the husband, without the interference of the trustee, obtained possession of the old and new shares, paid calls on the new shares, and disposed of all the shares. He then became bankrupt:—Held, that the trustee was only liable to make good to the estate the value of the shares less the amount paid for calls. Briggs v. Massey, 51 L. J., Ch. 447; 46 L. T. 354; 30 W. R. 325—C. A.

By Robbery.]—Defendant was trustee to plaintiff, an infant, and received for him 40*l.* in gold, of which he was robbed by his own domestic servant, together with 200*l.* of his own; lord chancellor allowed the trustee this 40*l.* on his own oath, for he was to keep it as his own. Morley v. Morley, 3 Ca. Ch. 2.

A decree having been made for a general account, and payment of a balance against a party who died, and his personal representative having delivered certain goods, part of the effects, to her own solicitor to be delivered over, is not answerable in the event of his being robbed of them. Tender of the goods not incumbent on her, she would not have been answerable if they had remained in her own possession till the accident. Jones v. Lewis, 2 Ves. Sen. 240.

Loss by Agents.]—See post, 12.

Loss by Co-trustees.]—See post, c.

v. Negligence in getting in Trust Property.

In General.]—Trustees are liable for not taking proper steps to get the trust fund transferred into their names. M'Gachen v. Dew, 15 Beav. 84.

It being the duty of A., under the trusts of a settlement, to remit a sum of 1,000*l.* from India, to B., C., and D., in England, he permitted it to remain in the hands of private traders, in whose hands it was lost:—Held, that A. was responsible for it, though it had been properly invested by those parties, and been sold out at the request of the cestuis que trust, and the loss was occasioned by their subsequent bankruptcy, and the bankruptcy of their correspondents in London, on whom they had drawn bills for the amount. Bacon v. Clark, 3 Myl. & Cr. 294.

A testator, resident in India, directed his trustees and executors to invest his residue in government or other good securities, and then declared trusts of it for the benefit of his children and other persons, all of whom were resident either in England or Ireland, and were mentioned so to be in the will. The residue was allowed to remain in the hands of the testator's bankers and agents in India, who ultimately failed:—Held, that the acting executor and trustee was responsible for the loss thereby occasioned to the estate. Lowry v. Fulton, 9 Sim. 104; 7 L. J., Ch. 158.

Neglect to get in Debt.]—In 1826 a debt due from a firm at Calcutta was assigned to trustees in England, in trust to call in and invest on Indian securities, and accumulate. The debtors became bankrupts in 1830, and the trustees not having, in the meantime, taken proper steps to call in the money, a considerable portion of the debt was lost:—Held, that they were liable for the breach of trust, and ought to make good the accumulation which would have been produced; secondly, that one of the trustees who had been abroad with his regiment during that period was equally liable; but, thirdly, that they were to be excused during such a reasonable time as was necessary in order to communicate between England and India. Byrne v. Norcott, 13 Beav. 336.

On a marriage two of the wife's debtors, one of them the bankrupt, were appointed trustees of a fund, to be made up of their several debts:—Held, that the debts not being got in and invested, each trustee was liable only for his own default. Woodward, Ex parte, Turner, In re, 3 Mont. & Ayr. 232; 2 Deac. 401; 6 L. J., Bk. 60; 1 Jur. 385.

By a marriage settlement, a debt due from A. was assigned to A. and B., upon trust "with all convenient speed," to get in and invest in consols. For two and a half years B. took no steps to get in the money, and A. then became bankrupt:—Held, that B. was responsible for the loss. Grove v. Price, 26 Beav. 103.

Trustees not Suing for Specialty Debt.]—There is no rule in equity, any more than at law, that the mere non-suing by a specialty creditor for any period within the statutory limit of twenty years is such negligence as deprives him of the right of requiring payment of the specialty debt. S. covenanted with B. for immediate payment of a sum of money in exoneration of B., and in substitution for a similar sum which B. was liable to pay within six months of his death. S. died without having paid or been called on to pay that sum, leaving property amply sufficient to meet it, but her executor, instead of providing out of her estate funds to meet the liability on her covenant, left her estate, consisting entirely of shares in a bank, which afterwards failed, unconverted. The investment in bank shares was authorized by the will of S.:—Held, that the executors of B. were entitled, after a lapse of eighteen and a half years, to enforce that covenant against the estate of S., and that the executor of S., having committed a devastavit in not converting the shares to provide for payment of the debt, was liable to make good the amount for which his testatrix was so liable under her covenant. Baker, In re, Collins v. Rhodes, Seaman, In re, Rhodes v. Wish, 51 L. J., Ch. 315; 20 Ch. D. 230; 45 L. T. 658; 30 W. R. 858—C. A.

Neglect to Enforce Covenant.]—By a marriage settlement, a trustee was required, immediately after the marriage, to compel payment of a sum of money secured by a covenant in the deed; he neglected to do so even when required to call it in, and allowed the interest to fall into arrear. He was held liable to pay the costs of a suit instituted to compel him to perform the trusts. Kirby v. Mash, 3 Y. & C. 295; 8 L. J., Ex. Eq. 33; 3 Jur. 221.

A., on his marriage with B., by his marriage settlement, covenanted with a trustee, that he would, on martinmas day, 1824, pay 10,000*l.*, the trusts of which were to be for A. for life, with remainder to B. for life, with remainder to the children of the marriage, and in default of children, for the persons therein mentioned. A. died in 1836, without having performed the covenant. After A.'s death a suit was instituted by B. against the trustee, to make him personally liable for the non-performance of the covenant. A reference was made to the master to inquire whether A. was of ability, after 1824, to pay the 10,000*l.*, or any part of it. It appeared that A. had for seven years after 1824, an income of 1,800*l.* a year, but that he had no other property than this income, and that he had always lived up to or exceeded his income. The master found that A. was of ability during these seven years to have paid 4,200*l.* in part performance of the covenant. No exceptions were taken to the report. On the hearing of the cause on further directions:—Held, that the trustee was liable to pay 4,200*l.*, and that, had the report been excepted to, it would have been confirmed. Maitland v. Bateman, 13 L. J., Ch. 273; 8 Jur. 926. And see Bateman v. Maitland, 14 L. J., Ch. 383.

Trustees made personally responsible for the consequences of their neglect to enforce a covenant contained in a marriage settlement. Fenwick v. Greenwell, 10 Beav. 412; 11 Jur. 620.

By a marriage settlement it was covenanted and agreed that 5,000*l.* consols, part of the wife's property, should be transferred to trustees, upon certain trusts for the husband, and wife, and children. At the time of the settlement, a sum of 4,946*l.* was standing in the name of the wife; but the trustees took no steps to enforce a transfer, and it was sold out and misapplied by the husband:—Held, that the trustees were personally responsible for the loss; and, secondly, that they were not relieved from their liability by the trustee indemnity clause declaring that they should not be liable "for any casual or involuntary loss," without their wilful default, but "for such moneys only as should actually come to their hands." Ib.

Neglect to get in Fund recoverable only in Equity.]—In ordinary cases it is the duty of trustees to get in the funds, but where under the terms of the instrument constituting the trust it is the duty of the trustees not to do so if in their discretion they consider it inexpedient, misconduct on their part must be proved in order to render them liable for loss, and the ordinary rules as to wilful neglect and default have little application. Paddon v. Richardson, 7 De G. M. & G. 563; 3 Eq. R. 933; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 1192.

A cestui que trust sought to charge a trustee with breach of trust in not recovering moneys, which were recoverable only in equity:—Held, that as, under the circumstances, the cestui que trust might have himself sued he could not make the trustee liable for not doing what he could at any time have himself done. Ib.

By settlement, dated in 1814, a legacy belonging to the intended wife was, with other property vested in S. & R., upon trust to get in and invest, and pay the income to Mrs. E. for life, remainder as she should by will direct, remainder over, power being reserved to her to make a will. By her will, dated in 1829, she appointed the fund to her daughter for life (deceased), remainder to the plaintiffs, and made the defendants her executors, directing them to get in all the funds. In 1825 the balance unpaid of the legacy so settled had been transferred to new trustees of the settlement, and by them immediately sold out, and nothing more was ever known concerning such balance, or its application. In 1830 the defendants took out administration to the testatrix, with her will annexed (she not having power to appoint executors), limited to the balance of the legacy outstanding, and the accumulations thereof, if any. The defendants could not show that they had ever taken active or proper steps to inquire after the wasted fund, or to recover the same:—Held, that notwithstanding the lapse of time, and the irregularity of their succession as trustees, they would be clearly liable to make good the breach of trust (if any) committed in 1825. Taylar v. Millington, 4 Jur. (N.S.) 204.

But held, that by reason of a power contained in the settlement enabling the trustees to take and recoup themselves all costs out of the trust estate, and the fund wasted having been small, (103*l.*), the plaintiffs had failed to establish a breach of trust. Ib.

A marriage settlement, made in 1811, recited that the husband was entitled to 20,000 rupees, secured by a note of the East India Company, and 10,000 rupees, part thereof, were thereby assigned (with certain property of the wife) to the trustees of the settlement, upon trust for the husband and wife for their lives, with remainder for the children of the marriage. One of the trustees died six weeks after the settlement was made. The husband died in 1819, and the wife in 1822. The trustees did not, nor did the survivor, take any steps during the lifetime of the husband to recover the 10,000 rupees. After they had attained their ages of twenty-one years, the children filed a bill against the surviving trustee and the representatives of the deceased trustee for an account of trust funds, charging them with the 10,000 rupees. Under a reference to the master to inquire whether the defendant might, by due diligence, have received or got in the 10,000 sicca rupees, the defendant produced evidence, showing it to have been the common belief of persons who knew the husband, that he was not possessed of any such property, but no proof was given that the husband was insolvent; and the court charged the surviving trustee with the fund, and interest from the death of the wife, and directed a reference to inquire the value of the 10,000 rupees at the time of the settlement. Simes v. Eyre, 6 Hare, 137.

Neglect to invest Annuity paid under Order of Court.]—A lady under an order of this court was in receipt of 100*l.* a year, part of the income arising from an estate which a testator had ordered to be accumulated, and after the death of her mother, divided among herself and her brothers and sisters, who were numerous. By a settlement made upon her marriage, the lady assigned to trustees the whole of her share in the estate, and its accumulations for the benefit of herself for life, with remainder for her children; but she continued for eleven years to receive the 100*l.* a year under the order. The mother was still living. Upon a bill filed by the children of the marriage:—Held, that the order of the court did not justify the trustees in not investing the 100*l.* a year paid to the lady; that it formed part of the principal vested in them, and that they must replace the amount. Barratt v. Wyatt, 31 L. J., Ch. 652; 8 Jur. (N.S.) 1045; 10 W. R. 454.

vi. Payment of Trust Moneys to Persons not Entitled.

Trustees Doubting without Cause Identity of Cestui que Trust and Paying Over.]—Trustees who, without sufficient cause, doubted the identity of their cestui que trust, and, in breach of trust, paid over the trust fund to others, were ordered to make good the same, and pay the costs and interest at 5 per cent, the accounts to be taken with rests. Hutchins v. Hutchins, 15 Jur. 869.

Forged Marriage Certificate.]—Trustees who paid over a trust fund to wrong persons, trusting to a marriage certificate which turned out to be a forgery, made responsible for so much of the fund as could not be recovered from those who had wrongfully received it. In a suit by the persons beneficially interested, to make good the moneys, with interest from the date of the wrongful payment, the father of the recipients, who had sent the forged certificate of his marriage to the trustees, was also made responsible for the money. Eaves v. Hickson, 30 Beav. 136; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 1297; 5 L. T. 598; 10 W. R. 29.

Advance to Bigamous Husband.]—A wife was entitled in remainder to a share of moneys in the hands of a trustee. She deserted her husband, and married another man. The trustee, relying upon her representations that she was legally married, advanced a portion of her reversionary share to the bigamous husband. The fund having fallen into possession:—Held, that the trustee was answerable to the husband for the money which he had so advanced. Sporle v. Barnaby, 10 Jur. (N.S.) 1142; 11 L. T. 412; 13 W. R. 151.

Payments to Married Woman after Notice of Charge by Her.]—A trustee for a married woman, having received notice of a charge executed by her, was held personally liable for payments afterwards made to her; and that notwithstanding the validity of the charge was disputed by her, and no application had been made for an injunction. Hodgson v. Hodgson, 2 Keen, 704; 7 L. J., Ch. 5.

Notice of Execution of Power.] — Quære, whether a trustee, having prepared a deed of appointment under a power, but not knowing of the execution of it, shall be held to have had such notice so as to affect him in respect of his payment of the money to the legatee of the person who had the power under a subsequent will. Cothay v. Sydenham, 2 Bro. C. C. 391.

Payment to Infant Cestui que Trust on False Representation as to Age.]—Payment by a trustee to an infant cestui que trust, nineteen years of age, on the false representation by herself and her parents, that she had attained the age of twenty-one, held to be a discharge to the trustee for the sum so paid. Overton v. Banister, 3 Hare, 503; 8 Jur. 906.

Payment of Portions.]—If a trustee for payment of children's portions pays one his full share, and the trust estate decays, he shall not be allowed it. Tilsly v. Throckmorton, 2 Ca. Ch. 132.

N. A. made a will, with certain trusts relating to his real and personal estate, and appointed trustees to carry them into execution. One of these trusts was for the payment of a legacy of 2,500*l.* as a portion to an eldest daughter. R. A. B., the father of this legatee, was one of the executors and trustees under the will. An act of parliament was obtained to carry some of the trusts of this will into execution; and under this act, lands devised by N. A. were sold. The trustee under the act was W. L. On a bill filed against him by the legatee of the 2,500*l.*, he sought to take advantage of the payment by him of that sum to R. A. B.:—Held, that R. A. B.'s receipt was no discharge of W. L.'s liability, as, by the terms of the act, he was absolutely bound to pay the debts and discharge the children's portions; and it was not set up in the answer, nor proved, that R. A. B. had specifically received this money as trustee for his daughter. Lawrence v. Blake, 8 Cl. & F. 504; 6 Jur. 427.

—— Acting on Opinion of Counsel.]—The trustee of a will, who, acting on the opinions of counsel, had distributed the whole estate according to a different view to that taken by the court, was ordered to pay to the representatives of the child the amount of the child's share and the costs of the suit. Boulton v. Beard, 3 De G. M. & G. 608.

Rents Paid to Cestui que Trust by Trustee, who was also Committee of Lunatic who Claimed the Estate.]—A trustee or apparent trustee for A., who was in possession of an estate, was also committee of B., a lunatic who claimed the estate, and the trustee was properly aware of the claim. On a bill filed to recover the estate for B., it was decided that the estate was his:—Held, that the trustee was liable to B. for the rents received by him and paid to A. Wright v. Chard, 29 L. J., Ch. 415; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 476; 2 L. T. 104; 8 W. R. 334—L.JJ.

Irregular Payment by Trustees of Will to one of two Trustees of Settlement.]—A testator directed his trustees and executors to settle 4,000*l.* consols upon his daughter E. in case of her marriage; he also gave her upon the death of his widow one-third of his residuary estate, which was subsequently represented by 2,633*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.* stock. E., upon her marriage, in 1847, settled this fund. In 1859 the widow died. In December, 1859, the trustees of the will executed a settlement of the 4,000*l.* consols, constituting P. and M. trustees of that fund, which was duly transferred to them. Shortly afterwards P. and M. were also appointed trustees of the settlement of 1847. In March 1860 the trustees of the will sold the 2,633*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.* stock, and paid the proceeds to P. without any authority from M. Shortly afterwards P., under a power of attorney from M., sold the 4,000*l.* consols, and received the proceeds. P. invested a portion of each of the funds received, but he retained the balances in his hands, and ultimately became bankrupt. Upon a bill, by E. and her children, against the trustees of the will, and against P. and M., charging breach of trust in respect of both funds, and deficiency in the investments to answer them, and seeking to make the former liable in respect of the payment to P. alone:—Held, that the trustees of the will were liable at the suit of the plaintiffs in respect of the irregular payment to P.; and that, having regard to the blended condition of the trust funds and the necessity of ascertaining how much of each fund was in a proper state of investment, the suit was not multifarious. Margetts v. Perks, 34 L. J., Ch. 109; 10 L. T. 85; 12 W. R. 517.

Transfer to Feme Covert.]—Bequest of consols to A. B., a feme covert, to be transferred to her in her own name, and the interest to be for her separate use, and the principal to remain in trust of the executors till the youngest of her children attained twenty-one, when the principal was to be her own; or, in case of her demise, it was to devolve to her husband. The trustees, on the death of the testatrix, transferred the fund to A. B.; she and her husband afterwards sold it out, and they both signed the transfer:—Held, that a breach of trust had been committed, but that A. B. had made a valid disposition of the dividends which might accrue previously to her youngest child, born after the death of the testatrix, attaining twenty-one. Crosby v. Church, 3 Beav. 485; 10 L. J., Ch. 212; 4 Jur. 50.

Power of Appointment — Payment under Fraudulent Appointment.]—Certain policies of insurance effected by a father on his life, as a provision for his daughters, were assigned to a trustee upon trust for such of the daughters as the father should appoint, and certain estates were demised to the same trustee upon trust, out of the rents and profits, to secure the payment of the premiums. The trustee advanced some sums of money in payment of the premiums, and the father appointed the bonuses which had accrued upon the policies to three of his daughters, and the three daughters soon afterwards authorised the trustee to receive the sum paid by the office for the bonuses, and invest part thereof as a fund to keep down the premiums, and a part of the sum was applied in satisfaction of the arrears of such premiums. A subsequent appointment was made in favour of the other daughters, of the residue of the sums to be received on the policies, and which was intended to equalise the shares:—Held, that the first appointment was a fraud upon the power, its immediate object being to relieve the father, and its necessary consequence to relax the diligence of the trustee in enforcing the right of the daughters against the father; and that the application of the trust funds in pursuance of the appointment by the trustee, who knew that the appointment was fraudulent, was a breach of trust for which he was responsible to the objects of the power. Harrison v. Randall, 9 Hare, 397; 21 L. J., Ch. 294; 16 Jur. 72.

—— No Appointment Made.] — Moneys secured by judgments, the property of the wife, were by ante-nuptial settlement assigned to trustees upon trust for her during her life, and in case there should be issue of the marriage, upon certain trusts for their benefit, and if no issue, upon trust to permit the wife to dispose of the moneys to such persons as she, whether sole or married, by any deed or writing, with or without power of revocation, to be by her sealed and delivered in the presence of or attested by two or more witnesses, should appoint, or in default of appointment, gift, or devise, to her next-of-kin under the statute of distributions. There was no issue of the marriage. The surviving trustee received a portion of the moneys secured by the judgments, and paid a part thereof to the husband during his lifetime, and the remaining part to the wife after his death. No appointment by deed or writing was ever executed by the wife:—Held, that the wife took only a life interest, with the power of appointment, and as she had not duly executed the power, the payments to her and her husband were invalid, and accordingly the trustee was bound to replace the fund for the benefit of the next-of-kin of the wife. Reid v. Thompson, 2 Ir. Ch. R. 26.

Where, on marriage, a settlement is made of the wife's property to herself for life, to her separate use, with remainder as she should appoint, by any writing signed by her, and attested by two witnesses, and for default of appointment to the children of the marriage, and the trustees part with the trust fund upon the joint application of the husband and wife, by letter, not attested by any witness, the trustees, after the death of the wife, must make good the trust fund for the children. Hopkins v. Myall, 2 Russ. & M. 86.

Premature Payments.]—Under a settlement a sum of 10,000*l.* secured by mortgage, was vested in trustees for the wife of S. for her life, and after her death for S. for his life, and subject as aforesaid, for such persons as the wife should by deed or will appoint, and in default of appointment for S. The wife made a will, by which she directed that her husband should enjoy the income of the fund during his life, subject to payment of two annuities; and she directed certain pecuniary legacies to be paid, after his death, out of one moiety of the fund, and she gave the other moiety of the fund and the residue of her property to her husband, whom she appointed executor. The trustees of the settlement paid over the whole trust fund to the husband; and part of the 5,000*l.* applicable to the payment of the pecuniary legacies was lost by him:—Held, that the payment to him was proper, and that the trustees were not answerable for the loss. Hayes v. Oatley, 41 L. J., Ch. 510; L. R. 14 Eq. 1; 26 L. T. 816.

Testator directed his trustees, at the expiration of three years after his death, to pay 10,000*l.* (which he charged on an estate devised to his son, one of the trustees) to his daughter's husband, on condition that he should, to the satisfaction of the trustees, give to them the best and most sufficient security in his power, so that the 10,000*l.* might be effectually secured to them upon certain trusts, for the testator's daughter and her children. The son paid the money to the husband before the expiration of the three years, and the trustees took a bond for securing it:—Held, they were justified in anticipating the time of payment, but not in taking the bond. Mills v. Osborne, 7 Sim. 30.

A. upon the marriage of his daughter, executed his bond and warrant to the trustees of the settlement, who were to hold it upon trust, inter alia, that in case the wife should die during the life of her husband, leaving no issue of the marriage her surviving, or leaving such they should all die under twenty-one, the money secured by the bond should not be called in, but the bond should be given up to A., his heirs, executors, and administrators to be cancelled. The money was not to be called in during his life:—Held, that the trustees of settlement were bound to accept payment of the money secured by the bond from the executor of A., though the husband and wife objected to its being paid in. Kempland v. Humphries, 2 Jones, 726.

Receipt by Anticipation on Coalition of Life Interest and Reversion.]—Where a fund is vested by a settlement in trustees for A. for life and over, and the reversion has been subsequently settled, the person entitled to the life interest and the trustees of the subsequent settlement are entitled to call for a transfer of the trust fund, and can give the original trustees an effectual discharge although the settlement does not provide for a transfer of payment by anticipation. Anson v. Potter, 13 Ch. D. 141; 41 L. T. 582.

vii. Liability for Interest or Profits.

a. Interest.

When Trustees Chargeable—In General.]—A trustee or executor is chargeable with interest, although not prayed by the bill. Woodhead v. Marriot, C. P. Cooper, 62.

An executor or trustee insolvent at the time they place out money at interest, shall, if they make any, pay interest, as they run no risk; secus, of one who is in good circumstances. Bromfielf v. Wytherley, Pre. Ch. 505; 1 Eq. Cas. Abr. 398, but cited and overruled in Newton v. Bennet, 1 Bro. C. C. 360.

Although a trustee is not directed to put money out at interest, yet, if he makes interest, he shall account for it. Lee v. Lee, 2 Vern. 548.

The court, ordering loss on trust estate, in consequence of the conduct of trustees, to be made up by the trustees personally, refused interest on the amount, which was comparatively but a small sum. Bone v. Cooke, 13 Price, 332; M'Cle. 168; 28 R. R. 697.

Trustee bound to pay interest on money retained a length of time. Trimleston v. Hamill, 1 Ball & B. 385; 12 R. R. 38.

Where executors, directed to invest, allowed the property to be enjoyed by the tenant for life in specie, and three years after her death accounted for the value, and paid it into court, they were held liable also for interest from the death of the tenant for life until the day of payment. Mackenzie v. Taylor, 7 Beav. 467.

—— Balances.]—Executors not liable to interest on balances, unless the purpose for which the money is retained, appear to be answered; but trustees and guardians are, without such proof. Dawson v. Massey, 1 Ball & B. 231.

Person bound by recognisance to account annually, and retaining money in his hands, though no use be made of it, must pay interest on such balances. Id. 230.

Interest decreed upon balances kept by guardian in his banker's hands. Id. 219.

Interest decreed against the estate of an accounting party, who had dealt with certain funds, in such a manner, that the court would have given interest on the balances in his hands against him personally, but who had taken the benefit of the Insolvent Act before there was any decree charging him with interest. Moons v. De Bernales, 1 Russ. 301.

A testator directed his trustees and executors to invest the residue of his estate on good freehold security; the trustee retained in his hands a balance of between 300*l.* and 400*l.* for a period of more than two years, part of which money was in the hands of his bankers:—Held, under the circumstances, that he was not responsible for interest during that time, although he had been informed of certain persons who were desirous of borrowing money on freehold security, he having employed a solicitor to procure a proper investment. Wyatt v. Wallis, C. P. Cooper, 155, n.; 8 Jur. 117.

To fix a trustee in such a case with a breach of trust, the cestui que trust must find out some person having a proper security, and desirous of borrowing a considerable portion of the trust money, and then inform the trustee of the offer. Ib.

—— Wilful Misconduct.]—Trustee charged with interest for wilful misconduct, as not paying money into court pursuant to an order: but slight difference in the sums admitted and reported in his hands is not sufficient: and further inquiry whether he made interest not to be directed unless a strong case. Sammes v. Rickman, 2 Ves. 36.

—— Neglect to Render Accounts.]—Owners of a privateer acting for themselves and the crew, in the sale of the prizes, having neglected to render accounts, and delayed the distribution of the proceeds, charged with interest on the balances, and costs. Pearse v. Green, 1 J. & W. 135; 20 R. R. 258.

The first duty of an agent, receiver, trustee, or executor, is to be constantly ready with his accounts, and neglect in this is a ground for charging him with interest. Ib.

Where, on a bill to call a trustee to account, he, by answer, submits readily to it, though found in debt, he shall pay the interest for the balance only from the time of the account liquidated, and no costs; secus, if he controverts the account; there, if found in arrear, he shall pay interest and costs. Parrot v. Treby, Pre. Ch. 254.

—— Not Enforcing Payment of Trust Property.]—A marriage settlement made in 1811, recited that the husband was entitled to 20,000 rupees, secured by a note of the East India Company, and 10,000 rupees, part thereof, were thereby assigned (with certain property of the wife) to the trustees of the settlement, upon trust for the husband and wife for their lives, with remainder for the children of the marriage. One of the trustees died six weeks after the settlement was made. The husband died in 1819, and the wife in 1822. The trustees did not, nor did the survivor, take any step during the lifetime of the husband to recover the 10,000 rupees. After they had attained their ages of twenty-one years, the children filed a bill against the surviving trustee and the representatives of the deceased trustee for an account of trust funds, charging them with the 10,000 rupees. Under a reference to the master to inquire whether the defendant might, by due diligence, have received or got in the 10,000 sicca rupees, the defendant produced evidence, showing it to have been the common belief of persons who knew the husband, that he was not possessed of any such property, but no proof was given that the husband was insolvent; and the court charged the surviving trustee with the fund, and interest from the death of the wife, and directed a reference to inquire the value of the 10,000 rupees at the time of the settlement. Simes v. Eyre, 6 Hare, 137.

Trust being established, interest was given against the trustees' estate before the filing of the bill, viz., from the death of the person subject to whose life interest the plaintiffs claimed. Hawkins v. Gardiner, 2 Sm. & G. 441.

b. Rate of Interest.

Interest at Three per cent.]—An administratrix, who had permitted her solicitor to receive dividends of a fund set apart for an infant next of kin, was ordered to account for the dividends, with interest at the rate of 3 per cent. with half-yearly rests. Gilroy v. Stephens, 51 L. J., Ch. 834; 46 L. T. 761; 30 W. R. 745.

Interest at Four per Cent.]—A special case is requisite for charging a trustee or executor with a higher rate of interest than 4*l.* per cent. Woodhead v. Marriott, C. P. Cooper, 62. And see Knott v. Cottee, 16 Beav. 77; 16 Jur. 752.

Where trustees improperly retain balances, or cause or permit trust money to be lost, they are chargeable for the same with interest at 4 per cent. Robinson v Robinson, 1 De G. M. & G. 247; 21 L. J., Ch. 111; 16 Jur. 255.

Trustees, in breach of trust, lent trust money to one of them, F., and his partners in trade. F. and his partners gave their bond to F. and his co-trustees for the amount payable with interest at 5 per cent. No action could be maintained on the bond:—Held, in a suit to make the trustees liable for a breach of trust, that F. was only liable to pay 4 per cent. on the loss which had accrued to the trust fund. Fletcher v. Green, 33 Beav. 426.

Trustees, with power to invest on real security, in the presence of their cestuis que trust, agreed with the solicitor, who had long been employed in managing the property, to leave their funds in his hands, he paying 5 per cent. interest; but it did not appear that anything more was clearly explained to the cestuis que trust than that they were to receive 5 per cent. interest. On the bankruptcy of the solicitor, it appeared that the only security taken by the trustees was a deposit of the deeds of an estate, which the solicitor had contracted to purchase:—Held, that the trustees must make good the loss upon this security, with 4 per cent. interest. Hooker v. Platt, 1 Jur. 473.

By a deed, A. agreed that B. should insure her life, and that the costs of such insurance, and the payments for keeping the same on foot, should be paid out of the property charged; and she directed the trustees to make the necessary payments for effecting and keeping on foot the policies. The trustees did not make the payments, but the policy was kept on foot by B.:—Held, that he was entitled to interest thereon at 4*l.* per cent. Hodgson v. Hodgson, 2 Keen, 704; 7 L. J., Ch. 5.

Where there is a direction in the will to accumulate, and the trustee has failed to comply with the direction, he will be charged with interest at 4*l.* per cent. from one year after the testator's death. Amiss v. Hall, 3 Jur. (N.S.) 584. But see Emmet's Estate, In re, Emmet v. Emmet, 50 L. J., Ch. 341; 17 Ch. D. 142; 44 L. T. 172; 29 W. R. 464. Post, col. 776.

Interest at Five per cent., or More.]—In three cases the court charges more than its usual rate of 4*l.* per cent. upon balances due from a trustee, viz.: first, where the trustee, in the opinion of the court, ought to have received more than 4*l.* per cent.; secondly, where he has received more; and, thirdly, where he is, in the opinion of the court, to be presumed to have received more. Examination of circumstances with reference to the applicability of the third of these rules. Penny v. Avison, 3 Jur. (N.S.) 62. And see Att.-Gen. v. Alford, 4 De G. M. & G. 843; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 361; 3 W. R. 200. Post, col. 776.

Interest at 5*l.* per cent. is only exacted in cases of grave misconduct or fraud on the part of a trustee. Imperial Mercantile Credit Association v. Coleman, 42 L. J., Ch. 644; L. R. 6 H. L. 189; 29 L. T. 1; 21 W. R. 696.

A trustee of a charity estate, who has used the balances of the rents in carrying on his trade, will be charged with interest at 5 per cent., but not with annual rests. Att.-Gen. v. Solly, 2 Sim. 518.

When a trustee has employed trust funds for his own benefit he will be charged as of course with simple interest at 5 per cent. Burdick v. Garrick, 39 L. J., Ch. 369; L. R. 5 Ch. 233; 18 W. R. 387.

A trustee wilfully applying trust moneys to his own use is chargeable with interest at 5*l.* per cent.; but where, under the trusts of a doubtful will, the tenant for life, who was also a trustee, neglected to make proper investments, she was held chargeable with interest at 4*l.* per cent. only, and the decree was made without costs. Mousley v. Carr, 4 Beav. 49; 10 L. J., Ch. 260.

A tenant for life, having received 5 per cent. on an investment, which she knew to be and insisted was improper, was ordered to account for the excess beyond 4 per cent., for the benefit of the trust. Baynard v. Woolley, 20 Beav. 583.

Trustees, under a misrepresentation that the fund was invested in stock, charged with interest at 5*l.* per cent. upon the same principle as if they had sold out stock and used the money, viz., an option to the cestui que trust, to have the actual profit or 5 per cent. Bate v. Scales, 12 Ves. 402; 8 R. R. 345.

The testator directed his executors to lay out the residue of his estate in the purchase of lands or upon heritable or personal securities, at such rate of interest as they should think reasonable; the executors lent the fund to one of themselves on a bond, at 4 per cent., when 5 per cent. might have been made by heritable or government securities:—Held, liable to pay interest at 5 per cent. Forbes v. Ross, 2 Cox, 113.

Interest upon exchequer bills allowed, at 5 per cent. from the time of the sale, upon the ground that a claimant had a right to consider it as a debt from that time, and had elected so to consider it. Devaynes v. Noble, 1 Mer. 580 ; 15 R. R. 151.

D. claimed a fund as next of kin to J. D., who had sailed from England in 1814, and had never since been heard of. The fund came into the possession of a trustee in 1844, who retained it in his own hands, and refused to pay it over to D. without direct and positive proof of the death of J. D. :—Held, that the trustee must pay over the whole fund, together with interest at 5*l.* per cent. from the time when he ought to have invested it. Dobson v. Pattinson, 5 W. R. 771.

Interest at 5*l.* per cent. given against the trustees on a sum lost by breach of trust. Munch v. Cockerell, 5 Myl. & Cr. 179 ; 9 Sim. 339 ; 9 L. J., Ch. 153 ; 4 Jur. 140.

Where a defaulting trustee has misapplied trust money, the court will charge him with 5*l.* per cent. interest, unless it be shown that he has made more by the user of it. Berwick Corporation v. Murray, 26 L. J., Ch. 201 ; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 847 ; 5 W. R. 208—L. C.

Lands directed by a will to be sold, and the proceeds divided. The lands were not sold, but were divided, and the share of A. B. remained vested in the trustees, one of whom was her father. Subsequently this share was sold, and the money was not given, either to the cestui que trust, nor invested for her benefit, but was paid to the father. On a bill filed for the recovery of the money, the court held that both the trustees were liable, (although one of them signed the receipt for the sake of conformity only,) and refused to make any allowance to the father for maintenance : and decreed that the trustees should repay the amount of the purchase-money with interest at 5 per cent. English v. Willats, 1 L. J., Ch. 84.

A trustee, with power to invest the trust property in leasehold or chattel personal securities, or upon the personal security of any person, advanced, at the request of his cestuis que trust, some of the trust property to two ladies on the security of mortgages (with the usual covenants) of a leasehold house in which the ladies were living, and of the furniture in it. The trustee was also the lessor of the house. The mortgagors became insolvent, paid no rent, and no part of the principal or interest on the loan. The trustee, as lessor, determined the lease by entry, and then sold all his interest in the leasehold premises and the furniture ; but he thereby so mixed the trust property with his own that it was impossible to distinguish the one from the other, or to pronounce with certainty how much of the proceeds of the sale was his, and how much belonged to the cestuis que trust. The advance had been made at 5*l.* per cent. After some delay, the trustee replaced the principal money of the loan, but invested it against the wishes of his cestuis que trust in 3*l.* per cent. consols, the dividends on which, however, were paid to them : —Held, that the trustee was bound to make good to the trust estate the whole of the money advanced on the loan, with all interest due thereon at the rate of 5*l.* per cent. per annum, to be computed up to the date of the decree ; and that he must pay the costs of the suit. Cook v. Addison, 38 L. J., Ch. 322 ; L. R. 7 Eq. 466 ; 20 L. T. 212 ; 17 W. R. 480.

Trustees under a will decreed to pay interest at 5*l.* per cent. per annum, on balances mixed by them with their own moneys, and used in their own business, although the will authorised them to invest the residue on "good private securities." Westover v. Chapman, 1 Coll. C. C. 177.

A deceased trustee had invested money on mortgage at 5 per cent. on an insufficient security, and for some years, both before and after his decease, interest was paid at that rate to the cestui que trust ; but some years after his decease the payment of interest ceased :—Held, that his estate was chargeable with interest at the rate of 5 per cent. from the time of the last payment. Price v. Price, 42 L. T. 626.

c. Compound Interest and Rests.

When Compound Interest Charged.]—When a trustee has employed funds for his own benefit, he will be charged as of course with simple interest at 5*l.* per cent. But compound interest will only be given when the money has been used in trade, and the payment by a solicitor of it into his bank to the general account of his firm is not such an employment of the money in trade as to make him liable to be charged with compound interest. Burdick v. Garrick, 39 L. J., Ch. 369 ; L. R. 5 Ch. 233 ; 18 W. R. 387.

If trustees, for the purpose of their own trade, use trust moneys which, according to the directions of the will, they ought to have otherwise invested, in a decree against them directing an account, compound interest will be charged. Att.-Gen. v. Alford, infra, commented upon. Townend v. Townend, 1 Giff. 201 ; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 506 ; 7 W. R. 529.

An executor and trustee having for several years retained funds in his hands uninvested, which he ought to have invested :—Held, not to be chargeable with interest at 5 per cent., or upon the principle of annual rests, but with simple interest only at 4 per cent., there being no circumstances to lead to the conclusion that he had made any profits by his misconduct. Att.-Gen. v. Alford, 4 De G. M. & G. 843 ; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 361 ; 3 W. R. 200.

The principle applicable to charging executors and trustees with interest in such cases considered. Ib.

The court will only charge an executor or trustee with the interest which he has received, or which he ought to have received, or which it is fairly presumed that he did receive, and misconduct on the part of an executor or trustee will not, generally speaking, warrant such a presumption. Ib.

The trustee of a will held a fund upon trust (after the determination of a previous life interest) to transfer and pay the same to a child when and as he should attain twenty-one, with a proviso that in case the child should be under age at the determination of the life interest the income of the fund or any part thereof should or might be applied for or towards his maintenance, education, and advancement, and the surplus, if any, should accumulate to and become part of the fund. After the child attained twenty-one (the life interest having previously determined), the trustee retained the fund without making any arrangements with the child or explaining to him his rights :—Held, that the trustee must be taken to have continued to hold the fund after the child attained twenty-one, upon the same trusts and with the same obligations to accumulate as before, and that he was liable to account for the fund with compound interest. Wilson v. Peake (3 Jur. (N.S.) 155) distinguished; Amiss v. Hall, supra, col. 774, observed upon. Emmet's Estate, In re, Emmet v. Emmet, 50 L. J., Ch. 341; 17 Ch. D. 142; 44 L. T. 172; 29 W. R. 464.

Part of the fund had been invested at 5*l.* per cent. or other rates of interest upon authorised securities, and the rest of it had been either improperly invested or had not been kept separate from the trustee's own moneys:—Held, that as to so much of the fund as had been invested at 5*l.* per cent. or any other rate upon authorised securities, interest must be calculated at the rate actually yielded; that the rest of the fund must be treated as having been in the trustee's hands uninvested, and that under the circumstances he must be charged with interest thereon calculated at 4*l.* per cent. only. Ib.

—— With Rests.]—Where there is an express direction to accumulate trust property, and the accumulation is not made, the trustees are liable to account upon the footing of yearly or half-yearly rests. Feltham v. Turner, 23 L. T. 345.

Bequest of personal estate in trust, to invest it in government or real securities and to permit the interest to accumulate until it amounted to 500*l.*, and from time to time, when it amounted to that sum, to lay out or invest such interest in government or real securities, to be applied in the same manner as the principal; the trustees retaining the trust moneys in their business, an inquiry was directed what would have been the amount of the personal estate, and the interest thereof, if it had been invested and accumulated in the manner directed by the will, and the trustees were decreed to pay the amount, and were charged with interest at 5 per cent. on a balance in their hands. Brown v. Sansome, 1 M'Cle. & Y. 427.

A trustee of a charity estate, who has used the balances of the rents in carrying on his trade, will be charged with interest at 5 per cent., but not with annual rests. Att.-Gen. v. Solly, 2 Sim. 518.

The order to take an account with rests is always a matter entirely discretionary with the court, on a consideration of the circumstances. Court v. Robarts, 6 Cl. & F. 65—H. L. (Sc.)

Where A. held funds, part of the estate of B., but held them as security to cover liabilities into which he had entered on account of B., the estate itself being otherwise clearly answerable for such liabilities, and where the creditors of B. had not required him to invest the balance which might probably exist after his liabilities had been indemnified:—Held, that, in the absence of any positive stipulation, he was not, on the final settlement of accounts with the creditors, bound to pay a larger interest than 5 per cent. on the money he had so retained, and the account was not to be taken with rests. Under such circumstances, if the fund had been paid into court, it would have realised 4 per cent. with yearly or half-yearly rests, which being equal to 5 per cent. without rests, A. was held liable to that interest, on the equitable principle of putting the creditors into the same situation as if he had paid the fund into court in the ordinary manner. Ib.

As to interest on compensation moneys for minerals wrongfully taken. See Phillips v. Homfray, 59 L. J., Ch. 547; 44 Ch. D. 694; 62 L. T. 897; 39 W. R. 45.

A trustee of a marriage settlement, who allowed a sum of 350*l.* to remain in the hands of a trading firm for a period exceeding fifteen years after the death of the tenant for life, but who eventually, and before the bill was filed, paid the principal, with 5*l.* per cent. interest:—Held, liable to account with annual rests, and also to the costs of the suit. Jones v. Foxall, 15 Beav. 388; 21 L. J., Ch. 725.

An executor and trustee who was directed to invest in government stocks of Great Britain, or upon real security, and accumulate the surplus, after maintaining infants, invested the estate in the foreign funds:—It was held, that the investment was improper, and he was charged with four per cent., with annual rests. Knott v. Cottee, 16 Beav. 77; 16 Jur. 752.

Rule as to charging executors and trustees with interest on balances, and at what rate, and whether with annual rests. Ib.

In 1846 an executor invested part of the assets in exchequer bills; they were ordered into court, and sold in the same year, at a loss. In 1848 it was declared by the decree, that the investment was improper; but at that time the price of exchequer bills had risen, so that there would have been then no loss if they had been retained:—Held, that the executor ought to be charged with the amount improperly invested, and credited with the produce of the exchequer bills in 1846. Ib.

Costs of an administration suit given to an executor, though charged with the consequences of an improper investment. Ib.

d. Profits Accruing from Trust Property.

General Principles.]—Where trustees acquire a benefit as ostensible owners of trust property, that benefit cannot be retained by them, but must be surrendered to those who are beneficially interested. Aberdeen Town Council v. Aberdeen University, 2 App. Cas. 544—H. L. (Sc.)

The obligation to do an act with respect to property creates a trust; and if the party who is subject to the obligation acquires or retains, by means of his neglect of duty, a greater interest than he would otherwise have had, he becomes a trustee of such excess for the benefit of those who would have been entitled to it if the obligation had been duly fulfilled. Fleeming v. Howden, L. R. 1 H. L. Sc. App. 372.

The doctrine of trusts has the same origin, and rests on the same principles in Scotch and in English law, and it should be developed to the same extent in both systems of jurisprudence, Ib.

There is an obligation and trust created by 20 Geo. 2, c. 50, requiring that property bought with the proceeds of sales of superiorities shall be settled to the original uses; and this trust affects the heirs respectively succeeding to the purchased lands. Ib.

The rule of the court is imperative, that, in the absence of any contract for that purpose, no person can, by acting as trustee, derive any pecuniary benefit to himself. Crosskill v. Bower, Bower v. Turner, 32 Beav. 86; 1 N. R. 379; 32 L. J., Ch. 540; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 267; 8 L. T. 135; 11 W. R. 411.

Three trustees, two of whom were bankers, were empowered to carry on a business, and to borrow money from any bankers or other persons for that purpose. The bankers made advances of money to the trust at compound interest:—Held, that, having regard to their fiduciary character, they could make no profit, and were entitled to simple interest only on their advances. Ib.

Trustees cannot deal with trust fund for their own benefit; if stock is purchased with trust money, in whatever name it may stand, the profits belong to fund. Phayre v. Peree, 3 Dow, 128; 1 Bligh (N.S.) 594—H. L. (Ir.)

Both the trustee and the assignee are responsible to the cestui que trust for profits subsequent to an assignment in breach of trust. Vandebende v. Levingston, 3 Swanst. 625.

Profit derived by a trustee, either from the trust property or from his office of trustee, belongs to the cestui que trust. Sugden v. Crossland, 3 Sm. & G. 192; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 318; 4 W. R. 343.

It is no answer to the rule, that persons standing in the situation of trustees or agents must account to their cestuis que trust, or principals, for all benefit which they themselves obtain by virtue of that character, that in the course of acquiring the benefit which has been derived by the trustee or agent, he incurred a possibility of loss; it is sufficient, if the transaction has resulted in gain obtained by virtue of the trusteeship or agency, to give the benefit to the cestui que trust. Williams v. Stevens, 4 Moore, P. C. (N.S.) 235; 36 L. J., P. C. 21; L. R. 1 P. C. 352; 12 Jur. (N.S.) 952; 15 W. R. 409.

The general principle, that a trustee cannot make a profit for himself by the use of the trust property, applies to an agent intrusted with a ship or other chattel for the purpose of using it for the owner's benefit. Shallcross v. Oldham, 2 J. & H. 609; 5 L. T. 824; 10 W. R. 291.

Conflicting Interests—Benefit acquired by Trustees transferred to Trust Estate.]—A trustee will not be permitted to place himself in a position in which his personal interest will conflict with those of the trust; and if he does place himself in such a position, and acquires benefits from so doing, those benefits will be transferred to the trust estate. Bennett v. Gaslight & Coke Co., 52 L. J., Ch. 98; 48 L. T. 156.

On the insolvency of a person who had a lucrative agency agreement with a gas company for the sale by him, at a commission, of their sulphate of ammonia, the company renewed the agency agreement for a limited period to two of the trustees of the insolvent's estate appointed by the creditors' trust deed for the benefit of the estate. Before the expiration of that agreement and the winding up of the trust, one of those two trustees obtained for his firm from the company a fresh agency agreement, to commence from the expiration of that agreement, and to be on less lucrative, though still beneficial, terms:—Held, that the trustee was not at liberty, by obtaining a fresh agreement for the benefit of his own firm, to render it contrary to his own interest to press for a renewal of the old agreement, or a grant of a new one, for the benefit of the trust estate, and that the interest of the trustee under the fresh agreement must be transferred to the trust estate. Hamilton v. Wright, infra, followed. Ib.

It is a rule of universal application that no trustee shall be allowed to enter into engagements in which he has or can have a personal interest conflicting, or which may possibly conflict, with the interests of those whom he is bound by fiduciary duty to protect. So strictly is this principle adhered to, that no question is allowed to be raised as to the fairness or unfairness of the transaction; for it is enough that the parties interested object. Aberdeen Ry. v. Blaikie, 1 Macq. H. L. 461; 2 Eq. R. 1281.

It may be that the terms on which a trustee has attempted to deal with the trust estate are as good as could have been obtained from any other quarter, they may even be better, but so inflexible is the rule, that no inquiry into that matter is permitted. Ib.

It makes no difference whether the contract relates to real estate, or personalty, or mercantile transactions; the disability arising, not from the subject-matter of the contract, but from the fiduciary character of the contracting party. Ib.

The law of Scotland and the law of England are the same upon these points, both coming from the Roman law itself, bottomed in the plainest maxims of good sense and equity. Ib.

The rules which govern fiduciary relations are equitable rules, unknown to the courts of common law. Consequently, in a case properly determinable by these equitable rules, the decision of a court of common law, when opposed to them, must be disregarded. Ib.

—— Purchase of Annuity by Trustee of Deed for Benefit of Creditors.]—A trust was created by a debtor for the benefit of creditors, and the trustee had the power to bind the debtor personally and heritably for the benefit of the trust. By the terms of the trust deed, the trustee was likewise required to do all in his power to keep the residue of the trust estate as large as possible for the debtor. The trustee purchased an annuity granted by the debtor, after the date of the trust deed. The trustee died. His representatives sought to enforce the annuity against the grantor. It was held that they could not do so, and a decree of the court of session affirming their right, was reversed, a trustee being bound not to do anything which can place him in a position inconsistent with the interests of the trust. Hamilton v. Wright, 9 Cl. & F. 111—H. L. (Sc.)

Colliery Worked by Trustee.—A. bequeathed a leasehold interest in a colliery to B. and C. upon certain trusts, and appointed B., C., and D. his son, executors. B. and C. renounced the trust and did not prove. D. proved the will and entered into possession of the property. He made a profit of the colliery and continued to work it at a profit, although it ought to have been sold twelve months after the death of A:—Held, that he could not make a profit of his trust; and the clear proceeds of the colliery formed part of A.'s personal estate; and that, although the lease of the colliery ought to have been sold twelve months after the death of A., yet as that was not done, its value would not be ascertained as at the time when it ought to have been realised, but that the amount actually realised by D. must be accounted for by him, he being allowed his reasonable expenses. Lord v. Wightwick, 23 L. J., Ch. 235; 2 Eq. R. 349; 18 Jur. 253—L.JJ.

Private Debt of Trustee to be Retained by Purchaser out of Purchase Money.]—A trustee entered into a contract for the sale of trust property, and it was agreed that the purchaser should, out of the purchase money, retain a private debt due to him from the trustee. On a bill by the trustee:—Held, that this court would not decree the specific performance of such a contract. Thompson v. Blackstone, 6 Beav. 470.

Presentation to Church Preferment with Secret Condition for Benefit of Trustee.]—Where executor or trustee, entrusted with disposition of some church preferments, made a presentation to A., under a secret condition for his own benefit, the presentation was set aside, and he was decreed to present a more proper person. Richardson v. Chapman, 7 Bro. P. C. 317.

South Sea Stock Purchased instead of Land.]—A sum of 10,000*l.* trust money was agreed to be laid out in land and settled, but the trustees bought South Sea stock with the money, which increased to 30,000*l.* As the trust would have suffered by the fall, so shall it have the benefit of the rise of this stock. Anon., 1 P. Wms. 648.

Employment of Trust Funds in Trade.]—Where trustees lend or use trust money in trade, they are chargeable not only with the money and interest, but with the profits made in the trade, the interest generally being 5 per cent. Robinson v. Robinson, 1 De G. M. & G. 247; 21 L. J., Ch. 111; 16 Jur. 225.

The plaintiff was tenant for life under the settlement executed on her marriage, part of the settled property consisting of a sum of 15,500*l.* This sum was allowed to remain in the hands of the plaintiff's father, who employed it in trade, he covenanting at his death to pay it to the trustees. Upon the death of the father, 10,000*l.*, part of the 15,500*l.*, was allowed to remain in the business, such investment being unauthorised by the settlement. Large profits accrued to the 10,000*l.*, some of which, with the plaintiff's consent, had been paid to her husband:—Held, that the plaintiff was entitled in respect of income to 4 per cent. on the original 10,000*l.*, and upon all accretions of profits retained and employed in the business, and that the rest of the profits must be regarded as capital subject to the trust of the settlement, and must be made good out of the husband's estate, so far as he had received any part thereof. Hill, In re, Hill v. Hill, 50 L. J., Ch. 551; 45 L. T. 126.

—— Funds Lent to Traders.]—When trust funds are, without authority, lent to traders, with notice of the trust, and employed in their business, such traders are not liable to account to the cestui que trust for a share of the profits of the business. Stroud v. Gwyer, 28 Beav. 130; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 719; 2 L. T. 400.

Where executors were empowered to lend such parts of the trusts funds as they should think proper to one of the cestuis que trust, and did so, and he employed the loan in trade:—Held, that the case was to be considered as if he were a stranger, and that he was not liable to account to the estate for the profits of the loan in trade. Parker v. Bloxham, 20 Beav. 295.

A trustee who was a solicitor, sold out stock forming part of the trust estate and invested it on mortgage. He acted in the transaction as solicitor for the mortgagor as well as for the trust estate, but made no charge against the trust estate for his services, being paid for them by the mortgagor. He also derived some profit as solicitor in consequence of the employment of part of the mortgaged estate for building purposes:—Held, that the plaintiff could not charge him with the profit thus made, as having been made by the employment of the trust estate in his business. Whitney v. Smith, L. R. 4 Ch. 513; 20 L. T. 468; 17 W. R. 579.

—— Sale of Testator's Share in Partnership Trade to be Resold to one Executor.]—Sale of a testator's share in a partnership trade, and the property belonging to it, by his executors to his partners for the purpose of being re-sold to one of his executors, set aside, and his estate held entitled to his aliquot proportion of the subsequent profits, as if the partnership had continued. Interest allowed at 5 per cent. on sums paid out of his estate. Cook v. Collingridge, Jacob, 607; 1 L. J. (O.S.) Ch. 74; 23 R. R. 155, 767.

—— Business Purchased by Executor at a Valuation.]—A testator gave all his real and personal property, including a business, to his executors on trust to sell and pay the income to his wife for life, and after her death to the plaintiff, but with full discretion to his executors to postpone the sale of his estate. And he directed that until the sale the net income should be applied in the same way as the income of the proceeds of the sale was to be applied. Shortly after the death of the testator one of the executors purchased the business at a valuation:—Held, that the sale must be set aside, and that the executor must account for the profits made since the sale without salary, but with just allowances: and that the amount of the profits must be treated as capital, and that the widow was only entitled to the income of it. Norrington, In re, Brindley v. Partridge, 13 Ch. D. 654; 28 W. R. 711.

On an appeal the case was compromised, and the purchase was confirmed: but the court expressed an opinion that if the sale had been set aside the widow would have been entitled to the profits as income. Ib.

Election of Cestui que Trust as to Interest or Profits.]—Where a trustee has an infant's money to lay out for his benefit, and employs it in his trade, the court will give an option for the benefit of the infant either to have interest or the profits of the trade. Anon, 2 Ves. Sen. 630.

If a trustee mixes trust funds with his private moneys, and employs both in a trade, an adventure of his own, the cestui que trust may, if he prefers it, insist upon having a proportionate share of the profits, instead of interest on the amount of the trust funds so employed. Docker v. Somes, 2 Myl. & K. 655; 3 L. J., Ch. 200.

Where trust property is employed in trade without authority, the cestuis que trust elect to take either the profits for the whole period, or interest for the whole period. Circumstances may arise to entitle them to take profits for one and interest for another part of the period; but a notice of dissolution of partnership, published for a particular purpose, and not accompanied by a settlement of accounts or a transfer of the property is not sufficient. Heathcote v. Hulme, 1 J. & W. 122; 20 R. R. 248.

Difficulties of enforcing a cestui que trust's right (however clear) to participate in profits of trade, carried on in part with trust fund. Wedderburn v. Wedderburn, 4 Myl. & Cr. 41; 8 L. J., Ch. 177; 3 Jur. 596. Affirming 2 Keen, 722. And see S. C., 22 Beav. 84.

Trustees, under a misrepresentation that the fund was invested in stock, charged with interest at 5 per cent. upon the same principle as if they had sold out stock and used the money, viz., an option to the cestui que trust to have the actual profit or 5 per cent. Bate v. Scales, 12 Ves. 402; 8 R. R. 345.

Though the employment of a trust fund in trade by a firm is technically a breach of trust, yet if the amount of profit attributable to capital alone is not ascertainable, and the trustees acted bonâ fide and accounted to the cestui que trust for the value of her share with five per cent. compound interest, the court would not call upon them for an account of the profits, so as to enable her to exercise an option between the profits and the compound interest. Vyse v. Foster, 42 L. J., Ch. 245; L. R. 8 Ch. 309; 27 L. T. 774; 21 W. R. 207. Affirmed 44 L. J., Ch. 37; L. R. 7 H. L. 318; 31 L. T. 177; 23 W. R. 355.

The trustees of a mixed fund of realty and personalty laid out 1,600*l*., part of the personalty, upon the erection of a house on the real estate, for the bonâ fide purpose of increasing the value of the whole as building land:—Held, that the trustees should not be entirely disallowed the sum so expended, but if the cestui que trust desired it, they should be ordered to take the house themselves at the price of 1,600*l*., and the value of the site as unbuilt upon. Ib.

Lease by Tenant for Life to Trustee at Inadequate Rent.]—A testator, being possessed of a term of years, bequeathed it to five trustees in trust to pay an annuity to his wife for her life, and subject thereto in trust to pay certain sums yearly for the maintenance of his grandson A. T. until he should attain the age of twenty-one, and then in trust to permit A. T. to take the profits for his life, and after his decease to permit such person who for the time being would take by descent as heir male of the body of the said A. T. to take the profits thereof until some such person should attain the age of twenty-one, and then to convey the same unto such person so attaining the age of twenty-one years, his executors, etc., remainder over. A. T., in consideration of faithful services, demised part of the premises to E. K., one of the trustees under the will, who was also his agent, for sixty-one years, at an inadequate rent:—Held, that E. K. being a trustee in the will, was not at liberty to take from the tenant for life a greater interest than he was authorised to grant under the leasing power, and that in thus obtaining this beneficial lease he was guilty of a breach of trust, and that the lease consequently could not be sustained. Kerr or Ker v. Dungannon (Lord), 1 Con. & L. 335; 1 Dr. & War. 509; 4 Ir. Eq. R. 343.

Member of Corporation Selling Railway Debentures.]—The corporation of the city of Toronto, in Canada, was authorised by an act of the Legislature of Canada to issue debentures to assist in the construction of a railway. At that period B. was the mayor and a member of the finance committee, and took an active part in passing a bye-law, which authorised the issue by the corporation of debentures for the completion of the railway. B. at that time was engaged in co-partnership with H., and their firm purchased of the contractors for the railway company some of the debentures so issued which had been assigned to the contractors by the corporation. B. and his partner afterwards sold the debentures, and thereby realised a large profit. This transaction was without the knowledge of the corporation:—Held, that B. must, in the circumstances of his being a member of the corporation, and the manner in which he acted throughout the transaction, be treated as the trustee of the corporation, and was not entitled to any benefit received from the sale of the debentures, and was liable to account to the corporation for the ascertained and unquestioned amount of profit made and received by him in the transaction in which he had engaged in respect of the sale of the corporation debentures. Bowes v. Toronto City, 11 Moore, P. C. 463.

Held, also, that it made no difference that the profits from the sale of the debentures was made by B. and his partner jointly, and not by B. alone. Ib.

Assignment of Claim against Trustees in respect of Profits.]—Tenant for life of a trust estate mortgaged it, and it was sold by the mortgagee. After the sale, the purchaser and mortgagee, for a nominal consideration, assigned to the tenant for life certain alleged arrears of interest and profits of part of the trust fund, which, as the plaintiff alleged, the trustees had made in excess of the interest for which they had accounted. A bill filed against the trustees, on the title conferred by this assignment, for an account of their profits was dismissed with costs. Hill v. Boyle, L. R. 4 Eq. 260.

Purchase by Trustee of Debt due by Cestui que Trust.]—E. C. assigned a legacy to A. B. upon trust to pay a debt due to him; but before the execution of the deed, L., another creditor of E. C., assigned his debt to A. B. for a sum considerably less than its amount. The debtor and creditors were parties to this transaction. Under a decree made in the cause the chief clerk certified that A. B. was entitled to the full amount of the debt assigned by L.; and on motion to vary the certificate, on the ground that A. B. was, when he purchased the debt, acting as trustee for E. C., and was therefore only entitled to the amount actually paid, it was held that A. B. was entitled to the full amount of the debt. Crompton v. Huber, 1 Jur. (N.S.) 465; 3 W. R. 347.

Secret Recipe for Medicine Communicated to One Child.]—The sole possessor of a recipe for making a medicine assigned it, on the marriage of his daughter, to trustees, in trust for her and her husband, for their lives; and directed that after their decease it should be sold for the benefit of their children. The mother destroyed the recipe, and verbally communicated the contents to her eldest son, for the benefit of his brothers and sisters. Upon a bill filed against him by some of the younger children, he was declared to hold the secret upon the trusts of the settlement, and was decreed to account for the profits since his mother's death; and, as a sale was impracticable, an issue was directed to ascertain the value of the secret. Green v. Folgham, 1 Sim. & S. 398. S. C., nom. Green v. Church, 1 L. J. (O.S.) Ch. 203.

Trust for Benefit of Legatees—Rents received after Death of Testator and before Sale of Realty.]—A testator who died in January, 1887, by his will dated in August 1879, gave his real estate at C. and his residuary real estate to his nephew, "he also paying thereout the following legacies: that is to say, the legacy or sum of 1,000*l*.

to my trustees to be held by them upon the trusts hereinafter declared concerning the same," and certain other legacies. The testator directed that such legacies should be paid at the end of six months after the death of his sister, and he directed his trustees to stand possessed of the 1,000*l.* thereinbefore directed to be paid to them and " charged on my C. estate," upon certain trusts. The question was, whether the testator's nephew was liable to account for the occupation rent of so much of the testator's real estate at C. as was in his possession or occupation at the testator's decease for the period between that date and the completion of the sale of that estate by the direction of the court, and with any profits made by him in respect of the crops and other produce of the estate during such period :—Held, that he was not a trustee of the legacies for the legatees, but that the same were merely charged on the C. estate ; and that that being so, he was not liable to account for the back rents and profits thereof. Oliver, In re, Newbald v. Beckitt, 62 L. T. 533.

Set-off between Profit and Loss on various Investments.]—When trust funds are invested on several improper securities, the trustees, in accounting, are not entitled to set-off the gain on one against the loss on the other. Robinson v. Robinson, 11 Beav. 371 ; 18 L. J., Ch. 73 ; 12 Jur. 969. On appeal on other points, 1 De G. M. & G. 247 ; 21 L. J., Ch. 111 ; 16 Jur. 255.

A testator gave the residue of his personal estate to trustees, directing them to convert it into money, and invest the proceeds in government or real security, of which they were to stand possessed, upon trust for A., during her life, and after her death for B. The trustees permitted a share, which the testator had in an Indian loan, bearing interest at 10*l.*, per cent., to remain for several years on that security, during which time they paid to A. the interest at 10*l.* per cent. which it yielded annually ; and the loan being afterwards paid off, they invested the money in 3 per cents. at a time when the funds were so low, that the amount of stock purchased was considerably greater than if the conversion had taken place at the end of a year from the testator's death : —Held, that the tenant for life was not entitled to the actual interest which the money yielded, while it remained on the Indian security ; but only to the dividends of so much 3 per cent. stock as would have been purchased with it, at the end of a year from the testator's death ; that the trustees ought to be charged with the whole of the stock actually purchased, and all the sums actually received in respect of the Indian rate of interest, and that they ought to be allowed in their discharge as payments for the tenant for life, not the sums which they had in fact paid her, but only a sum equal to what she would have received for dividends if the money had been transferred from the Indian security, and invested in the 3 per cent. stock at the end of a year from the testator's death. Dimes v. Scott, 4 Russ. 195 ; 28 R. R. 46.

Trustee of an infant having saved 3,000*l.* out of the profits of his estate, lays it out in a purchase of lands lying near the infant's estate, with the consent of his grandmother, declaring the trust for the benefit of the infant, if he, when at age, shall agree to it ; infant dies within age ; the trustee shall account to the infant's executors for the 3,000*l.*, but the profits of the land set off against the interest. Winchelsea v. Norcliffe, 1 Vern. 435.

As to Profits by Persons in a Fiduciary Relationship.] — See COMPANY, FRAUD, INFANT, LUNATIC, MORTGAGE, PRINCIPAL AND AGENT, VENDOR AND PURCHASER.

viii. Title Deeds.

Custody — Mortgage of Building Estate—Solicitor.]—It is the duty of trustees to keep trust deeds under their own control ; but to this obligation there must be reasonable limits, and where the deeds have to be frequently referred to—e.g. for the purpose of realising the trust estate—it is proper for them to be in the custody of the solicitor to the trustees. Field v. Field, 63 L. J., Ch. 233 ; [1894] 1 Ch. 425 ; 8 R. 201 ; 69 L. T. 826 ; 42 W. R. 346.

—— Bonds to Bearer.]—Semble, trustees must deposit bonds and certificates payable to bearer in some place where possession of them cannot be obtained without the consent of the whole body of the trustees. Ib.

—— Railway Debentures.] — Negligence cannot be imputed to trustees for leaving documents of title in the hands of one of their number, and allowing him to receive the income, and no authority to deal with the property can be implied even in favour of a bonâ fide purchaser from such trustee. Cottam v. Eastern Counties Ry., 1 J. & H. 243 ; 30 L. J., Ch. 217 ; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 1367 ; 3 L. T. 465 ; 9 W. R. 94.

Trust money was invested in railway debentures, payable to three trustees. The debentures were left in the hands of A., one of the trustees, who was also allowed to receive the interest. A. forged the signatures of his co-trustees to a deed, purporting to be a transfer from the three, and delivered the debentures with the transfer to the purchasers, who paid full value to A., and had no notice of the forgery. They delivered the transfer to the railway company, who made an entry of it in their books, and the subsequent interest was paid by the company to the purchasers. On a bill filed by the other trustees after A. had been convicted of forgery : —Held, that the defence of purchaser for value without notice did not apply, and the debentures were ordered to be delivered up to the plaintiffs, and the transfer and entry thereof in the company's books cancelled. Ib.

Non-Registration of Trust Deed.]—A trustee may, under special circumstances, be held reponsible for the non-registration of the deed creating the trust. Macnamara v. Carey, Ir. R. 1 Eq. 9 ; 15 W. R. 374.

—— Bond.] — A testator died in 1810, in India, having bequeathed his English property to two infants, whom he acknowledged as his natural children ; and having appointed his nephew, E., to be their guardian. Part of his property consisted of a bond, dated in 1810, in which he was obligee, the obligor being seised of real estate in Ireland. In 1811 E. obtained possession of the bond from the testator's executor ; but he did not register it, nor did he ever take any steps towards realising the security. In 1821, the elder of the infants attained twenty-one; in 1832, she married; and in 1833, when the bond had become irrevocable, E., for the first time, informed the elder child and her husband of the existence of the bond; and upon finding it was then too late to register it, he handed it to the husband, directing him to see to it. No step was taken until E.'s death in 1870, after which, in 1871, a bill was filed, seeking to make E.'s estate liable as for a breach of trust. At this time the younger infant was dead, and had no legal personal representative; but his son, who was entitled to administer, was made a defendant. Semble, that E. was not at any time liable for any breach of trust. Sleeman v. Wilson, L. R. 13 Eq. 36; 25 L. T. 408; 20 W. R. 109.

Negligence of Trustee in not Ascertaining Nature of his Title.]—A trustee, who had no actual knowledge of his right to real property, suffered an adverse title to be acquired by lapse of time. A bill to make him accountable was dismissed. Youde v. Cloud, 44 L. J., Ch. 93; L. R. 18 Eq. 634; 22 W. R. 764.

—— Chirograph of a Fine.]—The chirograph of a fine relating to the title having come to the trustee's hands, without the deed leading the uses, such dismissal was without costs. Ib.

—— No Negligence—Trustee not Party to Bill for Restitution of Deed.]—Where there is no imputation of breach of trust in trustee suffering deed to get out of his possession, he need not be party to bill for its restitution. Knye v. Moore, 1 Sim. & S. 61; 1 L. J. (O.S.) Ch. 18.

c. Liability of Trustees for Acts of Co-Trustees.

i. In General.

Statute.]—Trustee Act, 1893, s. 24.

Relation between Co-Trustees.]—The relation between co-trustees in regard to the trust funds in their charge cannot be considered as that of creditor and debtor. Taylor, Ex parte, Goldsmid, In re, 56 L. J., Q. B. 195; 18 Q. B. D. 295; 35 W. R. 148—C. A.

Improper and Improvident Investment—Excuse—Acting Reasonably.]—If a trustee, relying on his co-trustee, who manages the trust fund and is solicitor to the trust estate, allows him to advance the trust funds upon an improper and improvident security, he does not act "reasonably," and therefore will not be excused under s. 3 of the Judicial Trustees Act, 1896, for the breach of trust. Turner, In re, Barker v. Ivimey, 66 L. J., Ch. 282; [1897] 1 Ch. 536; 76 L. T. 116; 45 W. R. 495.

Modes in which Trustees may become Liable.]—There are three modes in which a trustee may become liable, according to the ordinary rules of the court; first, where one trustee receives trust money, and hands it over to a co-trustee without securing its due application; secondly, where he permits a co-trustee to receive trust money without making due inquiry as to his dealing with it; thirdly, where he becomes aware of a breach of trust, either committed or meditated, and abstains from taking the necessary steps to obtain restitution. Wilkins v. Hogg, 3 Giff. 116; 31 L. J., Ch. 41; 8 Jur. (N.S.) 25; 5 L. T. 467; 10 W. R. 47.

A man cannot take upon himself the character of trustee, and act partially as such, or deny his liability to replace trust property if, through his negligence or want of attention, a sum of money which he has told his cestuis que trust, or induced them to believe has been retained and invested by him, has, in fact, been squandered by his co-trustees. Horton v. Brocklehurst, 29 Beav. 504.

A., one of two trustees, rendered accounts in the name of the two, which stated that one-third of the income had been retained and invested, but, in fact, no such investment had been made, and A. alone had received and misapplied these moneys, which were lost by his bankruptcy. The other trustee, however, having at a meeting of the cestuis que trust so acted as to sanction and adopt the accounts:—Held, liable for A.'s default. Ib.

Knowledge of Misapplication.]—One trustee knowing and concealing his co-trustee's having sold out the trust fund, equally liable with the trustee who actually sold. Boardman v. Mosman, 1 Bro. C. C. 68.

A trustee who stands by and sees a breach of trust committed by his co-trustee becomes responsible for that breach of trust. Booth v. Booth, 1 Beav. 125; 8 L. J., Ch. 39; 2 Jur. 938.

A testator bequeathed to his partner and to B. his personal estate, upon trust to invest the same for the benefit of his wife and children. Both the executors proved the will, and the surviving partner retained the testator's moneys in the trade, which were lost. B. took no active part in the trusts, but was cognisant of the breach of trust, and took no proceedings to prevent it:—Held, that B. was responsible for the consequences of the breach of trust. Ib.

Where some of the members of a firm are trustees of funds which they misapply, by making use of them for partnership purposes: if such misapplication be with the knowledge of the other members of the firm, the cestuis que trust may prove against the joint estate. Heaton, Ex parte, Buck, 386.

A marriage settlement empowered the two trustees to vary the investment of the trust funds, "with the consent in writing of the husband and wife." Part of the trust funds consisted of 1,000*l.*, which was paid in cash to the two trustees, who, in breach of trust, invested it in ordinary railway shares. Thereby a loss was sustained; and the trustees, in further breach of trust, transferred these shares to the N. bank, to secure the private debt of the husband, the tenant for life. Subsequently O., one of the trustees (without the knowledge of his co-trustee), procured an assignment (for a nominal consideration) of those shares to two persons, who became trustees thereof for the R. bank, which had made to the husband large advances, the full amount of which was secured by the guarantee of O. A week after this assignment, the amount of the husband's debt to the N. bank was paid by a cheque on the R. bank, which, before the transfer of the shares was lodged with it, cashed that cheque out of the original credit given to the husband. These shares were sold, without the other trustee's knowledge, for 592*l.* 10*s.*, which sum was applied in reducing the debt due by the husband to the R. bank. O. obtained from the husband mortgages of the hotel, furniture, &c., to an amount which covered the whole sum guaranteed by him to the R. bank:—Held, that O. was, as between him and his co-trustee, primarily bound to replace the 592*l.* 10*s.* Costello v. O'Rorke, Ir. R. 3 Eq. 172.

Participation in Breach of Trust.]—K. & S., being trustees of money in the funds, sell it for the benefit of S., who dies insolvent, and K. becomes bankrupt. The persons interested in the funds may prove against the estate of K. the value of the funds at the bankruptcy, though S.'s estate be first liable. Shakeshaft, Ex parte, 3 Bro. C. C. 197.

One of three trustees who was alleged to have participated in a breach of trust, clearly committed by the others, being also executor of a cestui que trust:—Held, that a legatee of the cestui que trust was entitled to maintain a bill against the three trustees to recover the funds lost by the breach of trust. Sandford v. Jodrell, 2 Sm. & G. 176.

Agreement by Trustees to be Liable for One Another.]—If trustees will bind themselves to be liable for the acts of each other, the court will not relieve them, especially in the case of a composition of debts. Leigh v. Barry, 3 Atk. 583.

In the case of trustees, though there are not negative words in a deed that they shall not be liable for the acts of one another, yet the court will not make them so for more than each has received. Id. 584.

Debtors appointed Trustees—Neglect to get in Debts.]—On a marriage, two of the wife's debtors, one of them the bankrupt, were appointed trustees of a fund, to be made up of their several debts:—Held, that the debts not being got in and invested, each trustee was liable only for his own default. Woodward, Ex parte, Turner, In re, 3 Mont. & Ayr. 232; 2 Deac. 401; 6 L. J., Bk. 60; 1 Jur. 385.

Concurrence in Sale of Stock.]—If an executor or trustee, without taking due means to learn from his co-executor or co-trustee, whether it is necessary, in the due execution of the trust, to sell stock, concurs in the sale of stock, and leaves it in the disposition of his co-executors or co-trustees, he is liable for the stock so sold. Harrington v. Harrington, 1 L. J. (o.s.) Ch. 41.

ii. Leaving Trust Funds under Sole Control of Co-Trustee.

General Rule.]—When one of two trustees allows the trust fund to be under the sole control of the other, both trustees are liable to make good to the trust estate any money misapplied. Rodbard v. Cooke, 36 L. T. 504; 25 W. R. 555.

L. appointed G. C. and I. A. C. executors and trustees of his will. They kept at their bankers' an account relating to the estate, separately from their own. Cheques were drawn against that account with the knowledge of G. C., but signed by I. A. C. alone. In 1867 a sum of 4,000*l.* was received by I. A. C. on account of the estate, and handed by him to accountants through whose hands all money transactions relating to the trust passed, and paid by them into the bank to the account of the trust estate. Shortly after a sum of 3,645*l.* 2*s.* 7*d.* was drawn out by cheques signed by I. A. C. alone. Of that amount a sum of 628*l.* was applied by I. A. C. to his own use, without the knowledge of G. C. I. A. C. had since died:—Held, that G. C. having allowed the fund to be under the sole control of I. A. C., the estates of I. A. C. and G. C. were jointly and severally liable to make good the loss of the estate. Ib.

Bonds passing by Delivery—Defalcation.]—Each of two trustees retained possession of a moiety of bonds held in trust, and which passed by delivery, and one trustee committed a breach of trust:—Held, that the other trustee was liable to make good the loss sustained. Lewis v. Nobbs, 47 L. J., Ch. 662; 8 Ch. D. 591.

Proceeds of Sale received by One Trustee for Payment of Debts.]—A testatrix gave her personal estate to A. and B. subject to debts and legacies upon certain trusts, and she appointed A. alone executor. A fund over which the testatrix had a power was transferred into the names of A. and B. A., the executor, representing that a considerable part of the fund was wanting to pay debts and legacies, induced B. to join in selling out the fund, promising to give a mortgage security for what might not be wanted for debts, &c. A. received the whole, but applied a very considerable sum in payment of debts, &c.:—Held, that B. was liable to replace so much of the stock as had not been applied in payment of debts, &c., and to account for the dividends. Hewitt v. Foster, 6 Beav. 259; 7 Jur. 228.

A trustee, having placed the trust fund under the sole control of his co-trustee, without any sufficient reason, was:—Held, to have committed a breach of trust, and if the money should be lost by such co-trustee's bankruptcy is liable to make it good. Broadhurst v. Balguy, 1 Y. & C. C. C. 17.

—— For Re-Investment.]—Early in 1818, a cestui que trust, with power of directing the variation of the trust securities, requested B., who was one of his trustees, to sell out trust stock then standing in the 5 per cents. and invest it in the 3 per cents. In April of the same year, the trustees, B. and H., sold out the stock by power of attorney, and soon afterwards H., at the request of B., joined in a cheque on the bankers who acted in the sale, requesting them to pay the amount to themselves or bearer. In the letter of B. requesting H. to sign the cheque, he stated, as a reason for expedition, that the money was to be paid on Thursday to the gentleman to whom it was engaged. B. afterwards applied the money to his own use. On a bill filed in 1838, by the cestui que trust, to compel H. to replace the money:—Held, that H. was primâ facie liable; for that neither of the trustees contemplated an investment pursuant to the direction of the plaintiff; and even if H. had so contemplated, the course taken by him was not required by necessity or convenience. Id.

Two trustees having properly sold out trust money, one of them handed the cheque for the proceeds to the other, who misapplied it:—Held, that they were both liable. Trutch v. Lamprell, 20 Beav. 116.

It is a contradiction in terms to say, that a trustee who acts is not an active trustee, and a defence by a trustee that he only acted for conformity's sake is unavailing. Ib.

Two trustees, having power to alter and vary a trust fund, sold it out for that purpose, but allowed the produce to be received by one alone :—Held, that the other who failed to show that the fund was properly invested, was bound to pay the amount into court, Wiglesworth v. Wiglesworth, 16 Beav. 269.

Trustees of stock signed a power of attorney to sell it out, and the proceeds were received from the broker by one of the trustees, who afterwards became insolvent :—Decree, that the other trustees account for and pay the amount. Marriott v. Kinnersley, Tam. 470 ; 31 R. R. 109.

—— For Payment to Cestui que Trust.]—Where a trust fund standing in the name of two trustees had been sold out, and the money had been received by one of them, who was to pay it to the cestuis que trust, but failed to do so and afterwards became insolvent, and the money was lost :—Held, that the other trustee was not exonerated from personal liability to make good the fund, on the ground that all the acts which he had done were required for convenience or conformity. Curtis v. Mason, 12 L. J., Ch. 442.

—— No Inquiry by Co-trustee as to Proceeds.]—An appointment of new trustees recited that certain stock and shares had been transferred into the names of the new trustees, and that by an indenture of even date a mortgage debt and the premises subject thereto had been assigned and conveyed to the new trustees ; the trust property having been sold and the proceeds received by one of the trustees and lost, the court on the hearing decided that the co-trustee, not having inquired what had been done with the proceeds, was liable for all sums actually received by him, jointly with his co-trustee, and which had been lost, and referred it to the chief clerk to find what had been jointly received. The chief clerk by his certificate found that all the trust property had been jointly received :—Held, that the chief clerk had rightly found by his certificate. Hale v. Adams, 21 W. R. 400.

Omission to call in Money authorised to be Lent to Co-Trustee on his Personal Security.]—Under a trust to lend trust money to one of the trustees on his personal security until the trustees should deem it advantageous to invest the money in the funds :—Held, that the omission to call in the money, which had been accordingly lent to the trustee, and its consequent loss did not, in the absence of any proof of misconduct on the part of his co-trustee, create any liability on the part of such co-trustee. Paddon v. Richardson, 7 De G. M. & G. 563 ; 3 Eq. R. 933 ; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 1192.

Held, also, that as payment of the debt was only enforceable in equity, and the cestui que trust might have enforced it himself, this circumstance was an answer to a suit by him seeking to render the co-trustee personally liable. Ib.

Letting Co-Trustee have Trust Money on Note of Hand.]—One trustee suffering the other to have trust money under a note of hand, held liable. Keble v. Thompson, 3 Bro. C. C. 112.

Trustees of Charity acting in Rotation.]—A., B., C., and D. were co-trustees of a charity, under a will, which directed that one trustee in rotation should be acting trustee for the current year, and keep the accounts. A., being the acting trustee in a particular year, applied some of the funds to his own use, without the knowledge of the other trustees. A. was succeeded by, and delivered his accounts to, B., who delivered his accounts in like manner to C., the next acting trustee. The court held that D. was not liable for the breach of trust committed by A. Att.-Gen. v. Holland, 2 Y. & C. 683 ; 7 L. J., Ex. Eq. 51.

Assignees for Creditors.]—An order of dividend found that a certain balance was in the hands of one of the assignees, and directed that assignee to divide the same among the creditors :—Held, that the other assignee, having never interfered with the control and application of the trust fund, was not liable to the creditors for the payment of the dividends. Dawson, Ex parte, 4 Deac. & C. 130 ; 2 Mont. & Ayr. 94 ; 4 L. J., Bk. 42.

Executors permitting Proceeds of Sale to remain in Hands of Co-Executor—No Explanation to Cestuis que Trust of their Rights.]—A., by his will, gave the residue of his property to three trustees, whom he appointed executors, upon trust to sell and invest the same and to pay the income thereof to his widow for life, and after her decease, to his children, who were all infants at the time of his death. The eldest child attained twenty-one in 1839, and the youngest in 1846. The three executors proved the will, but one of them almost exclusively acted. The money which was the proceeds of the estate was suffered by two of the executors to remain in the hands of the third, who ultimately became insolvent. On the youngest child attaining twenty-one, he, on behalf of himself and his brothers and sisters, attempted to obtain payment from the acting executor, and in 1848 wrote to him a letter consenting to receive payment of the amount then admitted to be due by annual instalments. In 1849, and shortly before the insolvency of the acting trustee, a bill was filed by all the children against the three trustees for the purpose of making them each responsible :—Held, that inasmuch as as it was the duty of the three trustees to have explained to their cestuis que trust what their rights were, and as they had not done so, there was nothing in the conduct of the children to deprive them of their remedy against the three trustees, who were accordingly declared to be jointly and severally liable to make good the deficiency. Burrows v. Walls, 5 De G. M. & G. 233 ; 3 Eq. R. 960 ; 3 W. R. 327.

Execution of Power of Attorney at Request of Co-Trustee and with Consent of Husband and Wife for Sale of Stock.]—On a marriage a sum of stock was settled for the separate use of the wife for life, remainder to the husband for life, remainder for their children, with power to change securities with consent of the wife. The dividends on the stock being reduced, one of the trustees, in whom the husband and wife principally confided, and who, with his partners, was their solicitor, informed his co-trustees that he had an opportunity of investing the property in a mortgage at 5 per cent., and, with the consent of the husband and wife, requested his co-trustees to execute a power of attorney to enable him to sell the stock. The co-trustees, without inquiring into the matter, complied ; the trustee sold the stock and absconded :—Held, that the co-trustees were liable. Hanbury v. Kirkland, 3 Sim. 265 ; 30 R. R. 165.

Release for Trust Money Executed by Both Trustees—Money Received by One.]—Two trustees executed a release for trust money, but one alone obtained possession of it, and he invested it on improper security:—Held, that the other was liable, for it was his duty to see that it was properly invested. Thompson v. Finch, 22 Beav. 316; 25 L. J., Ch. 681.

Fraud by one Trustee—Securities passing by Delivery in Box at Bankers.]—A box containing securities of the Spanish Government, the property in which passed by delivery, was deposited at a bank in the names of three trustees. The Spanish Government having afterwards made proposals for a change in the securities, one of the three trustees, who was a stockbroker, was allowed to take the securities out of the box for the purpose of such conversion. He effected the conversion, but appropriated a part of the converted securities to his own use, and placed the rest in the box, which he returned to the bank. The fraud was not discovered for several years. The trustee kept the key of the box, being allowed to have access to the box for the purpose of from time to time tearing off coupons and obtaining the dividends, and from time to time took out others of the securities, which he converted to his own use, until at last the box was empty:—Held, that the co-trustees were liable for the first breach of trust, it being their duty after the conversion to see that the securities were all deposited in the box, but that they were not liable in respect of the subsequent misappropriation. Mendes v. Guedalla, 2 J. & H. 259; 31 L. J., Ch. 561; 8 Jur. (N.S.) 878; 6 L. T. 746; 10 W. R. 482.

Trustees are not liable to the cestuis que trust for money belonging to the trust which their co-trustee gets into his possession without their consent or knowledge, and by a fraud upon them. Barnard v. Bagshaw, 3 De G. J. & S. 355; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 220; 7 L. T. 544.

—— Cross Cheque—Crossing Struck out by One Trustee.]—If joint trustees draw a cheque for the trust moneys upon the bankers in whose hands such moneys are, and cross that cheque with the name of certain other bankers, and having so crossed it deliver it to one of their number for the purpose of paying it into the bank of the bankers with whose name the cheque is crossed, the co-trustees are not liable for the misapplication of the money by the trustee to whom the cheque is delivered, if he strikes out the crossing from the cheque, and then receives and misapplies the money. Ib.

Assignment of Slaves upon Trust to Sell and Invest Proceeds—Incorrect Admission by Trustees that Proceeds were Invested—Lapse of Time and Acquiescence.]—Slaves in the West Indies were bequeathed to executors, upon trusts for a niece of the testator for her life with remainder to her children. The executors having renounced and disclaimed, administration with the will annexed was granted to the niece, who afterwards married a minor. Before her husband had attained twenty-one the husband and wife executed a settlement, reciting that the husband was, in right of the wife, possessed of the slaves, theretofore the property of her late uncle; but not in any manner referring to the will. The settlement purported to assign the slaves to trustees, in trust to sell and invest the proceeds and pay the income for the separate use of the wife for life, without power of anticipation, with trusts by way of remainder to the children of the marriage. Before the husband came of age, the husband and wife sold the slaves without noticing the settlement in the contract, but paid part of the purchase money to one of the trustees of the settlement, the other trustees not concurring in or being in fact aware of the sale or payment. An amicable bill was then filed on behalf of the infant children of the marriage, to have the trusts of the settlement carried into execution, or a new settlement made in conformity with an offer of the husband to execute such settlement on receiving 3,500*l.* out of the wife's fortune. This bill contained an allegation that the proceeds of the slaves had been invested in the names of the trustees. The trustees by their answer admitted the truth of the allegation. The husband and wife, answering separately, disputed the validity of the settlement, and stated that the wife was not intended to be bound by it; but the husband offered to execute a settlement on the above terms. The decree declared the settlement void, and directed a new settlement to be made upon the footing of the husband's offer. A settlement was accordingly executed and the 3,500*l.* paid to the husband. Afterwards it was discovered that the admission in the trustees' answer was incorrect, the trustee who received the proceeds of the slaves having applied the money to his own use, and having by false statements induced his co-trustees to believe, and upon their answer admit, that the investment in their names and his had been made as there stated. His circumstances were such that any attempt to recover the amount at any period would have been hopeless. More than twenty years after the wife was aware of these circumstances she instituted a suit against the co-trustees to make them personally liable for the breach of trust:—Held, first, that the above facts, independently of the admission of the co-trustees in their answer, did not render them personally liable in respect of the proceeds of the sale of the slaves, the title of the settlors not having been such as to enable the trustees legally to possess themselves of the fund: and, secondly, that in the circumstances of the case that admission did not create any such liability. Derbishire v. Home, 3 De G. M. & G. 80.

Semble, that a clause restraining a married woman from anticipation does not exempt her from the ordinary consequences of lapse of time and acquiescence; also, that in the circumstances above stated, the administratrix committed a breach of trust by marrying without providing for the security of the trust property; also, that having by her separate answer in the first suit stated that the first settlement was not intended to be binding upon her, she could not afterwards sue the trustees for non-performance of the trusts of it: also, that her having concealed from them the nature of her title when she assumed to settle the funds, would of itself have been a defence to such a suit. Ib.

Appointment of Co-Trustee Factor of Scotch Estates.]—The trustees of estates in Scotland appointed one of themselves to be factor, with a salary; and he, though of undoubted responsibility at that time, afterwards retained large balances at the annual settlements of accounts;

whereon one of the trustees, who was cashier, urged him to pay up; but the balances against him increasing, both trustees, after failing in their exertions to obtain payment, revoked his appointment as factor, and he became bankrupt, owing a large debt to the trust estate:—Held, by the lords (affirming decrees of the court of session in Scotland, in an action raised by the first heir of entail, to whom the trustees were bound to account for their management), first, that the appointment of one of the trustees to be factor, even though it gave him no right to charge as factor, was not of itself such a breach of trust as subjected the other trustees to all the consequences of it; secondly, that there was not such gross negligence, in the two trustees permitting the factor to retain balances, as to subject them to liability for the ultimate balance due from him to the trust estate, the lord chancellor observing, as to the first point, that the rule was the same in Scotland as in England. Home v. Pringle, 8 Cl. & F. 264.

iii. Trustee joining in Receipts.

When Liable—Receiving Money.]—Each trustee shall be charged no more than he actually receives. Otherwise, if the trustees join in receipts. Spalding v. Shamler, 1 Vern. 303.

Trustees joining in receipt are not chargeable unless they also rece ve the money. Chambers v. Minchin, 7 Ves. 198; 6 R. R. 111.

And see Churchill v. Hobson, 1 P. Wms. 241; Salk. 318.

Two trustees in a mortgage join in an assignment of the term, and in a receipt for the whole, each receiving a moiety only of the mortgage money, are to be answerable only for what they respectively receive. Fellows v. Mitchell, 1 P. Wms. 81; 2 Vern. 504, 515.

A trustee joining in a receipt and reconveyance of a mortgaged estate, though he does not receive the money, is liable, and, the receipt being in evidence, no inquiry can be directed as to the fact. Scurfield v. Howes, 3 Bro. C. C. 90.

—— Joining for Conformity.] — One of three trustees for sale was also the solicitor employed in the matter, and he alone received the purchase money, and neglected to apply it. The conveyance was executed, and the receipt signed by all three trustees:—Held, that the solicitor was not the agent of the other trustees, so as to make the receipt by him the receipt of all; and the other trustees having joined merely for the sake of conformity, were not chargeable. Fryer's Estate, In re, Martindale v. Picquot, 3 K. & J. 317; 26 L. J., Ch. 398; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 485; 5 W. R. 552.

Co-trustee held liable for acts of other, though he merely joined in receipt for conformity's sake, and never meddled in trust beyond that. Bradwell v. Catchpole, cited 3 Swanst. 78; 19 R. R. 180. S. P., Westley v. Clarke, Dick. 330.

A trustee charged, though he did not receive the money, under the circumstances, having joined in the receipt; the sale unnecessary; and permitting his co-trustee to keep and act with the money contrary to the trust; not charged in the respect of the interest of one of the cestuis que trust having notice of the breach of trust, and acquiescing. Brice v. Stokes, 11 Ves. 319; 8 R. R. 164. And see Griffiths v. Porter, 25 Beav. 236; and English v. Willats, 1 L. J., Ch. 84.

12. Agents Employed by Trustees.

a. Rights of Trustees in respect of Appointment.

Direction to Employ Particular Person.]—A direction that a particular individual shall be employed as the agent in the management of the testator's estates, where the trustees may have occasion for such a party, does not create a trust which he can enforce. Finden v. Stephens, 2 Ph. 142; C. P. Cooper, 318; 17 L. J., Ch. 342; 11 Jur. 1019; 12 id. 319.

A testator expressed a "wish and desire that F., in whose judgment and integrity he placed great confidence," should be appointed agent, receiver, &c., by his trustees for all purposes for which they might have occasion for an agent, &c.:—Held, that F. could not compel the trustees to appoint him agent, &c. Ib.

—— Receiver and Manager.]—A. S., being seised in fee of certain lands, devised the same to W. S. for life, with remainders over, and expressed it to be his particular desire, that his executors, whilst acting in the management of his affairs, and W. S. when he should enter into the receipt and management of the rents, should continue B. E. L. in the receipt and management thereof, and should likewise employ and retain him in the receipt, agency, and management of the rents of such other lands as should be purchased in pursuance of the directions of his will, at the usual fees allowed to agents:—Held, not a trust for B. E. L., and that the devisees were not bound to retain him as agent at the usual fees. Shaw v. Lawless, 5 Cl. & F. 129; 1 Dr. & Wal. 512; Ll. & G. t. Plunk. 558—H. L. (Ir.)

Testator directs "that A. be appointed receiver of his real and personal estate," and dies seised of no real estate, except an estate in the West Indies, having by his will directed a sum of money to be invested in the purchase of lands in England. A. appointed manager of the West India estate, upon entering into a personal recognisance to account for the produce. Hibbert v. Hibbert, 3 Mer. 681; 17 R. R. 169, —— Auditor.] — A testator devised and bequeathed real and personal estate, which produced a considerable annual income, to trustees, on certain trusts, which would necessarily continue during several years; and he appointed A. auditor of his real estate during the continuance of the trusts, and directed his trustees to pay to A. a proper annual remuneration, with power to the trustees, in case of A. refusing or becoming unable to act as auditor, to appoint another auditor; and he directed the trustees to submit their accounts to the auditor once in every year. A bill was filed by the auditor to have the benefit of this appointment:—Held, that A., being able and willing to perform the duties of auditor, and not having been guilty of any misconduct, could not be removed by the trustees; and a reference was ordered to the master to fix the amount of his remuneration. Williams v. Corbet, 8 Sim. 349; 6 L. J., Ch. 182.

—— Solicitor.]—A direction in a will appointing a particular person solicitor to the trust estate, imposes no trust or duty on the trustees of the will to continue such person as their solicitor in the management and affairs of the estate. Foster v. Elsley, 51 L. J., Ch. 275; 19 Ch. D. 518; 30 W. R. 596.

—— Right to Dismiss Agent.]—A codicil contained the following clause:—"I appoint C. my agent at a salary of 140*l.* a year and to be paid by quarterly payments, to live in my house called the Henblas, with the garden belonging to it, for which salary he must do my business and the business of my executors and trustees, and not be employed in the service of any other person or persons; and to live rent free as long as he continues to be my agent, that is, as long as he does my business honestly and to the satisfaction of my executors and trustees or any one of them." Pursuant to the powers of the will, trustees were appointed, and B., one of them, appointed H., an attorney, to act in all matters relating to the will and codicil. H. directed A. to make an inspection of certain real estate for which C. was agent. C. refused to assist in making the inspection, and refused to deliver up the documents relating to the estate. He was thereupon dismissed from the agency by H., pursuant to the express authority of B. An action of ejectment was brought to recover possession of Henblas:—Held, that even if C. had an estate for life in Henblas, it was defeasible upon the trustees being dissatisfied with his conduct; and that, even if the court had power to inquire whether the trustees were acting reasonably, he had misconducted himself, and the trustees had good grounds for their dissatisfaction. Belaney v. Kelly, 24 L. T. 738; 19 W. R. 1171.

Trustees may dismiss an agent for misconduct committed by him anterior to his own appointment. Ib.

Power to Appoint Attorney in English Colony or Abroad.]—Semble, that a trustee resident in England, appointed under an English will, can by the English law appoint an attorney to act in matters of discretion connected with a trust in an English colony or a foreign country. Stuart v. Norton, 14 Moore, P. C. 17; 3 L. T. 602; 9 W. R. 320.

b. Liability of Trustees for Acts of Agents.

Statute.]—Trustee Act, 1893, s. 24.

General Rule.]—A trustee may select solicitors and agents; and so long as he selects persons properly qualified, he cannot be made responsible for their intelligence or their honesty; but he cannot entrust them with any duties which they may be willing to undertake, or pay them any remuneration which they may demand; and he is bound to exercise his discretion in the matter. Weall, In re, Andrews v. Weall, 58 L. J., Ch. 713; 42 Ch. D. 674; 61 L. T. 238; 37 W. R. 779.

Ordinary Scope of Business.]—The rule that trustees, acting according to the ordinary course of business, and employing agents as prudent men of business would do on their own behalf, are not liable for the default of the agent so employed, is subject to the limitation that the agent must not be employed out of the ordinary scope of his business. Fry v. Tapson, 54 L. J., Ch. 224; 28 Ch. D. 568; 51 L. T. 326; 33 W. R. 113.

As to losses by agents of trustees, see Litchfield, In re, 1 Atk. 87. Belcher, Ex parte, and Parsons, Ex parte, Amb. 218; 1 Ken. 38.

Though the appointment by trustees of a co-trustee as factor of estates would not make them liable for his defaults, by making him their agent they would be liable for his defaults, the same as of any other agent. The principle is the same in Scotland as in England. Home v. Pringle, 8 Cl. & F. 264—H. L. (Sc.)

A., B., C., D., and E. (the two latter being married women) take out administration to an intestate, and afterwards appoint C. to be the acting administrator, and direct the creditors to pay their debts to him. C. becomes insolvent:—Held, that A., B., and C., and the husbands of D. and E., are responsible for C.'s receipts. Lees v. Sanderson, 4 Sim. 28.

It being the duty of A., under the trusts of a settlement, to remit a sum of 1,000*l.* from India to B., C., and D., in England, he permitted it to remain in the hands of private traders, in whose hands it was lost:—Held, that A. was responsible for it, though it had been properly invested by those parties, and been sold out at the request of the cestuis que trust, and the loss was occasioned by their subsequent bankruptcy, and the bankruptcy of their correspondents in London, on whom they had drawn bills for the amount. Bacon v. Clark, 3 Myl. & Cr. 294.

The trustees of a legacy which had been invested in stock, authorise the sale of the stock, and permit B. to receive the proceeds; B. retains the money in his hands, and, during many years, the legatee, who was not aware that the legacy had ever been invested in stock, or that stock, in which it once was vested, had been sold, deals with B., as the only person accountable to her for the money; notwithstanding these dealings on the part of the legatee, the trustees continue to be accountable for the stock. Adams v. Clifton, 1 Russ. 297; 25 R. R. 53.

The half-yearly rents on several occasions were duly and properly received by the solicitor and agent of the trustees, and the balances were by him remitted to the tenant for life; but on a subsequent occasion the tenant for life allowed the balance to remain in the hands of the agent until it became known that he was in embarrassed circumstances:—Held, that the trustees were not responsible for the loss of this balance, it not being the result of negligence on their part, but on the part of the legatee, the tenant for life. Horn v. Coleman, 26 L. J., Ch. 213; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 1127; 5 W. R. 32.

Agent Employed to Collect Money—Onus probandi.]—A common order having been made for the administration of a testator's estate, the district registrar by his certificate found the outstanding personal estate to consist in part of book debts amounting nominally to 291*l.*, as to 113*l.*, part of which he certified that it represented a portion of book debts which the executors had employed H. to collect, and for which H. had not accounted, and had claimed to deduct 55*l.* for remuneration, but that 25*l.* was enough. The certificate went on to say that H. had gone into liquidation, and that no part of the 113*l.* was likely to be recovered. No application was made to vary this certificate. It appeared that H. had collected in all 168*l.*, had paid to the executors in April, May, and June, 1880, sums amounting in all to 55*l.*, and had gone on collecting without making any further payment to the executors till July, 1881, when a receiver was appointed in the action, but it did not appear when he became insolvent, nor at what times the moneys received came to his hands:—Held, that where an executor or trustee employs an agent to collect money under circumstances which make such employment proper, and the money collected is lost by the agent's insolvency, the burden of proof is not on the executor to show that the loss was not attributable to his own default, but on the persons seeking to charge him to prove that it was. Brier, In re, Brier v. Evison, 26 Ch. D. 238; 51 L. T. 133—C. A.

Trust Property Stolen by Trustee's Servant—Liability where Trustee Remunerated.]—A trustee, when remunerated for his services, is not liable to the trust estate for loss caused by the thefts of a servant employed by him, where such employment is necessary and the trustee has exercised due care in the selection of the servant:—Semble, the fact that a trustee is remunerated for his services does not add to his liability as trustee. Jobson v. Palmer, 62 L. J., Ch. 180; [1893] 1 Ch. 71; 3 R. 173; 67 L. T. 797; 41 W. R. 264.

ii. Bankers.

Money Left in Hands of Bankers—Failure of Bank.]—Trustees and executors who, for upwards of a year after their testator's death, allowed a considerable portion of the assets to be unproductive in the hands of a banker, who failed, were, under the circumstances, charged with the loss. Moyle v. Moyle, 2 Russ. & M. 710.

Trustee incautiously leaving trust fund in banker's hands without security, held liable for loss on banker's failure. Anon., Lofft, 492.

If trustee pays rents to a banker, in credit, who fails, the trustee is not liable. Belchier, Ex parte, Parsons, Ex parte, Amb. 219; 1 Ken. 38.

Trustees having contracted to purchase land, sell out stock, and deposit the produce at a banker's, when the purchase seems to be near completion. They are not liable to make good the money if the bankers fail. France v. Woods, Tam. 172; 31 R. R. 75.

A trustee of certain estates received the proceeds and paid them into a bank, where they were left for many years. A suit was instituted, and a receiver appointed of the rents and interest. The bank having failed, it was held that the cestuis que trust, who were infants, must not be prejudiced by the neglect of the trustee to place the fund in safety, and that the trustee was liable to refund the money lost. Drever v. Mawdesley, 16 Sim. 511; 18 L. J., Ch. 273; 13 Jur. 330.

—— Deposit Account.]—Trustees made personally liable for loss arising from placing trust money with bankers on a deposit account, which was not authorised by the will, and that, notwithstanding a trustee indemnity clause against losses by a banker of money, deposited for safe custody. Rehden v. Wesley, 29 Beav. 213.

—— On Notes carrying Interest.]—A testator died in March, 1823. In January, 1824, and January, 1825, the executors and trustees deposited part of the assets in the hands of bankers, on their notes carrying interest. The bankers failed in November, 1825, and, no necessity having been shown for such deposit, the trustees were held personally responsible for the loss. Darke or Drake v. Martyn, 1 Beav. 525.

—— Order to Invest in Consols.]—Trustee depositing a trust fund with his bankers, accompanied by an order in writing to invest the money in consols, answerable for the omission of the bankers to make the investment, where he made no subsequent inquiry respecting it until about five months afterwards, when the bankers became bankrupt. Challen v. Shippam, 4 Hare, 555.

—— On Declaration of Trust.]—G., being entitled to a share of an estate, went abroad, leaving a power of attorney to receive such share. The estate was sold, but the purchaser requiring his confirmation, his share was deposited in the names of E. and P. in a bank on a declaration of trust. On the confirmation arriving, E. was repeatedly applied to for more than four months, but neglected to hand the fund over, alleging a difficulty in making out the account; the bank failed, and the money was lost:—Held, that E. was liable to restore the money with interest and pay the costs, P. being always ready to hand over. Goff v. Etty, 20 L. T. 358.

Agreement by Receiver with Sureties for Payment of Rents into Bank in their Names.]—A receiver in order to obtain sureties, enters into an agreement with them that A., the partner of one of the sureties, shall attend upon the receipt of the rents of the estates, and that they shall be paid into a bank at L., in the name of the sureties: and that all moneys to be applied for the purposes of the receivership shall be drawn for by checks prepared and written by A., and signed by the receiver. This agreement having been acted upon, the bank at L. failed, and a loss was sustained. The account was then transferred to another bank, under the same agreement, when another loss ensued by failure of the bankers:—Held, upon petition, that the receiver was responsible for the amount of losses, &c. White v. Baugh, 9 Bligh (N.S.) 181; 3 Cl. & F. 44.

Moneys Left in Hands of Bankers in India.]—Trustee, allowing moneys appropriated by him for a particular purpose to remain in the hands of bankers in India, after he had quitted that country, the bankers becoming insolvent before the moneys were paid over by them:—Held, liable for the loss. Brown v. Clark, 1 Jur. 838.

Trust Money to Separate Account of Trustee—Change of Trustee.]—A trustee was ordered to pay the balance of moneys in his hands belonging to his testator's estate to new trustees, and was discharged from his trusteeship. He kept the trust money in his name at a bank, but to a separate account, for some time after the costs had been taxed and the balance ascertained. The bank shortly afterwards failed:—Held, that he was personally liable to make good the loss which had accrued to the trust estate by reason of the failure of the bank. Lunham v. Blundell, 27 L. J., Ch. 179; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 3; 6 W. R. 49.

Trustee not charged with a loss by failure of the banker to the agent; in whose hands the money was deposited pending a transaction for the change of a trustee. Adams v. Claxton, 6 Ves. 226 ; 5 R. R. 263.

Trust Money to General Account of Agent.]—Preparatory to the final winding up of a trust, the agent and solicitor of the trustee paid the trust money to his bankers, to the credit of his general account with them, and informed the cestui que trust that the money was lying idle at his bankers. The cestui que trust took no notice of the information, and more than a month afterwards the bankers failed :—Held, that as the agent did not inform the cestui que trust that the money had been paid to the credit of his general account, and as the payment to the bankers was not necessary to the winding up of the trust, the agent and the trustee were jointly liable for the money. Macdonnell v. Harding, 7 Sim. 178 ; 4 L. J., Ch. 10.

Account brought into Chambers of Moneys in Bank.]—Trustees included in their account brought into chambers certain sums which they had received, and which stood in their names in a bank. They were ordered to pay the amount found due into court, and ultimately did so partly out of subsequent receipts, leaving the sum in question still in the bank. On the failure of the bank :—Held, that the trustees were liable for the loss of the sums included in the amount passed, but not for sums subsequently paid in. Wilkinson v. Bewick, 4 Jur. (N.S.) 1010 ; 6 W. R. 849.

Payment by Administratrix to Separate Account.]—An administratrix, plaintiff in a suit for administration of the estate, received the purchase money of property sold under a contract directed by the decree of the court to be carried into effect. The decree also directed sales of mortgaged property, and that the mortgagees should be paid out of the produce of the sales ; it gave no direction about the purchase money of the property sold by the administratrix. With the advice of the solicitors of the principal, but not all, of the beneficiaries, she paid the money into a private bank to a separate account, and left it there for many months. The administratrix applied by petition, and thereon obtained money out of court to pay off the mortgagees while she had the purchase money lying at the bankers. The bank failed : —Held, that she was not liable for a breach of trust. Wilks v. Groom, 3 Drew. 584 ; 25 L. J., Ch. 724 ; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 681 ; 4 W. R. 697.

iii. Brokers.

Employment of Broker by Assignee of Bankrupt.]—Assignee of bankrupt employs a broker to sell a quantity of tobacco. The broker receives the money, and at the end of ten days fails, before he paid it over. The assignee not bound to make it good. Belchier, Ex parte, Parsons, Ex parte, Amb. 218.

Stockbroker.]—A trustee investing trust funds is justified in employing a broker to procure securities authorised by the trust and in paying the purchase-money to the broker, if he follows the usual and regular course of business adopted by ordinary prudent men in making such investments. Speight v. Gaunt, 53 L. J., Ch. 419 ; 9 App. Cas. 1 ; 50 L. T. 330 ; 32 W. R. 435 ; 48 J. P. 84—H. L. (E.)

A broker employed by a trustee to buy securities of municipal corporations authorised by the trust, gave the trustee a bought-note which purported to be subject to the rules of the London stock exchange and obtained the purchase money from the trustee upon the representation that it was payable the next day, which was the next account day on the London exchange. The broker never procured the securities but appropriated the money to his own use and finally became insolvent. Some of the securities were procurable only from the corporations direct and were not bought and sold in the market, and there was evidence that the form of the bought-note would have suggested to some experts that the loans were to be direct to the corporations ; but there was nothing calculated to excite suspicion in the mind of the trustee or of an ordinary prudent man of business ; and such payment to a broker was in accordance with the usual course of business in purchases on the London exchange :—Held (Lord FitzGerald doubting), that the trustee was not liable to the cestuis que trust for the loss of the trust funds. Ib.

Semble, by the Earl of Selborne, L.C., that if the broker had represented to the trustee that the contracts were with the corporations for loans direct to them from the trustee he would not have been justified in paying the money to the broker, for which in such a case there would have been no moral necessity or sufficient practical reason. Ib.

A trustee must, in order to escape liability for a loss of the trust property, show that in connection with the transaction in which the loss occurred he acted not only in the ordinary mode of business, but also in the mode in which a prudent man of business would act in such a transaction. Bullock v. Bullock, 56 L. J., Ch. 221 ; 55 L. T. 703.

B., one of the trustees of a marriage settlement, was employed by his acting co-trustee to make a change of investment of part of the trust property ; but although he sent to his acting co-trustee contract-notes for the new investments, the latter were never completed, and the moneys were misappropriated by a third party. B.'s co-trustees made no inquiries at all for the securities to which the contract-notes related for over eighteen months, and made no efficient inquiries until three years after the transaction had taken place ; and when the loss was discovered B. had shortly before become bankrupt, having up to within a few months of that time been in good credit :—Held, that B.'s co-trustees were liable for the loss, having been guilty of negligence in not prosecuting early inquiries, which would have resulted in information upon which they might have recovered the trust moneys from B. Speight v. Gaunt, supra, distinguished. Ib.

iv. Solicitors.

Employing incompetent Solicitor.]—Trustees are bound to employ competent solicitors and agents ; and therefore, where trustees lent trust funds upon mortgage and their solicitor accepted without inquiry an abstract and a valuation made for the purpose of a previous mortgage, and it afterwards turned out that the solicitor for the mortgagor had concealed the fact that since the date of the mortgage and valuation two other mortgages had been effected, and loss resulted to the trust estate in consequence :—Held, that the trustees were liable to make good the loss to their cestuis que trust. Hopgood v. Parkin, L. R. 11 Eq. 74; 22 L. T. 772; 18 W. R. 908.

Fraud of Solicitor.]—A trustee will be liable to make good to the trust estate a loss which has been occasioned by the fraud and forgery of the solicitor whom he employed, although in employing such solicitor he may have exercised ordinary care and discretion. Bostock v. Floyer, 35 Beav. 603; 35 L. J., Ch. 23; L. R. 1 Eq. 26; 11 Jur. (N.S.) 962; 13 L. T. 489; 14 W. R. 120.

Upon the occasion of the investment of a trust fund on mortgage, the trustee employed the same solicitor as the mortgagor. Subsequently he had reason to suspect the sufficiency of the security, but took no steps to inquire into the matter. It afterwards turned out that the solicitor had practised a fraud on the trustee, and that the security was insufficient:—Held, that the trustee was liable for the loss occasioned to the trust estate. Sutton v. Wilders, L. R. 12 Eq. 373; 25 L. T. 292; 19 W. R. 1021.

Money allowed to remain in Solicitor's Hands.]—Trustees are not justified in allowing trust money to get into the hands of a solicitor, or in allowing him to hold the securities upon which the trust fund is invested; and the law is the same where the estate is being administered by the court. Dewar, In re, Dewar v. Brooke, 54 L. J., Ch. 830; 52 L. T. 489; 33 W. R. 497.

Trustees of an estate which was being administered by the court employed a solicitor to manage the trust estate, and allowed him to receive the trust moneys for the purpose of investment. The solicitor represented that he had duly made investments, and he rendered periodical accounts to the trustees purporting to show such investments, and paid the interest upon them. He had, in fact, never made any investments, but had misappropriated the money, and ultimately he filed a liquidation petition, and a part of the trust fund was thus lost:—Held, that the trustees were liable to make good the loss to the trust estate. Ib.

Trustees of stock sold it out, and committed the proceeds to their solicitor for investment, by whom it was misapplied, and lost:—Held, that the trustees were liable for a breach of trust, and that the cestuis que trust were entitled to relief against both the trustees and the solicitor, and that they might sue either the trustees alone or the trustees jointly with the solicitor. Rowland v. Witherden, 3 Mac. & G. 568; 21 L. J., Ch. 480.

Payment by Solicitor into Bank which subsequently failed.]—Preparatory to the final winding up of a trust, the agent and solicitor of the trustee paid the trust money to his bankers, to the credit of his general account with them, and informed the cestui que trust that the money was lying idle at his bankers. The cestui que trust took no notice of the information; and, more than a month afterwards the bankers failed:—Held, that, as the agent did not inform the cestui que trust that the money had been paid to the credit of his general account, and as the payment to the bankers was not necessary to the winding up of the trust, the agent and the trustee were jointly liable for the money. Macdonnell v. Harding, 7 Sim. 178; 4 L. J., Ch. 10.

Liability of Assignee of Bankrupt, although no Proof or Allegation of Fraud or Negligence.]—Assignee of a bankrupt, employing an attorney to sue for and recover debts due to the estate, is answerable for his receipts, and if he misapplies the money must make it good, although no proof or allegation of fraud or negligence. But there are two modes by which the assignee may relieve himself from this responsibility; by obtaining the assent of the creditors, or by having the approval of the master in respect to the person appointed agent. Account passed by the commissioners, ordered to be reviewed before a master. Townsend, Ex parte, 1 Moll. 139.

Delivery of Executed Deed to Solicitor.]—A., one of two trustees and executors of a will, and resident in London, authorised a person to get in three mortgages (part of the estate). The solicitor forwarded the deeds of conveyance to B., the other trustee, in the country, who executed and returned them. The solicitor received the money and paid it to A. alone, who misapplied it:—Held, that B. was liable for the amount. Cowell v. Gatcombe, 27 Beav. 568.

Where trustees for sale executed the conveyance, and placed the same, with the receipt indorsed, in the hands of a solicitor, who misapplied the purchase money, and became bankrupt:—Held, that the trustees were liable for a breach of trust. Ghost v. Waller, 9 Beav. 497.

A trustee to uses, with power of sale, which uses, in the event, became executed in A. for an absolute estate in fee, was held not liable to A. for the purchase money of part of the estates, where the sale was conducted and the money received by the solicitor of the trustee, although the evidence was conflicting, whether he acted in the matter by the direction of the trustee, or by the direction of A., the conveyance being executed by A. alone. Waugh v. Wyche, 2 Drew. 318; 23 L. J., Ch. 833; 2 W. R. 485.

A trustee of the legal estate in a mortgage in trust for A. absolutely, executed a reconveyance, and signed a receipt for the mortgage money, and handed it to one of A.'s executors, who was also his own solicitor, and who afterwards misapplied the money:—Held, that the money having got into the hands of the executor, the trustee was not liable. Ib.

Payment by Solicitor of Trust Funds to one Trustee only.]—A sum of 3,000*l.* was vested in A. and B. on certain trusts. The cestui que trust mortgaged it to C. for 1,200*l.*, and C. transferred the mortgage to E. and F. on family trusts, with power to E. and F. to give receipts. The solicitor of A. and B., having notice of the secondary trusts, paid the 1,200*l.* to F. alone:—Held, that A. and B. were personally liable to repay the money, with interest and costs. Hall v. Franck, 11 Beav. 519; 18 L. J., Ch. 362; 13 Jur. 222.

Dividend received by Solicitor of Trustee—Interest.]—An administratrix, who had permitted her solicitor to receive dividends of a fund set apart for an infant next of kin, was ordered to account for the dividends, with interest at the rate of 3*l.* per cent. with half-yearly rests. Gilroy v. Stephens, 51 L. J., Ch. 834; 46 L. T. 761; 30 W. R. 745.

c. Personal Liability of Agents.

i. In General.

General Principle as to Profits.]—Nothing can be better settled, or more in conformity with the dictates of justice, than the rule, that persons standing in the situation of trustees or of agents must account to their principals or cestuis que trust for all the benefits which they themselves obtain by virtue of that character or relation. Williams v. Stevens, 4 Moore, P. C. (N.S.) 235; 36 L. J., P. C. 21; L. R. 1 P. C. 352; 12 Jur. (N.S.) 952; 15 W. R. 409.

Co-Partners.]—A., a partner in a house of agency in India, died, having by his will directed his estate to be called in, and invested on certain trusts, and appointed two of his co-partners his executors; they, however, suffered his share of the partnership to remain in the house. After A.'s death, B. and C. were admitted as partners, and they knew that A.'s share was in the house, and that it was subject to the trusts of his will. They afterwards retired, and other partners were admitted. The house ultimately failed:—Held, that B. and C. were not responsible for the breach of trust committed by their co-partners, the executors. Twyford v. Trail, 7 Sim. 92.

Mere Agent of Trustee.]—A mere agent of the trustee may not be accountable to the cestui que trust, but otherwise with respect to a substituted trustee, who accounts to nobody else. Myler v. Fitzpatrick, 6 Madd. 360; 23 R. R. 247.

A trustee empowered S. to manage a trust estate. S. accounted to him. The trustee died, yet S. was decreed to account again to the cestui que trust. Pollard v. Downes, 2 Ca. Ch. 121.

A trustee, without any authority from the cestuis que trust, agreed with his agent that the latter should pay him 100*l.* a year from the trust property, and retain the residue (130*l.*) for himself. No fraud was proved against the agent (who denied any knowledge of the trust), but no explanation was given. In a suit for an account by a cestui que trust after the trustee's death:—Held, that, notwithstanding the general rule that a trustee's agent is accountable to the trustee only, an inquiry should be had of the circumstances attending the agent's appointment and his knowledge of the trusts affecting the property. Archer v. Lavender, Ir. R. 9 Eq. 220.

—— Assisting at Breach of Trust.] — An agent assisting in a breach of trust is personally responsible. Att.-Gen. v. Leicester Corporation, 7 Beav. 176.

Officers of a Corporation.]—A bill will lie against directors, committeemen, and other officers of a corporation, for relief against a breach of trust, fraud, and mismanagement; for they are agents to those who entrust them to superintend the affairs of the company, and a gross non-attendance makes them guilty of the breaches of trust in others. So a supine negligence, by which a great loss arises, makes them all equally guilty in the second degree, and liable; for they must not neglect to exercise the powers vested in them, to prevent the ill consequences arising from a confederacy. Charitable Corporation v. Sutton, 2 Atk. 405; 9 Mod. 349.

Clerk to Paving Trust.]—If trustees under a paving act sign cheques drawn by the clerk of the person who is clerk of the trust, those cheques being drawn so as to be alterable from small sums to larger, the trustees cannot charge the clerk to the trust with negligence if they are altered, it being their duty not to sign cheques drawn in such a manner; nor can they charge him with his clerk's misconduct, which would have been prevented had the trustees done their duty in the way in which the clerk to the trust had fair reason to expect they would. Whitmore v. Wilks, 3 Car. & P. 364.

Agent of Administrator.] — Agent of an administrator keeping money of the intestate's in his hands which he had proposed to his principal to lay out in the funds, ordered to pay interest with annual rests. Brown v. Southouse, 3 Bro. C. C. 107.

Disclaiming and Renouncing Trustee and Executor Acting as Agent.]—If one of two persons named trustees and executors disclaims and renounces and afterwards possesses himself of assets as the agent of the other, who has accepted the trust and proved the will, he does not thereby become accountable as a trustee and executor, and ought not to be made a party to a suit for the administration of the estate. Dove v. Everard, 1 Russ. & M. 231; Tam. 376.

Persons Acting under Power of Attorney.]—The commercial correspondents of executors, acting under a power of attorney:—Held, to be responsible to the testator's estate for the amount of the produce of stock, part of such estate, sold by them and applied by the direction of the executors in payment of a balance due from the latter, as partners in a commercial concern, to their correspondents, with full knowledge on the part of the correspondents, that the stock was part of the testator's assets. Wilson v. Moore, 1 Myl. & K. 127.

There is no primary liability in respect of breaches of trust, all parties to a breach of trust being equally liable; and it is no objection to a suit brought by parties seeking relief against a breach of trust, that one of the defendants against whom no relief is prayed, may have been a party to such breach of trust. Ib.

Executor who has not Disclaimed.] — A testator named A., a trustee of part of her personal estate, and appointed him, her son, and X.'s husband executors; the son and X.'s husband alone proved the will, but A. did not disclaim. The son and X. took life interests in the trust fund, to a part of which the plaintiff became, by X.'s appointment, entitled. A. had been the testator's agent, and acted in the management of the assets, under power of attorney from the executors who proved and X.; and, after the son's death, from the surviving executor and X., which authorised him to receive the assets for the uses and purposes of the will. On A.'s death, the defendant, his son and executor, acted under a similar power, and continued to do so after the death of X.'s husband. X. and her husband get possession of the entire assets:—Held, that A. and the defendant were responsible as trustees, and could not protect themselves as being agents only. Montgomery v. Johnson, 11 Ir. Eq. R. 476.

ii. Accountants.

Misapplication of Funds by Employers.]—Accountants employed by trustees, through whose hands the accounts of the trust estate passed, are in the nature of servants, and bound to accept as correct statements made by one or other of the trustees with regard to the intended application of the trust fund, and are not liable for the misapplication of the trust fund by their employers, on the ground of negligence, by not seeing that the fund was applied properly. Rodbard v. Cooke, 36 L. T. 504; 25 W. R. 555.

iii. Stockbrokers.

Broker Authorised by only One of Two Trustees.]—Where A. and B. are trustees, and one of them desires a broker to sell stock standing in their joint names, and undertakes to procure his co-trustee to join in the transfer:—Held, that unless such co-trustee authorise or concur with the other trustee in making a transfer, the broker was not warranted to make the sale. Leyton v. Sneyd, 8 Taunt. 532; 2 Moore, 588.

Payment to Solicitor of Trustees—Notice.]—Four executors holding stock in their name directed their solicitor to sell the stock. The solicitor, in the name of his firm, gave to a stockbroker whom the solicitor had employed in stock exchange speculations directions to sell the stock. The stock was sold by the broker, and the solicitor returned to the stockbroker transfers of the stock, with receipts endorsed, signed by the four executors. The sale was completed, and the stockbroker sent to the solicitor a cheque for part of the purchase money for the shares, and carried the balance on the transaction to the credit of the solicitor in the account between them, which account was afterwards settled by a payment made to the stockbroker:—Held, that, under the circumstances, the stockbroker must be held to have had notice that the shares were not the property of the solicitor, and that, though the solicitors had from the executors authority to receive the purchase money, payment to him, by giving him credit in an account between them, that was not sufficient to discharge the stockbroker, who remained liable to the executors for the balance. Pearson v. Scott, 9 Ch. D. 198; 38 L. T. 747; 26 W. R. 796.

Firm of Stockbrokers—One Member a Trustee.]—A trustee, one of a firm of stockbrokers, misapplied the trust securities. His partners were, under the circumstances, made responsible. De Ribeyre v. Barclay, 23 Beav. 107; 26 L. J., Ch. 747.

A., who was in partnership with B., C., and D., as stockbrokers, was one of the trustees of the plaintiff's marriage settlement. Some Portuguese bonds belonging to her, which were in A.'s custody, were included in the settlement. After the marriage, the firm bought some Brazilian bonds on account of the trust. The court, from the course of dealing, considered the bonds to be in the custody of the firm, and A., the trustee, having applied them to his own use:—Held, that his co-partners were (as custodians) liable to replace them. Ib.

iv. Bankers.

Placing Trust Funds to Private Account—Trustee.]—Bankers, under the circumstances of the case, decreed to refund moneys which had been drawn by a trustee from a trust account standing in their books, and placed to the credit of the trustee's private account at the bank, upon the balance of which latter account the bankers were creditors. Pannell v. Hurley, 2 Coll. C. C. 241.

—— Receiver.]—P., being receiver of the rents of the R. estate, had a private account with certain bankers; he asked leave to overdraw that account, to which the bankers assented; and, at the same time, he promised to introduce the R. estate account to the bankers. He accordingly overdrew his private account, and opened a separate account called the "R. estate account." Afterwards the bankers, by his direction, transferred the balance of the R. estate account to the private account, which was then overdrawn. P. became insolvent:—Held, that the bankers were liable to the owner of the R. estate for the balance. Bodenham v. Hoskins, 2 De G. M. & G. 903; 21 L. J., Ch. 864; 16 Jur. 721.

Bankers not Cognisant of Intention to Commit Breach of Trust.]—In order to hold a banker justified in refusing to pay a cheque of his customer, the customer being an executor, and drawing a cheque as executor, there must be a misapplication of the money intended by the executor so as to constitute a breach of trust, and the banker must be cognisant of that intention. Gray v. Johnston, L. R. 3 H. L. 1; 16 W. R. 842.

The existence of a personal benefit to the banker, designed or stipulated for, as a consequence of the payment, would be strong evidence that the banker was privy to the breach of trust. Ib.

Bankers had acted as such to J., who carried on business with his son-in-law under the style of J. & M., but whose accounts with them were kept in his own name alone, and were unsettled at his death. He left a will, bequeathing all his property to the use of his wife for life, and after her death to be divided among their children as she might think fit; part of the property consisted of life policies which were put into the hands of the bankers, together with the probate of J.'s will, and they received the amount of the policies, made up their accounts, and, after deducting their own unsettled claims, declared a certain sum to remain due from themselves to the executrix. She continued her husband's business with his late partner under the style of J. & M., and a new account was opened with the bankers in the name of the new firm, and she, as executrix, drew a cheque for the amount stated to be due to her, and paid it in to the bankers to be credited to the firm of J. & M., and it was so credited and paid out, with other money, on account of cheques drawn by the new firm:—Held, that these circumstances were not in themselves sufficient to show that a breach of trust had been committed, and that the bankers knew of the intention to commit it so as to render them liable to replace the money. Ib.

Bankers, the agents of executors, authorised by them to receive certain assets, but prior to receiving them advancing the amount to the executors in the course of their duty as agents, and afterwards applying the assets when received in payment of the amount of such advances, are not responsible, in respect to the misapplication by the executor's agents, not being privy to any intention of such misapplication. Keane v. Robarts, 4 Madd. 332; 20 R. R. 306.

When a bank, with knowledge of the relative position of the parties, places the proceeds of a promissory note, which has been made in its favour by A. (a person just come of age), unreservedly in the power of B. (a person who stands in loco parentis to A.), knowing at the time that B. claims to be a creditor of A. to a large amount for necessaries supplied, and B. afterwards misappropriates the money, the bank will be restrained from suing on the note. Dettmar v. Metropolitan and Provincial Bank, 1 H. & M. 641 ; 10 L. T. 63.

Transfer by Three Persons to Secure Loan—Authority to Sell—Transfer to Nominees of Customer.]—G., a stockbroker, who was one of three trustees and acted as broker to the trust, proposed to his co-trustees to sell B. stock belonging to the trust and reinvest in N. E. stock. The three trustees then, on the 27th of January, 1882, executed a transfer of the B. stock for a nominal consideration to two persons who were officers of a bank of which G. was a customer. G. gave the transfer to the bank as security for a loan by them to him, and the transfer was registered. G., in February, 1882, paid off the loan, and on the 15th of February the bank transferred the stock to purchasers from G., and, without giving any notice to G.'s co-trustees, allowed him to receive the purchase money. He invested it in N. E. stock in his own name. In 1883 he sold the N. E. stock and misappropriated the proceeds. Shortly after the sale of the B. stock G. had given an account to his co-trustees showing the sale of B. stock and a reinvestment in N. E. stock, and in 1884 he rendered another account in which he represented the N. E. stock as still forming part of the trust funds. In 1885 he absconded. The co-trustees remembered hardly anything about the transaction, but admitted the genuineness of their signatures to the deed of transfer :—Held, that the bank had occasioned the loss to the trust estate by allowing the purchase money to come to the hands of G. who had no authority to receive it, and whom they had no sufficient reason for believing to have authority to receive it, and that the bank must therefore make it good at the suit of the co-trustees, although the co-trustees had been negligent in not seeing that the N. E. stock was registered in the joint names of the trustees. Magnus v. Queensland National Bank, 57 L. J., Ch. 413 ; 37 Ch. D. 466 : 58 L. T. 248 ; 36 W. R. 577—C. A. Affirming 52 J. P. 246.

Deposit of Deeds with Bankers.]—B., having made a post-nuptial settlement on his wife, obtained from the trustees title deeds of the property and deposited them with his bankers as a security for money advanced :—Held, that the trustees were entitled to recover the deeds, the bankers not being purchasers within 27 Eliz. c. 4, s. 2. Kerrison v. Dorrien, 9 Bing. 76 ; 2 M. & Scott, 114 ; 1 L. J., C. P. 166.

—— Mortgage Deed Deposited by Trustee.]—B., a trustee, laid out the trust money, together with other money in his hands, upon mortgage in his own name, and executed a declaration of trust as to so much of the mortgage debt as represented the trust money. He afterwards deposited the mortgage deed with his bankers as security for money advanced to him, and absconded :—Held, in the absence of negligence on the part of the cestui que trust, that the deposit of the deed passed no interest in the trust fund to the bankers. Stackhouse v. Jersey (Countess), 30 L. J., Ch. 421 ; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 359 ; 4 L. T. 204 ; 9 W. R. 453.

Measure of Liability.]—Bankers of trustees wrongfully sold out stock, and applied it to their own purposes :—Held, that the measure of their liability was the amount paid in replacing the stock. Sadler v. Lee, 6 Beav. 324 ; 12 L. J., Ch. 407 ; 7 Jur. 476.

And see post, F. 2.

v. Solicitors.

Constructive Trustees—Absence of Fraud.]—Although the responsibility of trustees may be extended in equity to persons who are not properly trustees, if they are found either making themselves trustees de son tort, or actively participating in any fraudulent conduct of the trustee, to the injury of the cestui que trust, yet strangers are not to be made constructive trustees, merely because they act as agents of trustees in transactions within their legal power, even though such transactions may be such as the court would not approve of. Barnes v. Addy, 43 L. J., Ch. 513 ; L. R. 9 Ch. 244 ; 30 L. T. 4 ; 22 W. R. 505. S. P., Hutchins v. Hutchins, 10 Ir. Eq. R. 453.

A solicitor acting for the sole survivor of three trustees, prepared, by his direction, a deed appointing the husband of the cestui que trust sole trustee in his place, and another solicitor, acting for the cestui que trust and her husband, perused and approved of the draft. The deed was executed, and the trust fund transferred to the husband as new trustee, and by him sold out and never replaced. There being no ground for imputing to either of the solicitors knowledge or suspicion of any improper design in the transaction :—Held, that neither of them was liable for the loss occasioned by the breach of trust. Ib.

—— Costs.]—The court disapproves of the practice of making solicitors and others, who are properly witnesses, and who are not chargeable with any part of the relief prayed, parties to suits with a view of charging them with costs alone. Ib.

A party advising a loan unauthorised by the trust for the purpose of deriving a benefit therefrom, as by obtaining payment out of the money lent of a debt due to him by the borrower, is liable for any loss consequent on the breach of trust. But where the solicitors who were concerned for the borrower acted also usually, and to some extent in this case, as the solicitors of the trustee, but another solicitor who was called in on behalf of the trustee, and one of the cestuis que trust, assented to the loan, and the loss did not take place upon the original security, which was ample in point of value, but upon a security substituted for it in pursuance of a provision in the original mortgage deed, and it was not proved, though it was alleged, that the solicitors had applied part of the money lent in payment of a debt due to them by the borrower ; the bill of the cestuis que trust was dismissed as against the solicitors, but without costs. Fyler v. Fyler, 3 Beav. 550 ; 5 Jur. 187.

—— Solicitor Acting for both Sides.]—Quære, whether a solicitor acting for both sides, if he omits to call for payment of the trust moneys into court, may not be made answerable for any loss occasioned thereby. Gresley v. Heathcote, 3 L. J. (O.S.) Ch. 107.

—— Money paid through Solicitor—Improper

Investment.]—A solicitor who, as agent for a trustee, and with full notice of the trusts, receives from such trustee a cheque representing trust moneys intended for investment on a mortgage which is an improper security, and pays such cheque into his own banking account, and next business day pays the mortgage money to the mortgagor by his own cheque for the same amount, is not liable as a constructive trustee. Semble, the case would be the same if notes were given to the solicitor instead of a cheque. Brinsden v. Williams, 63 L. J., Ch. 713; [1894] 3 Ch. 185; 8 R. 574; 71 L. T. 177; 42 W. R. 700.

—— Notice of Settlement—Sales of Land by Solicitor.]—A settlement of land in Wales, the property of the husband, was executed shortly after a marriage, which took place in India. The husband and wife went to reside in Wales, and the husband employed a solicitor there to make his will and to sell part of the land, the solicitor concluding from the statements of the husband that there had not been any marriage settlement. The husband died, leaving his widow trustee and executrix, and directing his debts to be paid out of his estate. The widow employed the same solicitor to sell other parts of the land, and the solicitor received the purchase moneys and applied them in payment of the debts of the husband. The deed of settlement had been in the possession of the wife, but had been by her given to the husband. There was no evidence as to what had become of it, but after the sales had been made a copy was found. The solicitor had concluded from what he was told by the husband that there had been no settlement, and though, before all the sales were completed, his clerk had been told by the wife that there had been a settlement, the solicitor continued to believe that there had been none. An action was brought by the children of the marriage, entitled under the settlement, claiming to recover from the solicitor the money which had so passed through his hands:—Held, that under the circumstances, although the solicitor might have been negligent in that character, he could not be held to have had such notice of the settlement as to be treated as constructively a trustee, and therefore liable for the money which had passed through his hands. Notice to raise a constructive trust is different from notice to an actual trustee. Cothay v. Sydenham (2 Bro. C. C. 391) discussed. Williams v. Williams, 17 Ch. D. 437; 44 L. T. 573.

—— Payment over to One Trustee.]—A firm of solicitors, acting for two trustees, and receiving trust moneys from them, and paying over a portion of such moneys to one only of the trustees, who afterwards dies insolvent, is liable to the trust estate for the whole amount of moneys received from the two trustees. Lee v. Sankey, or Ginger v. Sankey, L. R. 15 Eq. 204; 27 L. T. 809; 21 W. R. 286.

—— Payment by Solicitor to Credit of his General Account.]—Preparatory to the final winding up of a trust, the agent and solicitor of the trustee paid the trust money to his bankers, to the credit of his general account with them, and informed the cestui que trust that the money was lying idle at his bankers. The cestui que trust took no notice of the information; and, more than a month afterwards the bankers failed:—Held, that, as the agent did not inform the cestui que trust that the money had been paid to the credit of his general account, and as the payment to the bankers was not necessary to the winding up of the trust, the agent and the trustee were jointly liable for the money. Macdonnell v. Harding, 7 Sim. 178; 4 L. J., Ch. 10.

—— Solicitors of Trustees mixing Trust Funds with their Own.]—In an action by cestuis que trust against their trustees, it was alleged that they had delegated their trusteeship to their solicitors, who had improperly mixed the trust funds with their own moneys:—Held, that if the allegations were well founded, they were amply sufficient to charge the solicitors as constructive trustees, and that they and the trustees were equally liable for breaches of trust. Maw v. Pearson (28 Beav. 196) considered and distinguished. Cowper v. Stoneham, 3 R. 242; 68 L. T. 18.

—— Delegation—Primary and Secondary Liability.]—Where a trustee has delegated his trust, there is no question of primary and secondary liability in respect of a breach of trust, but all are equally liable. Ib.

Money received by Solicitor for Investment—Representation that Money advanced on Mortgage.]—A client left moneys for investment in the hands of his solicitors. The solicitors represented that the sum of 11,000*l.*, part of these moneys, was invested on mortgage of freehold property at A., belonging to a firm, and the client made no further inquiry. The solicitors were in fact the holders of a mortgage for 55,000*l.* upon property X. at A., belonging to the firm, and they repaid themselves 11,000*l.* of the 55,000*l.* with the client's money. The firm afterwards bought property Y. at A., and mortgaged it in fee to a bank. The solicitors released the firm from the mortgage debt of 55,000*l.* on property X. and took from them a mortgage for 50,000*l.* on properties X. and Y., subsequently, by arrangement with the firm, purchasing the equity of redemption in both properties, and selling them for shares to a limited company into which the firm was, through their instrumentality, converted. These transactions all took place without the knowledge of the client:—Held, that the solicitors must be treated as having become trustees for the client of 11,000*l.* out of the 55,000*l.* secured by mortgage on property X.; and having improperly, as against the client, given up that mortgage in exchange, the client had a right under the circumstances to claim a charge for 11,000*l.* and interest upon property Y. (in which the legal estate was outstanding) as well as upon property X. Vernon, Ewens & Co., In re, 56 L. J., Ch. 12; 33 Ch. D. 402; 55 L. T. 416; 35 W. R. 225—C. A.

—— On Specified Security.]—The owner of a copyhold, which was subject to a mortgage by conditional surrender for 350*l.*, made by a former owner, instructed S., his solicitor, to procure him, on the security of the property, a loan of 550*l.*, out of which the old mortgage was to be paid off. S., in July, 1876, obtained the money from the plaintiff, who was also his client. In July, 1877, S. took a security for 700*l.* on the property in his own name, the mortgagee assigning the old mortgage debt, and the mortgagor covenanting to surrender. The old mortgagee was paid by a cheque drawn by S. on B. & Co., his bankers. S.'s account was already overdrawn, but on the same day he applied to them for leave further to overdraw, which was granted on his depositing with them the security for 700*l.*, and the cheque when presented was honoured. B. & Co. had no notice of the plaintiff's claim. Some time after this S. put his account in credit, but it shortly afterwards became again overdrawn. S. handed over some of the other muniments of title to the plaintiff. The plaintiff commenced his action to establish his right to rank as incumbrancer for 550*l.* in priority to B. & Co. After this B. & Co. procured the old mortgagee to be admitted under the old conditional surrender, and to surrender to them:—Held, that after the account of S. with B. & Co. had once been put in credit, their security must, as against other incumbrances on the property, be taken to have been discharged, and that the plaintiff was entitled to priority over B. & Co. B. & Co. appealed, asking for priority over the plaintiff to the extent of the old mortgage which had been paid off with their money:—Held, on appeal, that S., having received money from the plaintiff for the purpose of being invested on a mortgage of specified property, and having taken a security on that property in his own name, was a trustee of that security for the plaintiff to the extent of the money received from him, and that this equitable title must prevail against the deposit with B. & Co., and that the 350*l.* mortgage could not be set up against the plaintiff. Harpham v. Shacklock, 19 Ch. D. 207; 45 L. T. 569; 33 W. R. 49—C. A.

—— Misapplication by Solicitor.]—Trustees of stock sold it out, and committed the proceeds to their solicitor for investment, by whom it was misapplied and lost:—Held, that the trustees were liable for a breach of trust, and that the cestuis que trust were entitled to relief against both the trustees and the solicitor, and that they might sue either the trustees alone or the trustees jointly with the solicitor. Rowland v. Witherden, 3 Mac. & G. 568; 21 L. J., Ch. 480.

Where an agent is authorised by trustees to receive trust money and receives it accordingly, the receipt of that money by the agent binds the trustees, and discharges the person who paid it. Robertson v. Armstrong, 28 Beav. 123.

Trustees authorised their solicitors to receive trust money. The solicitors received it and handed it over to the tenant for life, whereby it was lost:—Held, that a bill by a cestui que trust seeking to charge the solicitors only, and not the trustees, could not be maintained, for that it was only through the trustees that the solicitors could be made liable. Ib.

Suppression of Incumbrance by Mortgagor on Advice of Solicitor.]—A voluntary settlement of leaseholds was suppressed by the settlor with the privity of the trustees and under the advice of a solicitor, in order to enable money to be raised on mortgage of the trust estate. Two existing trustees had retired, knowing of the proposed dealing with the trust property, and with a view to the carrying out of the mortgage:—Held, that the mortgagee was entitled to a decree for payment of his advances and costs against the solicitor, the old and new trustees and the settlor, although he might, when he discovered the defect in title, have had an opportunity of obtaining further security for his money; and notwithstanding nine years had elapsed from such discovery to the filing of the bill. Clark v. Hoskins, 36 L. J., Ch. 689; 16 L. T. 730; 15 W. R. 1161.

Possession of Trust Fund—Liability of Solicitor to Account.] — An agent employed by a trustee is not accountable so long as his acts are merely acts of agency; but where a solicitor got possession of the trust moneys, and allowed the executrix, who was entitled to the income only, to misapply the principal, the court directed an account against him as if he were a trustee. Morgan v. Stephens, 3 Giff. 226; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 701; 4 L. T. 614.

In 1876 a sum of money, which, under the will of S., was vested in trustees on trust for the plaintiff's father for life, and after his death for the plaintiff, was in the hands of A., the solicitor of the trustees. A. invested the money on mortgage, and in January, 1879, it was repaid by the mortgagor to A. In that month and again in July, 1879, A. paid interest on the said sum to the plaintiff's father. In November, 1879, A. died. From that time till January, 1886, the plaintiff's father received half-yearly instalments of interest on the said sum from a person who had been a clerk of A., and was employed in winding up his business. In July, 1886, the plaintiff's father died. In February, 1891, the plaintiff, who was then the sole trustee of the will, brought an action against the executrix of A., claiming an account and payment of what might be found due:—Held, that A. was to be treated as an express trustee, and therefore the plaintiff's claim was not barred by the statute of limitations. Soar v. Ashwell, [1893] 2 Q. B. 390; 4 R. 602; 69 L. T. 585; 42 W. R. 165—C. A.

A solicitor to a trustee is under no greater liability to account as a constructive trustee than any other stranger to the trust; and if he receives money from the trustee which he knows to be part of the trust estate, he is not liable as a constructive trustee unless he had notice that the money is being applied in a manner inconsistent with the trust. Staniar v. Evans (56 L. J., Ch. 581; 34 Ch. D. 470; 56 L. T. 87; 35 W. R. 286) explained and distinguished. Blundell, In re, Blundell v. Blundell, 57 L. J., Ch. 730; 40 Ch. D. 370; 58 L. T. 933; 36 W. R. 779.

Solicitor Employed by Trustee—Right to Costs out of Estate.]—A solicitor or other agent properly employed by a trustee in the administration of a trust is entitled to accept payment direct out of the trust estate of his costs and expenses properly incurred. In order to deprive the agent of this right, it is necessary to prove, not merely notice that at the time of payment a breach of trust has been committed, but notice that the breach of trust is such as entirely to preclude the trustees from resorting to the trust estate for payment of costs. Ib.

In 1855 a bill was filed for the administration of an estate, and in February, 1857, a decree was made, which directed the personal representative V. to get in the outstanding estate, and to pay the moneys so received into court from time to time within two months after their receipt respectively. After this decree was made, an estate, which was mortgaged to the testator, was sold, and the purchase money was received by the solicitors of V., who, instead of paying it into court, retained a part of it in payment of some costs due to themselves, and allowed V. to receive the rest. V. having become a defaulter, a bill was filed by the beneficiaries against the solicitors:—Held, that the solicitors were liable to make good the whole sum thus received by them, less the costs of actually realising it, together with interest. Harries v. Rees, 37 L. J., Ch. 102; 17 L. T. 418; 16 W. R. 91.

Two other sums were also received after the decree of February, 1857, in respect of two bonds, upon which, before that decree, part of the testator's estate had been invested by V. These investments had been disallowed in the administration suit:—Held, that these sums must be taken to have been throughout in the hands of V., and that the solicitors could not be held responsible for them. Ib.

Lien for Costs.]—Trust money was lent upon certain securities in breach of trust. One of the trustees was ordered to pay into court the whole amount of the trust money. He proceeded to realise the securities, and paid into court the produce, which was insufficient to answer the breach of trust:—Held, that his solicitor could not be in a better position than himself, and consequently had not a lien on the fund in court for the costs of realising the securities. Thompson v. Francis, 5 De G. M. & G. 108.

Purchase Money received by Solicitor who was a Trustee.]—Lands devised to three trustees, upon trust for sale, were sold, and the purchase money paid to one of them, who was a solicitor, and acted in the matter of the sale as solicitor for himself and the other trustees. The money having been retained by him and lost:—Held, after his decease, that it must be taken to have been received by him not in his capacity of solicitor, it being no part of his duty in that capacity to receive it, but in his capacity of trustee; and that the survivor of the three could not, upon a common decree for an account, be held liable for its loss. Fryer's Estate, In re, Martindale v. Picquot, 3 K. & J. 317; 26 L. J., Ch. 398; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 485; 5 W. R. 552.

Profits made by Solicitor.]—It is an established rule that a solicitor shall not, in any way whatever, in respect of any transactions in the relation between himself and his client, make gain to himself at the expense of his client, beyond the amount of his just and fair professional remuneration. Tyrrell v. Bank of London, 10 H. L. Cas. 26; 31 L. J., Ch. 369; 8 Jur. (N.S.) 849; 6 L. T. 1; 10 W. R. 359.

A solicitor had a private arrangement with R., by which he was to receive from R. a share in property belonging to R., and to share the profit to be obtained from the sale of that property. In his character of solicitor he acted for clients (a banking company) in the purchase of the larger portion of that property, never communicating to his clients the fact of his having an interest in it:—Held, that he was to be treated as a trustee for his clients in respect of his share of so much of the property as they had actually purchased. Ib.

And having made a large profit on the sale, he was ordered to pay back the amount of his profit with the full amount of interest given in cases of a breach of trust, namely, five per cent. Ib.

Liability of Firm.]—Trust money was sent to A. (one of a firm of solicitors, who was himself one of two trustees) for investment on mortgage. The money was paid into the bankers to the account of the firm, and was afterwards drawn out by A., and never invested:—Held, that the other member of the firm was liable. Eager v. Barnes, 31 Beav. 579; 7 L. T. 408.

Under a will 2,910*l.* stock was vested in the testator's three unmarried nieces, who were his executrixes, in trust for themselves for life, then for children, with ulterior trusts. Their confidential solicitors were a firm of two persons, of whom the senior, under his own advice, was associated as their co-trustee, and a declaration of trust, prepared by the firm, was executed by the four persons in 1822. Subsequently, on the advice of the senior solicitor, the fund was sold out, and paid to him alone; but he, on the same day, paid the precise amount to the credit of the banking account of the firm. In 1824 the senior partner untruly represented that the money had been laid out on specified freehold security; but in 1825 a sufficient freehold mortgage was taken by the senior partner to himself alone, and was treated by him as the security for the trust fund, less a very small balance, which was divided among the three ladies. The interest was duly paid to the ladies until 1828, when the senior partner realised that security without their privity, and again untruly alleged that he had laid out the amount on another specified security. The firm dissolved partnership in 1834, and each partner practised separately; the senior partner continued regularly to pay sums as the interest to the ladies until 1844, when he became bankrupt, and afterwards died abroad uncertificated. In a suit by the three ladies against the junior partner, charging him as liable to make good the amount:—Held, that a sufficient investment having been made in the name of the senior partner, and communicated to the parties, and adopted, the duty of the firm was discharged, and the subsequent loss was a breach of duty by the senior partner alone, and not by the partnership, and the suit was dismissed with costs. Coomer v. Bromley, 5 De G. & Sm. 532; 16 Jur. 609.

—— Deposit of Bonds with One Partner.]—Trustees under a will deposited certain bonds payable to bearer with P., a member of the firm of solicitors who were acting for the estate. His partners had no knowledge of this, but letters referring to the bonds were copied in the letter-book of the firm and were charged for in the bill of costs of the firm, and the bonds were included in a statement of account which the firm made out for the trustees. P. paid some of the interest of the bonds by cheques of the firm, but on each occasion recouped the firm by a cheque for the same amount on his private account. P. misappropriated the bonds:—Held, that the cheques, letters, and entries were too ambiguous to affect the other partners with acquiescence in P. having the custody of the bonds as part of the partnership business, and that they could not be held liable for their misappropriation. Harman v. Johnson (2 El. & Bl. 61; 3 Car. & K. 272; 22 L. J., Q. B. 297; 17 Jur. 1099) and Dundonald (Earl) v. Masterman (38 L. J., Ch. 350; L. R. 7 Eq. 504; 20 L. T. 271; 17 W. R. 548) considered. Cleather v. Twisden, 54 L. J., Ch. 408; 28 Ch. D. 340; 52 L. T. 330; 33 W. R. 435—C. A.

—— Implied Authority of one Member—Constructive Trustee—Appointment of New Trustee.]—It is not within the scope of the implied authority of a member of a firm of solicitors to make himself a constructive trustee so as to make his partners liable. Mara v. Browne, 65 L. J., Ch. 225; [1896] 1 Ch. 199; 73 L. T. 638; 44 W. R. 330—C. A.

In January, 1884, the funds of a marriage settlement were suspected of being placed in jeopardy by the conduct of J., one of the two original trustees; and by a deed of January 7th, the husband and wife, who had power to appoint new trustees, purported to appoint R. to act as co-trustee with J. in the place of the other trustee, who had taken no part in the trust, and was willing to retire. This deed was executed by the husband and wife alone. By a deed of May 9th, 1884, executed by all parties, R. and another were appointed new trustees in the place of the original trustees. In the meantime, the trust funds were, through the intervention of B., a solicitor, paid by J. into a bank to the joint account of himself and R., and were then from time to time paid out by their joint cheques to B. for investment. B., with the full knowledge of R., invested the funds on securities held by the court to be improper. More than six years afterwards the beneficiaries and existing trustees brought an action against B. and his partner to make them liable for the loss arising from such improper investments:—Held, first, that the appointment of R. by the deed of January, followed by his intermeddling in the trust, operated as a valid appointment under s. 31 of the Conveyancing Act, 1881; secondly, that B. acted as the agent of J. and R., who were duly constituted trustees, and was not liable as constructive trustee; thirdly, that, even if he had been liable as constructive trustee, his partner could not be made liable. Ib.

—— Judgment against one Member of Firm —Trustee Act, 1888, s. 4.]—Money subject to the trusts of a settlement came into the custody of F., S. & F., a firm of solicitors, with notice of the trusts, and was advanced by them on mortgage in the names of the trustees. S., who afterwards became one of the trustees of the settlement, acted as solicitor for M. and B., the trustees in the matter of the mortgage, and for the work done by him the firm received payment. The security proved insufficient, and, in an action by the beneficiaries against the trustees, was declared to be improper, and the trustees were declared jointly and severally liable to make good the loss sustained. The money not being replaced, the beneficiaries brought an action against F. F., the surviving partner, and the representatives of M. F., a deceased partner in the firm, to recover the loss from them. Neither F. F. nor M. F. had any personal knowledge of the nature of the security at the time of the investment:—Held, that S. was acting within the scope of his authority as a partner, and his partners were consequently implicated in the breach of trust:—Held, also, that the liability of the members of the firm arising out of a breach of trust was joint and several, and the judgment already recovered against S. did not operate as a discharge of his partners:—Held, also, that the trustees not having been charged with breach of trust by reason only of the proportion borne by the amount of the loan to the value of the mortgaged property, s. 4 of the Trustee Act, 1888, afforded the defendants no protection. Blyth v. Fladgate, 60 L. J., Ch. 66; [1891] 1 Ch. 337; 63 L. T. 546; 39 W. R. 422.

—— Trustee entitled to Beneficial Interest in Reversion.]—B. was entitled to a beneficial interest in reversion in the trust fund. M. claimed to be recouped out of such beneficial interest any money paid by him in replacing the trust fund:—Held, that, B. not having received any benefit from the breach of trust, and not having instigated it in any way, there were no circumstances which would entitle M. to throw the liability of it upon him. Ib.

—— Contribution between Co-Trustees.]—S. claimed against M. and B. contribution of a proportion of the sums necessary to replace the trust fund:—Held, that, having been guilty of negligence as solicitor to them, he was not entitled to any such contribution. Lockhart v. Reilly (1 De G. & J. 464; 27 L. J., Ch. 54) followed. Ib.

1. Possession of Cestui que Trust.

In General.]—It is not of course to let a cestui que trust under a will into possession of the estate; it must depend on the testator's intention. Tidd v. Lister, 5 Madd. 429; 21 R. R. 323.

The possession of the cestui que trust under the trusts of a settlement is the possession of the trustee, and gives the trustee a seisin of the estate, which is not interrupted by the death of the cestui que trust, but immediately inures for the benefit of the person next entitled to the equitable interest; and notwithstanding the adverse possession of another party soon afterwards commenced, the court cannot presume such adverse possession to have commenced so instantaneously on the death of the first cestui que trust as wholly to exclude the equitable seisin of the parties next entitled to the beneficial interest. Parker v. Carter, 4 Hare, 400.

Eviction of Cestui que Trust.]—Equity will never permit the trustee to evict his cestui que trust. Shine v. Gough, 1 Ball & B. 445.

Trustees, who joined with remainderman to eject cestui que trust for life, not excused from making good the whole rent reserved by subsequent accidental deficiencies. Inquiry directed as to the interference of remainderman. Kaye v. Powel, 1 Ves. 408.

Trustees shall not recover possession from, or dispute it with, their cestui que trust. Armstrong v. Paise, 3 Burr. 1898.

Cestui que Trust in Possession as Tenant at Will of Trustee.]—The doctrine that a cestui que trust who is in possession with the consent, or even the acquiescence of the trustee, must be regarded as his tenant at will, applies only to the case where the cestui que trust is the actual occupant. Melling v. Leak, 16 C. B. 652; 3 C. L. R. 1017; 24 L. J., C. P. 187; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 759; 3 W. R. 595.

If he is merely allowed to receive the rents, or otherwise deal with the estate in the hands of the occupying tenant, he stands in the relation of an agent or a bailiff of the trustee. Ib.

If, therefore, the actual occupier is, under such circumstances, permitted to occupy for more than twenty years without paying rent or acknowledging title, the trustee is barred by 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27. Ib.

In an action for an alleged injury to the plaintiff's reversionary interest in a house, he averred in his declaration that the premises were in the occupation of P. as tenant thereof to the plaintiff. It was proved that the house had been let to P. by a cestui que trust, to whom she had paid rent, the plaintiff being his trustee:—Held, to be no variance, as the legal estate was in the plaintiff, and the cestui que trust was to be considered as his agent or bailiff. Vallance v. Savage, 7 Bing. 595; 5 M. & P. 576; 9 L. J. (O.S.), C. P. 181.

The owner of an estate, a term in which had been assigned to a trustee to attend the inheritance, is, while in possession of the land, tenant at will to the trustee. It is only on the determination of the tenancy at will that there is such a vested right of entry as is contemplated by s. 2 of the statute of limitations, 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27. Section 3 of the statute does not apply to the case of a cestui que trust in possession under a trustee. Garrard v. Tuck, 8 C. B. 231; 18 L. J., C. P. 338.

A dissenting minister, placed in possession of a chapel and dwelling-house by persons in whom the legal estate is vested in trust to suffer the chapel to be used for the purpose of religious worship, is, at law, tenant at will to those persons. Perry v. Shipway, 1 Giff. 1; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 535; 7 W. R. 406. Affirmed, 28 L. J., Ch. 660; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 1015; 7 W. R. 574.

Possession of Grantor of Term to Secure Annuities.]—Where a trustee of a term of years, upon the usual trusts for securing annuities, has taken possession of the estates under the trusts, the court, although all arrears of the annuities may afterwards be paid, will not order possession to be given up to the grantor, except upon such terms as will enable the trustee to resume it, and to receive the rents, the moment the annuities are again in arrear. Jenkins v. Milford, 1 J. & W. 629; 21 R. R. 262.

Tenant for Life let into Possession on Terms.]—Tenant for life subject to a trust term not let in possession before account; nor till the trust is executed, unless on paying into court a sum sufficient to answer it; or where the best way of performing the trust appears to be by letting him into possession. Blake v. Bunbury, 1 Ves. 194; 1 R. R. 111. And see 19 R. R. 46; 21 R. R. 325.

Tenant for life let into possession on consent, and giving security to pay charges payable out of rents and profits, and to keep down interest of the fund to answer contingent charges. Ib. 514; 4 Bro. C. C. 21.

Upon the construction of a devise of real property:—Held, that an equitable tenant for life was entitled to the personal enjoyment of the property upon giving security for the due fulfilment of the objects of testator's will. Baylies v. Baylies, 1 Coll. C. C. 587.

Where a testator bequeaths a life interest in freeholds, by way either of legal or of equitable estate, and the freehold is dilapidated, and extensive repairs are required, the court will not withhold possession from the devisee for life, in order to impose upon him terms as to the execution of the repairs. Warren v. Rudall, 1 J. & H. 1; 29 L. J., Ch. 543; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 395; 2 L. T. 693; 8 W. R. 331.

And see Bentley, In re, Wade v. Wilson, 54 L. J., Ch. 782; 33 W. R. 610, ante, col. 526.

The fact that the court in its discretion might upon terms put an equitable tenant for life into possession, or take the receipt of the rents from the trustees and give them to him, does not make him a person "entitled to the possession, or to the receipt of the rents and profits," within s. 32 of the Sales of Settled Estates Act, 19 & 20 Vict. c. 120. Taylor v. Taylor, Taylor, Ex parte, 44 L. J., Ch. 727; L. R. 20 Eq. 297; 33 L. T. 89; 23 W. R. 947.

W. devised estates in trust to pay the rents, issues, and profits unto, or permit the same to be received and taken by, his daughter S. H., the wife of T. H., during her life, for her sole and separate use, free from the control of her husband, her receipt alone being a sufficient discharge for the same; and after the decease of S. H., to convert the estates into money, and to pay and divide such money unto and equally amongst her children as she should appoint. The trustees having, as alleged, refused to account for the rents and profits received, a bill was filed for the administration of W.'s estate. The court, on motion for that purpose by S. H., ordered that she should be permitted to enter into the possession of the receipt of the rents and profits of the estates devised in trust for her separate use. Horner v. Wheelwright, 2 Jur. (N.S.) 367.

Trustee allowing Cestui que Trust to have Trust Fund and Impounding Proceeds of Sale.]—A trustee allowed one of his cestuis que trust to have the trust fund, with a view to its investment in the foreign funds. The cestui que trust went to America, and invested it in his own name; he afterwards sold out a part, and, remitting the money to agents in London, came home. The trustee impounded the money so remitted, in the lord mayor's court, and this court granted an injunction, restraining proceedings on the part of the cestui que trust to get it out. Hipkins v. Newton, 9 L. J. (O.S.) Ch. 227.

Tenant for Life of Articles of Plate.]—A., being entitled under a will to the use of certain articles of plate for her life, pawned them with B., who kept an open pawnbroker's shop. Bill was filed by the representatives of the testator, after the death of A., against B., for a discovery of the different articles pawned, in order to enable the plaintiffs to proceed in an action at law, for the recovery of them. To this discovery the defendant pleaded, that certain articles of plate were deposited with him, for certain sums of money bonâ fide lent and advanced thereon to A.; but he did not by his plea (though he did by his answers), aver that he had no other articles of plate in his possession. For this defect in point of form the plea was overruled. The defendant then insisted on the same point by his answer in bar to the discovery, but the court thought, that where a plea to a bill of discovery was overruled, the defendant could never insist on the same thing by answer. Hoare v. Parker, 1 Cox, 224; 1 Bro. C. C. 578. And see 2 Term Rep. 376; 1 R. R. 500.

Bequest of Household Effects to Wife for Life.]—The wife is not debarred of her paraphernalia, by a bequest of the use of all household goods, furniture, plate, jewels, linen, &c., for life. Marshall v. Blew, 2 Atk. 217.

Such a bequest entitles her to use the goods anywhere, or even to let them out to hire. Ib.

Action for Trespass—Defence of Occupant that a Breach of Trust had been Committed.]—To a declaration for breaking and entering a close and pulling down a wall, a plea that B. was seised in fee of the land in which, &c., in trust to pay the rents and profits to the defendant's wife for her life; and that whilst he and his wife were in the occupation of the land, B., in breach of trust, conveyed the land in fee to the plaintiff, who had notice of the breach of trust, and that afterwards, and whilst the defendant and his wife were in such occupation, the plaintiff wrongfully built the wall which incumbered the land, and prevented the defendant and his wife from enjoying it, wherefore the defendant in his own right, and by direction of his wife, pulled it down, affords no defence on equitable grounds to the action. Drake v. Pywell, 4 H. & C. 78.

As to Heirlooms.]—See SETTLEMENT.

Under Statute of Limitations.]—See LIMITATIONS (STATUTE OF).

2. ALIENATION BY AND TRANSFER TO CESTUI QUE TRUST.

Right to Alienate.]—Courts of equity have given the same power to cestuis que trust as to alienation, as if it was a use executed. Hopkins v. Hopkins, 1 Atk. 591; Cas. t. Talb. 44; 1 Vern. 268.

A trustee cannot prevent his cestui que trust from making an effectual gift of his interest in the trust property or any part of it. Kekewich v. Manning, 1 De G. M. & G. 176; 21 L. J., Ch. 577; 16 Jur. 625.

Right to Call upon the Trustees to convey Legal Estate.]—A cestui que trust in tail brings a bill against the trustees to the intent they should join in a recovery: this not proper; but it is proper to pray that the trustees may convey the premises to the cestui que trust in tail, who may then suffer a recovery, though, if the trustees are also trustees for any annuities subsisting, they are not compellable to part with the legal estate out of them, to the cestui que trust in tail. Carteret v. Carteret, 2 P. Wms. 133.

One buys an estate in the name of a trustee, who gives a bond in 200*l.* penalty to assign the estate as the cestui que trust or his executor shall direct: cestui que trust dies, and his executor brings debt on the bond and recovers judgment, and has the money paid him, after which he brings a bill to have a conveyance of the estate; trustee to convey to the plaintiff, and to account for the profits, but in account is to be allowed the 200*l.* and interest which he paid. Moorecroft v. Dowding, 2 P. Wms. 314; 2 Eq. Cas. Abr. 746. pl. 3.

In a clear case of a fee simple interest, the limitation being to the heir male of the tenant for life and the heirs of such heirs male, a conveyance was decreed, with costs, against the trustee of the will, who set up a title derived from the tenant for life, supposing her to have an estate of inheritance by virtue of the rule, and also a clause in the testator's will, which was clearly void for perpetuity, under which it was alleged the plaintiff had forfeited his interest. Willis v. Hiscox, 4 Myl. & Cr. 197; 4 Jur. 738.

Where a trust estate descended to one who refused to execute a conveyance to the cestui que trust, after it had been approved by his solicitor, unless he were paid a sum of money, the court ordered the conveyance, with costs against the defendant. Watts v. Turner, 1 Russ. & M. 634.

Where an infant died seised of an equitable estate, descended ex parte maternâ, his incapacity to call for a conveyance of the legal estate (by which the course of the descent might have been broken), is not reason for it to be considered as actually done, it being the trustees' duty not to convey till called upon. Langley v. Sneyd, 1 Sim. & S. 45; 1 L. J. (o.s.) Ch. 14.

By an indenture, made in contemplation of marriage, certain leasehold property, belonging to the intended wife, was conveyed to trustees on certain trusts; and the trusts of a sum of stock, also belonging to the intended wife, which had been transferred into the names of the trustees, were declared. The marriage did not take effect, and, soon after the date of the indenture, the lady married another person. In a suit instituted by the husband and wife against the trustees, it was ordered that the leasehold property should be conveyed to the husband, and the stock transferred into his name. Thomas v. Brennan, 15 L. J., Ch. 420; 11 Jur. 95.

—— Copyholds.]—Certain copyhold lands having been devised to trustees for the benefit of a charity, and the copyholds having been enfranchised, the court directed the trustees to convey the legal estate to the company. Att.-Gen. v. Clothworkers' Co., 17 L. J., Ch. 456.

If A., for valuable consideration, undertakes to surrender a copyhold to B., and B., on borrowing money from C., enters into a written agreement with C. that he, B., will surrender the same copyhold to C., by way of mortgage security; A. is not justified in refusing to surrender the copyhold to B., because he, A., has received notice from C. of the agreement between him and B. The surrender by A. to B. does not prejudice, but promotes that agreement. —— v. Walford, 4 Russ. 372; 28 R. R. 129.

—— On Failure of Trusts.]—A testatrix, being seised of an equitable estate in fee, devised it to her executors in trust to sell, and out of the proceeds of such sale and her personal estate, to pay her debts, &c., and the legacies given by her in a certain paper, signed by her and marked A. The testatrix died without heirs, and the paper A. could not be found. The trustee of the legal estate insisted upon his right to hold the estate for his own benefit upon payment of the debts. On a bill by the executors:—Held, that the rule of law laid down in Burgess v. Wheate (1 Eden, 177) did not apply; and that the trustee of the legal estate was bound to convey to the executors, the devisees, without reference to the purposes for which the conveyance was required. Onslow v. Wallis, 1 Mac. & G. 506; 1 Hall & Tw. 513; 19 L. J., Ch. 27; 13 Jur. 1085. Affirming 16 Sim. 485.

A bare trustee who, under s. 31 of the 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 74, is protector of a settlement, can insist on retaining the legal estate only so long as the purposes of the trust exist, that is, so long as, according to the rules of the court of equity, he is required to be a trustee. Buttanshaw v. Martin, John. 89 ; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 647.

Therefore, where there was a devise of lands to trustees upon trusts for the testator's daughter during her life, for her separate use without power of anticipation, with remainder to the use of her children as tenants in common in tail, with remainders over :—Held, that the testator's daughter, having become discoverte and being sui juris, could compel a conveyance by the trustees of the legal estate. Ib.

—— Where the Equitable Estate is Conveyed.]—The owner of an equitable estate conveyed it to trustees upon trust for sale, and by a deed of even date with the conveyance, declared the trusts upon which the produce of the sale was to be applied. The party who had the mere legal estate and no beneficial interest, refused to convey it to the equitable trustee, unless the persons interested as cestuis que trust under the deed of even date were made parties to the conveyance :—Held, that he was not justified in that refusal, but as he acted bonâ fide, under the advice of a conveyancer of character, the court made the decree against him without costs. Angier v. Stannard, 3 Myl. & K. 566 ; 3 L. J., Ch. 216.

When a purchaser of a mere equitable interest in property after a conveyance of it to him, files a bill to obtain from the trustees the legal estate, the vendors may, without filing a cross-bill, set up the invalidity of the purchase. Hannah v. Hodgson, 30 Beav. 19 ; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 1092 ; 9 W. R. 729.

Real estates, devised for sale, were vested in trust for parents for life, with remainder for their children. In 1839, the parents and children sold and conveyed their interests to the plaintiff, who remained in undisturbed possession until the death of the tenants for life. In 1858, the purchaser filed his bill against the trustee and the vendors, to obtain the legal estate. The court, on the ground of the unfairness of the transaction as regarded the children, dismissed the bill, but refused to grant any active relief to the defendants. Ib.

—— Trustee of Mortgage.]—The trustee of a mortgage holds the same in trust to the extent of the mortgage for the mortgagee, subject thereto for the mortgagors, and he cannot do anything to prejudice the mortgagors. The trust of a mortgage, as between mortgagor and mortgagee, differs from that of an outstanding term in a third person unconnected with either of the parties seeking the legal estate, the only question there being, which had the better equity to call for the legal estate. Blennerhasset v. Day, 2 Ball & B. 133.

—— Trustee of Term to Secure Mortgage.]—Trustee of a term in trust for securing to a mortgagee in fee (with a power of sale) his mortgage money, and subject thereto in trust for the mortgagor, his heirs, &c., decreed, in a plain case, to pay the costs of a suit brought against him to compel him to execute a deed for surrendering the term to a purchaser from the mortgagee. Hampshire v. Bradley, 2 Coll. C. C. 34.

Real estates were devised to a trustee upon trust, on a given event, to convey them to certain parties, upon one of them electing which he would take. A party, in whom, as satisfied mortgagee at the date of the will and death of the testator, a satisfied mortgage term in one of the estates was vested, was held bound to execute a deed of surrender of the term to the trustee, and the cestuis que trust were held not to be necessary parties thereto. Poole v. Pass, 1 Beav. 600 ; 8 L. J., Ch. 325.

If the trustees of a term and the cestui que trust are before the court, an intermediate trustee of the equitable interest need not be a party to the bill filed to carry the trusts of the term into execution. Head v. Teynham, 1 Cox, 57.

—— Where Cestui que Trust has put an End to Trusts of Term.]—Where cestui que trust of a term had put an end to the trusts thereof :—Held, that though the purchaser had a right to an assignment of it, yet the trustees not having received full information as to the determination of the trust, they were justified in refusing to execute an assignment without the sanction of the court, and were allowed their costs. Holford v. Phipps, 3 Beav. 434 ; 10 L. J., Ch. 209. And see S. C., 4 Beav. 475 ; 5 Jur. 31.

Right of Cestui que Trust on Refusal of Trustee to Pay Trust Money.]—A trustee who, on untenable grounds, withholds trust money from his cestui que trust may commit what in equity may be considered a fraud, without being chargeable with personal fraud. Thompson v. Eastwood, 2 App. Cas. 215—H. L. (Ir.)

A legacy was given on an express trust in 1807 ; it was not paid to the original legatee. He became insolvent, released the legacy, and died. His only child came of age in 1849. Litigation on matters connected with the legacy, but not upon a direct claim to it, was going on in 1865. A. took an assignment of the legacy, and also became the administrator of the original legatee's estate, and the assignee under his insolvency ; in 1872 he filed a bill to enforce payment of the legacy with interest. He was held entitled to the assistance of a court of equity in respect of it. Ib.

—— Wife's Fund to her Husband.]—A trustee is always justified in refusing to pay over a wife's fund to the husband, even at her request, and insisting on affording her an opportunity of asserting her equity to a settlement. Swan's Trusts, In re, 3 H. & M. 34 ; 4 N. R. 53 ; 10 L. T. 334 ; 12 W. R. 738.

—— Refusal on Ground of Wife's Adultery.]—By a marriage settlement, the income of funds, part of which had previously been the property of the husband, was settled on the wife for her separate use. She was also entitled to the separate use under the same settlement of an annuity covenanted by the husband's father to be paid to her during his life. After having been married some years, the wife had eloped and was living in adultery. No proceedings had been taken in the divorce court. The trustees of the settlement having refused to pay to the wife since her elopement the income accruing to her from that part of the fund which was formerly her husband's, and the proceeds of the annuity, upon a bill by the wife to enforce the trusts of the settlement :—Ordered, that the trusts be performed, with costs to be paid by the husband and the trustees. Goldsmid v. Heathcote, 10 L. T. 811.

The court of chancery does not undertake to vindicate the laws of morality, nor can the court interfere with the laws of property, and the adultery of the wife (in the absence of any clause of forfeiture in the settlement) furnishes no ground why the court should not compel trustees to fulfil the trusts of the settlement. Ib.

—— Refusal on Ground of Doubt of Identity.]—A testator left all his property to trustees on trust for his wife for life, and all the residue to A. H., daughter of his brother W., absolutely. The testator's brother W. had three daughters, E., M., and M. A., the plaintiff, who had long prior to the will been Mrs. S., and on the ground of the doubt of identity the trustees refused to pay over the residue:—Held, that the refusal was not warranted by the circumstances; that the plaintiff's second name being A., and she being a daughter of the testator's brother W., was sufficient. Southwell v. Martin, 21 L. T. 135.

—— Refusal to Transfer without Indemnity.]—The relation of father and daughter does not of itself render the validity of an arrangement between persons thus related, respecting a reversionary interest of the daughter, so doubtful as to justify a trustee in refusing to transfer a fund, in pursuance of the arrangement, without the indemnity of the court. A trustee so refusing, and who did not show that he had endeavoured to ascertain the real nature of the transaction, was decreed to pay costs. Firmin v. Pulham, 2 De G. & Sm. 99; 12 Jur. 410.

—— Settlement of Reversion.]—Where a fund is vested by a settlement in trustees for A. for life and over, and the reversion has been subsequently settled, the person entitled to the life interest and the trustees of the subsequent settlement are entitled to call for a transfer of the trust fund, and can give the original trustees an effectual discharge, although the settlement does not provide for a transfer or payment by anticipation. Anson v. Potter, 13 Ch. D. 141; 41 L. T. 582.

—— Transfer to Trustees for Appointees under a Power.]—A married woman having a general power of appointment by will over a fund vested in trustees, appointed the fund in favour of specific persons, and nominated executors of her will:—Held, that the administration of the fund was vested in the executors, and not in the original trustees. Philbrick's Settlement, In re, 34 L. J., Ch. 368; 11 Jur. (N.S.) 558; 12 L. T. 261; 13 W. R. 570.

When a person having a special power of appointment over a fund of personalty appoints trustees for the objects of the power, the court, though recognising the validity of such an appointment, will not, as a matter of right, transfer the fund to the trustees appointed by the donee of the power. Bush v. Aldam, L. R. 19 Eq. 16.

3. Dealings between Trustee and Cestui que Trust.

General Rules.]—A trustee is bound not to do anything which can place him in a position inconsistent with the interests of the trust, or which can have a tendency to interfere with his duty in discharging it. Neither the trustee nor his representative can be allowed to retain an advantage acquired in violation of this rule. Hamilton v. Wright, 9 Cl. & F. 111.

A person who has accepted property as a trustee and held it as such is not at liberty to dispute the title of his cestui que trust, though that title may be doubtful. Neligan v. Roche, 7 Ir. Eq. R. 332.

If a trustee has a power or a trust to sell property, he must bonâ fide have some one to deal with in the sale of it. Lewis v. Hillman, 3 H. L. Cas. 607.

If an attorney or an agent can show he is entitled to purchase property, notwithstanding his character of attorney or agent, yet if, instead of openly purchasing it, he purchases it in the name of a third person, as his trustee or agent, without disclosing the fact, such purchase is void. Ib.

The circumstance that two parties stand to each other in the relation of trustee and cestui que trust does not affect any dealings between them unconnected with the subject of the trust. Thus the rule, that a purchaser cannot purchase from his cestui que trust, does not extend to a purchase by a mortgagee from his mortgagor. Knight v. Marjoribanks, 2 Mac. & G. 10; 2 Hall & Tw. 308. Affirming 11 Beav. 322; 13 Jur. 136.

Solicitor's Lien on Trust Deed.]—Where a trustee, at the request of the tenant for life, lends the trust deed to the solicitor of such tenant for life, he not being the trustee's solicitor, such loan gives no lien to the solicitor for his costs due from his client. Mayhew, In re, 7 W. R. 351.

Dealing with Agent of Trustee.]—A legatee, by dealing with the agent of a trustee, under the impression that such agent is the only person accountable to her, does not exonerate the trustee from his liability. Adams v. Clifton, 1 Russ. 297.

Sale—Setting aside—Inadequate Price—Concealment of Value.]—Part of the estate of a testator consisted of two-thirds shares of the money to arise from the sale of certain messuages and hereditaments in Sydney, which during the life of the testator had, by deed in 1846, been vested in trustees there upon trust for sale, with power to suspend the sale and to manage and to lease the property. The testator, at the time of his death in 1868, was supposed by the trustees of his will in England, and the beneficiaries, to be seised in fee simple of the two-thirds shares. As the property was expected to increase in value, all the beneficiaries agreed that the sale should be postponed, and under the mistaken impression as to the nature of the testator's interest they, by deed, in 1869, requested the trustees of the will to postpone the sale. In 1870 the sum of 10,000*l.* was offered for the entire property, but was refused. In 1875 one of the beneficiaries sold his one-fifth share of the testator's two-thirds for 1,000*l.* In March, 1880, A., another of the beneficiaries, being ill, and in pecuniary difficulties, sold his one-fifth share to S., one of the trustees of the will, for 900*l.* Shortly afterwards, both A. and S. died. In September, 1881, the entire property was sold for 30,000*l.*, and consequently A.'s share therein proved to be worth over 4,000*l.* eighteen months after the sale of it to S. for 900*l.* In an action by A.'s wife against L., the executor of S., to set aside the sale of A.'s share to S., she did not aver that A. had been guilty of fraud in the transaction, or that A. was not fully aware of what he was doing at the time of the sale; but she prayed for relief on the ground that S. stood in the position of trustee to A., who at the time of the sale was in very embarrassed circumstances, as S. knew; that the price was considerably below the real value of the share, as S. also knew; and that A. had no independent advice in the transaction:—Held, that as the purchaser and vendor stood in the positions of trustee and cestui que trust, although the trustee was not the donee of a power of sale, his duty was to see that the property realised its full value; and that the vendor being in embarrassed circumstances to the knowledge of the trustee, and the price given by the trustee for the property being greatly inadequate, the relief asked for must be granted. Plowright v. Lambert, 52 L. T. 646.

Held, also, that L. must pay the costs of the action, and was not entitled to deduct them from the share sold to S. Ib.

—— Purchase by Executor who has not Proved.]—A sale is not to be avoided merely because, when entered upon, the purchaser has the power to become trustee of the property purchased, as for instance by proving the will which relates thereto, though in point of fact he never does become such. Such a purchaser is under no disability, and in order to avoid such sale it must be shown that he in fact used his power in such a way as to render it inequitable that the sale should be upheld. Clark v. Clark, 53 L. J., P. C. 99; 9 App. Cas. 733—P. C.

—— Sale to Stranger—Repurchase by Trustee.]—The fact that a trustee has sold trust property in the hope of being able to repurchase it for himself at a future time is not of itself a sufficient ground for setting aside the sale, where the price was not inadequate or the sale improper in other respects. In a case of suspicion of improper dealings with trust property, when the parties suspected and who might have been able to give a satisfactory explanation, are all dead, if a reasonable explanation of the evidence, consistent with the honesty of the suspected transaction, can be found, the court will adopt it rather than draw inferences from the evidence which are unfavourable to the good faith of those who are no longer able to explain their acts and written words. That a transaction was legal and honest is a presumption of law which is strengthened by lapse of time. Postlethwaite, In re, Postlethwaite v. Rickman, 60 L. T. 514; 37 W. R. 200; 53 J. P. 357—C. A.

Purchasing from Cestui que Trust.]—Where a trustee purchases of his cestui que trust, the onus of proving the fairness of the transaction is not shifted by the fact that the vendor is a co-trustee. Biel's Estate, In re, Gray v. Warner, 42 L. J., Ch. 556; L. R. 16 Eq. 577; 28 L. T. 835; 21 W. R. 808.

Trustees of the marriage settlement of H.'s wife, purchased at his instigation real estate of which he was sole trustee for sale. He was employed as solicitor in the purchase, and advanced some of the purchase money. H.'s cestuis que trust disputed the sale:—Held, that the sale was not impeachable. Hickley v. Hickley, 45 L. J., Ch. 401; 2 Ch. D. 190; 34 L. T. 441; 24 W. R. 604.

There is no rule that a trustee to sell cannot be the purchaser: but however fair the transaction, it must be subject to an option in the cestui que trust, if he comes in a reasonable time, to have a resale: unless the trustee, to prevent that, purchases under an application to the court. Campbell v. Walker, 5 Ves. 678; 5 R. R. 135.

To set aside a purchase by a trustee of the trust property, it is not necessary to show that he has made an advantage. James, Ex parte, 8 Ves. 348; 7 R. R. 56.

The principle against purchases by trustees of the trust property is most strictly applicable to assignees in bankruptcy and their agents. Ib.

Form of a decree against a trustee purchasing the trust estate at an alleged under-value, and making permanent improvements thereon. Williamson v. Seaber, 3 Y. & C. 717.

The employment of counsel as confidential legal adviser disables him from purchasing for his own benefit charges on his client's estates, without his permission; and although the confidential employment ceases, the disability continues as long as the reasons on which it is founded continue to operate. Carter v. Palmer, 8 Cl. & F. 657.

The rule that a trustee cannot purchase from his cestui que trust, does not extend to a purchase by a mortgagee from his mortgagor. Knight v. Majoribanks, 2 Mac. & G. 10; 2 Hall & Tw. 308.

Mortgage from Cestui que Trust—Priority over Prior Incumbrance.]—A trustee, who takes, without notice of a prior equitable incumbrance, a mortgage from his cestui que trust upon the property in which he holds the legal estate, is entitled to the advantage given by that legal estate, and by virtue thereof obtains priority for his mortgage over the prior incumbrance. Dictum of James, V.-C., in Phipps v. Lovegrove (L. R. 16 Eq. 80) approved and followed. Newman v. Newman, 54 L. J., Ch. 598; 28 Ch. D. 674; 52 L. T. 422; 33 W. R. 505.

4. Information as to Trust Fund.

Right of Cestui que Trust—Reversionary Legatee.]—A person entitled to a vested reversionary pecuniary legacy of small amount is entitled to have from the trustees of the will, at his own expense, full information as to the state of that part of the trust fund out of which his legacy is payable, or, if there has been no appropriation of securities, of the whole trust fund. This right exists although less than a year may have elapsed since the testator's death. Dartnall, In re, Sawyer v. Goddard, 64 L. J., Ch. 341; [1895] 1 Ch. 474; 12 R. 237; 72 L. T. 404; 43 W. R. 644—C. A.

Distringas—Charging Order.]—A person contingently entitled, after the death of a tenant for life, to a share of a trust fund, although assured by the trustees that the fund is invested in consols standing in their names, and free from any claims, is nevertheless entitled to an authority from the trustees enabling him to ascertain for himself at the Bank of England if there be any charging order or distringas against the consols. Tillott, In re, Lee v. Wilson, 61 L. J., Ch. 38; [1892] 1 Ch. 86; 65 L. T. 781; 40 W. R. 204.

5. Production of Title-Deeds.

To Cestui que Trust.]—Primâ facie, and in the absence of any special circumstances, a cestui que trust, even though he be only interested in the proceeds of the sale of land, is entitled to the production and inspection of all title-deeds and other documents relating to the trust estate which are in the possession of the trustees. One cestui que trust can enforce this right against the trustees, without bringing before the court the other persons beneficially interested in the property when they have no higher right than himself. Cowin, In re, Cowin v. Gravett, 56 L. J., Ch. 78 ; 33 Ch. D. 179 ; 34 W. R. 735.

Inspection.]—A cestui que trust is entitled to inspection of the deed creating the trust, notwithstanding that the trustee alleges that by exercise of a power contained in the deed the cestui que trust's interest under it has ceased. Bugden v. Tylee or South, 21 Beav. 545 ; 26 L. J., Ch. 425 ; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 783 ; 5 W. R. 128.

Opinion of Counsel.]—A trustee is not bound to produce to his cestui que trust cases laid before counsel with a view of resisting a claim by such cestui que trust, although the trustee is not personally interested. Thomas v. Secretary of State for India, 18 W. R. 312.

6. Option as to Interest or Profits.

Trust Funds Employed in Trade.]—Where a trustee has an infant's money to lay out for his benefit, and employs it in his trade, the court will give an option for the benefit of the infant either to have interest or the profits of the trade. Anon., 2 Ves. 630. S. P., Bate v. Scales, 12 Ves. 402.

If a trustee mixes trust fund with his private moneys and employs both in a trade, an adventure of his own, the cestui que trust may, if he prefers it, insist upon having a proportionate share of the profits, instead of interest on the amount of the trust funds so employed. Docker v. Somes, 2 Myl. & K. 655 ; 3 L. J., Ch. 200. And see Vyse v. Foster, 44 L. J., Ch. 37 ; L. R. 7 H. L. 318 ; 31 L. T. 177 ; 23 W. R. 355.

Where trust property is employed in trade without authority, the cestuis que trust must elect to take either the profits for the whole period, or interest for the whole period. Circumstances may arise to entitle them to take profits for one and interest for another part of the period ; but a notice of dissolution of partnership, published for a particular purpose, and not accompanied by a settlement of accounts or transfer of the property, is not sufficient. Heathcote v. Hulme, 1 J. & W. 122.

Difficulties of enforcing a cestui que trust's right (however clear) to participate in profits of trade carried on in part with trust fund. See Wedderburn v. Wedderburn, 2 Myl. & Cr. 41 ; 8 L. J., Ch. 177 ; 3 Jur. 596. Affirming 2 Keen, 722.

7. Lien.

Lien of Cestuis que Trust inter se.]—Where one cestui que trust procures the trust money to be laid out improperly, and part of it is consequently lost, the other cestuis que trust are entitled, as against him, in a suit properly constituted for that purpose, to have their shares of the trust money made good out of his share of that which is ultimately recovered. But if the bill prays relief against the trustees only, the liability of the share of that cestui que trust cannot be enforced against him. Phillipson v. Gatty, 2 Hall & Tw. 459. Affirming 7 Hare, 516 ; 13 Jur. 318.

Under a will, a trustee held an aggregate fund in trust, as to one-third each for A., B., and C. respectively for life, with remainder to their respective children. He, without any authority under the will, transferred one-third of the fund to the trustees of the respective settlements of A., B., and C. The share of B. having been dissipated by her trustees :—Held, that B.'s children were entitled to participate in A.'s third, which was still remaining in her trustees' hands. Browne v. Butter, 24 Beav. 159.

Lien of Cestuis que Trust on Beneficial Interest of Trustees.]—A plaintiff sued his trustee, to make him responsible for a trust fund which had been wrongfully paid to the plaintiff's father. The plaintiff had, as one of the next of kin of his father, received two-thirds of his estate :—Held, that the father's assets in the hands of the plaintiff were primarily liable to make good two-thirds of the trust fund in exoneration of the trustee. Orrett v. Corser, 21 Beav. 52 ; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 882 ; 3 W. R. 604.

—— Fund in Court.]—The personal interests of a trustee in a trust fund in court will be made applicable to the discharge of all claims against him as trustee. Irby v. Irby, 25 Beav. 633 ; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 989 ; 6 W. R. 853.

A. was entitled to a share of funds held upon the trusts of his father's marriage settlement, and for which his father's estate was liable. He was one of his father's executors. In a suit to administer the trusts of the settlement and his father's estate, a large balance was found due from A. as executor :—Held, that the trustees of the settlement were entitled to retain such balance out of A.'s share, and that purchasers from A., pending the suit, with notice of the proceedings, were bound by the same equity. Ib.

—— Executrix and Tenant for Life.]—An executrix and tenant for life unnecessarily and improperly sold out a sum of stock. A common decree for an account was made against her representatives :—Held, that her estate was liable to replace the stock and dividends, and that relief might be had on further directions, though the particular matter was not charged by the bill. Davenport v. Stafford, 14 Beav. 319.

—— Trustee and Cestui que Trust of Voluntary Deed.]—A trustee of a voluntary deed, under which he is also a cestui que trust, having concurred in allowing the settlor to dispose of parts of the trust property :—Held, that he was not entitled to have relief granted on a bill filed by one of the cestuis que trust extended for his benefit. Parnell v. Hingston, 3 Sm. & G. 337 ; 4 W. R. 794.

—— Cestui que Trust enforcing Remedy against Defaulting Trustee.]—Cestuis que trust do not, by enforcing their remedy against a defaulting trustee personally, lose their lien on the security on which the trust money has been invested. Francis v. Francis, 5 De G. M. & G. 108.

—— Interest under Will acquired by Trustee—Assignee from Trustee—Beneficial Derivative Interest.]—The rule that a defaulting trustee cannot claim, as against his cestui que trust, any beneficial interest in the trust estate until he has made good his default, and that his assignee is in no better position, even where the default has been committed after the assignment, applies not only to shares taken by the trustee under the instrument creating the trust, but also to derivative interests acquired by him in the trust estate. Doering v. Doering, 58 L. J., Ch. 553 ; 42 Ch. D. 203 ; 37 W. R. 796.

Mrs. D., an executor and trustee entitled under a will to a life interest in a trust fund, took assignments from two of the beneficiaries of their reversionary shares in the fund, and mortgaged the two shares so acquired to F. Mrs. D. was afterwards found a defaulter, and died insolvent : —Held, that F. took subject to all the equities against his mortgagor, and that the beneficiaries under the will were entitled to have the default of Mrs. D. made good out of the shares in the estate which had been acquired by her in priority to the claims of her mortgagee. Ib.

—— Bankruptcy of Trustee.]—A testator devises freehold property to trustees, of whom the bankrupt is one, upon trust to sell and divide the proceeds equally amongst his brothers and sisters, including the bankrupt and his co-trustee. The cestuis que trust, in consideration of a specific sum stated in the deed to be paid to each of them, but which was in fact not paid, convey the estate to the bankrupt, who a few days afterwards gives each of the cestuis que trust two promissory notes for the payment of the money by instalments, but the notes are never paid :—Held, that the cestuis que trust had a lien on the estate in the hands of the bankrupt's assignees, for the money still remaining unpaid. Latey, Ex parte, 1 Deac. 557 ; 2 Mont. & Ayr. 609 ; 5 L. J., Bk. 27.

—— Bankrupt Trustee entitled to Equitable Interest.]—A testator devised real estate to his nine children, nominatim as tenants in common, giving a power to three of them to sell the whole to avoid the difficulties of partition. W., one of the three, conducted certain sales under the power, retained more than his share of the purchase moneys, and went into liquidation. Further sales were effected, and out of the proceeds a further sum was paid to W.'s trustees in liquidation in respect of, and in excess of, his share :—Held, that all purchase moneys received by the trustees were impressed with a trust under the will, and that W.'s equitable interest therein was liable to recoup the other beneficiaries. Brown, In re, Dixon v. Brown, 55 L. J., Ch. 556 ; 32 Ch. D. 597 ; 54 L. T. 789.

—— Bankrupt Trustee's Reversionary Interest.]—A bankrupt's reversionary interest under the trusts of a will ordered to be sold, and the proceeds applied in making good moneys which had come to his hands as trustee under the same trusts, and had been misapplied. Hardman, Ex parte, Molyneux, In re, 3 Mont. D. & D. 559.

A trustee and executor, who took a life interest in his testator's residuary real and personal estate, misappropriated and wasted portions of the estates specifically devised and bequeathed, and subsequently became bankrupt :—Held, that his estate in the residuary realty being legal could not be applied in making good his breaches of trust. Fox v. Buckley, 3 Ch. D. 508 ; 25 W. R. 170.

8. Liability of Cestui que Trust for Loss of Trust Fund.

In General.]—Where a trust fund is directed to be laid out in public funds till a purchaser can be found, and loss happens, it must fall in average on all those entitled to it. Chambers v. Chambers, Fitzg. 127.

The interest which a party takes under a settlement, is liable to make good any breach of trust or other liability which he may have incurred under it, and that though the settlement is effected by distinct deeds. Woodyatt v. Gresley, 8 Sim. 180.

A plaintiff sued his trustee, to make him responsible for a trust fund which had been wrongfully paid to the plaintiff's father. The plaintiff had, as one of the next-of-kin of his father, received two-thirds of his estate :—Held, that the father's assets in the hands of the plaintiff were primarily liable to make good two-thirds of the trust fund, in exoneration of the trustee. Orrett v. Corser, 21 Beav. 52 ; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 882 ; 3 W. R. 604.

Part of Fund Distributed.]—Where, in the case of an authorised investment of trust funds, a loss has arisen after the distribution of a part of the funds among some only of the beneficiaries, such loss must be borne by the beneficiaries in the proportions of their several and respective shares remaining undistributed. Bacon's Settlement Trusts, In re, Hutton v. Anderson, 58 L. J., Ch. 823 ; 42 Ch. D. 559 ; 61 L. T. 458.

Liability of Tenant for Life—Satisfaction.]—By a marriage settlement of 1832, real and personal estate of H., the intended wife, was conveyed to trustees in trust for R., the intended husband, for life, and after the death of the survivor of R. and H., in trust for the children of the marriage, as R. and H. or the survivor should appoint, and in default of appointment for the children equally. The trustees allowed R. to obtain possession of the trust fund, which he mixed with moneys of his own, and in 1861 one of the trustees commenced a suit to compel him to replace the fund. By arrangement of the trustees with R., he and H., by deed of the 25th September, 1861, irrevocably appointed the fund equally among the children, four of whom were of age, and one (the plaintiff) a minor. On the following day the four adult children, and two years afterwards the plaintiff, when of age, executed a deed releasing the trustees from the trusts of the settlement. The children executed the release by the direction of their father, without any professional advice or assistance, and in ignorance of its contents or effect, and of their rights under the settlement. R. from time to time paid sums of money for the plaintiff ; he purchased for the plaintiff a commission in the army, paid for his outfit, &c., made him an adequate yearly allowance, and paid a large sum for his promotion. No one of the sums so advanced was equal in amount to the plaintiff's share of the trust fund, nor was there any evidence that it was stated at the time of the advances, or understood between the plaintiff and R., that they were made out of the trust fund in R.'s hands:—Held, 1st, that the release should be set aside ; 2nd, that R.'s position was that of a debtor to his five children for their respective shares of the trust fund ; 3rd, that the sums advanced being respectively less in amount than the plaintiff's share was not a satisfaction of it, pro tanto, and that R. was not entitled to credit for them. Reade v. Reade, 9 L. R. Ir. 409—C. A.

When Estate Discharged.]—An estate having once borne a charge in favour of legatees or creditors, is discharged, though the fund has been misapplied by the trustees. Omerod v. Hardman, 5 Ves. 736. See 6 R. R. 19 n.

A loss happening by the default of a trustee appointed by a testator falls on the legatees, and the estate is discharged from it. Hutchinson v. Massareene, 2 Ball & B. 54.

Where lands are devised to trustees to raise money for several purposes, and they raise the money out of the profits, the land is thereby discharged, and the persons concerned must resort to the trustees. Juxon v. Brain, Pre. Ch. 143.

Trustee appointed for raising and paying a portion of 500*l.* to A. Trustee enters and gives judgment to A. for paying the 500*l.* to A. when raised; the trustee raises the 500*l.* and more, and becomes insolvent; whether the land is discharged. Harrison v. Cage, 2 Vern. 85.

Land settled in trust to pay debts is discharged as soon as the money is raised, though misapplied by the trustees. Anon., 1 Salk. 153.

If lands are appointed to pay debts, the heir is entitled to them when the debts are paid; and if to be sold, he is entitled to the surplus; but if there be any abuse, his remedy is against the trustee, and not against the purchaser. Culpepper v. Aston, 2 Ch. Ca. 115. Sed quære, if a purchaser with notice might not be affected. Ib.

Where a trustee was directed to apply the rents of a leasehold estate in paying the fines on renewal, and he misapplied the rents which ought to have been so employed:—Held, that the loss must fall on the tenant for life, and not upon the trust estate generally. Solley v. Wood, 29 Beav. 482; 30 L. J., Ch. 813; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 1225.

Where trust funds have been lost by a breach of trust, moneys recovered from the estate of a trustee who has made default for both principal trust funds and the income thereof, are applicable in the first instance in reduction of the principal debt. Grabowski's Settlement, In re, 37 L. J., Ch. 926; L. R. 6 Eq. 12.

Sale — Collusion Between Creditors and Tenants for Life.]—Sale declared to be made subject to the trusts of the testator's will, where, under a decree that his real estate (which was devised in strict settlement, subject to debts) should be sold, the sale had been effected by collusion between the creditors and tenants for life. Manaton v. Molesworth, 1 Eden, 18.

9. Remedies for Breach of Trust.

a. In General.

Remedy by Way of Injunction.]—When any act involving a breach of trust is intended to be done, though not in its consequences irremediable, the court will prevent it by injunction. Att.-Gen. v. Aspinall or Liverpool Corporation, 2 Myl. & Cr. 613; 7 L. J., Ch. 51; 1 Jur. 812.

Injunction to restrain an action at law to recover money lent in breach of trust refused. Lambert v. Lambert, 5 Ir. Eq. R. 339. And see Snare v. Baker, 13 Jur. 203.

Quære, whether a cestui que trust can have an injunction to restrain his trustees from assenting to a bill in parliament. Parker v. Dunn River Navigation Co., 1 De G. & Sm. 192; 11 Jur. 624.

Criminal Proceedings for Breach of Trust.]—The court sanctioned criminal proceedings under s. 13 of the 20 & 21 Vict. c. 54 (similar to the 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 80), upon an affidavit that a trustee had paid 1,409*l.* into his own bankers, had drawn out the whole with the exception of 28*l.*, and had paid a private debt of 150*l.* out of the trust fund. Wadham v. Rigg, 1 Dr. & Sm. 216.

Writ de Contumace Capiendo.]—The ecclesiastical court had no jurisdiction over trusts, and therefore, where a party, sued as a trustee, was arrested on a writ de contumace capiendo, the court of king's bench discharged him out of custody. Jenkins, Ex parte, 1 B. & C. 655.

Decree for Execution of Trusts.]—Under 15 & 16 Vict. c. 86, s. 42, a cestui que trust is not entitled as of right to a decree for execution of the trusts unless the case is in its particular circumstances a proper one for making such a decree. M'Wade v. Brodhurst, 24 W. R. 232.

Decree for Repayment of Money Wrongfully Lent.]—Where trustees lent the trust moneys to one of the cestuis que trust upon a contract which constituted a breach of trust, the court, in a suit by the trustees against all the cestuis que trust, refused, as against the cestuis que trust who had obtained the loan, to make a decree for the repayment of the money, contrary to the terms of the contract. Phillipson v. Gatty, 2 Hall & Tw. 459. Affirming 7 Hare, 516; 13 Jur. 318.

On a bill filed, by an incumbrancer of the interest of a deceased tenant for life in a fund, against a party sought to be made accountable in respect of a breach of trust affecting the whole fund, to which suit the cestuis que trust in remainder were also made parties, a decree directing the restitution of the whole fund was varied, on appeal, by limiting the relief to the restitution of so much only of the interest of the fund as had accrued in the lifetime of the tenant for life. Rackham v. Siddall, 1 Mac. & G. 607; 2 Hall & Tw. 44. Varying, on this point, 16 Sim. 297; 12 Jur. 640.

Bankruptcy Act—Repayment of Money by Trustee on Eve of Bankruptcy.]—An actual sale of goods for money, the vendor intending to use the purchase-money in making a voluntary payment, and the purchaser, knowing of that intention, is not a fraudulent transfer within s. 6, sub-s. 2, of the Bankruptcy Act, 1869. If a debtor on the eve of bankruptcy voluntarily makes good trust money which he has misapplied, the payment cannot be set aside as a fraudulent preference of the trust estate. Stubbins, Ex parte, Wilkinson, In re, 50 L. J., Ch. 547; 17 Ch. D. 58; 44 L. T. 877; 29 W. R. 653.

Within three months before the filing of a liquidation petition the debtor, who was one of the executors of a will, sold some goods to his co-executor with the intention of applying the purchase money in repaying to the testator's estate money which he had improperly abstracted from it. This intention was known to the co-executor, and the purchase money was, with his knowledge, immediately after its payment by him, paid by the vendor into a bank to the credit of the executors:—Held, that the transaction was not either a fraudulent preference within s. 92 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1869, or a fraudulent transfer of property within s. 6, sub-s. 2, and that neither the co-executor nor the testator's estate could be compelled to refund the money. Ib.

Attachment.]—See DEBTORS ACT.

Proof in Bankruptcy.]—See BANKRUPTCY.

Right to Proceed against one Trustee.]—Right of a cestui que trust to proceed separately against one trustee implicated in a joint breach of trust. Walker v. Symonds, 3 Swanst. 75 ; 19 R. R. 155.

—— Different Sets of Trustees.]—A bill by a widow and children (who were infants), against A., B., C., and D., to have the trusts of two deeds and of a will, under which they were interested, carried into execution, is not multifarious, though A. and B. were the trustees of one of the deeds, C. and D. of the other, and A. B. and C. of the will. Campbell v. Mackay, 7 Sim. 564 ; 1 Myl. & Cr. 603.

Two classes of trustees had committed a breach of trust :—Held, that the cestuis que trust might proceed against the one class, without making the other class parties. M'Gachen v. Dew, 15 Beav. 84.

—— Estate of Trustee Secondarily Liable.]—Where the estate of a trustee is secondarily liable, in consequence of a breach of trust by a co-trustee, the cestui que trust is bound to pursue his demand against the former estate with due diligence. Newham v. Newham, 1 L. J. (o.s.) Ch. 23.

Right to Intervene on Garnishee Summons.]—A garnishee summons having been issued to attach certain moneys due to the judgment debtor on a judgment. the judgment creditor received notice from a third person that she claimed the said moneys as trust moneys recovered for her benefit by the judgment debtor as her trustee. On the hearing of the summons no suggestion was made by the garnishee under Ord. XLV. r. 6, that the moneys sought to be attached belonged to some third person, and the master refused to hear a solicitor on behalf of the claimant, on the ground that no such suggestion, as aforesaid, having been made he had no power under Ord. XLV. rr. 6, 7, to hear him, and made the order absolute :—Held, that where in garnishee proceedings circumstances are brought to the knowledge of the master which afford reasonable ground for supposing that the money sought to be attached is trust money, the master should exercise an equitable jurisdiction, and withhold the order absolute, and order the money to be paid into court to abide the event of the inquiry. Roberts v. Death, 51 L. J., Q. B. 15 ; 8 Q. B. D. 319 ; 46 L. T. 246 ; 30 W. R. 76—C. A.

Sufficiency of Interest to Maintain Administration.]—A member of a class, designated as the objects entitled to a trust fund in the event of the happening of one or more contingencies, has a sufficient interest to maintain an action for the protection of the fund if at the time of action brought the maximum number of the class is ascertained, although it be still uncertain whether he will ultimately form one of the members of that class. Peacock v. Colling, 54 L. J., Ch. 743 ; 53 L. T. 620 ; 33 W. R. 528—C. A.

b. Attachment.

For Non-Payment of Money—Debtors Act, 1869.]—A trustee who has received trust money is deemed to have it in his possession until he discharges himself of his trust, and he may be attached, as being within the third exception to s. 4 of the Debtors Act, 1869, for making default in payment of a sum so received, and ordered by a court of equity to be paid by him, notwithstanding that he may have parted with the actual possession of, or control over, the money prior to the order for payment. Middleton v. Chichester, 40 L. J., Ch. 237 ; L. R. 6 Ch. 152 ; 24 L. T. 173 ; 19 W. R. 299, 369.

But interest, due from him in respect of trust money so received is not money in his possession or under his control, and an attachment will not issue for non-compliance with an order directing payment of such interest. Ib.

The court has no discretion to refuse an application for leave to issue a writ of attachment against a person making default in payment of money in a case falling within exception 3 of s. 4 of the Debtors Act, 1869. Evans v. Bear, L. R. 10 Ch. 76 ; 31 L. T. 726 ; 23 W. R. 67.

A trustee, who had been ordered in a suit to pay into court an amount admitted to be due from him, and mixed with his own moneys, was adjudicated bankrupt :—Held, that although the debt was one from which an order of discharge would not release him, still, as it was a debt provable under the bankruptcy, he was, pending the bankruptcy proceedings, protected by the Bankruptcy Act, 1869, s. 12, from attachment for disobedience to the order. Cobham v. Dalton, 44 L. J., Ch. 702 ; L. R. 10 Ch. 655 ; 23 W. R. 865.

A residuary legatee, being entitled to a sum of money which the trustee of the will admitted having received, obtained judgment against the trustee in an action in the exchequer division, and levied execution. The execution did not produce sufficient to satisfy the judgment ; and the plaintiff applied for an order on the trustee to pay the money within a definite time, intending, on his making default, to attach him under s. 4, sub-s. 3 of the Debtors Act, 1869 :—Held, that the order asked for could not be obtained after judgment in a common law division. Drewitt v. Edwards, 37 L. T. 622 ; 26 W. R. 122—C. A.

The 32 & 33 Vict. c. 62, s. 4, extends to an application under 41 Geo. 3, c. 90, to commit for disobedience to a decree of the Irish court of chancery. Ferguson v. Ferguson, 44 L. J., Ch. 615 ; L. R. 10 Ch. 661.

But a trustee who has been ordered to pay money which he had neglected to recover is not within the third exception of that section, and cannot be committed for default in paying the money. Ib.

Application, how made.]—Semble, that an order for an attachment against a defendant who is said to be within that exception ought not to be made ex parte. Ib.

For Non-Transfer of Funds.]—When a trustee is ordered to transfer a fund of consols admitted to be due from him and subsequently default is made, a writ of attachment will issue. Digby v. Turner, 28 L. T. 296 ; 21 W. R. 471.

For Non-Execution of Lease.]—When a person has been directed to execute a lease, but refuses to do so, the court can only enforce such execution by attachment, the Trustee Act, 1850, having omitted to provide for such a case. Grace v. Baynton, 25 W. R. 506. But see Hall v. Hale, 51 L. T. 226. See also Judicature Act, 1884 (47 & 48 Vict. c. 61), s. 14, Ord. XLII. r. 7.

c. Receiver.

Appointment—Constructive Trust.]—The 3 & 4 Vict. c. 105, s. 21, does not authorise the appointment of a receiver in a case of constructive trust; therefore the court refused to appoint a receiver where the interest of the conusor of a judgment in a lease had been evicted for non-payment of rent, and a new lease had been granted to a third party under circumstances which would constitute the new lease a graft. Cassidy v. Hopkins, 10 Ir. Eq. R. 208.

—— Trustee with Power of Entry and Distress.]—Receiver ought not to be appointed where there is a trustee with power of entry and distress. Buxton v. Monkhouse, G. Cooper, 41.

—— Rent in Arrear.]—Where the payment of rents, in consequence of disputes among the trustees, had been permitted to fall into arrear, on a bill filed by the plaintiff, who was entitled to the rents and profits for her life, against the trustees, the court ordered a receiver to be appointed, and the costs of the suit to be paid by the trustees. Wilson v. Wilson, 2 Keen, 249.

—— Corporation.]—The court refused to appoint a receiver of a charity estate against a corporation as trustees. Att.-Gen. v. Stafford Corporation, Barnard. 33.

—— West India Estate.]—Receiver of a West India estate applied for by one of the parties entitled to a charge thereon against the trustee, refused, notwithstanding the estate was depreciated in value, and incumbrances thereon were increasing, the management of the trustee not appearing to be improper. Barkley v. Reay (Lord), 2 Hare, 308.

—— Heir substituted as Trustee to Execute Devise to Charity.]—Where an heir had, by decree, been substituted as trustee to execute a devise to charity, upon his laches, an account decreed, and receiver appointed. Att.-Gen. v. Bowyer, 3 Ves. 714; 4 R. R. 132.

—— Trustee becoming Bankrupt.]—Executor and trustee becoming bankrupt, a receiver was appointed, though testator knew the commission had issued. Langley v. Hawk. 5 Madd. 46.

A receiver will be appointed where an executrix and trustee is bankrupt. Gladdon v. Stoneman, 1 Madd. 143 n.

—— Majority of Trustees Acting alone.]—There being some disagreement between three trustees, the majority acted alone and took securities in their own names, omitting the name of the dissentient trustee:—Held, that the plaintiff, who was interested in the trust property, was entitled to a receiver. Scale v. Scale, 22 Beav. 584.

—— Trustees making Default in Passing Accounts.]—In an administration suit, where an order had been made that the trustees of the estate of the testator in the cause should continue to receive the rents and profits and proceeds of the estate, and keep down the annuities bequeathed by his will, and from time to time pass their accounts in chambers, and pay in their balances, an order appointing a receiver was made in chambers, by a vice-chancellor personally, upon the application of some of the beneficiaries. upon the ground that the trustees had made default in passing their accounts. The trustees and other parties opposed the application:—Held, that this was a matter connected with the management of property within the 15 & 16 Vict. c. 80, s. 26, and that the judge had jurisdiction to make the order in chambers. Booth v. Coulton, 16 W. R. 683.

—— On Breach of Trust.]—A receiver appointed where the trustees and executors had neglected to get in the testator's estate, and had thereby deprived infant legatees of their maintenance, and in consequence of non-performance of duty and general misconduct. Richards v. Perkins, 3 Y. & C. 299; 8 L. J., Ex. Eq. 57; 3 Jur. 168.

Mortgagee in trust had been guilty of breaches of trust, in respect of which a suit by his cestuis que trust (infants) was pending against him. He was restrained, on the petition of the cestuis que trust, from receiving the mortgage money under a decree which had been made in a prior foreclosure suit, and the solicitor of the cestuis que trust, the plaintiffs in the subsequent suit, was appointed in his stead to receive the same, without giving the usual security. The court refused to appoint a nominee of the cestuis que trust mentioned in the petition, without security, he not being an officer of the court. Snare v. Baker, 13 Jur. 203.

Held, too, that the application was rightly made by petition. Ib.

A husband contracted for a lease of some premises, and he afterwards induced the trustees of his marriage settlement, who held moneys for the separate use of his wife, without power of anticipation, to act in breach of their trust, and to purchase the property. The property was conveyed to the trustees, and, by a deed executed by the husband and wife, it was declared that it should be held for their indemnity and on the trusts of the settlement. The husband laid out very considerable sums of money in buildings and repairs, and, with the consent of the wife, was permitted to receive the rents. After some years, disputes arose; the trustees insisted on receiving the rents, and proceeded at law to enforce their rights; whereupon the husband filed a bill against the trustees and his wife, claiming a lease under the agreement, and asking for a sale of the property, and for the application of the produce, first, in replacement of the trust funds, and afterwards, in reimbursing the plaintiff his outlay. A motion for a receiver was refused with costs. Wiles v. Cooper, 9 Beav. 294; 15 L. J., Ch. 129.

Where by one deed of settlement a fund and estates of the wife were settled to her for life, remainder in trust for the children of the marriage, and by another deed the husband settled a rent-charge on his estates in trust for the wife for life, she, after her husband's death, obtained, by fraud and concealment of the settlement, the fund to be transferred to her, and assigned her life interest in her estates to a party with notice of the fraud:—Held, that the rents of her estates and the rent-charge were liable to be applied in replacing the fund, and a receiver appointed. Woodyatt v. Gressley, 8 Sim. 180.

Where property has been administered and applied without complaint according to a uniform course of management for a long series of years, the court will not, by an interlocutory order, disturb the possession upon the ground that such application is a breach of trust, unless it is perfectly clear that the party in whom the property is vested is a mere naked trustee, and has not, even to a limited extent, any of the rights or interests of an owner. A motion for appointment of a receiver of the estates vested in the Irish Society, at the instance of one of the London companies, claiming a beneficial interest in the income of the estates, was therefore refused. Skinners' Co. v. Irish Society, 1 Myl. & Cr. 162. And see S. C., 12 Cl. & F. 425; 9 Jur. 1043—H. L. (E.)

Receiver refused, though as between parties who stood in the relative situation of cestui que trust and trustee, and though the latter, against whom the receiver was prayed, admitted that he had purchased the trust property, the ground of the decision being, though the case was one of suspicion, that the court could not interfere till the purchase was actually set aside. George v. Evans, 4 Y. & C. 211.

Where a portion of a trust fund had been lost, that is primâ facie a breach of trust, and a sufficient ground for the appointment of a receiver on an interlocutory application. Evans v. Coventry, 5 De G. M. & G. 911; 3 Eq. R. 545; 3 W. R. 149.

Held, also, that objections to the bill on the ground of misjoinder, multifariousness, or want of parties, were no answer to such an application. Ib.

—— On Disclaimer.]—Where one of two trustees of real estate declines to act, the court will appoint a receiver on behalf of infant cestuis que trust, but with liberty to either of the trustees to offer himself. Tait v. Jenkins, 1 Y. & C. C. C. 492.

Where there are several trustees, the disclaimer of some of them is not alone a sufficient ground for the appointment of a receiver, without the consent of those who remain. Browell v. Reed, 1 Hare, 434; 11 L. J., Ch. 272; 6 Jur. 530.

Receiver appointed before answer in a case of a devise to four trustees, of whom two declined to act, all parties being before the court, and consenting. Brodie v. Barry, 3 Mer. 695.

—— Where Trustee abroad.]—Receiver appointed of a government pension, the trustee being out of the jurisdiction. Node v. Backhouse, 2 Y. & C. C. C. 529; 12 L. J., Ch. 446; 7 Jur. 808.

A receiver appointed over lands in Ireland conveyed by a trust deed, the trustee not being before the court, and although the trustee had an interest in his own right, being one of the creditors to be paid off, and appeared upon the pleadings as in possession. Malcolm v. Montgomery, 2 Moll. 500; 1 Hog. 93.

A receiver appointed of real and personal estate where the devisee in trust and personal representatives were in Jersey, and therefore out of the jurisdiction. Smith v. Smith, 10 Hare (App.) lxxi.

Discharge of Receiver on Appointment of New Trustees by Court.]—A receiver, who had been appointed in consequence of the misconduct and incapacity of trustees under a will, discharged upon the appointment of new trustees by the court. Bainbrigge v. Blair, 3 Beav. 421.

d. Inquiries and Accounts.

i. Inquiries.

See R. S. C. Ord. XV. and XXXIII.

Whether Defendant Trustee remained Liable for Acts done by him as Trustee.]—On motion a reference directed to inquire, whether the defendant, a trustee, remains accountable for any acts done by him as such, and, if not, to settle a release. —— v. Osborne, 6 Ves. 455.

Whether Trustees Released.]—Estates being devised to trustees to be sold for payment of debts, and subject thereto for the testator's infant children, the surviving trustee retains possession of one of the estates in satisfaction of debts, which he alleges himself to have paid, the testator being insolvent. On a bill for an account and conveyance of this estate by one of the children, and the representatives of another, forty-five years after the testator's death, stating that they had recently discovered the facts, special inquiries directed to ascertain whether they had any notice of the circumstances, whether they had in any manner released, and whether the trustee had advanced to the amount of the value of the estate. Chalmer v. Bradley, 1 J. & W. 51; 20 R. R. 216.

Where Discretion of Trustee on Matters of Fact.]—Where the discretion of a trustee is to be exercised upon matter of fact, the court will substitute the master, but not where the discretion is to be exercised upon matter of opinion and judgment. Walker v. Walker, 5 Madd. 424; 21 R. R. 320.

Whether Cestuis que Trust had Assented to Breach of Trust.]—In the answer to a bill for relief in respect of a breach of trust, it was alleged that some of the cestuis que trust had assented thereto:—Held, that the parties sought to be charged were entitled to an inquiry as to that fact. Fyler v. Fyler, 3 Beav. 550; 5 Jur. 187.

Inquiry refused as to the concurrence of cestui que trust, in a breach of trust, where it was not alleged by the answer, and was unsatisfactorily proved by the evidence. Lincoln v. Wright, 4 Beav. 427; 10 L. J., Ca. 331.

A suit was instituted, after a great lapse of time, and after the death of all the trustees of a will, to make the estates of such trustees liable for breaches of trust in the administration. Their representatives being personally ignorant of the matters, the court refused to declare the liability in the first instance, but directed inquiries. Kirkman v. Booth, 11 Beav. 273; 18 L. J., Ch. 25; 13 Jur. 525.

On the hearing of a cause, commenced in 1838, to charge a trustee with the loss occasioned by the bankruptcy of his co-trustee, whom, ten years before, he had permitted to acquire sole possession of the trust fund, the court not being satisfied that all the circumstances as to the fact and time of the cestui que trust's knowledge of the breach of trust were in evidence, directed an inquiry as to that fact, with liberty to either party to examine the co-trustee. Broadhurst v. Balguy, 1 Y. & C. C. C. 16.

A cestui qui trust concurring or acquiescing in breach of trust, not entitled to relief; subject to inquiry into circumstances which induced concurrence or acquiescence. Walker v. Symonds, 3 Swanst. 64; 19 R. R. 155.

As to how Trustee ought to have acted.]—Where a trustee of navy 5*l.* per cent. stock dissented from the conversion of it to 4*l.* per cents., under the statute 3 Geo. 4, c. 9, and it was charged by the bill that the dissent was given under circumstances injurious to the property, an inquiry was directed as to how he ought to have acted. Angell v. Dawson, 3 Y. & C. 308; 8 L. J., Ex. Eq. 50.

Where by the terms of a settlement 7,000*l.* stock was vested in trustees, upon certain specific trusts, and the bill alleged that one of the trustees had sold out the stock and applied part of it in discharge of a claim in no way connected with the trust:—Held, although the bill did not make a case or pray for inquiry upon this point, that the plaintiffs were, nevertheless, entitled to an inquiry; the trustee, by his answer, stating that the stock so applied had been included in the settlement by mistake, notwithstanding that he himself had been a party to, and had executed the settlement. Ib.

Corporation liable for Breach of Trust—Inquiry as to Corporate Property.]—Where a decree has declared that a corporation is liable to make good the loss occasioned by a breach of trust, the court will not specifically charge the loss upon the general corporate property; but will leave the plaintiff to enforce his remedy by the usual process against a corporation. An order, therefore, contained in such a decree, directing inquiries into the corporate property and the special trusts to which it was subject, with a view to charge the loss upon such portion of that property as should be subject to any special trust, was reversed. Att.-Gen. v. East Retford Corporation, 3 Myl. & Cr. 484; 8 L. J., Ch. 49; 2 Jur. 1079.

Admission of Breach of Trust by Representatives of Deceased Trustee—Denial by Beneficiaries.]—In a suit for the administration of the estate of a deceased trustee which was instituted by persons claiming to be his creditors by virtue of a breach of trust, against his executor and devisee in trust, subject to the payment of debts, and the persons beneficially interested under his will, and in which the executor and devisee in trust by answer admitted his testator's breach of trust, but the persons beneficially interested by answer denied it, and in which no evidence was entered into on the part of the plaintiffs, the common administration decree in a creditors' suit was made, without any special direction for inquiry respecting the breach of trust. Teague v. Fisher, 3 W. R. 587.

As to Proceeds of Trust Property received by Cestui que Trust.]—A trustee having sold certain trust property, and allowed the proceeds to be received by one of the cestuis que trust, an inquiry was directed as to the application of such proceeds, in order to ascertain the specific remedy which the trustee might have against such cestui que trust. Rackham v. Siddall, 1 Mac. & G. 607; 2 Hall & Tw. 44; 16 Sim. 297; 12 Jur. 640.

As to what Sum should have been Invested to meet Annuity.]—A testator directed his trustees to invest a sufficient sum on government or real securities or railway stock to produce an annuity of 100*l.* a year, and after the death of the annuitant to call in and divide the principal among his brothers then living, or the children of such as should be then dead. The testator left three brothers; and the trustees (of whom the annuitant was one) provided for the annuity in part by appropriating a railway debenture for 1,500*l.*, which bore interest at first at 5*l.* per cent., and afterwards at 4*l.* per cent., and in part by interest paid by one of the brothers upon a loan to him of moneys of the testator. A child of another brother who was dead, having filed a bill, during the annuitant's life, against the surviving trustees, to have a sufficient fund properly invested:—Held, that he was entitled to an inquiry as to what sum should have been invested at the end of a year from the testator's death to meet the annuity, and to a declaration that the trustees were liable to make good the sum so ascertained. Starkey v. Dyson, 24 W. R. 37.

ii. Accounts.

In General.]—Account decreed against a trustee, who having engaged the trust property in an adventure, afterwards renounced it for the trust, and declared it to be on his own account, though no part of the trust money actually laid out. Wilkinson v. Stafford, 1 Ves. 32.

The court views trustees with jealousy; and in case of two estates, one in trust, the other belonging to the trustee, will not permit him to act for his own or infant's benefit, as he pleases. Ib. 42.

Where lands are devised in trust to maintain an infant till twenty-three, and then to account, and for want of a devise over, the lands belong to the heir; the infant and heir may have an account in the meantime, upon suggesting the insolvency of the trustee. Tilly v. Simpson, Mosely, 244.

Where property is vested in trustees for the benefit of A.,—on a bill filed for the purpose of establishing securities given by A., the court will not direct any accounts against him in his absence, nor appoint a receiver. Brown v. Blount, 9 L. J. (o.s.) Ch. 74.

As to settlement of accounts between trustees not binding cestuis que trust, see Fish, In re, Bennett v. Bennett, 62 L. J., Ch. 977; [1893] 2 Ch. 413; 2 R. 467; 69 L. T. 233—C. A.

Account of Moneys received by Trustee during Infancy.]—In an action against trustees of a settlement, asking (inter alia) that each should furnish and vouch their accounts of the trust declared thereby, one of the trustees (R.) had only recently attained twenty-one. Bacon, V.-C., directed that in taking the account, the same was, as regards R., to be limited to any moneys and properties received by him since he attained twenty-one. On appeal, the court, without then determining the liability of such infant trustee, held that the proper form of decree was to order the account against the adult trustee in the usual form, directing an inquiry whether all or any and what parts of the trust property had come to the hands of R., and what had been his dealings and transactions in respect of the same, and as to the dates of, and circumstances attending, such receipts, dealings, and transactions. Garnes, In re, Garnes v. Applin, 55 L. J., Ch. 303 ; 31 Ch. D. 147 ; 54 L. T. 141 ; 34 W. R. 127—C. A.

Executors and Trustees of Deceased Partner.]—In a case where, according to the deed of partnership, a date had been fixed for payment of the share of a deceased partner, an account was directed against the surviving partners, who were also executors and trustees of the deceased partner, and had improperly retained in the property the share of the deceased partner, and accounts, in accordance with the deed of partnership, were directed up to the date fixed by the partnership deed. Townend v. Townend, 1 Giff. 201 ; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 506 ; 7 W. R. 529.

An entry in an account by trustees under a will crediting a legatee with the amount of her legacy, is binding on them when it is made knowingly, and there is nothing to show that it was done in error. Ib.

Allottee of Scrip Shares Selling.]—The purchaser of scrip shares in a provisionally registered railway company neglected to send in his scrip to be registered, after the act of parliament incorporating the company had been obtained. The company, in consequence, registered the original allottee of the shares as the owner liable to the company for calls, and, in compliance with the provisions of the Railway Act, sent him the sealed certificate of ownership. The allottee, being unable to find the scripholder, sold the shares in the market:—Held, in a suit afterwards brought by the scripholder, that the allottee was a trustee of the proceeds of the shares for the plaintiff, and liable as such to account; held, also, that the plaintiff was entitled, under the circumstances, to the costs of suit as against the defendant, although the sum recovered did not exceed 9*l.* Beckitt v. Billborough, 8 Hare, 188 ; 19 L. J., Ch. 522 ; 14 Jur. 238.

Cestui que Trust Impeaching prior Security claimed by Trustee.]—Bill by cestuis que trust and two of the trustees under a marriage settlement, against the executrix of the settlor and the remaining trustee, praying payment of the trust money, or a general administration of the settlor's assets, and seeking to impeach a prior security, claimed over the settlor's property by the defendant trustee:—Held, that a demurrer by the trustee for multifariousness and for general want of equity, must be overruled: first, because the matters contained in the bill were all matters of account, and the defendant was interested in taking the account; and, secondly, because there was a general equity against him in his character of trustee. But, semble, that a partial demurrer for want of equity would have been sustainable. Addison v. Walker, 4 Y. & C. 442 ; 10 L. J., Ex. Eq. 73.

Refusal to allow Solicitor of Cestui que Trust to Inspect Accounts.]—A testator, who died in 1852, bequeathed all the residue of his real and personal estate to trustees, unto and to the use of his granddaughter, who, with her husband, in 1856, requested the trustees to render an account. The trustees offered to allow them, "or any other person, or an accountant named by them," to inspect the accounts, but the acting trustee refused to allow their solicitor to do so, on the ground that he had lent money to them and was not inquiring in their interest, but in his own. A bill was filed for an account, which was ordered, and also that the defendants pay all the costs up to the hearing. Kemp v. Burn, 1 N. R. 257 ; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 375 ; 7 L. T. 666 ; 11 W. R. 278.

Mere Agent of Trustee.]—A mere agent of the trustee may not be accountable to the cestui que trust, but otherwise with respect to a substituted trustee, who accounts to nobody else. Myler v. Fitzpatrick, 6 Madd. 360 ; 23 R. R. 247.

A trustee, without any authority from the cestuis que trust, agreed with his agent that the latter should pay him 100*l.* a year from the trust property, and retain the residue (130*l.*) for himself. No fraud was proved against the agent (who denied any knowledge of the trust), but no explanation was given. In a suit for an account by a cestui que trust after the trustee's death:—Held, that, notwithstanding the general rule that a trustee's agent is accountable to the trustee only, an inquiry should be had of the circumstances attending the agent's appointment and his knowledge of the trusts affecting the property. Archer v. Lavender, 9 Ir. Eq. R. 220.

Annuity given in Trust to Apply it for Benefit of Another.]—When an annuity was given to A. in trust to apply it at his discretion for the benefit of B. during his life, and for his advancement, maintenance, support, or otherwise for his benefit, without being answerable for any of the moneys so laid out, or the exercise of the discretion so vested in the trustee as to the mode and extent of expending and laying out the same:—Held, that A. could not apply any portion of the annuity for his own benefit, but was bound to account for all sums not shown to be applied for the advancement, maintenance, support, or benefit of B. Wainford v. Heyl, 44 L. J., Ch. 567 ; L. R. 20 Eq. 321 ; 33 L. T. 155 ; 23 W. R. 848.

iii. Wilful Default.

General Rule as to Inquiry on Footing of Wilful Default.]—The rule of the court is, that in order to obtain an inquiry as to wilful default, the plaintiff must allege a case for such an inquiry, must pray for it, and must prove at least one act of wilful default: and although it may not be necessary in order to obtain a preliminary inquiry upon which an inquiry as to wilful default may be afterwards founded, that he should conclusively establish such an act, yet there must be such a case made out with respect to some specific item alleged in the bill as raises a doubt in the mind of the court. Sleight v. Lawson, 3 K. & J. 292 ; 26 L. J., Ch. 553 ; 5 W. R. 589. S. P., Massey v. Massey, 2 J. & H. 728 ; 1 N. R. 15 ; 32 L. J., Ch. 13 ; 7 L. T. 311 ; 11 W. R. 19.

Lord Eldon's rule, that in order to obtain an inquiry as to wilful neglect and default against an executor or a trustee, the plaintiff must allege and prove at least one act of wilful neglect or default, is still the rule, and was not intended to be relaxed by Coope v. Carter, infra. Ib.

Dicta in that case, from which the contrary has been inferred, explained. Ib.

In order to let in evidence of wilful default by a trustee, there must be specific allegation of default. Lambert v. Lambert, 10 Ir. Ch. R. 500.

A general charge of wilful omission to let lands is not sufficient to lay a ground for evidence of any particular omission. Ib.

A bill was filed against trustees, praying that the amount of the trust fund which the trustees "had, or but for their wilful neglect or default might have, received might be ascertained." At the hearing the bill was dismissed as against one trustee, and the amount and particulars of the trust fund were directed to be ascertained. Nothing was said about wilful default, nor did the trustee ask that the bill might be dismissed as to wilful default. The master made his report, which stated certain facts, and referred to certain documents, from which it was alleged that it would appear that there had been wilful default. At the hearing upon further directions, a decree was made referring it to the master to inquire whether the trustee "could with due diligence, and without wilful neglect or default, have received" more than a particular stated fund; but upon appeal it was held, that the direction as to wilful default should be struck out of the decree. Coope v. Carter, 2 De G. M. & G. 292; 21 L. J., Ch. 570.

As a general rule, in order to obtain a direction for inquiry as to wilful default against an executor or trustee, the bill must allege a case, pray for it, and one case at least must be proved; and semble, that if from admission or proof a suspicion arises whether wilful default has or has not been committed, and it appears likely that further evidence can be obtained, the court ought to direct an inquiry short of directing wilful default, but in such a way as to call the defendant's attention to it, with the view to ground thereon a new order at a future stage, directing an inquiry as to wilful default. Ib.

No Charge of Wilful Neglect or Default.]—When on a bill, against a firm of solicitors who were the trustees of a settlement, for an account, but in which there was no charge of wilful neglect or default, and no relief prayed as against it, the plaintiff succeeded in establishing his case: the court directed an inquiry as to the defendants' dealings with the trust fund, and if on taking the accounts it should appear that they had been guilty of wilful neglect or default in the discharge of their duty, they should be charged, in taking the accounts, with such wilful neglect or default. Nash v. Howell, 21 L. T. 743.

A solicitor purchased an estate from his client and took possession thereof: the sale was set aside:—Held, that A. was chargeable with the rents which, without wilful default, he might have received, although no special charge of wilful default was made by the bill. Adams v. Sworder, 4 De G. J. & S. 448; 3 N. R. 623; 33 L. J., Ch. 318; 10 L. T. 49; 12 W. R. 615.

Decree confined to Wilful Default as to Capital where Tenant for Life not Party to Suit.]—A bill to administer the estate of a testator, charging the trustee with wilful default, was filed by a person interested in the estate in remainder, the tenants for life not being parties to the suit:—Held, that the decree must be confined to an account of wilful default as to the capital, and that no relief could be obtained with respect to the income of the estate. Whitney v. Smith, L. R. 4 Ch. 513; 20 L. T. 468; 17 W. R. 579.

Trustees mere Stakeholders.]—Trustees are mere stakeholders, and cannot be affected with more than they actually received without wilful default. Sed quære. Pybus v. Smith, 1 Ves. 189.

Creditor Entitled to Decree after Prior Suit in which Common Decree for Account made.]—A creditor, who makes out a primâ facie case of misconduct in trustees, is entitled to a decree that they shall account for whatever they might have received without their wilful default or neglect; though, in a prior suit instituted by another creditor, and conducted without collusion, a common decree for an account has been previously made against them. Shepherd v. Towgood, Turn. & R. 379.

Leaseholds Settled to Separate Use of Married Woman—Non-payment of Head-rents.]—Whether the trustee of leaseholds settled to separate use of married woman, bound to see that head-rents are paid, or liable as for wilful default, if the premises are evicted for non-payment of rent, quære. Booth v. Purser, 1 Ir. Eq. R. 40.

Trustee not Recovering Moneys only Recoverable in Equity—Discretion.]—In ordinary cases it is the duty of trustees to get in the funds, but where under the terms of the instrument constituting the trust it is the duty of the trustees not to do so if in their discretion they consider it inexpedient, misconduct on their part must be proved in order to render them liable for loss, and the ordinary rules as to wilful neglect and default have little application. A cestui que trust sought to charge a trustee with breach of trust in not recovering moneys, which were recoverable only in equity:—Held, that as under the circumstances the cestui que trust might have himself sued, he could not make the trustee liable for not doing what he could at any time have himself done. Paddon v. Richardson, 7 De G. M. & G. 563; 3 Eq. R. 933; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 1192.

Liability of New Trustee for Wilful Default—Covenant to Settle After-acquired Property.]—P., a member of a firm of bankers, was trustee of a marriage settlement; and, by a breach of trust, paid a sum of 17,000*l.*, part of the trust fund, into the bank to his separate account. S., another partner of the firm, subsequently was introduced into the trust; and a deed was executed, reciting that the trust fund consisted of 13,000*l.*, and assigning certain bond debts belonging to the firm to the trustees by way of security for the 13,000*l.* These bonds were placed in a box, and remained at the bankers'; but all except one were afterwards paid off, and other bonds substituted for them. It did not appear that S. had any notice that any further sum than 13,000*l.* ever belonged to the trust. Afterwards the firm became bankrupt, and new trustees of the settlement were appointed:—Held, first, that the new trustees could prove against S.'s separate estate for the 13,000*l.*, but not for the remaining sum of 4,000*l.* Secondly, that as to the original bond, which still remained, and of which P. was sole obligee, he was both reputed and true owner, and therefore the "order and disposition" clause of the Bankruptcy Consolidation Act did not apply. Thirdly, that as to the substituted bonds, of which the firm were obligees, the firm were both reputed and true owners, but fixed with a trust for the cestuis que trust of the settlement; and therefore, in this case also the "order and disposition" clause did not apply. Fourthly, that a trustee who comes in as a new trustee of a settlement in which there is a covenant to settle after-acquired property, will not be held liable for wilful default in not securing any property that may fall in either before or after he has been appointed a trustee, unless he has had notice, or reasonable ground for suspicion, that such property exists. Geaves, Ex parte, Strahan, In re, 8 De G. M. & G. 291: 25 L. J., Bk. 53; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 651; 4 W. R. 536.

Liability of Trustee for allowing Purchase Money to Remain in Hands of Co-trustee.]—The surviving trustee of a will cannot be made liable for wilful default in respect of purchase money which was received from the sale of part of the testator's estate by a deceased co-trustee alone and misappropriated, though he joined in the receipt for the sake of conformity. Fryer's Estate, In re, Martindale v. Picquot, 3 K. & J. 317; 26 L. J., Ch. 398; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 485; 5 W. R. 552.

An executrix and trustee under a will directing an immediate sale, allows her co-trustee to sell and retain the money, joins in the conveyance and signs the receipt, and also in an assignment of railway shares where the receipt of both was necessary. On an administration summons and decree for common accounts:—Held, that she could not be made liable for wilful neglect or default on such a decree; and a certificate of the chief clerk declaring her liable was disallowed. Blakely v. Blakely, 1 Jur. (N.S.) 368; 3 W. R. 288.

—— Auctioneer Trustee.]—Where an auctioneer trustee sold property of a testator, and died thirteen months afterwards insolvent, with the purchase money in his hands, his co-trustee not having in the meantime taken any proceedings to compel him to pay over or invest the money:—Held, that there had been wilful default on the part of the surviving trustee, and that he must be charged with all moneys which, but for such default, he might have received. Williams v. Higgins, 18 L. T. 525; 16 W. R. 390.

iv. Practice.

See R. S. C., Ord. XV. and Ord. XXXIII.

In General.]—Motion by trustee under a will for the master to take the accounts, refused; wilful default being charged against him, and a cross-bill filed. Wallis v. Sarel, 8 Jur. 640.

A petition to carry into execution the trusts of a will, even though it seeks to charge a trustee for wilful default, may be rendered to the master under s. 15 of the Chancery Regulation Act (Ireland). Johnston v. Johnston, 5 Ir. Ch. R. 493.

Special decree in a bill for an account, where the accounts and vouchers were alleged, under special circumstances, to be beyond the control and power of the accounting party. The plaintiff conveyed his property to trustees for the benefit of his creditors. The trustees, who were authorised to employ an agent, committed the management of the property to an agent. The agent rendered his account to the defendants, and left England taking with him the vouchers. The trustees being unable, from the absence of the documents, to furnish a satisfactory account, the plaintiff asked that they might be charged for what, without their wilful default, they might have received. The court, however, in the first instance made a special decree ordering a general account; and if, in taking the account, it should appear that the defendants could not render a satisfactory account by reason of the non-production of the documents and vouchers, it was referred to the master to inquire, whether it was by the neglect or default of the trustees that they were unable to render a better account, with liberty to state special circumstances. Turner v. Corney, 5 Beav. 515.

A case of breach of trust was alleged on the pleadings against trustees and executors for not having sold an estate, but at the first hearing the common accounts only were directed:—Held, on further directions, that the defendants could not then be charged with the breach of trust, and that inquiries could not then be directed with that object. Green v. Badley, 7 Beav. 274.

Power to Add to or Vary Decree for Common Accounts in Chambers on Footing of Wilful Default.] — Where a decree for the common accounts against trustees, alleged to have committed a breach of trust, has been directed at the hearing of a cause, the court has no power to vary or add to the decree in chambers, by directing an account as for wilful default. Cary v. Knowles, 19 L. T. 482.

Effect of Taking of Account on Persons Born Subsequently.]—A. is tenant for life of a trust, remainder to his sons. A., before a son is born, brings a bill against the trustees, and an account is decreed and afterwards taken. This account shall bind the sons, for all persons that could be made parties were parties to the suit. Leonard v. Sussex, 2 Vern. 527.

Discretion of Court as to Date from which Account to be Taken.] — Trustees entered into possession of rent and profits, and paid them over under a trust deed to a married woman to her separate use: it afterwards appeared that she was not entitled to receive them, but that upon the true construction of a will they ought to have gone to another person. That person filed a bill, and a decree was made in his favour, but an account of the rents and profits was only ordered from the date of the filing of the bill:—Held, that whether an account should be directed from the filing of the bill, or from an anterior time, is a matter of discretion, and that the discretion had been rightly exercised. Vernon v. Wright, 7 H. L. Cas. 35.

Refusal of Trustees to Admit Assets.]—To a bill by cestuis que trust against the representatives of the trustees, charging breaches of trust, and asking, as consequential to other relief, that they might admit assets or set out accounts, one of the defendants put in an answer denying the breaches of trust, and alleging that the accounts had been settled, and a release given in the lifetime of the trustees, and refusing to admit assets or set out accounts. Exceptions to such answer were allowed, and the court refused to let them stand over till the hearing, on the ground that the plaintiffs were entitled, before going to the expense of establishing their case, to know whether there would be assets to satisfy their claim in case of success. Brookes v. Boucher, 31 L. J., Ch. 821 ; 8 Jur. (N.S.) 639 ; 10 W. R. 708.

Same Persons Trustees and Executors — Accounts to be Taken Separately.]—A testator made two persons his executors, and the same persons, with one other, the trustees of his real and personal estate. A decree was made for the administration of the estate, and the usual accounts ordered to be taken. The chief clerk required separate accounts to be taken of the receipts and payments of the executors, and of the receipts and payments of the trustees :—Held, that the accounts of the executors and trustees were rightly taken separately, and that the percentage for court fees was payable both on the gross receipts of the executors, and on the gross receipts of the trustees ; and that the receipts of the trustees properly included (1) the residue handed over to them by the executors, (2) temporary loans advanced to them by their bankers, and (3) sums transferred from the trustees' deposit account at their bankers to their drawing account. Armitage v. Elworthy, 13 Ch. D. 91 ; 41 L. T. 608 ; 28 W. R. 283.

Suit by Remainderman — Tenant for Life a Defendant — Arrears of Interest.] — In a suit instituted by the remainderman against the trustee for the restitution of the trust fund, which had been improperly invested, to which suit the tenant for life was a party defendant :—Held, that the latter could not have an account against the trustee of the arrears of interest, although he had asked such relief by his answer, the point not being raised by the bill, and there being no admission of the claim in the answer of the trustee. Goodwin v. Clewley, 2 Beav. 30 ; 3 Jur. 552.

v. Acquiescence or Delay.

Acquiescence—Knowledge of Breach of Trust.] —Trustee not protected by acquiescence of the cestui que trust, not duly informed. Ryder v. Bickerton, 3 Swanst, 81.

Trustees lending money on personal security is not of itself such gross neglect as to amount to a breach of trust, and the legatee (and afterwards his assignee) having acquiesced in such loan a bill to charge the trustees was dismissed. Harden v. Parsons, 1 Eden, 145.

Devisees in trust to sell for payment of debts, assign to the son of the devisor ; the creditors receive the interest from him for eleven years, and agree with him for an increase of interest on their debts ; the original trustees continue liable. Hardwich v. Mynd, 1 Anst. 110 ; 3 R. R. 562.

Trustees having committed a breach of trust by granting longer leases than they had power by deed to do ; the fact of the cestui que trust receiving rent from the lessees in ignorance of the invalidity of their leases, did not operate as a new agreement. But the cestui que trust having neglected to look into his rights, no account was directed beyond the filing of the bill, and no costs given to the plaintiff. Bowes v. East London Waterworks, 3 Madd. 375 ; 23 R. R. 84.

A cestui que trust concurring or acquiescing in a breach of trust :—Held, not entitled to relief subject to inquiry into the circumstances which induced concurrence or acquiescence. Walker v. Symonds, 3 Swanst. 64 ; 19 R. R. 155.

On the hearing of a cause, commenced in 1838, to charge a trustee with the loss occasioned by the bankruptcy of his co-trustee, whom, ten years before, he had permitted to acquire sole possession of the trust fund, the court not being satisfied that all the circumstances as to the fact and time of the cestui que trust's knowledge of the breach of trust were in evidence, directed an inquiry as to that fact, with liberty to either party to examine the co-trustee. Broadhurst v. Balguy, 1 Y. & C. C. C. 16.

The plaintiff, deliberately and with full notice, accepted the benefits under his mother's will, which prohibited him from setting up any claim on account of any error, irregularity, or impropriety in the execution of the trusts of her father's will :—Held, that he could not maintain a suit against the executor of the father's will, to make him accountable for the profits made by the employment of part of the trust funds in his business. Egg v. Devey, 10 Beav. 444 ; 16 L. J., Ch. 509 ; 11 Jur. 1023.

—— Non-transfer of Fund to New Trustees.]— Half of a trust fund, held on the trusts of a settlement of 1778, was resettled by a settlement of 1791. In a suit to administer the trusts of the settlement of 1778, that half was, in the year 1809, ordered to be transferred to the trustees of the settlement of 1791. The transfer was never made, nor was it ever applied for by the trustees of the settlement of 1791. In 1827 the parties beneficially entitled under the settlement of 1791 were adult and sui juris. The then present investment of the trust fund was, as it had for many years before been, an investment in India, subject to the control of the trustees of 1778 ; but those trustees were, and had long been, in England. The parties so beneficially entitled knew of and acquiesced in the investment, and never required that their half of the fund should be transferred to the trustees of 1791. The trust fund was afterwards lost by the failure, in 1830, of a house of business in India :—Held, that the parties beneficially entitled were precluded from insisting that the trustees of 1778 were liable to make good the loss by reason of their not having made the transfer to the trustees of 1791. Munch v. Cockerell, 5 Myl. & Cr. 179 ; 9 L. J., Ch. 153 ; 4 Jur. 140.

Distinction between the degree of knowledge and sanction necessary to exonerate trustees from a breach of trust, and that which is necessary to preclude the cestuis que trust from complaining of an omission which, if concurred in by the cestuis que trust, did not constitute a breach of trust. Ib.

If a person interested under a will files a bill for an account against the executors, not seeking to charge them for wilful default, and dies pending the suit, his personal representative cannot charge them by bill of revivor and supplement, if the acts complained of were known to the deceased plaintiff. Garrett v. Noble, 6 Sim. 504 ; 3 L. J., Ch. 159.

S. deposited 300*l.* in a scrivener's hands, who, without his consent, laid it out on a defective mortgage ; S. received the interest for many years, and noticed the mortgage in his receipts ; decreed, he shall bear the loss. Clark v. Perrier, 2 Free. C. C. 48.

—— Cestui que Trust not recognising Transaction.]—A cestui que trust discovering a breach of trust, but not receiving any benefit from it, or conniving in it for any purpose, and not recognising the transaction, is not precluded from complaining of it merely on the ground that he abstained from making such complaint until long after he first knew of it. Phillipson v. Gatty, 7 Hare, 516; 13 Jur. 318. Affirmed 2 Hall & Tw. 459.

Where stock stood invested in trust, for the mother for life, with remainder to her son and daughter and their children, the daughter knew of an application by the son for a loan from the trustees of part of the trust moneys, upon his personal security, and that the trustees were willing to make the loan, with the consent of her mother, the tenant for life, and that the loan was, in fact, afterwards made. The daughter objected to the loan in her communications with her mother, but did not otherwise oppose it, and had not any communication with the trustees on the subject:—Held, that this was not such acquiescence on the part of the daughter to the loan as to preclude her from charging the trustees with the breach of trust, in a suit instituted seven years after the transaction took place; held, also, that the daughter was not precluded from so charging the trustees, by the fact that she knew that the mother had (untruly) stated to her son that she (the daughter) had consented to the loan, such statement of the daughter's consent never having been communicated to the trustees, or constituted any part of the sanction or authority under which they acted. Ib.

It was not necessary to decide the simple case, whether, if the daughter had permitted the son, in the belief that the daughter assented to it, to obtain the loan from the trustees, they could have availed themselves of any defence to the suit, which the son might have, as against the daughter: for, in this case, the letters of the son to the mother, requesting the loan, and upon which the mother's consent was given, proposed not to affect the daughter's rights as against the trustees. Ib.

—— Uniform Course of Management for Years.]—Where property has been administered and applied without complaint according to a uniform course of management for a long series of years, the court will not, by an interlocutory order, disturb the possession, upon the ground that such application is a breach of trust, unless it is perfectly clear that the party in whom the property is vested is a mere naked trustee, and has not, even to a limited extent, any of the rights or interests of an owner. A motion for the appointment of a receiver of the estates vested in the Irish Society, at the instance of one of the London companies claiming a beneficial interest in the income of the estates, was therefore refused. Skinners' Co. v. Irish Society, 1 Myl. & Cr. 162.

—— Mistaken Construction of Doubtful Clause in Settlement.]—Construction of a clause in a marriage settlement. A court of equity will not direct payments made under a mistaken construction of a doubtful clause in a settlement, to be refunded after many years of acquiescence by all parties and after the death of one of the authors of the settlement, especially where subsequent family arrangements have proceeded on the footing of that construction. Clifton v. Cockburn, 3 Myl. & K. 76.

—— Knowledge by Person having no Interest at the Time.]—Where a party at the time of the misapplication of a trust fund by the trustee was cognisant of the fact, but had then no right or interest whatever to the fund, and afterwards acquired such right as administrator to the cestui que trust:—Held, that his rights as administrator were not affected by such previous knowledge on the ground of acquiescence. Where, therefore, the trustee in such a case became bankrupt after committing a breach of trust, the administrator of the cestui que trust was not prevented from proving for the amount of the interest on the trust fund which accrued due in the lifetime of the cestui que trust. Smith, Ex parte, Clark, In re, 2 Mont. D. & D. 113.

—— Receipt for Money left in Hands of One Trustee.]—C. and G. being trustees of a sum of money for B., B. gave a receipt for the money to G., and left the money in his hands on the security of his bond. G. having become insolvent, C. was held liable to make good the deficiency, there having been no acquiescence sufficient to bind B. Byass v. Gates, 2 W. R. 487.

A cestui que trust held under the circumstances not barred by delay or acquiescence. Hawkins v. Gardner, 2 Sm. & G. 441.

—— Evidence in Writing of Acquiescence.]—It is not necessary that acquiescence on the part of a cestui que trust in an improper investment should be evidenced by writing, if otherwise proved. Macleod v. Annesley, 16 Beav. 600; 22 L. J., Ch. 633; 17 Jur. 608; 1 W. R. 250.

A testator gave all his residuary real and personal estate upon trust to convert, part on his own decease and part on his wife's death, and gave the proceeds among his seven children. By a codicil this will was revoked as to one-seventh, out of which a legacy was given, and the residue to his daughter for life, and after to her children. The property was converted, and the income paid until 1838, when it appeared that a security of a malthouse, &c., upon which it had been invested was deficient by the insolvency and death of the mortgagor and the existence of deeds by which it had been previously assigned over. The trustees' defence was, that they were protected by a clause of indemnity in the will which referred to diminution by insolvency or insufficient security, and that the cestuis que trust had acquiesced by a letter and subsequent acts:—Held, that the clause referred to was not an indemnity, as the words "without their wilful default" controlled the others; that no sufficient acquiescence was proved; and that the onus of showing diligent inquiry on the part of the trustees (which had not been shown) lay upon them and not on the cestuis que trust. Stretton v. Ashmall, 3 Drew. 9; 24 L. J., Ch. 277; 3 W. R. 4.

A. a husband and B. his wife conveyed real estate belonging to the wife to trustees upon trusts for sale, and directed them to invest the purchase money in certain specified securities, and to stand possessed of them upon trust for such persons as B. should by deed or will appoint, and, in default of appointment, to pay the income to B. for her life, for her separate use, and, after her death, to stand possessed of the capital for her next of kin under the Statutes of Distribution as if she had died intestate and not under coverture. The trustees, with the assent and knowledge of B., put out the money on securities not authorised by the deed of trust, and the whole was lost. B. did not give any writing to the trustees as to the disposition of the trust money. After the money was lost B. appointed the fund to her infant children, and, shortly after, a bill was filed by these children against the trustees to make good the loss :— Held, that the plaintiffs had no claim against the trustees, and the bill was dismissed. Brewer v. Swirles, 2 Sm. & G. 219 ; 2 Eq. R. 493 ; 23 L. J., Ch. 542 ; 18 Jur. 1069 ; 2 W. R. 339.

—— Duty of Trustees to Explain to Cestuis que Trust their Rights.]—A testator by his will bequeathed the residue of his property to his executors, W. C. and N., in trust to invest and pay the income to his widow for life, and after her decease (in the events which happened) to five children. The eldest child attained twenty-one in 1839, and the youngest in June, 1846. The three executors proved the will, but N., a solicitor, was almost entirely the acting trustee. The money was left by his co-trustees in the hands of N. alone ; and on the youngest child attaining twenty-one, he, on behalf of himself and the other children, attempted to obtain payment from N., and in 1848 addressed a letter to N. consenting in effect to receive payment by instalments of 50*l.* In 1849 a bill was filed by the five children for the purpose of making the three trustees responsible :—Held, that it was the duty of the trustees N. and C., not only to have the money in their hands, but to explain to their cestuis que trust what their rights were ; and that not having been fully informed at the time of what their rights were, there was nothing in the conduct of the plaintiffs, whether in the way of acquiescence or of giving time, to deprive them of their remedy against the trustees, who were held jointly and severally liable accordingly. Burrows v. Walls, 5 De G. M. & G. 233 ; 3 Eq. R. 960 ; 3 W. R. 327.

—— Non-conversion by Trustees—Receipt by Tenant for Life of Dividends.]—A testator gave the residue of his property to trustees, with a direction to convert all his personal estate and invest the amount in the Bank of England, in trust to permit his wife to receive the rents and profits, dividends, or other annual produce for her life, and after her death to go among her children in the manner limited in the will. Part of the property was 24*l.* per annum long annuities. The trustees did not sell these long annuities, but paid the dividends for many years to the tenant for life. Two of the children joined with her in an assignment by way of mortgage of their shares in the residue. It appeared that the tenant for life had asked the trustees to convert :—Held, that the non-conversion was a breach of trust ; that the children had not acquiesced, because the dividends received by the mortgagee were received in respect of the life interest ; and that the tenant for life did not acquiesce by merely receiving the dividends which were paid to her. Bate v. Hooper, 5 De G. M. & G. 338 ; 3 W. R. 639.

—— Original Acquiescence — Subsequent Laches.]—A tenant for life acquiesced in a breach of trust by sanctioning a trustee in lending the trust moneys upon what at the time were insufficient securities. Subsequently the securities were increased in value, and but little was lost by the improper investment ; but owing to continued neglect on the part of the trustee, considerable costs were incurred, and the fund thereby decreased :—Held, that the right of the tenant for life against the trustee for subsequent laches was not lost by his original acquiescence. Lockhart v. Reilly, 25 L. J., Ch. 697 ; 4 W. R. 438.

—— Investment on Mortgage — Insufficient Security.]—The court will not visit a trustee with the consequences of a breach of trust, committed with the sanction or by the desire of the cestui que trust, or of one committed without such sanction or desire, if when it comes to the knowledge of the cestui que trust he has acquiesced in and obtained the benefit for a long period. Griffiths v. Porter, 25 Beav. 236.

Two trustees, A. and B., joined in the receipt of trust money. A. allowed B. to retain the cheque for the money, which, against the remonstrances of D., he placed in the hands of a solicitor, to invest on mortgage, and it was lost :—Held, that both were liable. Ib.

Two trustees, A. and B., had allowed trust money to be received by their solicitors. The cestui que trust authorised its investments on a mortgage by B. alone. The money being in danger, and the solicitors pressed, a mortgage was given, but as to which B. exercised no judgment, and it turned out insufficient :—Held, that both trustees were liable for the loss. Ib.

A widow, a tenant for life, desiring an increase of income, induced a trustee to invest out of a trust fund a sum exceeding two-thirds of its value on mortgage of copyhold house property, at interest at 5*l.* per cent. After the rents had become insufficient to pay the interest, her daughter, on her marriage, became entitled to one-fourth of the trust fund. The trustee having stated to the husband and wife the deficiency in the widow's income, and its cause, they accepted a small sum of money in hand in lieu of their one-fourth, and made no objection for ten years, when the widow died. Becoming then entitled to the three-fourths part of the fund, they sought by suit to charge the trustee with the deficiency :—Held, that they had so far acquiesced in the investment, and could not complain of it. Farrar v. Barraclough, 2 Sm. & G. 231 ; 2 W. R. 244.

——Cestui que Trust Receiving Income of Improper Investment.]—A tenant for life received 5*l.* per cent. on a mortgage improperly taken by trustees, and for which, on a loss, they were made responsible :—Held, that he was only entitled to 4 per cent. in taking the account of income, and that 1 per cent. must be taken as part of the subsequent income. Ib.

A cestui que trust having, with knowledge, received the income of an improper investment : —Held, bound to give credit for the difference between it and the income which would have arisen from a proper investment of the trust fund. Davies v. Hodgson, 25 Beav. 177 ; 27 L. J., Ch. 449 ; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 252 ; 6 W. R. 355.

—— Married Woman Restrained from Anticipation.]—Quære, whether a married woman who is entitled to the interest of a fund for her separate use, without restraint upon anticipation, can be bound by acquiescence in an improper investment of the fund. Ib.

Trustee of separate property of feme covert, without power of anticipation, joining in a lease for which a fine was paid and received by a third person:—Held, a breach of trust, although the feme covert (being a minor at the time) joined in the lease. Booth v. Purser, 1 Ir. Eq. R. 37.

—— Length of Time in which Acts Acquiesced in to be taken into Account.]—In a marriage settlement, a husband covenanted with the trustees, that his heirs, executors, administrators, and assigns would, after his death, pay to his wife a jointure of 40*l.* per annum; and that they would pay the trustees 400*l.* for the benefit of the children of the marriage, in case there should be any. The husband became indebted to one of the trustees, who entered up judgment against him, and insured the husband's life for the amount of the judgment. Upon the sale of the trust property:—Held, that the assignee of the trustees' judgment was entitled, in respect of the incumbrance, to priority to the settlor's wife and children; and that in considering the dealings between a trustee and his cestui que trust, the length of time in which the acts of the former had been acquiesced in, with the knowledge of the latter, was to be taken into account in favour of the trustee. M'Kenna, In re, Busteed, Ex parte, 5 L. T. 241.

—— Release to Trustee.]—A trustee permitted his co-trustee, the father of one of the cestuis que trust, to sell out the trust fund, the co-trustee depositing with him a packet of title deeds by way of indemnity. The son on coming of age, in 1851, had an interview with the trustee upon the subject. In 1855 the father, when dangerously ill, spoke to the son about the breach of trust, and desired him to call on the trustee, and obtain from him and keep the packet of deeds, which the son did. The son afterwards received a letter from his father, while still dangerously ill, requesting the son, in the event of the father's death, not to hold the trustee responsible, and inclosing the form of a memorandum for the son to copy and sign and send to the trustee, and by which the son, in consideration of the delivery up of the deeds, discharged the trustee from all liability. The father died in 1859, and in 1861 the son filed a bill, seeking to make the trustee liable for the breach of trust:—Held, that the son had by his conduct so acquiesced in the breach of trust as to preclude him from complaining of it. Farrant v. Blanchford, 1 De G. J. & S. 107; 33 L. J., Ch. 287; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 423; 7 L. T. 770; 11 W. R. 294.

When a breach of trust has been committed, from which a trustee alleges that he has been released, it is incumbent upon him to show that such release was given by the cestui que trust deliberately and advisedly, with full knowledge of all the circumstances, and of his own rights and claims against the trustee. Acquiescence may, however, be an answer to the cestui que trust; and therefore where a cestui que trust, with full knowledge of all the circumstances of the breach of trust, had taken no proceedings for ten years:—Held, to amount to acquiescence on his part. Ib.

A trustee holding a fund in trust for three children allowed their father to receive the income of their shares during their respective minorities, considering him to be unable to maintain them. Two of the children attained twenty-one in the father's lifetime, and received their shares of the capital. The father died bequeathing his property to the three children equally, and appointed the trustee his executor. The youngest child attained twenty-one soon after his death, and within a few weeks received her share of the capital of the trust fund, and signed a receipt expressing her approbation of the mode in which the income had been applied during her minority. About half a year afterwards she and her two sisters received their shares of the father's estate and gave a release by deed to the trustees. After this she filed a bill to charge the trustees with the dividends accrued on her share of the trust fund during her minority:—Held, that after having, with a knowledge of the facts, received from the trustee her share of her father's estate, which was primarily liable to the claim, and given him a release, she could not maintain the claim against him. Areline v. Mellhuish, 2 De G. J. & S. 288; 10 Jur. (N.S.) 781; 10 L. T. 830; 12 W. R. 1020.

A trustee, by omitting to invest a sum of money sufficient to pay an annuity of 100*l.* a year to a party for life, is liable, when the parties in remainder become entitled to the fund, to make good any rise in the stock, assuming it had been purchased; and although the principal directed to be invested was paid, and a release obtained, still it was set aside after a subsequent delay of ten years, and the difference in value was directed to be paid to the cestuis que trust who were illiterate and ignorant of their rights. Aspland v. Watte, 25 L. J., Ch. 53; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 968; 3 W. R. 526.

A. being tenant for life, with remainder to his children as he might appoint, and being indebted to one of the trustees of the fund, soon after his eldest son came of age, he executed the power in his eldest son's favour, and the whole fund was retained by the trustee in satisfaction of the debt. The son, who was twenty-three years of age, executed to the trustees a release of all claims in respect thereof; and eighteen years afterwards, he in conjunction with a younger brother and sister, filed a bill against the trustees to set aside the transaction. The court declared the whole transaction fraudulent and void. The trustees were ordered to restore the fund, and the father was also held responsible. Wade v. Cox, 4 L. J., Ch. 105.

—— Agreement to Release by Married Woman Restrained from Anticipation.] — A married woman, restrained from anticipation, cannot agree to release her trustees from liability incurred by their disregard of that restraint. Dickson v. Hook, 14 W. R. 552.

—— Cestui que Trust Entitled in Reversion.]—A cestui que trust, whose interest is reversionary, is not bound to assert his title until it comes into possession. He is not, however, less capable of giving his assent, by acts or otherwise, to a breach of trust by reason of his interest being in reversion. Life Association of Scotland v. Siddall, 3 De G. F. & J. 58; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 785; 4 L. T. 311; 9 W. R. 541.

A cestui que trust is not bound by acquiescence, unless fully informed of his rights, and of all the material facts and circumstances of the case. Ib.

—— Onus on Trustees to Prove Acquiescence.]—Although the onus lies upon a party relying upon acquiescence to prove the facts upon which the consent of the cestui que trust is to be inferred, there may be cases in which, from great length of time, such facts would be presumed. Ib.

When trustees have committed a breach of trust, in order to discharge themselves they must clearly show that their cestui que trust, on becoming beneficially entitled, adopted the transaction. Cope v. Clark, 18 W. R. 279.

In the year 1810 a sum of stock was transferred into the names of A. and B., in trust for a father and mother, in certain proportions, for their respective lives, with remainder to their children. Shortly afterwards, the stock was transferred by A. and B. into the name of B. only, who appropriated it to his own use. In the year 1818, the father and mother filed a bill against A. and B. to have the stock replaced; and the children (two in number) were co-plaintiffs, and, being infants, sued by their father as their next friend; but that suit was soon afterwards compromised, upon B. giving security for the payment of interest for the time past and for the time to come. A. subsequently died, and his personal estate was distributed among his legatees; and two of those legatees then died, having received their legacies; and the residuary personal estate of one of them was paid over to her residuary legatee. These distributions were made in ignorance of any demand arising out of the breach of trust in which A. had concurred. The elder of the two children attained twenty-one in 1821, and the other in 1823. In 1833 they filed a bill alone against B. and the personal representative of A. and his surviving legatees, and the personal representatives of his deceased legatees, and the residuary legatee of one of those deceased legatees, and against the father and mother of the plaintiffs, praying to have the fund replaced:—Held, that the plaintiffs were entitled to call upon the surviving legatees of A., and the personal representatives and legatees of his deceased legatees to refund; and that, without any previous inquiry as to whether the plaintiffs had known of or acquiesced in the breach of trust, or the compromise of the suit of 1818. March v. Russell, 3 Myl. & Cr. 31; 6 L. J., Ch. 303; 1 Jur. 588.

—— Same Person Trustee and Cestui que Trust.]—The trustees of a marriage settlement permitted the husband to retain the trust funds, which he appropriated to his own use. One of the trustees ultimately became entitled under the settlement to half the trust funds:—Held, that the estate of the husband was liable to refund his moiety. Butler v. Carter, 37 L. J., Ch. 270; L. R. 5 Eq. 276; 18 L. T. 11; 16 W. R. 388.

—— Will — Appointment to Second Set of Trustees—Character in which Plaintiff Sues.]—Under a settlement certain funds were held by trustees upon trust for the issue of L. S. in such manner as she should by will appoint. L. S., by her will, appointed the funds to trustees—as to two-fifths, upon trust to pay the income to her son until he should attain the age of forty years, and when and as soon as he should attain that age she directed that the trust premises should be held in trust for her said son, his executors and administrators, and provided that her said son should sell, assign, or otherwise part with his said share, the appointment in his favour should be void, and the said share should be held upon the trusts declared of the remaining three-fifth parts for the benefit of her daughter. The son died under forty without having forfeited his interest. N., the surviving trustee of the will of L. S., and who was also co-trustee with L. of the original settlement, got possession of the two-fifths and misappropriated it, and the beneficiaries under the will of the son obtained judgment for the amount against B., who was the surviving executor and trustee of the son's will, on the ground of his negligence and wilful default in not getting in the trust fund. B. having died, his executor brought this action against L. and N., seeking a declaration that they were jointly and severally liable to replace the amount so found due from B. N. had become bankrupt:—Held, that L. was not liable, on the ground that the plaintiff must be treated as representing B.; and it appearing upon the evidence that B. had, in 1872, treated N. as solely accountable to him for the two-fifths, and had done nothing to recover the fund, the plaintiff was barred by the delay and acquiescence of B. Scotney v. Lomer, 55 L. J., Ch. 443; 31 Ch. D. 380; 54 L. T. 194; 34 W. R. 407—C. A.

Lapse of Time—Settled Accounts.] — Even where the statute of limitations does not apply, the court will not entertain a suit by a cestui que trust, instituted for the purpose of challenging the accounts settled by his trustees, when the accounts and matters had been investigated twenty years before, and he had every opportunity of going into them. Lapse of time alone will be a sufficient bar to such a suit. Bright v. Legerton, 29 L. J., Ch. 852; 6 Jur. (N.S), 1179; 8 W. R. 678. Affirmed 30 L. J., Ch. 338; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 559; 3 L. T. 713; 9 W. R. 239.

—— Sale of Trust Property to a Trustee.]—A testator devised a farm to his son, to be valued by A., and one-third of the valuation to be paid to the plaintiff. In 1833 A. bought the farm himself for 750*l.*, and paid one-third to the plaintiff, who accepted it. In 1850, A. being dead, the plaintiff filed a bill to set aside the sale for inadequacy of consideration:—Held, that considering the lapse of time and the death of A., the plaintiff was too late, and the bill was dismissed. Baker v. Read, 18 Beav. 398. On appeal 3 W. R. 118.

—— Mistake of Law.]—A husband survived his wife, who was one of several equitable tenants in common. He was advised by counsel that he had no title as tenant by the curtsey, his wife never having been in possession, and that if he intended to set up such a title, he ought not to sue with his infant daughter in a partition suit which was then in contemplation. The suit was nevertheless instituted by him as the next friend of the daughter, and in 1830 a decree was obtained. A partition was made under the decree, and the legal estate in the daughter's share conveyed to the use of the father during the infancy of the daughter, in trust for her maintenance, and afterwards to her own use in fee. The daughter attained twenty-one in 1843, and married in 1847. In 1852 the father filed a bill to be relieved from the trusts, on the ground of mistake, and to have his title as tenant by the curtsey established:—Held among other things, that length of time and acquiescence and the marriage of the daughter, although without the father's consent, before the father disputed the daughter's title, constituted a sufficient answer to the suit; and that possession obtained in the character of trustee cannot be retained as one adverse to the cestui que trust, after the legal estate under which the possession was taken has determined. Stone v. Godfrey, 5 De G. M. & G. 76; 23 L. J., Ch. 769; 18 Jur. 524.

At the time when the conveyance was completed, the trustee of the will of a testator whose property was at the date of the will under contract for sale to a railway company, and who was a solicitor, took counsel's opinion as to the person to whom the purchase money was payable, and who ought to join in the conveyance, and the opinion was given in favour of the devisee. The trustee accordingly paid the money to her, and informed the plaintiff of the result, but no settlement of accounts was come to between the plaintiff and the trustee up to the time of the institution of the action, and the plaintiff had not executed any release or discharge to the trustee. This action was brought to recover the money out of the trustee's estate, after his death, and nearly five years after the payment had been made:—Held, that no case of acquiescence was made out against the plaintiff, and that he was entitled to recover from the trustee's estate the moneys received from the railway company, the amount to be recouped to the trustee's representative by his co-defendant, the devisee. Wilson v. Donald, Jackson, In re, 44 L. T. 467.

—— Waiver of Breach of Trust—Stale Demand.]—A cestui que trust who with knowledge that his trustee has committed a breach of trust obtains from him a part only of that to which he is entitled, does not thereby waive his right to such relief as he may be able to obtain unless an intention so to do can be clearly inferred from the surrounding circumstances. Cross, In re, Harston v. Tenison, 51 L. J., Ch. 645; 20 Ch. D. 109; 45 L. T. 777; 30 W. R. 376—C. A.

In November, 1860, an order was made in a suit for administering the trusts of the will of J. C., to which H. C., a former trustee, was defendant, directing her to pay into court a sum of money in respect of breaches of trust committed in 1843 and 1845, the amount of which had been ascertained by the chief clerk in the suit. H. C. went abroad, and substituted service of the order was made upon her. By the order on further consideration in 1863, H. C. appearing by counsel, certain sums of money to which she was entitled, and her life interest under the testator's will, were ordered to be impounded and paid over "to the account of H. C. funds applicable for the repayment of trust funds misappropriated," and an inquiry was directed as to what steps should be taken to obtain restitution of the funds. Certain other orders were made in the suit, but no personal order was made on H. C. for payment of the amount of her defalcation, nor any steps taken against her, although she returned to England in 1870, where she remained till her death in 1880, and her residence was known to the then trustees of the will and some of the cestuis que trust. On her death the surviving trustee of the will of J. C. brought this action against her executors, claiming the administration of her real and personal estate on behalf of himself and all other the creditors, alleging himself a creditor in respect of the unpaid balance of the sum representing the breach of trust. At the date of the institution of the action several beneficiaries under J. C.'s will were infants:—Held, that the action was not an attempt to enforce a stale demand, and that the cestuis que trust must not be taken to have elected to abandon their claim against her and to rest content with impounding her life interest: that, there being a debt due from H. C. at her death to the estate of J. C., and the trusts of his will not being completed, the surviving trustee was the proper person to bring the action, and that the cestuis que trust need not be parties. Ib.

Although as between the cestui que trust and a stranger the claim of the cestui que trust is barred by lapse of time operating against his trustee, lapse of time is no bar as between cestui que trust and trustee. Ib.

—— Married Woman Restrained from Anticipation.]—Personal estate was by settlement vested in trustees for R., a married woman, for life, without power of anticipation; and in case there should be no issue of the marriage, in case M., her husband, should survive her, as she should by deed or will appoint, and in case she should survive, for her absolutely. W., the acting trustee of the settlement, at the instance of the wife, applied the property in discharge of her husband's liabilities. M. died; and by R.'s request the trustee took no steps to realise M.'s assets. R. married again, after the lapse of some years, and in her marriage settlement recited her wish to give credit to W. for all payments made by the trustees at her request:—Held, that R. had lost her right to make the trustee liable for his breaches of trust. Rutherfoord v. Maziere, 13 Ir. Ch. R. 204.

Slaves in the West Indies were bequeathed to executors, upon trusts for a niece of the testator for her life with remainder to her children. The executors having renounced and disclaimed, administration with the will annexed was granted to the niece, who afterwards married a minor. Before her husband had attained twenty-one the husband and wife executed a settlement, reciting that the husband was, in right of the wife, possessed of the slaves, theretofore the property of her late uncle; but not in any manner referring to the will. The settlement purported to assign the slaves to trustees in trust to sell and invest the proceeds and pay the income for the separate use of the wife for life, without power of anticipation, with trusts by way of remainder to the children of the marriage. Before the husband came of age, the husband and wife sold the slaves without noticing the settlement in the contract, but paid part of the purchase money to one of the trustees of the settlement, the other trustees not concurring in or being in fact aware of the sale or payment. An amicable bill was then filed on behalf of the infant children of the marriage, to have the trusts of the settlement carried into execution, or a new settlement made in conformity with an offer of the husband to execute such settlement on receiving 3,500*l.* out of the wife's fortune. This bill contained an allegation that the proceeds of the slaves had been invested in the names of the trustees. The trustees, by their answer, admitted the truth of this allegation. The husband and wife, answering separately, disputed the validity of the settlement, and refused to be bound by it; but the husband offered to execute a settlement on the terms above mentioned. The decree declared the settlement void, and directed a new settlement to be made upon the footing of the offer made by the husband. A settlement was accordingly executed, and the 3,500*l.* paid to the husband.

Afterwards it was discovered that the admission in the trustees' answer was incorrect, the trustee who received the proceeds of the slaves having applied the money to his own use, and having by false statements induced his co-trustees to believe and admit upon the answer that the investment in their names and his had been made as there stated. His circumstances were such that any attempt to recover the amount at any period would have been hopeless. More than twenty years after the wife was aware of these circumstances she instituted a suit against the co-trustees to make them personally liable for the breach of trust:—Held, first, that the above facts, independently of the admission of the co-trustees in their answer, did not render them personally liable in respect of the proceeds of the sale of the slaves, the title of the settlors not having been such as to enable the trustees legally to possess themselves of the fund; and, secondly, that in the circumstances of the case, the admission did not create any such liability. Derbishire v. Home, 3 De G. M. & G. 80.

Semble, that a clause restraining a married woman from anticipation does not exempt her from the ordinary consequences of lapse of time and acquiescence; also, that in the circumstances above stated, the administratrix committed a breach of trust by marrying without providing for the security of the trust property; also, that having, by her separate answer in the first suit, refused to be bound by the first settlement, she could not afterwards sue the trustees for non-performance of the trusts of it; also, that her having concealed from them the nature of her title when she assumed to settle the funds, would of itself have been a defence to such a suit. Ib.

—— Express Trust—Laches.]—Where an express trust is established, mere lapse of time, if not coupled with other circumstances rendering it unjust to give relief, will not, apart from any statute of limitations, bar the claim of a cestui que trust. Cross, In re, Harston v. Tenison, supra, followed on this point. Rochefoucauld v. Boustead, 66 L. J., Ch. 74; [1897] 1 Ch. 196; 75 L. T. 502; 45 W. R. 272—C. A.

—— Constructive Trust.]—A constructive trust may be barred by long acquiescence. Hasell, Ex parte, 3 Y. & C. 617; 3 Jur. 1101.

Though no time bars a direct trust, as between cestui que trust and trustee, a constructive trust barred by long acquiescence, though the true state of the fact may be easily ascertained, and the ground of original relief was clear, and even arising out of fraud. Beckford v. Wade, 17 Ves. 97; 11 R. R. 20.

A testator died in 1810, in India, having bequeathed his English property to two infants, whom he acknowledged as his natural children; and having appointed his nephew, E., to be their guardian. Part of his property consisted of a bond, dated in 1810, in which he was obligee, the obligor being seised of real estate in Ireland. In 1811 E. obtained possession of the bond from the testator's executor; but he did not register it, nor did he ever take any steps towards realising the security. In 1821 the elder of the infants attained twenty-one; in 1832 she married; and in 1833, when the bond had become irrevocable, E., for the first time, informed the elder child and her husband of the existence of the bond; and upon finding it was then too late to register it, he handed it to the husband, directing him to see to it. No step was taken until E.'s death in 1870, after which, in 1871, a bill was filed, seeking to make E.'s estate liable as for a breach of trust. At this time the younger infant was dead, and had no legal personal representative; but his son, who was entitled to administer, was made a defendant:—Held, that the parties, by acquiescing for thirty-eight years, and waiting till E.'s death, had lost their right to make any claim against his estate. Semble, that E. was not at any time liable for any breach of trust. Sleeman v. Wilson, L. R. 13 Eq. 36; 25 L. T. 408; 20 W. R. 109.

—— Misapplication of Rates by Commissioners—Costs.]—Certain commissioners were empowered by an act of parliament to levy rates and to apply them for certain specified purposes. They had applied part, and intended to apply more, of the proceeds of such rates towards defraying the expenses of an application to parliament for an extension of their powers, such an application not being one of the purposes mentioned in the act. An injunction was granted (see 1 W. R. 323) restraining the commissioners from such further intended application. And on the hearing of the cause on a motion for decree:—Held, that although, if an earlier application to the court had been made, the misapplication of the trust funds might have been prevented, yet that the commissioners were bound to replace the trust funds; but under the circumstances, delay having taken place in applying to the court, the commissioners were excused from payment of the costs personally. Att.-Gen. v. Eastlake, 2 Eq. R. 145; 17 Jur. 801.

1. IN GENERAL.

Service out of Jurisdiction.]—Upon a petition under the Trustee Relief Act the court has jurisdiction to order service on a respondent out of the jurisdiction, and also substituted service. Bonelli's Electric Telegraph Co., In re, Cook's Claim, 43 L. J., Ch. 720; L. R. 18 Eq. 655; 31 L. T. 83; 22 W. R. 856.

The court has authority to order service, upon minors residing out of the jurisdiction, of a petition under the Trustee Acts, 1850 and 1852 (13 & 14 Vict. c. 59, and 15 & 16 Vict. c. 55); and also of a petition under the Trustee Relief Act (11 & 12 Vict. c. 68). Wycherley, In re, Dunne, In re, 1 L. R. Ir. 12.

The court has jurisdiction to order service of a petition under the Trustee Relief Act (10 & 11 Vict. c. 96), on a party out of the jurisdiction. Haney, In re, 44 L. J., Ch. 272; L.R. 10 Ch. 275; Affirming 31 L. T. 645.

No action will lie against trustees, either by their cestui que trust, or, in case of his bankruptcy, by the assignees of such cestui que trust. Allen v. Imlett, Holt, 641.

Action by Trustees—Trover—Right to Sue—Conversion of Chattels.]—Trustees having a title to chattels with an immediate right of possession can sue in trover for the chattels, although they may never have taken actual possession, but have allowed the goods to remain in the occupation of their cestui que trust; and although the title may be liable to be defeated by the claim of some third party, yet the wrongdoer cannot set up the title of that third party as a defence to an action against himself for the recovery of the goods. Barker v. Furlong, 60 L. J., Ch. 368; [1891] 2 Ch. 172; 64 L. T. 411; 39 W. R. 621.

—— Lease by Trustees—Use and Occupation.]—A., being in possession of premises under a lease from two trustees for a term which had expired, a new lease was granted for a further term, but was executed by one of the trustees only. A. paid rent to both trustees until one of them died, and for the rent due after his death the other trustee brought an action:—Held, that he might maintain the action in his own right, and was not bound to sue as surviving trustee. Wheatley v. Boyd, 7 Ex. 20; 21 L. J., Ex. 39.

—— On Covenants in Lease.]—It is no defence to an action on an indenture of lease by the trustee of a party who has become bankrupt, that the lessees have performed their covenants with the assignees of the cestui que trust. Britten v. Britten or Perrott, 2 C. & M. 597; 4 Tyrw. 473; 3 L. J. Ex. 181.

—— Policy of Insurance on Goods—Bankrupt Trustee for Assignee.]—Action on a policy of insurance on a ship and cargo, alleging an average damage or loss on a portion of the cargo insured, and a breach of the policy by reason of non-payment of the proportion of the average loss. Plea, bankruptcy of the plaintiff before action. Replication, a contract of insurance to A. before the bankruptcy, with an averment that the plaintiff sued as trustee for A. Rejoinder, that the risk ended before bankruptcy, and that the right to have a return of premium was not transferred from the plaintiff before bankruptcy:—Held, that the causes of action being both vested before bankruptcy, and being such that distinct actions might have been brought by him whilst sui juris, he was entitled to sue in his own name as trustee for that cause of action in which he had no beneficial interest at the time of his bankruptcy. It would have been otherwise had he then any beneficial interest, however small, in the cause of action itself. Boddington v. Castelli, 1 El. & Bl. 879; 1 C. L. R. 281; 23 L. J., Q. B. 31; 17 Jur. 781; 2 W. R. 359—Ex. Ch.

—— Trustee Plaintiff on Record—Cestui que Trust suing in his Name.]—Whatever constitutes an answer to a demand for which an action is brought, as against the plaintiff on the record, is a bar to the action, although brought for the benefit of others who have no mode of enforcing their claim, except by suing in the name of the plaintiff. Gibson v. Winter, 2 N. & M. 737; 5 B. & Ad. 96; 2 L. J., K. B. 130.

—— Objection of Cestui que Trust.]—The court will not add a party to the record under s. 19 of 23 & 24 Vict. c. 126, who is a trustee for a person who objects to his being so added. Sturgis v. Smith, 5 L. T. 186.

—— To Set Aside Deed.]—A testator devised his real estate to the plaintiff, and gave various legacies to his other relations; and then, after reciting that he held a farm from year to year, he declared it to be his wish, and he authorised his trustees, to give up the tenancy in favour of the plaintiff, provided the landlord would accept him as tenant, and in that event he bequeathed to him all the stock on the farm. On the testator's death it appeared that his personalty, other than the farming stock, would be insufficient to pay his debts and legacies, and the trustees of the will, one of whom was the landlord's agent, induced the landlord to refuse to accept the plaintiff as tenant of his farm, unless he agreed to take 200*l.* and give up the testator's realty for payment of his debts and legacies. The plaintiff agreed accordingly, was accepted as tenant, and executed a deed conveying the realty to the trustees. About four years afterwards he filed a bill to set aside this transaction:—Held, that the trustees had been guilty of a clear breach of trust in what they had done to induce the plaintiff to execute the deed, and that it must be set aside, and the trustees must pay the costs of the suit. Ellis v. Barker, 41 L. J., Ch. 64; L. R. 7 Ch. 104; 25 L. T. 688; 20 W. R. 160.

—— To Recover Commission.]—The plaintiffs chartered from the defendant a ship to convey a cargo from Liverpool to Calcutta, under a charter party which stipulated that the ship was to be consigned to E. & Co., Calcutta, "on the usual terms," one of which was that E. & Co. might procure the homeward freight at a commission of 5*l.* per cent. The defendant accordingly consigned the ship to E. & Co., but made an agreement with a third party for the homeward freight. The plaintiffs, who had previously agreed with E. & Co. for a share in the commission, thereupon sued the defendant for a breach of his agreement, but were unable to prove at the trial in what proportion the commission was to be divided between themselves and E. & Co.:—Held, that the stipulation as to the commission having been inserted for the benefit of E. & Co., the plaintiffs, notwithstanding their inability to prove their interest in the commission, were entitled to recover as trustees of E. & Co. Robertson v. Wait, 8 Ex. 299; 22 L. J., Ex. 209; 1 W. R. 132.

—— Evidence.]—In an action by a trustee, he is not bound by the statements of a party admitted to be cestui que trust, unless the nature of the interest of such party in the trust estate is shown. May v. Taylor, 6 Man. & G. 261; 6 Scott (N.R.) 974; 12 L. J., C. P. 314.

An authority to a married woman to receive the rents from parties professing to be her trustees, is admissible in an action against them, or a party who has acted as their bailiff in distraining. Roberts v. Shalless, 1 F. & F. 139.

Bill by Assignee of Trust Fund—Preliminary Inquiry.]—Bill by assignee of trust fund to obtain payment. The trustees having stated that they were ignorant as to the execution of the assignment, the plaintiffs moved under general order 5 of May 9th, 1839, for a preliminary inquiry as to that fact:—Held, that the case was not within the order. Frost v. Hamilton, 4 Beav. 33.

Actions against Trustees—For Money paid for the Use of Cestui que Trust.]—An infant having been injured by a railway accident, her claims were compromised for a sum of money, which was paid by the company to her attorney. The money was intended for her exclusive benefit, and it having been arranged between her parents and the company that the money should be settled, it was paid over to trustees of a settlement, the trusts of which gave the income only of the money to her for life. When she came of age she repudiated this arrangement, and sued the trustees for money received to her use:—Held, that the contract entered into by the trustees was to hold the money on the trusts of the settlement, and that they were not liable to her in that form of action. Schofield v. Robinson, 24 L. T. 591; 19 W. R. 958.

If a trustee admits that a balance belonging to the cestui que trust is in his hands, an action for money had and received may be maintained by the cestui que trust on such admission. Roper v. Holland, 4 N. & M. 668; 3 A. & E. 99; 1 H. & W. 167; 4 L. J., K. B. 156.

Where the trustee of an estate, who had funds belonging to his cestui que trust in his hands, said that he was ready to pay him 10*l.* down if he would give credit for certain repairs:—Held, that it was such a statement of account and declaration of a balance due as would maintain an action. Ib.

An action for breach of duty is not maintainable by a cestui que trust against his trustees, where the only breach complained of is the non-payment of money which the trustee holds, as such, to be paid by him to the cestui que trust, but which he has not specifically appropriated for that purpose. Edwardes v. Lowndes, 1 El. & Bl. 81; 22 L. J., Q. B. 104; 17 Jur. 412.

Trustees of a sum of money bequeathed to the separate use of a wife acknowledged, by letter, that they held a sum due as interest, ready to be paid to the wife upon her own receipt and execution of a trust deed, prepared by order of the court of chancery:—Held, that though they had no right to require execution of the deed, an action would not lie against them for money had and received, or for money due on an account stated, until the wife's receipt was produced. Bond v. Nurse, 10 Q. B. 244; 16 L. J., Q. B. 196; 11 Jur. 655.

Property was given in trust "for the sole and absolute use" of a female infant. She afterwards married under age, and a settlement was made, giving half to the wife for her separate use, and the other half to the husband. A bill was filed by the husband and wife, after the latter had come of age, against the trustees, seeking to charge them with a breach of trust. The court thought the frame of the suit improper, but gave leave to amend; and the wife being, by amendment, made to sue by her next friend, a decree was made. Davis v. Prout, 7 Beav. 288.

—— For Detinue of Deed under which Trust Arises.]—The cestui que trust cannot maintain, against a bailee of the trustee, detinue for the deed under which the trust arises, even although before the detention the cestui que trust had first obtained possession of the deed; for the right to hold a deed is not permanently attached to the first possessor of it, so as to prevent another having an equal interest in the deed from holding it, even against such first possessor. Foster v. Crabb, 12 C. B. 136; 21 L. J., C. P. 189; 16 Jur. 835.

—— Innocent Mistake.]—Trustees are not answerable for an innocent mistake, and from which they derive no advantage; and a court of equity will grant a perpetual injunction against proceedings at law grounded on such mistake. Crookshanks v. Turner, 7 Bro. P. C. 255.

—— For Return of Money paid under Mistake of Fact.]—The trustee of a settlement invested some of the funds on mortgage of the plaintiff's land. The mortgage provided for interest at five per cent. but at four per cent. if paid punctually; the mortgagor, in ignorance of this proviso, paid interest punctually at five per cent.; on discovering his mistake he commenced an action against the trustee for the extra one per cent.:—Held, that the action was rightly brought against the trustee though the amount had been handed over to the cestui que trust. King v. Stewart, 66 L. T. 339.

—— Powers of Court to Sanction Compromise—Married Woman.]—The court has jurisdiction to sanction on behalf of a married woman a compromise of a suit to make a trustee liable for a breach of trust in relation to a fund in which she has a reversionary interest. Wall v. Rogers, Wall v. Ogle, 39 L. J., Ch. 204, 381; L. R. 9 Eq. 58; 21 L. T. 654; 18 W. R. 203.

—— Refusal of one Trustee to join in Discharge to Insurance Office.]—C. was appointed, with five other trustees, under a deed which provided that every act done under the trust should be with the concurrence of at least three of the trustees. Three of the trustees advanced part of the trust fund to K., one of the parties interested, upon the security of an insurance upon his life, in which act O. refused to concur. Upon the death of K. the insurance office, before payment of the money, required a discharge from all the trustees, of whom only three remained alive, in which discharge O. having refused to concur—upon a suit in the court of session, it was decreed that he should execute the discharge, and concur in all lawful and necessary acts to give effect to the trust. Ouchterlony v. Lynedoch, 7 Bligh (N.S.) 448.

Where one of several plaintiffs (trustees under a composition deed) dissents to bring an action the court will not interpose, unless upon a suggestion of fraud. Emery v. Mucklow, 10 Bing. 23; 3 M. & Sc. 384.

——Ejectment—Trustee of Outstanding Term.]—If there were a dispute as to the inheritance, the court would not compel the trustee of an outstanding term attending the inheritance to lend his name to either party in an action of ejectment. Doe d. Prosser v. King, 2 D. P. C. 580.

2. PARTIES.

See R. S. C., Ord. XVI. r. 8.

a. Settlor or his Representatives.

Performance of Perfected Voluntary Trust.]—Where a voluntary trust is perfected, the settlor is not a necessary party to a suit by the cestui que trust against the trustee, to compel its performance. Reed v. O'Brien, 7 Beav. 32.

Suggestion of Doubt whether Part of Property Possessed by Trustees belongs to Settlor.]—In a suit by cestuis que trust against the trustees of a settlement for an account and execution of the trust, the suggestion by the defendants of a doubt whether some part of the property, of which they have possessed themselves as trustees, may not belong to the estate of the settlor, does not render the representative of the settlor a necessary party. Gaunt v. Johnson, 7 Hare, 154; 18 L. J., Ch. 45; 12 Jur. 1057.

Enforcing Note given by Settlor to secure Settled Money.]—In a suit to charge a trustee for a breach of trust in not calling in and investing money due on a note given to him by the settlor to secure the money settled, it was held that the representatives of the settlor (the maker of the note, who was dead) were not necessary parties. Platel v. Craddock, C. P. Cooper, 481.

Enforcing Trusts of Creditors' Deed.]—The author of a trust for creditors, or his personal representative, is a necessary party to a suit by the creditors: and he is not regularly or properly a party thereto by being a defendant to a bill of revivor or revivor and supplement against the representatives of a trustee who died after the institution of the suit, even though all the trustees are (unnecessarily) parties to such bill of revivor or revivor and supplement; he must be made a party to the original bill, or to a bill in which the trustees are all properly defendants. Bateman v. Margerison, 6 Hare, 496.

A suit by creditors under a trust deed allowed to proceed against the trustees without a personal representative of the deceased debtor, the author of the trust, where no such representative existed and his estate was insolvent. Chaffers v. Headlam, 9 Hare (App.) xxxii., n.

—— Surplus for Debtor.]—To a suit for the execution of a trust, created for the benefit of the plaintiffs and other specified creditors, against the trustees (the fund having been brought into court), the person who created the trust, to whom the surplus (if any) was reserved by the trust, or his personal representative, is a necessary party; and it is not a case in which the court will, under Ord. XL. of August, 1841, make a decree, saving the rights of such party when absent, although the defendants say that the trust fund is insufficient for the purposes for which it was created, and that there is, therefore, no surplus to be paid to the absent party. Kimber v. Ensworth, 1 Hare, 293; 11 L. J., Ch. 151; 6 Jur. 162.

Quære, whether this case can be considered as deciding that the author of a trust who reserves no interest to himself is a necessary party to a suit for administering the trust. Ib.

Bill to enforce the trusts of a creditors' deed containing an ultimate trust for the debtors, must, in order to avoid the necessity of making the debtors parties, contain a distinct allegation as to the amount of fund to be distributed, and that there will be no surplus. If it pray for the administration of the whole estate without making the debtors parties it will be demurrable. Bedford v. Gates, 4 Y. & C. 21.

Bill by a creditor on behalf of himself and all others, parties to a trust deed, must show that they have all a common interest; therefore it cannot be brought to enforce an equity for payment of a larger amount of debt than that for which the plaintiff has signed, or to rescind a sale (however inequitable) which has been sanctioned by a great body of the creditors. Ib.

b. Cestuis que Trust.

Proceedings by Trustees.]—A cestui que trust must in all cases be a party, but the trustee need not, especially if cestui que trust undertakes for him. Kirk v. Clark, Pre. Ch. 275.

It is a salutary rule that the trustee cannot institute a suit, without his cestuis que trust being parties; but it is a subject to be modified according to circumstances. Bifield v. Taylor, Beat, 23; 1 Moll. 193.

On a bill by a trustee, to raise the arrears of an annuity, the cestuis que trust are not necessary parties; it appearing, on the face of the contract, that it was the intention of the parties to exclude the cestuis que trust from the necessity of taking any part in the transactions relating to the management of the trusts. Ib.

A trustee cannot file a bill concerning the trust, without making the cestuis que trust parties; if they are numerous it ought to be filed by some of them on behalf of themselves and the others. Douglas v. Horsfall, 2 Sim. & S. 184; Anon., 3 L. J. (o.s.) Ch. 99.

A trustee cannot prove a debt alone; the cestui que trust must join in the proof. Du Bois, Ex parte, 1 Cox, 310.

On motion by trustees to dissolve an injunction obtained against them, cestuis que trust not parties to the suit cannot be heard. Ball v. Tunnard, 6 Madd. 275.

A. purchased a leasehold of B., and paid the purchase money, but no conveyance was executed. A. bequeathed it to B. for life, with remainders over. A.'s executor filed a bill against B. alone, for a conveyance of the property upon the trusts of the will, not, however, seeking to recover it as assets for the purposes of the executorship:—Held, that the other cestuis que trust were necessary parties; and, semble, that such a suit might be maintained. Josling v. Kerr, 3 Beav. 494.

Bill, by trustee, against one of several cestuis que trust, to recover the trust securities. The other cestuis que trust are unnecessary parties. Bridget v. Hames, 1 Coll. C. C. 72.

By the statements in a bill, it appeared that the testator devised his real estate to trustees, on trust for several persons, amongst whom were S. and W.; and he appointed S. and W. executrixes: and he gave a moiety of his residuary personal estate to his trustees, on the same trusts as his residuary real estate. A bill was filed by S., W., and others, and the trustees, for an account of certain damage done to the real estate in the testator's life, and after his death:—Held, not a misjoinder. Smyth v. Fryer, 14 Jur. 609.

Conduct of Suit by Cestui que Trust.]—Where one of several cestuis que trust institutes a suit for relief in respect of a breach of trust, he is bound, in the conduct of the suit, to take care of the interests of the others as well as of his own. Williams v. Powell, 2 Ph. 329.

Action against Trustees.]—In a bill against executors who are only executors in trust, it is not necessary to make the cestuis que trust or residuary legatees parties. Anon., 1 Vern. 261.

Semble, where the cestuis que trust convey their beneficial interest in a portion of the property to a purchaser, the purchaser may file a bill against the trustee for a conveyance of the legal estate, without making the cestuis que trust who sold to him parties to the suit. Goodson v. Ellisson, 3 Russ. 583; 27 R. R. 127.

If there are cestuis que trust, who ought, in strictness, to be made parties to such a suit, and they are not so brought before court, their interests may be ascertained and protected (by indulgence of court), by a petition to be presented by them for that purpose, to obviate further delay and expense. Drew v. Harman, 5 Price, 319.

Specific Legatees.]—A trustee of a fund belonging to a deceased person refused to pay it over to his legal personal representative, on the ground that there was a question, under the will of the deceased, whether it was not specifically bequeathed, and requiring the assent of the alleged specific legatees. He was ordered to pay it to the legal personal representative, together with the costs of suit, to which suit it was held that such specific legatees were not necessary parties. Smith v. Bolden, 33 Beav. 262.

Creditors' Trust Deed.]—A plaintiff filed a bill for the administration of the trusts of a creditor's deed, and for relief against a purchase (alleged to be fraudulent) by one of the defendants from the trustee. The plaintiff alleged that he was the assignee of the debt of a defendant who had executed the deed as a creditor, and who admitted the plaintiff's title:—Held, on a demurrer by the purchaser, that this was an insufficient averment of title. Jerdein v. Bright, 2 J. & H. 325; 30 L. J., Ch. 336; 4 L. T. 12; 9 W. R. 267.

Refusal of Trustee to Sue.]—No collusion in the purchaser's fraud was alleged against the trustee: but it was averred that, after he discovered the fraud, he refused, and still refuses, to take proceedings against the purchaser; but the bill did not state by whom he was asked to do so:—Held, also, on demurrer by the purchaser, that this was not sufficient to entitle the plaintiff to sue. Ib.

Semble, that a refusal by the trustee to sue on the application of a cestui que trust would have sufficed to sustain the bill on this point. Ib.

Held, also, that the bill was multifarious for joining a prayer for accounts with that for relief against the purchaser. Ib.

—— Heir at Law.]—Where the plaintiff, in his original bill, made out title to an estate, and prayed relief, as heir at law, but afterwards, and after all the defendants had answered, discovered a marriage settlement by which the estate stood limited to a trustee for the use of the plaintiff, his brother, and sister, in equal shares:—Held, that the plaintiff might, in his amended bill, vary his case, so as to make out title, and pray relief according to his real rights. Peed v. Cussen, Sau. & Sc. 161.

And it being doubtful, upon the construction of the settlement, whether the plaintiff, his brother, and sister were entitled to vested, or merely to contingent interests:—Held, also, that the estate being limited to the heir of the settlor, in case the supposed contingency should never arise, and the trustees having refused to become plaintiffs, the plaintiff might, in the character of heir at law, maintain a suit for the purpose of protecting the property. Ib.

And see Gandy v. Gandy, 54 L. J., Ch. 1154; 30 Ch. D. 57; 53 L. T. 306; 33 W. R. 803—C. A.; and Meldrum v. Scorer, 56 L. T. 471.

Devise on Trust for Sale.]—In a devise to sell and the produce to be divided, all the persons interested in the fund must be made parties, though the land is sold before suit. Faithful v. Hunt, 3 Anst. 751.

Where there is a devise of a fee simple, with an absolute power to raise by sale or mortgage sums of money for certain purposes, and in the same devise are contained provisions enabling the trustee to give receipts to the purchasers, such trustee sufficiently represents the estate in a suit for a sale, though the person to whom, subject to such power, the first estate of inheritance was limited, is not a party in the cause. Keon v. Magawly, 1 Dr. & War. 401.

Bill by devisees in trust to sell for specific performance of an agreement to purchase: exception to the report in favour of the title, that the persons entitled to the purchase money, subject to debts, legacies, and other charges, were not parties to the suit: the lord chancellor was of opinion they ought not to be parties to the conveyance; and if they were, their covenant ought to extend only to their own acts, and those of the devisor; not to a general warranty, without a special contract for it: but as the point must come properly upon objections to the conveyance, the exception was overruled upon the form. Wakeman v. Rutland (Duchess), 3 Ves. 233.

An agreement by trustees of a will to grant an under-lease of their testator's leasehold property, is primâ facie inconsistent with a trust for sale of it. There may be, however, circumstances to justify the agreement; but the court cannot enter into the consideration of those circumstances in a suit for specific performance between the trustees and the under-lessee, the cestuis que trust not being parties to it. Evans v. Jackson, 8 Sim. 217; 6 L. J., Ch. 8.

Parties to bill by creditors against trustees for sale. Routh v. Kinder, 3 Swanst. 144.

Suit for Renewal of Lease for Lives.]—A portion of the interest under a lease for lives renewable for ever, was assigned to A., in trust for B. There was no declaration of trust in the deed of assignment, nor indorsed on it. To a suit for renewal, A. and B. were made parties. The bill contained an allegation that the assignment was made in trust for B.:—Held, that there was no misjoinder, and that B. had been properly made a party. Butler v. Portarlington (Earl) 1 Con. & L. 1; 1 Dr. & War. 20; 4 Ir. Eq. R. 1.

Presumptive Next of Kin.]—Where property is settled in trust in remainder for the persons who should be the next of kin of the tenant for life at his death, the presumptive next of kin are not necessary parties to a suit instituted for the execution of the trust during the lifetime of the tenant for life. Fowler v. James, 1 Ph. 803; C. P. Cooper, 290; 16 L. J., Ch. 266.

Suit by New Trustees to Compel Payment of Trust Fund.]—In 1830, A. and B. were appointed trustees of a part of a sum vested in other trustees. The deed contained a power for the settlors to appoint new trustees, in case any trustee should wish to be discharged from, or should decline to act in, the trusts. B. did not execute. In 1848, B., alleging that he had never acted, disclaimed, and A. retired, and thereupon two new trustees were appointed, and the fund assigned to them only:—Held, that whether B. had acted or not, the new trustee had been duly appointed, and that the cestuis que trust were not necessary parties to a suit by such new trustees against the persons, who held the fund, to compel payment to the new trustees. Noble v. Meymott, 14 Beav. 471; 20 L. J., Ch. 612.

Proceedings by Parties Entitled to Part of Fund.]—Bequest in trust to invest and pay the interest of a moiety to A., and afterwards to her children, and the other moiety to R. and afterwards to her children. The interest on a moiety of 1,000*l.* invested on mortgage was paid to A. for thirty years. On her death the mortgage was got in:—Held, that A.'s children could maintain a suit for their moiety, without making B. and her children parties. Hares v. Stringer, 15 Beav. 206.

Where A. and B. were entitled in equal moieties to a trust fund, which had been wasted:—Held, that A. was a necessary party to a suit by B. against the trustees for the recovery of B.'s moiety, although, in a former suit for carrying the trusts into execution, a moiety was decreed to be transferred for B.'s benefit. Munch v. Cockerell, 8 Sim. 219; 6 L. J., Ch. 9. And see S. C., 5 Myl. & Cr. 179; 9 L. J., Ch. 153; 4 Jur. 140.

Where the fund, in respect of which the breach of trust has been committed, has been made the subject of a second settlement by parties claiming an interest under the first, the trustees of such second settlement, though appointed previous to, or during the continuance of, the breach of trust complained of, are not necessary parties to a suit by the cestuis que trust of such settlements, against the trustees of the original settlement, for a breach of trust committed by them while the fund was under their control. Ib.

Held, that a party entitled to a moiety of an ascertained fund may alone maintain a suit for relief in respect of a breach of trust affecting the whole fund. Perry v. Knott, 5 Beav. 293.

A party, entitled to a moiety of an ascertained fund, cannot maintain a suit for payment of his share without making the person entitled to the other moiety a party, if owing to breach of trust, the whole fund is not forthcoming; semble, and the decision in Perry v. Knott, supra, to the contrary, disapproved. Lenaghan v. Smith, 2 Ph. 301; 16 L. J., Ch. 376; 11 Jur. 503.

To a bill by a person entitled to a certain aliquot portion of a certain ascertained sum in the hands of trustees, the co-cestuis que trust are not necessary parties. Smith v. Snow, 3 Madd. 10; 18 R. R. 186.

To a bill filed by a husband as administrator of his wife against the trustees of her father's will (the father having covenanted to leave an equal share of his property to all his children but did not), the cestuis que trust under the will held necessary parties. Jones v. How, 17 L. J., Ch. 369; 12 Jur. 227. And see Hill v. Hill, 12 Jur. 972.

A widow concurred in a breach of trust, but her interest in the testator's estate had been separated:—Held, that she was not a necessary party to a suit by a cestui que trust, not seeking to charge her interest, and that the trustees seeking to charge her interest must make their equity effective by some proceeding of their own. Ling v. Colman, 10 Beav. 370.

A bill having been filed by parties entitled under a will to one-fourth of a fund (which since the testator's death had been ascertained and appropriated) against the trustee alone, without making the parties entitled to the other three-fourths parties to the suit, a demurrer for want of parties was overruled. Hutchinson v. Townsend, 2 Keen, 675; 6 L. J., Ch. 13.

Suit to Restore Trust Property belonging to Dissenting Congregation.] — The trustees of land belonging to a dissenting congregation mortgaged it, with the sanction of the subscribers, pursuant to the trust deed. The mortgagee afterwards conveyed the estate to another party, who sold it to a railway company. The trustees thereupon filed a bill to make the transferee of the mortgage account for the difference between the amount of the debt and the purchase money, on the ground that the balance was part of the trust property:—Held, that the suit not having been sanctioned by the subscribers, or a majority of them, they were all necessary parties to the suit. Minn v. Stant, 15 Beav. 49; 20 L. J., Ch. 614; 15 Jur. 1095.

The lease of a chapel was held on trust for a particular form of worship. The chapel was afterwards, in breach of trust, used for a different form of worship:—Held, that two of the persons interested might sue on behalf of themselves and all others interested, for the due performance of the trusts on which the lease was held. Milligan v. Mitchell, 3 Myl. & Cr. 72; 7 L. J., Ch. 37; 1 Jur. 888.

Personal Indemnity by One Trustee to Another.]—E. K., being entitled for life to the income of a fund, and trustee of it with K., allows K. to sell out 1,000*l.* on his giving a promissory note and deposit of deeds of freeholds. K. is bankrupt, and under an order of a commissioner the freeholds are sold, and the conditions provide that the order in bankruptcy shall be conclusive: on objection that cestuis que trust were necessary parties:—Held, that they were not, the deposit and memorandum being a personal indemnity only by one trustee to another. Groom v. Booth, 1 Drew. 548; 22 L. J., Ch. 961; 17 Jur. 927; 1 W. R. 423.

Trustee Called to Account.]—A trustee for three persons is called to account. All the cestuis que trust must be parties. Hamm v. Stevens, 1 Vern. 110.

Foreign Trustees and Cestuis que Trust.]—Where a trust fund is to be administered under the direction of the court, the general rule requiring the cestuis que trust to be parties is applicable to foreign trustees and cestuis que trust residing out of the jurisdiction, unless a special case of difficulty or inconvenience in the application of the rule be shown. Weatherby v. St. Giorgio, 2 Hare, 624; 12 L. J., Ch. 412; 7 Jur. 717.

Proceedings to Set Aside Sale to Trustee.]—Bill by one of several cestuis que trust against the devisee of the trustee to set aside the sale of an estate, which was made to the trustee by all the cestuis que trust for one sum, and conveyed by one instrument:—Held, that all the cestuis que trust were necessary parties to the suit. Roberts v. Tunstall, 4 Hare, 261.

Motion for Order on Trustees to Bring Funds into Court.]—In a suit instituted by one of the cestuis que trust against the trustees, to administer the trusts of a will, a motion was made by the plaintiff that the trustees might be ordered to bring into court certain sums of stock admitted to form part of the trust funds:—Held, that the remaining cestuis que trust were not necessary parties to the suit, and it was not requisite to serve them with notice of this motion. Marryat v. Marryat, 23 L. J., Ch. 876; 2 W. R. 576.

Suit to Restore Fund held in Trust for a Class.]—To a suit by one or more cestuis que trust against the trustees, alleging that the trust fund had been invested on improper security, and seeking to have it restored, all the cestuis que trust of the fund must be parties; and if the fund be held in trust for a class of persons, there must, before the case is heard on the question between the plaintiffs and the trustees, be evidence that all the members of the class are before the court. Phillipson v. Gatty, 6 Hare, 26; 17 L. J., Ch. 241; 12 Jur. 430.

Suit against Trustee of Deed of Arrangement and subsequent Settlement.]—One of the cestuis que trust under a deed of family arrangement made a settlement of his share. There were two trustees of the settlement, one of whom was also a trustee of the deed of arrangement. In a suit to administer the trusts of the deed of arrangement, and make the trustees of it responsible for breaches of trust:—Held, that, since one of the trustees of the settlement was an accounting party as a trustee of the deed of arrangement, the cestuis que trust under the settlement ought to be made parties. Payne v. Parker, L. R. 1 Ch. 327; 12 Jur. (N.S.) 221; 14 L. T. 157; 14 W. R. 562.

Receipt of Trust Fund by Tenants for Life.]—In a suit to make a trustee liable for a part of the trust fund which was not forthcoming, he stated that it had been received by the tenants for life, who were dead:—Held, that their personal representatives were necessary parties. Williams v. Allen, 29 Beav. 292; 30 L. J., Ch. 810; 3 L. T. 649; 9 W. R. 227.

A fund was vested in trustees for A. for life, and after his death for his son B. The trustees allowed A. to receive it. A. died leaving assets; and having by his will bequeathed personal property, far exceeding the trust fund, subject to life interests to B., expressly in satisfaction of the trust fund claimed by him; B. filed a petition against the trustees, to compel them to replace the fund, and claiming a right to elect to take it against the devisee:—Held, that the personal representative of A. was a necessary party to the suit. Burrowes v. O'Brien, 15 Ir. Ch. R. 423.

Failure of Action by Trustees—Subsequent Suit by Cestuis que Trust.]—A suit was instituted by trustees in their representative character to establish their claim to policy moneys. The cestuis que trust were not made parties. The suit failed for want of evidence. The cestuis que trust, having obtained fresh evidence, filed a bill in their own names to establish their right to the moneys:—Held, that the suit was right in point of form; and upon the new evidence a decree was made in their favour. Peirce v. Brady, 26 L. J. Ch. 257; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 772; 4 W. R. 736.

Actions between Co-Trustees—To recover Trust Funds.]—Bill by one trustee of stock against the other to compel him to replace it or give security according to his engagement, when the plaintiff joined in transferring the stock into his name; demurrer, because the cestuis que trust were not parties, overruled with costs. Franco v. Franco, 3 Ves. 75; 3 R. R. 50.

A trustee may file a bill against a co-trustee to recover the trust fund, without making the cestuis que trust parties; and where the trust is under a devise of real estate for sale, with power to give receipts, this general rule of pleading is corroborated by the 30th of the Orders of August, 1841. May v. Selby, 1 Y. & C. C. C. 235; 6 Jur. 52.

The 40th of those Orders is also applicable in such a case, where the objection is only taken at the hearing. Ib.

Suit by surviving trustee to recover back trust funds wrongfully misappropriated by the defendant:—Held, that the cestuis que trust were not necessary parties. Horsley v. Fawcett, 11 Beav. 565.

There is no such general rule that a wrong-doer cannot file a bill. Baynard v. Woolley, 20 Beav. 583.

Thereupon if A. and B., two trustees, have committed a breach of trust, and are equally liable, but B. received the produce, A. may sustain a bill against B. alone to recover the amount for the benefit of the trust. Ib.

Where one of two executors was indebted to the testator at the time of the testator's decease, and was sued by his co-executor for the recovery of the debt, and the realisation of a security which had been given for it:—Held, that the cestuis que trust under the will were not necessary parties to the suit. Peake v. Ledger, 4 De G. & Sm. 137; 8 Hare, 313.

—— For Contribution from Co-Trustee.]—Although one of two executors or trustees may sue the other executor or trustee for contribution in respect of a breach of trust, without making the cestuis que trust parties to the suit, yet where such cestuis que trust have participated in the breach of trust they are necessary parties. Jesse v. Bennett, 6 De G. M. & G. 609; 26 L. J., Ch. 63; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 1125; 5 W. R. 56.

c. Trustees.

Cestui que Trust about to commence Proceedings.]—A cestui que trust about to file a bill, should apply to his trustee to become a co-plaintiff, indemnifying him against costs. If he refuses, he must abide his own costs as a defendant. If he is not applied to, plaintiff must pay his costs. Reade v. Sparkes, 1 Moll. 8.

Conveying Real Estate without Notice of Trust.]—Where the real estate is in the hands of trustees, and the trustees convey it over without notice of the trust, if a bill is brought by the cestui que trust, the trustees must be made defendants. Harrison v. Pryse, Barnard. 324.

Parties to alleged Forged Lease.]—A bill charges forgery in a lease, and prays relief; the trustees who were parties to the lease, and to whom the fraud and breach of trust is imputed, must be parties. Jones v. Jones, 3 Atk. 110.

Trustee abroad remitting Trust Moneys to his London Agent.]—A., resident out of the jurisdiction, held moneys upon certain trusts in favour of B., and remitted them to C., his London agent, whom he informed of the trusts. B. was not informed that the moneys had been so remitted:—Held, on demurrer, that B. might maintain a suit in equity against C. for the recovery of the moneys, and that A. was not a necessary party to such suit. Steele v. Stuart, 3 N. R. 686.

Trustee of Term.]—If the trustee of a term, and the cestui que trust, are before the court, an intermediate trustee of the equitable interest need not be the party to a bill filed to carry the trusts of the term into execution. Head v. Tejnham, 1 Cox, 57.

—— Proceedings for Ejectment.]—On demurrer to an ejectment bill, alleging that plaintiff had abandoned his action of ejectment at law by reason of the defendant's threatening and intending to set up an outstanding term:—Held, that the trustee of such term was not a necessary party. Brookes v. Burt, 1 Beav. 106; 8 L. J., Ch. 43.

—— Trustee of Expired Term.]—The trustee of a term was improperly made a party, the term having expired before the institution of the suit. Talbott v. Minnett, 6 Ir. Eq. R. 83.

—— Suit for Portions for Younger Children.]—In a suit for portions of younger children, raisable under the trusts of a term, the trustee to whom the term had been assigned (but not the original termors or the representative of the survivor) is a proper party. Young v. Waterpark (Lord), 8 L. J., Ch. 214.

To sustain a demurrer for want of parties, the defendant must show that the absent person is a necessary party according to the case of such defendant. An estate was charged with a mortgage and with portions, and a term was vested in trustees for securing the portions. A second estate was conveyed on trust to sell and pay the mortgage and portions. In a suit for the execution of the trusts, the mortgagee objected that the trustees of the term were not parties; but the objection was overruled. Dalton v. Hayter, 7 Beav. 313.

Trustees to preserve Contingent Remainders.] Trustees to preserve contingent remainders are not necessary parties to a suit to raise a charge affecting the inheritance. Stewart v. Donegal (Marquis), 2 Jo. & Lat. 636; 8 Ir. Eq. R. 621.

Property vested in Trustees for Separate Use of Feme Covert.]—To a bill to raise a demand out of property vested in trustees for the separate use of a feme covert, the trustees ought to be made answering parties. Peppard or Pepper v. Kelly, 2 Jo. & Lat. 558; 8 Ir. Eq. R. 502.

Covenant to Pay Money to Wife—Annuity.]—A husband covenanted with a trustee to pay an annuity to his wife, or to the trustee for her use, and assigned property to a trustee to secure it, but the husband paid it without the interference of the trustee, and the wife afterwards borrowed money on the annuity, and the lender afterwards filed a bill against the husband and wife for payment of his debt out of the annuity:—Held, that the trustee was a necessary party to the suit. Palmer v. Fraser, 3 Y. & C. 491; 3 Jur. 890.

A. covenanted with B. to transfer stock into the names of C. and D., or some other person to be named by A., upon trust for B., his wife, and issue; afterwards B. became absolutely entitled to the fund. In a suit by B. against the representatives of A., to obtain satisfaction out of his estate in respect of his covenant:—Held, that C. and D. were not necessary parties. Watson v. Parker, 6 Beav. 283; 12 L. J., Ch. 221; 7 Jur. 143.

Proceedings for Restitution of Trust Deed.]—Where there is no imputation of breach of trust in a trustee's suffering the deed to get out of his possession, he need not be a party to a bill for its restitution. Knye v. Moore, 1 Sim. & S. 61. S. C., nom. —— v. Moseley, 1 L. J. (o.s.) Ch. 18.

Trustee of Share of Property for his Assignee.]—The plaintiff, and his wife, who was one of the children of A., agreed with the other children to divide equally A.'s property at his death. The plaintiff's wife died before A., and the plaintiff was her administrator. He made an assignment, by which his share passed, and afterwards filed a bill for specific performance:—Held, that the agreement was valid; and that the plaintiff being a trustee of his share for the assignees, the suit was properly instituted by him. Hyde v. White, 5 Sim. 524.

Bill to set aside Conveyance to Solicitor.]—The plaintiff was entitled under her father's will, and an appointment by her mother, who was his executrix; and being in embarrassed circumstances and without professional advice and ignorant of the amount of her claims, G., her solicitor, induced her in 1833 to convey to him all her rights, which he represented to be only one-half that they amounted to, for a rent charge on the lands so conveyed to him, the payment to be personally secured by him. The deed was drawn by G., and contained no clause of re-entry or covenant by him to pay, but a non-alienation clause was fraudulently, as alleged, inserted. G. ceased to pay in 1836, and the bill was filed in 1845, to set aside the deed and carry the trusts of the will into execution, and for an account of the testator's property, so far as to ascertain the plaintiff's rights, and, if necessary, of the personal estate of her mother. B., the executor of the mother and the administrator de bonis non of the father, was made a party, but the trustee of the father's will was not:—Held, that there was no misjoinder or multifariousness; that if multifarious as to B., G. could not raise the objection; and that the surviving trustee was not a necessary party. O'Kelly v. Glenny, 9 Ir. Eq. R. 25.

Creditors' Suit—Bill of Revivor against Representatives of Deceased Trustee.]—In a suit by some of many creditors, on behalf of themselves and the others, for an account of property which had been vested in the defendants, the trustees, for the benefit of such creditors, and one of the trustees died after answer, the other trustees are not necessary parties to the bill of revivor, or revivor and supplement, against the representatives of the deceased trustee. Bateman v. Margerison, 6 Hare, 496.

—— Trustees for Tenants in Tail.]—Certain estates were devised to A. for life, then to B. for life, then to the sons of B. in tail male. During the tenancy of A., a bill was filed by a creditor of the testator for a sale of part of the estates. No inquiry into the incumbrances affecting the estates was directed; and the trustees for the tenants in tail were not made parties to the suit. The lands were sold, and a conveyance executed by the officer of the court and by A., and subsequently (though not till after a compromise had been effected), by B.; and the residue of the purchase money was ordered to be invested for the benefit of A. :—Held, that the bill was defective for want of proper parties; and the whole transaction was properly set aside after the death of the two tenants for life, and at the suit of the first surviving tenant in tail: and that the accounts were properly directed to be taken from the period of the death of the second tenant for life. Mullins v. Townsend, 2 Dow & Cl. 430; 5 Bligh (N.S.) 567—H. L. (Ir.)

Action by Vendor for Specific Performance.]—A party having purchased land, and signified at the time that he made the purchase on behalf of the trustee of his marriage settlement, who had money vested in him to be laid out in land, and a bill being filed against him for specific performance, the court would not allow the case to proceed until the trustee was made a party, and the cause stood over for that purpose. Wynniat v. Lindo, Tam. 512.

Bill by Solicitor-Trustee to foreclose Mortgage.]—T., a trustee, lent trust money on mortgage to M. By an arrangement on the marriage of M.'s daughter a valuable leasehold interest was granted by M. out of the mortgaged premises and put in settlement, T. being the person who managed it and the solicitor who prepared the lease and settlement, the daughter or her husband not being informed of the mortgage. T. afterwards, with his co-trustee and their cestuis que trust, filed a bill to foreclose the mortgage and sell discharged of the lease, if necessary :—Held, that the parties deriving under the settlement could not object to T.'s being a co-plaintiff. Tuycross v. Moore, 13 Ir. Eq. R. 250.

Plaintiff Cestui que Trust and also Representative of Deceased Trustee.]—Where several plaintiffs beneficially interested in a trust fund sue the trustees in respect of a breach of trust, and one of such plaintiffs has, in addition to his character as a cestui que trust, become the personal representative of a deceased trustee, who was primarily, or with the other trustees jointly, liable, the suit is improperly framed, and cannot be sustained, notwithstanding it be averred by the bill that the plaintiff has received no assets of the estate of the deceased trustee, and that the trustee died insolvent. Griffith v. Vanheythuysen, 9 Hare, 85; 20 L. J., Ch. 337: 15 Jur. 421.

Whether, if the plaintiff, who in such a case had become the representative of the accounting party, were the sole plaintiff in the suit, the objection to the suit could be maintained, quære. Ib.

Plaintiff Personal Representative of Deceased Trustee and Next Friend of Infant Plaintiff's.]—M. J., the personal representative of a deceased trustee, together with infants, beneficially interested in a fund, by M. J. their next friend, were co-plaintiffs in a suit, the object of which was to make the tenant for life and his interest in the trust funds answerable for part of the trust funds, which the tenant for life had applied to his own use: there were other parties interested in the restitution of the fund, who were made defendants. The court, being of opinion that the trustees' assets might, in the progress of the suit, have to be resorted to for the purpose of making good the breach of trust, and that the interests of the infants and of M. J. would thereby ultimately become conflicting, dismissed the bill, with costs, on the ground of the misjoinder of plaintiffs, but without prejudice to any new bill. Jacob v. Lucas, 1 Beav. 436; 8 L. J., Ch. 271.

Suit by Mortgagee against Improvement Commissioners and their Trustees.]—A mortgagee, for obtaining payment of the money due to him from the Westminster improvement commissioners, instituted a suit against them and two trustees, to whom the commissioners had conveyed the lands and hereditaments specified in the deed, which contained power to the trustees, in their discretion, to reconvey. The bill recited the conveyance by the commissioners to the trustees; that a suit had been instituted by bondholders against the commissioners and the trustees, in which no decree had been made, but which had been registered as a lis pendens; and that a deed had been executed by which the trustees, in exercise of the power, had reconveyed the lands and hereditaments to the commissioners. The bill alleged that the plaintiff was advised, that if the reconveyance was effectual for any purpose, it was a breach of trust on the part of the trustees, and that they were necessary parties. A demurrer by the trustees was allowed with costs, and leave was given to amend by striking out their names. Tryon v. Westminster Improvement Commissioners, 2 Giff. 434; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 1324; 3 L. T. 262.

Trustees with Power of Sale of Real Estate.]—The trustees under a settlement of real estate, against whom a trust or power given to them to sell the estate is to be enforced, are necessary parties. Rooke v. Kensington (Lord), 25 L. J., Ch. 567; 4 W. R. 582.

Suit against Trustees of Rates under Local Act.]—J. F., a trustee under a local act of parliament, and treasurer of the trust, took from his co-trustees a security on the rates, called an assignment, to secure moneys advanced to the trust by him after the security was given. A suit was brought against him (to which the treasurer, his successors, and the body of trustees for the time being were parties, as well as the attorney-general representing the ratepayers) to set aside his security on four distinct grounds. The lord chancellor on appeal, in 1852, overruled all these objections to the security and dismissed the bill, but refused expressly to declare J. F.'s security unimpeachable. J. F. died, and his executors, on the refusal of the trustees to pay interest on the assignment, or to take the proper steps to pay it off, filed a bill against three of them to compel payment, and for accounts. No new objections to the security being brought forward by the defendant :—Held, that the court must work out the decision of the lord chancellor in the former suit, and that the relation of trustee and cestui que trust was created between the trustees and the assignment holders so as to entitle the plaintiffs to an account. Under the circumstances, neither the ratepayers nor the rest of the trustees were considered necessary parties. Fletcher v. Gibbon, 23 Beav. 212.

Statutory Power for one Trustee to Sue.]—Lands of a moor were vested in trustees by act of parliament, which provided that "all actions and suits by or on behalf of the trustees against any persons or bodies might be prosecuted in the name of one as nominal plaintiff, on behalf of the inhabitants of the parish." A railway company took lands and paid money into court, and gave a bond under the Lands Clauses Act and took possession. They ultimately agreed in writing to pay a certain sum, but failing to complete, a bill was filed by one of the trustees on behalf of the inhabitants for specific performance, setting out the clause of the act giving power to sue. Demurrer for want of equity to this bill overruled. Cranstone v. Hemel Hempstead and L. & N. W. Ry., 17 L. T. 596.

Suit by Allottee of Land from Building Society.]—Every allottee of land from a building society entered into restrictive covenants with the trustees of the society for the benefit of the persons for the time being claiming under conveyances made by the trustees :—Held, that the trustees were necessary parties to a suit by an allottee against a purchaser from another allottee, for an injunction to restrain breaches of the covenants, and for damages. Semble, the plaintiff ought to have sued on behalf of himself and all the other persons entitled to the benefit of the covenants. Eastwood v. Lever or Levers, 3 N. R. 232 ; 33 L. J., Ch. 355 ; 9 L. T. 615 ; 12 W. R. 195.

Non-acting Trustees.]—A trustee in a will, who released and never acted, ought not to be made a party in a suit to set aside the will on the ground of fraud, and therefore need not answer as to the fraud alleged. Richardson v. Hulbert, 1 Anst. 65.

In a suit against trustees of a charity, all the trustees must be parties though they do not act. Chertsey Market, In re, 6 Price, 261 ; 20 R. R. 638.

A trustee named in a will, who has refused the trust, is not a necessary party. Creed v. Creed, 2 Hog. 215.

Under the circumstances, a party named as a trustee in the articles, but who had not acted or executed any deed of trust, was allowed to sustain a suit to carry the articles into effect. Cook v. Fryer, 1 Hare, 498 ; 11 L. J., Ch. 284 ; 6 Jur. 479.

—— No Disclaimer.] — A., the devisee in trust of certain lands, never accepted or acted in the trusts, but never disclaimed them :—Held, that his devisees were necessary parties to a suit relating to the trust estates. King v. Phillips, 22 L. J., Ch. 422 ; 16 Jur. 1080 ; 1 W. R. 45.

New Trustees — Bill for Appointment.] — Trustees of a term for raising portions under a marriage settlement :—Held, to be necessary parties to a bill for appointing new trustees, in the room of the trustees for preserving contingent remainders, with a power of sale and exchange. Ellison v. Cookson, 2 Coll. C. C. 52.

Decree for the appointment of new trustees, and conveyance of the trust estate, in a suit by some cestuis que trust against the devisees of the last survivor of the former trustees, and a direction to serve the other cestuis que trust with notice of the decree. Jones v. James, 9 Hare (App.) lxxx.

—— Bill for Removal.]—A trustee who retired and allowed a new trustee to be appointed, without communication with cestui que trust, is not a necessary party to a suit complaining of such new appointment and seeking to displace the new trustee and others, all relief against the retired trustee being waived. Marshall v. Sladden, 7 Hare, 428 ; 19 L. J., Ch. 57 ; 14 Jur. 106.

A tenant for life, with power to appoint new trustees, parted with the whole of his interest in the settled property. He afterwards appointed two improper persons to be trustees. Upon a bill to remove such trustees, and also to administer the trusts, and to make the tenant for life pay the costs :—Held, on demurrer by the tenant for life, that he had properly been made a party. Raikes v. Raikes, 32 Beav. 403.

—— Suit to compel Payment.] — In 1830 A. and B. were appointed trustees of a part of a sum vested in other trustees. The deed contained a power for the settlors to appoint new trustees, in case any trustee should wish to be discharged from, or should decline to act in, the trusts. B. did not execute. In 1848 B., alleging he had never acted, disclaimed, and A. retired, and thereupon two new trustees were appointed, and the fund assigned to them by A. only :—Held, that whether B. had acted or not, the new trustees had been duly appointed, and that the cestuis que trust were not necessary parties to a suit by such new trustees against the persons who held the fund, to compel payment to the new trustees. Noble v. Meymott, 14 Beav. 471 ; 20 L. J., Ch. 612.

—— Administration of Fund in Court.]—New trustees of a fund in court, to whom no actual assignment of the property has been made, are necessary parties to a suit for the administration of the fund. Nelson v. Seaman, 1 De G. F. & J. 368 ; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 258 ; 1 L. T. 393 ; 8 W. R. 167.

Co-trustee or his Representative—Joint Breach of Trust.]—Right of a cestui que trust to proceed separately against one trustee implicated in a joint breach of trust. Walker v. Symonds, 3 Swanst. 75 ; 19 R. R. 155.

—— Two Classes of Trustees.]—Two classes of trustees had committed a breach of trust :—Held, that the cestuis que trust might proceed against the one class without making the other class parties. M'Gachen v. Dew, 15 Beav. 84.

—— Death of one Trustee pending Suit.]—Where one of several trustees dies pending a suit which does not seek to charge them personally in that character, his representatives are not necessary parties, for the trusteeship survives. London Gas Light Co. v. Spottiswoode, 14 Beav. 264.

—— Death of one Trustee after Institution of Suit.]—Where one of two trustees of an estate which was being administered in court died intestate and insolvent, after a decree for an account against himself and his co-trustee, and after the certificate had been settled by the chief clerk except in some formal particulars :— Held, that the proceedings ought to be carried on in the absence of a representative of his estate, although considerable balances were proved to be due from the trustees, and although one of the parties having the conduct of the cause was entitled to take out representation to the deceased trustee. Moore v. Morris, 41 L. J., Ch. 161 ; L. R. 13 Eq. 139.

—— Representatives of Deceased Trustee—Account Claimed.]—To an action in respect of a breach of trust against a surviving trustee, where a general account is claimed, the plaintiff is no longer required to make the representatives of deceased trustees defendants, as they can, when necessary, be added as parties under Ord. XVI. r. 11. Harrison, In re, Smith v. Allen, 60 L. J., Ch. 287 ; [1891] 2 Ch. 349 ; 64 L. T. 442.

Where one of several trustees has died the cestui que trust may generally sue the surviving trustees for an account without making the representatives of the deceased trustee a party, it being the duty of the surviving trustees to place the fund in a proper position, and recover from the estate of the deceased any portion of the trust money that may have remained in his hands, semble. Beattie v. Johnstone, 8 Hare, 169.

Lord Hardwicke and Lord Eldon's doctrine, that surviving trustees may be proceeded against without the representatives of others implicated in the same breach of trust. Att.-Gen. v. Newbury Corporation, C. P. Cooper, 72.

Relief may be had for a breach of trust committed by two trustees, against one, in the absence of the representatives of the other. Strong v. Strong, 18 Beav. 408. And see Wilson v. Rhodes, 8 Ch. D. 777.

The representative of a trustee of a settlement, who died six weeks after making of the settlement :—Held, not a necessary party to a suit to recover the trust fund, such trustee not having possessed any part of the trust funds, and not being chargeable with the default. Simes v. Eyre, 6 Hare, 137.

—— Order of May, 1841.]—By an antenuptial settlement, the trustees of it were empowered to sell out the trust fund and invest the proceeds upon (among others) real securities. By a contemporaneous memorandum indorsed on the settlement, the settlors requested the trustees to advance the trust moneys to the owners of a copyhold estate, called Vauxhall Gardens, upon mortgage, as first, second, or third mortgagees : — Held, that the word "owners" meant owners of the date of the settlement and memorandum, and that an advance to them without security, and the subsequent acceptance of a mortgage, with a joint and several covenant, from two of the three owners, after the retirement of the third, was a breach of trust :—Held, also, that in a suit by cestuis que trust, seeking to make one of the trustees liable in respect of the breach of trust, Ord. XXXII. of May, 1841, did not dispense with the necessity of making the co-trustees parties. Fowler v. Reyna', 2 De G. & Sm. 749 ; 13 Jur. 649, 650, n. And see S. C. on appeal, 3 Mac. & G. 500 ; 21 L. J., Ch. 121 ; 15 Jur. 1019.

Where a trust fund has been wasted, the cestui que trust cannot proceed against the surviving trustees alone, without bringing before the court the representatives of deceased parties, who were trustees at the time of the transaction which occasioned the wasting of the fund. Munch v. Cockerell, 8 Sim. 219 ; 6 L. J., Ch. 9.

Where a party, who was entitled to a moiety of a trust fund, assigned that moiety to trustees on her marriage, and the fund was afterwards wasted by default on the part of the original trustees :—Held, that the representatives of the first dying trustees of the second settlement were not necessary parties to a suit against the original trustees, in which the cestui que trust, who was absolutely entitled under the provisions of the settlement, was plaintiff. Ib.

—— General Order of August, 1841.]—In a suit to make trustees liable for a breach of trust :—Held, that the assignees of two bankrupt trustees were not indispensable parties, as the case fell within Gen. Ord. XXXII. of August, 1841. Norris v. Wright, 14 Beav. 310.

Two deceased trustees having committed a breach of trust by mortgaging, instead of selling, the testator's real estate, and accounts of the estate being necessary :—Held, that, notwithstanding Gen. Ord. XXXII. of August, 1841, a suit could not be maintained to charge the estate of one trustee, and take the accounts, in the absence of the representative of the other. Devaynes v. Robinson, 24 Beav. 86 ; 27 L. J., Ch. 157.

Suit against trustees, alleging breaches of trust by omitting to make repairs and to provide a fund for the renewal of leases, as directed by the will. The widow of the testator, (who was tenant for life under the will) and two others, were the trustees. The widow married again, and afterwards died, leaving her husband surviving, and leaving assets of her separate estate : —Held, that as there were assets of the widow, which, under the circumstances of this case, were or might be liable to the trust, it was not a case in which the plaintiff could, under Ord. XXXII. of August, 1841, proceed against the other trustees and the husband of the testator's widow, without making a personal representative of the widow a party ; and that the defect was not removed by the waiver of any relief against the assets of the widow, or against all the trustees, in respect of breaches of trust before the marriage of the widow. Shipton v. Rawlins, 4 Hare, 619.

Ord. XXXII. of August, 1841, applies to the case of a breach of trust committed by several executors ; and a cestui que trust in such a case may proceed against one in the absence of the others, and that although before the above order was made the suit had been ordered to stand over, upon the same objection, for want of parties, but the order, though drawn up, had not passed. But it is proper that the person who has actually benefited by the breach of trust, or his representatives, should be before the court. Perry v. Knott, 5 Beav. 293. S. P., Kellaway v. Johnson, 5 Beav. 319.

Where a bill by a cestui que trust is not confined to seeking relief in respect of a particular breach of trust, but a general account of the trust estate is also sought, the Gen. Ord., Consolidated Ord. VII. r. 2, does not dispense with the necessity of all the trustees being represented in the suit. Coppard v. Allen, 2

De G. J. & S. 173; 4 N. R. 202; 33 L. J., Ch. 475; 10 Jur. (N.S.) 622; 10 L. T. 515; 12 W. R. 943.

Where, therefore, a bill was filed against a surviving trustee, seeking a general account of the trust estate on the footing of wilful neglect and default:—Held, that the legal personal representatives of a co-trustee, who had died shortly before the filing of the bill, after having acted and received assets jointly with the surviving trustee, were necessary parties to the suit. Ib.

Under the Judicature Act — Beneficiaries — Action by Trustees.]—By the Judicature Act, Ord. XVI. r. 7, trustees may sue on behalf of their cestuis que trust, and therefore beneficiaries should not be made parties to an action. Cooper, In re, Cooper v. Vesey, 51 L. J., Ch. 862; 20 Ch. D. 611; 47 L. T. 89; 30 W. R. 648.

—— Co-Trustee—Realisation of Security.]—Two trustees advanced to a builder money on mortgage of land and houses thereon. The land had belonged to the defendant, one of the trustees, and part of the money advanced was applied by the builder in payment of the price of the land and of other money due by him to the defendant. The other trustee filed a bill against the defendant, alleging that the security was insufficient, and asking that the security should be realised, and that he should make good any deficiency:—Held, that under such circumstances one trustee had no equity to make the other trustee primarily liable. Butler v. Butler, 46 L. J., Ch. 548; 5 Ch. D. 554; 37 L. T. 33. Affirmed 37 L. T. 518; 26 W. R. 85—C. A.

Held, also, that the court would not direct a sale in the absence of the cestuis que trust, and merely to ascertain the deficiency, if any. Ib.

—— Action against Trustees.]—Where a claimant against the estate of a deceased person seeks to follow the assets into the hands of a trustee, it is not necessary to make the beneficiaries parties. Dictum in Clegg v. Rowland, (L. R. 3 Eq. 368) dissented from. Bowden, In re, Andrew v. Cooper, 59 L. J., Ch. 815; 45 Ch. D. 444; 39 W. R. 219. And see How v. Winterton (Earl), 65 L. J., Ch. 832; [1896] 2 Ch. 626; 75 L. T. 40; 45 W. R. 103.—C. A.

—— Foreclosure Action.]—Foreclosure action by a first mortgagee against the mortgagor, and a second mortgagee, who had become bankrupt. The second mortgagee was a trustee of the money secured by his mortgage, for various persons:—Held, that notwithstanding Ord. XVI. r. 8, the persons beneficially interested under the second mortgage were necessary parties to the action. Francis v. Harrison, 59 L. J., Ch. 248; 43 Ch. D. 183; 61 L. T. 667; 38 W. R. 329.

—— Redemption Action.]—Under Judicature Act, Ord. XVI., r. 7, trustees of an equity of redemption sufficiently represent their cestuis que trust in a redemption suit, no direction to the contrary having been given by the court. Jennings v. Jordan, 51 L. J., Ch. 129; 6 App Cas., 698; 45 L. T. 593; 30 W. R. 369—H. L. (E.)

—— Creditor's Action.]—A cestui que trust, who with knowledge that his trustee has committed a breach of trust, obtains from him a part only of that to which he is entitled, does not thereby waive his right to such further relief as he may be able to obtain unless an intention so to do can be clearly inferred from the surrounding circumstances. In November, 1860, an order was made in a suit for administering the trusts of the will of J. C., to which H. C., a former trustee, was defendant, directing her to pay into court a sum of money in respect of breaches of trust committed in 1843 and 1845, the amount of which had been ascertained by the chief clerk in the suit. H. C. went abroad, and substituted service of the order was made upon her. By the order on further consideration, in 1863, H. C. appearing by counsel, certain sums of money to which she was entitled, and her life interest under the testator's will, were ordered to be impounded and paid over "to the account of H. C. funds applicable for the repayment of trust funds misappropriated," and an inquiry was directed as to what steps should be taken to obtain restitution of the funds. Certain other orders were made in the suit, but no personal order was made on H. C. for payment of the amount of her defalcation, nor any steps taken against her, although she returned to England in 1870, where she remained till her death in 1880, and her residence was known to the then trustees of the will and some of the cestuis que trust. On her death the surviving trustee of the will of J. C. brought this action against her executors, claiming the adminstration of her real and personal estate on behalf of himself and all other the creditors, alleging himself a creditor in respect of the unpaid balance of the sum representing the breach of trust. At the date of the institution of the action several beneficiaries under J. C.'s will were infants:—Held, that the action was not an attempt to enforce a stale demand, and that the cestuis que trust must not be taken to have elected to abandon their claim against her, and to rest content with impounding her life interest: that, there being a debt due from H. C. at her death to the estate of J. C., and the trusts of his will not being completed, the surviving trustee was the proper person to bring the action, and that the cestuis que trust need not be parties; although as between the cestui que trust and a stranger the claim of the cestui que trust is barred by lapse of time operating against his trustee, lapse of time is no bar as between cestui que trust and trustee. Cross, In re, Harston v. Tenison, 51 L. J., Ch. 645; 20 Ch. D. 109; 45 L. T. 777; 30 W. R. 376.

—— Partition Action.]—The Judicature Act, Ord. XVI., r. 7 of the Rules of Court, 1875, enabling trustees to represent their beneficiaries in an action, applies to an action under the Partition Acts, 1868 and 1876. Simpson v. Denny, 10 Ch. D. 28; 27 W. R. 280.

In an action for sale and partition, the plaintiffs were trustees for sale of two-thirds of certain leasehold property, and the defendants were trustees for sale of the remaining third part after the death of a tenant for life. The cestuis que trust not being parties:—Held, that the trustees for sale sufficiently represented their cestuis que trust, and a sale and partition were directed without notice to the parties beneficially interested. Stace v. Gage, 47 L. J., Ch. 608; 8 Ch. D. 451; 38 L. T. 843; 26 W. R. 605.

Representation of Beneficiaries—Under 15 & 16 Vict. c. 86, s. 42—Administration Suit.]—On a bill for the execution of the trusts of a will, directing the sale and distribution of the proceeds of real estate, framed according to the old practice, and bringing all the residuary devisees and legatees before the court:—Held, that the trustees of a settlement of the share of one of the residuary legatees, made on her marriage, ought to be parties; but that the children of the marriage would be sufficiently represented by such trustees. Densem v. Elworthy, 9 Hare (App.) xlii.

Section 42 of the stat. 15 & 16 Vict. c. 86, observed upon. Meleod v. Annesley, 22 L. J., Ch. 633; 17 Jur. 608; 1 W. R. 250.

Rule 9 of s. 42 of the stat. 15 & 16 Vict. c. 86, applies not only to administration suits, but to all suits where the interest of the cestui que trust is represented by, and his powers are vested in, the trustee. Fowler v. Bayldon, 9 Hare (App.) lxxviii.

Under the s. 42 of the 15 & 16 Vict. c. 86, a suit may proceed without making personal representatives of parties dead abroad at the institution of the suit, parties, although, in ignorance of that fact, they had been so named. Bateman v. Cooke, 17 Jur. 170; 1 W. R. 242.

Where there is a devise to trustees, subject to payment of debts, with a general residuary gift to W., and W. is made a defendant (having made a claim) and answers separately, on the objection taken that he was sufficiently represented by the trustees:—Held, that he was an unnecessary party, that he must be dismissed, and that the plaintiff must pay his costs. Smith v. Andrews, 4 W. R. 353.

A mortgagor devised his real estate to a trustee on trust for sale, the proceeds to be divided amongst certain persons named in the will. The original mortgagee having died, and her heir not being found, a petition was presented by the trustee and one of the cestuis que trust for a vesting order under s. 19 of the Trustee Act, 1850:—Held, that the trustee sufficiently represented the other cestuis que trust whose appearance was, therefore, dispensed with. Blanchard's Estate, In re, 2 N. R. 386; 8 L. T. 603.

Where a testator directed his real estates to be sold for certain purposes, and the residue of the moneys to be held on the trusts of the unsold estates, which he directed his trustees to convey to uses in strict settlement:—Held, that the first tenant for life under the settlement to be made, and unless there was special circumstances, all persons entitled, down to, and including the first vested estate of inheritance, must be before the court, on an order for sale, in a suit to administer the real estate. Pigott v. Pigott, 2 N. R. 14; 8 L. T. 268.

Trustees will not be deemed to represent the interests of absent cestuis que trust, on any contention among the cestuis que trust, inter se, but only where the contention is between a stranger and all the cestuis que trust, on the other hand. Hamond v. Walker, 3 Jur. (N.S.) 686.

—— Bill to Set Aside Settlement as Fraudulent.]—Bill to set aside a settlement as having been obtained from the plaintiff fraudulently, and by means of misrepresentation and undue influence acquired over her by the trustees. One of the trustees was entitled to one-twelfth of the trust fund, subject to the life interest of the plaintiff. The trustees were the only defendants to this bill:—Held, on an objection for want of parties, first, that notwithstanding stat. 15 & 16 Vict. c. 86, s. 42, r. 9, and s. 51, the question at issue in the cause could not be tried in the presence of the trustees only without any of the absent persons beneficially interested under the settlement. Secondly, that it was not necessary that all such persons should be made parties, although some of them not being next of kin of the settlor must be so, and cause ordered to stand over, that one of the infants not being next of kin might appear by counsel at the hearing. Read v. Prest, 1 K. & J. 183; 3 W. R. 30.

—— Executrix directed to Pay Debts.]—An executrix directed to pay debts cannot be considered to represent third parties within the meaning of the 15 & 16 Vict. c. 86, s. 42. Bolton v. Stannard, 27 L. J., Ch. 845; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 576; 6 W. R. 570.

—— Executors with Power of Sale.]—Executors having a power of sale held to be within r. 9, of the 15 & 16 Vict. c. 86, s. 42. Shaw v. Hardingham, 2 W. R. 657.

—— Foreclosure Suit.]—When an equity of redemption is vested in trustees, the cestuis que trust are necessary parties to a foreclosure suit, notwithstanding 15 & 16 Vict. c. 86, s. 42, r. 9. Goldsmid v. Stonehewer, 9 Hare (App.) xxxviii.; 22 L. J., Ch. 109; 17 Jur. 199; 1 W. R. 91.

Representation of cestuis que trust of real estate by the trustees, under r. 9, s. 42, stat. 15 & 16 Vict. c. 86, in suits against them for foreclosure or sale, extended to the case of infant cestuis que trust, and to trustees of subordinate interests under settlements of shares of children in remainder, but not otherwise to adult cestuis que trust. Ib.

In a foreclosure suit against the devisee in trust of the mortgagor:—Held, that the devisee in trust sufficiently represented the persons beneficially interested. Wilkins v. Reeves, 3 Eq. R. 494; 3 W. R. 305.

Decree for foreclosure, under the stat. 15 & 16 Vict. c. 86, s. 42, r. 9, against the devisees in trust and executors of the mortgagor, being all the persons who had control over the property out of which the mortgage was to be satisfied, in the absence of the cestuis que trust under the will of the mortgagor. Sale v. Kitson, 10 Hare (App.) i.; 3 De G. M. & G. 119; 22 L. J., Ch. 344; 17 Jur. 170.

The court refused to act on the 15 & 16 Vict. c. 86, s. 42, r. 9, dispensing with the parties beneficially interested, in a suit for foreclosure against the infant heir at law of the mortgagor, where the devisees in trust under his will had disclaimed, and no adult parties who would be in possession of funds to redeem were before the court as defendants. Young v. Ward, 10 Hare (App.) lviii.

Since the 15 & 16 Vict. c. 86, the trustees of a mortgage represent the cestuis que trust sufficiently to protect the mortgagor; but where the surviving trustees, or the representatives of the trustees alone are parties, the court requires the cestuis que trust to be also represented, in order to secure the due application of the trust property. Stansfield v. Hobson, 16 Beav. 189.

of August, 1841, applies to those cases only in which trustees have a present absolute power to sell real estate. Lloyd v. Smith, 13 Sim. 457; 12 L. J., Ch. 457: 7 Jur. 460.

Under Ord. XXX. of August, 1841, the trustees of real estate by devise, having the powers mentioned in the order, represent the persons beneficially interested in such real estate (so as to make it unnecessary that persons having charges thereon should be parties), not only in suits by persons claiming adversely against the estate, but also in suits by some of the persons beneficially interested, and where the conduct of the trustees is in question. Osborne v. Foreman, 2 Hare, 656; 13 L. J., Ch. 123; 8 Jur. 55.

When there is a devise of a fee simple, and an absolute power to raise, by sale or mortgage, sums of money for certain purposes, and in the same devise are contained provisions enabling the trustee to give receipts to the purchasers, such trustee sufficiently represents the estate in a suit for a sale, though the person who was, subject to that power, entitled to the first estate of inheritance in the lands, was not a party to the suit. Keon v. Magawly, 1 Dr. & War. 401.

A testator directed three trustees named in his will, out of the residue of his real and freehold estates, in aid of his personal estate, by sale, mortgage, or perception of the rents and profits, to levy certain legacies for his children A., B., and C. One of the trustees renounced. A bill was filed for an administration of the real and personal estates of the testator, and to make them liable for a breach of trust, to which the two acting trustees were parties, and which charged that A., B., and C. were out of the jurisdiction but did not pray process against them. On a demurrer for want of parties:—Held, that, the legal estate being in the two acting trustees, the case was within Gen. Ord. XXIV. (Irish orders), and A., B., and C. were not necessary parties to the suit. Bayly v. Cumming, 10 Ir. Eq. R. 405.

—— Trustees of Equitable Interest with Power to Sell.]—Ord. XXIV. of August, 1841, does not apply to a case in which the equitable interest only is vested by devise in A. and B., in trust to sell, although they are empowered to give discharges for the proceeds. Turner v. Hind or Hyde, 12 Sim. 414; 5 Jur. 1129.

—— No Trustees Competent to Sell.]—A testator, by his will, bequeathed certain legacies, charging them generally on his real estate, but he did not appoint any trustees competent to sell and give discharges. To a bill filed by two of the legatees, it was objected at the hearing, that the other legatees were not before the court:—Held, that notwithstanding Ords. XXX. and XL. of August, 1841, they were necessary parties. Strickland v. Strickland, 6 Jur. 550.

—— Creditor's Bill for Accounts.]—A testator devised an estate to trustees, upon trust for his widow for her life, with power to sell the estate, if they should see fit, or in case such sale should be necessary for the payment of his debts, during the life of his widow. On a creditor filing his bill for the usual accounts in a creditor's suit, without making the testator's widow a party:—Held, that the case came within the words at the conclusion of Ord. XXX. of August 26, 1841, respecting the discretion of the court; and that, under the particular circumstances, it was proper for it to act under those words, by directing that the widow should be made a party to the suit. Hill v. Ledbrook, 6 Jur. 1078.

On a conveyance of mines, &c., to trustees, upon trust, for the settlor for life, and, after his deccase, upon trust for sale, and thereout, first, to pay his debts, so as to discharge his real and personal estate therefrom; secondly, to apply a certain sum to the purposes of his will; and, lastly, to divide the surplus amongst parties named; the latter are proper parties to a creditors' suit, seeking to follow the real as well as personal estate of the settlor, although the court, in its discretion, may make a decree for administration in their absence. Savage v. Lane, 6 Hare, 32; 17 L. J., Ch. 89.

In a suit since Ord. XXX. of August, 1841, to establish the claims of creditors of a testator against his real estate devised, legatees, whose legacies are charged on such real estate, are not necessary parties where there are devisees in trust having the power specified in the order. Ward v. Bassett, 5 Hare, 179.

J. C., by his will, devised all his estates, real and personal, to trustees, first to pay all his debts, &c.; next, to the use of his son G. C., for life, with remainder to his issue; and if G. C. should die without issue, to M. W. for life with remainder to such of her children as should be living at her death, in equal shares. G. C. having died without issue, and M. W. having several children living:—Held, that in a suit by the creditors of J. C. to have the trusts of his will for payment of his debts executed, and praying a sale of the real estate, all the children of M. W. are necessary parties. Oldham v. Wilkins, 1 Ir. Eq. R. 59.

—— Bill for Sale of the whole Real Estate.]—Where the bill prayed for the sale of the whole real estate, and to be applied, with the personal estate, in payment of debts, legacies, and annuities:—Held, not a case within Ord. XXX., and that all were to be made parties. Miller v. Huddlestone, 13 Sim. 467; 7 Jur. 504.

—— Bill of Foreclosure.]—Quære, whether Ord. XXX. of August, 1841, applies to the case of a bill of foreclosure of freeholds devised in trust. Wilton v. Jones, 2 Y. & C. C. C. 244.

—— Executors also Devisees in Trust of Real Estate charged with Debts.]—Executors, who are also devisees in trust of real estate charged by will with debts, generally represent the persons beneficially interested in such real estate, within the meaning of Ord. XXX. of August, 1841, although the trustees are not otherwise empowered to give discharges for the proceeds. Savory v. Barber, 4 Hare, 125.

—— Trustees with Power to Sell after Decease of Certain Persons.]—In a suit to execute the trusts of a will devising real estates to trustees for certain persons for life, and after their decease for sale: with power to give discharges for the proceeds and the rents and profits, and with a direction to stand possessed of the moneys to arise thereby, upon trust for the children of the tenants for life, the trustees and the tenants for life being defendants—but there being no power of sale until after the death of the tenants for life, the court, notwithstanding Ord. XXX. of August, 1841, directed that the children of the tenants for life should be made parties. Coæ v. Barnard, 5 Hare, 253.

—— Distribution of Residue — Devisees in Trust.]—Where the suit involves the administration of the estate and distribution of the residue, the devisees in trust do not, under Ord. XXX. of August, 1841, sufficiently represent the persons beneficially interested in the estate. Jones v. How, 7 Hare, 270 ; 19 L. J., Ch. 324 ; 14 Jur. 145.

—— Suit by Person entitled to Share of Sale Moneys.]—In a suit by a person entitled to a share of the sale moneys where the trustees had power to give good receipts:—Held, that the parties entitled to the other shares were not necessary parties. Reeve v. Richer, 1 De G. & Sm. 624 ; 17 L. J., Ch. 86 ; 11 Jur. 960.

—— Absent Shareholders—Trustee having no Beneficial Interest.]—The rule that a few of the shareholders of a company may sue on behalf of themselves and the other shareholders, will not enable a mere trustee, having no beneficial interest, to represent the absent shareholders. Doyle v. Muntz, 5 Hare, 509 ; 16 L. J., Ch. 51 ; 10 Jur. 914.

d. Third Parties.

Persons claiming Title adverse to Trust.]—Persons claiming a title purely adverse to a trust cannot be made parties to a suit for the execution of the trust. Att.-Gen. v. Avon, otherwise Aberavon Corporation, 3 De G. J. & S. 637 ; 2 N. R. 564 ; 33 L. J., Ch. 172 ; 11 W. R. 1050.

Incumbrancer pendente lite held not an indispensable party to a suit to recover the fund. M'Leod v. Annesley, 16 Beav. 600 ; 22 L. J., Ch. 633 ; 17 Jur. 608 ; 1 W. R. 250.

In a suit for the administration of trust property, part of which had been properly, and part improperly, included in a mortgage security:—Held, that no relief could be given against the mortgagee unless the plaintiff offered to redeem him. Eaton v. Hazel, 1 W. R. 87.

Upon a bill filed by trustees, for the directions of the court in execution of the trusts of a will, if the trustees have notice of any doubt as to the title of the testator to a part of the estate devised, the person who may be benefited by that doubt is properly made a defendant to the suit, and the court will not proceed to the execution of the trusts of the will, until that doubt is removed, either by a proceeding at law, or by such other course of inquiry as the court may think proper to direct. Talbot v. Radnor (Earl), 3 Myl. & K. 252.

Action by Trustees against Stranger.]—One of several trustees cannot bring an action against a stranger in respect of the trust property. Where there are questions between the different trustees and beneficiaries as to suing strangers, such questions must be tried in a preliminary action to which the stranger is not party. Luke v. South Kensington Hotel Co., 47 L. J., Ch. 240.

Three trustees invested trust funds in a second mortgage of an hotel belonging to a company. Two of the trustees executed a deed which purported to reduce the amount charged on the property and to give the security of the covenant of a new company for payment of the reduced amount. The third trustee refused to execute the deed, and filed a bill to have the deed declared void and to realise the security. The other trustees refused to join, and were made defendants. The bill was dismissed. Ib.

Action in Name of Trustee.]—The assignee of an insolvent debtor could not bring an action for rent against the tenant of premises in which the insolvent had a life interest in the names of the trustees of those premises without their consent or the offer to them of a sufficient indemnity against costs. Spicer v. Todd, 1 D. P. C. 306 ; 2 C. & J. 165 ; 2 Tyrw. 172 ; 1 L. J., Ex. 59.

Bill against Trustee and his Solicitor—In respect of Costs.]—To a bill against a trustee and his solicitor, alleging that trust moneys had been improperly paid to the solicitor for costs, a demurrer of the solicitor was allowed, he being a mere agent, and the matter complained of being one merely of account as between the trustee and cestui que trust. Maw v. Pearson, 28 Beav. 196.

—— Where Solicitor has Received Trust Moneys.]—Though the solicitor or agent of a trustee is not generally a proper party to a suit to recover the trust funds, yet the case is different where he has received the trust moneys, and has intermeddled with the performance of the trust. Hardy v. Caley, 33 Beav. 365.

Persons not Trustees Parties to Breach of Trust.]—In 1840, a father left a legacy to his daughter to be paid ten years after his death. In 1847, the executor assigned to her husband certain leaseholds, which formed part of her father's estate, in consideration of the amount of the legacy, the assignee having notice of the trusts of the will. In 1870, the persons entitled to the residuary estate filed a bill against the executor and the assignee of the leaseholds, alleging that the leaseholds had been sold at an undervalue, and that the assignee was a party to the breach of trust thus committed, and praying for administration of the trusts of the will, and that the assignment might be set aside:—Held, that the bill was not multifarious. Pyrah v. Woodcock, 24 L. T. 407 ; 19 W. R. 463.

Held, also, that the assignee was not an express trustee so as to bring the case within s. 25 of the 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, the Statute of Limitations. Ib.

Bill against a trustee who has assigned his trust. The assignee ought to be made a party, as the decree should be first against him, and the trustee to stand as a security. Burt v. Dennet, 2 Bro. C. C. 225.

It is not necessary to make all persons who concurred in a resolution for the misapplication of trust money, parties to the suit for replacing it, only those who actually take and misapply the money. Holmes v. Henty, 4 Cl. & F. 142 ; 10 Bligh (N.S.) 255—H. L. (E.)

A person, not a trustee, who is a party to a breach of trust committed by a trustee, may or may not (at the option of the plaintiff, a cestui que trust) be made a defendant to a suit against the trustee in respect of such breach. Bateman v. Margerison, 6 Hare, 499.

Cases in which the liability of the trustee and a stranger to the trust may be indivisible ; and the stranger is a proper party, with the trustee to the suit of the cestui que trust. Lund v. Blanshard, 4 Hare, 29.

Different forms of suit by a cestui que trust in respect of claims against the trustees and strangers as debtors, or liable to the trust. Ib. 28.

—— Proceedings by Corporation against some of its Members.] — Certain members of the governing body of the Corporation of Leeds, immediately after the passing of the Municipal Corporation Act, procured funds belonging to the corporation to be applied, by the trustees in whom they were vested, to purposes not warranted by the act. An information and bill, in which the corporation were the relators and plaintiffs, was filed for the purpose of making five individuals out of the several members concerned in the transaction, and the trustees, personally liable to make good the funds :—Held, that the suit was properly framed for that purpose; and a decree was made accordingly; and held that the other members concerned in the transaction were not necessary parties. Att.-Gen. v. Wilson, Cr. & Ph. 1; 10 L. J., Ch. 53; 4 Jur. 1174.

In a suit to remedy a breach of trust, it is not, since the Orders of August, 1841, necessary to make every party participating in the breach of trust party to the suit. Att.-Gen. v. Leicester Corporation, 7 Beav. 176. S. P., Kellaway v. Johnson, 5 Beav. 319; 6 Jur. 751.

—— Person to whom Part of Trust Fund Improperly Paid.]—A party to whom part of a trust fund had been improperly paid was made a co-defendant with the trustees, in a suit for its recovery. Att.-Gen. v. Compton, 1 Y. & C. C. C. 417.

In a cause petition by cestui que trust against the personal representative of a trustee for a breach of trust committed by the trustee in paying the trust moneys to a third party, such third party is a necessary party to the suit. Copeland v. Wilkes, 15 W. R. 855.

Assignees of Bankrupt Trustees.]—In a suit against a surviving trustee, and the representatives of a deceased trustee by a residuary legatee for administration of the estate :—Held, that the assignees of the surviving trustee, who had misapplied the funds and become bankrupt since the bill was filed, were necessary parties. Lewin v. Allen, 8 W. R. 603.

In a suit to make trustees liable for a breach of trust :—Held, that the assignees of two bankrupt trustees were not indispensable parties, as the case fell within Gen. Ord. XXXII. of August, 1841. Norris v. Wright, 14 Beav. 310.

3. The Statute of Limitations.

Declaration of Trust—What is.]—A. bequeathed her residuary personalty to her nephew J., and appointed her sister B. executrix. B. (apparently thinking there was an intestacy as to the residue) passed the residuary account showing a sum in hand as being the "said residue and moneys to which I am entitled, and intend to retain to my own use and for the use of J., being a sister and a descendant of a brother of the deceased" :—Held, that B. had not thereby declared a trust of the residue for J. so as to prevent the statute of limitations from running against J. Rowe, In re, Jacobs v. Hind, 58 L. J., Ch. 703; 61 L. T. 581—C. A.

Money paid by Woman to Man with whom she Cohabited.]—A woman who cohabited with a man as her husband handed to him sums of money without any specific directions as to their application, and he invested them in the purchase of leasehold and other property :—Held, that the transactions ought to be regarded, not as loans, to which the statute of limitations would be applicable, but in the nature of a trust, and that she was entitled to the investments. James v. Holmes, 4 De G. F. & J. 470; 31 L. J., Ch. 567; 8 Jur. (N.S.) 732; 6 L. T. 589; 10 W. R. 634.

Mortgage—Agreement to assign a Term—Express Trust.]—Where a term is created on an express trust to secure principal and interest, s. 22 of 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, does not operate as a bar, and the mortgagee's right is not confined to six years. Shaw v. Johnson, 4 L. T. 460; 9 W. R. 629.

Where there is an agreement to assign a term on an express trust to secure principal and interest, which can be enforced in equity, although the deed is not executed, the court will consider such assignment as if it had been executed, and make a decree for a general account not limited to the six years. Ib.

Where a term is clothed with an active trust by an express agreement to assign it to recover principal and interest, it is not within the terms of 8 & 9 Vict. c. 112. Ib.

Resulting Trust—Possession by Trustees under void Deed.]—Although trustees have in the first instance entered into possession of land conveyed to them in trust for a charity under a deed void under the law of mortmain, yet they may acquire a title by possession. Churcher v. Martin, 58 L. J., Ch. 586; 42 Ch. D. 312; 61 L. T. 113; 37 W. R. 682.

Breach of Trust—Payment of Interest—Investment on Mortgage—Insufficient Security.]—A breach of trust had been committed by trustees in 1878 by investing trust money on mortgage upon property of insufficient value, at which date the cause of action in respect thereof arose :—Held, that payment of interest to the tenant for life by the trustees from 1878 to 1890, was was not an acknowledgment by the trustees of a liability to repay the principal, and that the action against the trustees by the tenant for life for breach of trust was barred by s. 8 of the Trustee Act, 1888. Somerset, In re, Somerset v. Poulett (Earl), 63 L. J., Ch. 41; [1894] 1 Ch. 231; 7 R. 34; 69 L. T. 744; 42 W. R. 145—C. A.

—— "Party or privy to"—Property "still retained."]—A person cannot be said to be "party or privy to" a breach of trust within the meaning of s. 8 of the Trustee Act, 1888, who derives no benefit from it, has no knowledge of it, and is not concerned in it in any way; and he cannot be deprived of the benefit of that section on the ground that trust property is "still retained" by him unless it is shown that he has had actual control of the property. Thorne v. Heard, 64 L. J., Ch. 652: [1895] A. C. 495; 11 R. 254; 73 L. T. 291; 44 W. R. 155—H. L. (E.)

—— Trustee Act, 1888, s. 8, sub-s. 1 (a) (b).]—In an action commenced after the 1st January, 1890, to render trustees liable for a loss arising from an improvident investment of the trust funds, where the breach of trust is committed more than six years before the commencement of the action :—Semble clause (a) of sub-s. 1 of s. 8 of the Trustee Act, 1888, does not apply; but, held, that clause (b) applies. Bowden, In re, Andrew v. Cooper, 59 L. J., Ch. 815 ; 45 Ch. D. 444 ; 39 W. R. 219. See also Moore v. Knight, 60 L. J., Ch. 271 ; [1891] 1 Ch. 547 ; 63 L. T. 831 ; 39 W. R. 312.

—— Legacy.]—In an action by residuary legatees against an executor and trustee for a legacy, in respect of which a breach of trust had been committed, the defendant pleaded the statute of limitations as more than six years had elapsed since the action might have been brought :—Held, that as the action was against a trustee for breach of trust, and was therefore one to which no existing statute of limitations applied within the meaning of the Trustee Act, 1888, s. 8, sub-s. 1 (b), the statute of limitations could now be pleaded, and was a bar to the action. Swain, In re, Swain v. Bringeman, 61 L. J., Ch. 20 ; [1891] 3 Ch. 233 ; 65 L. T. 296.

—— Account.]—A testatrix gave all her residuary estate to two trustees in trust for an infant, to be paid to him at twenty-one. He attained twenty-one in 1880. In 1892 he took out a summons against the two trustees for administration of testatrix's estate. One of the defendants, who had been acting trustee alone appeared. There was no allegation of fraud, or any evidence that the defendant still retained any part of the trust funds, or had converted them to his own use. The defendant admitted that he had rendered no account to the plaintiff, but deposed that he had spent all the trust funds in maintaining the plaintiff during his infancy :—Held, that s. 8 of the Trustee Act, 1888, applied, and that the summons must be dismissed. Page, In re, Jones v. Morgan, 62 L. J., Ch. 592 ; [1893] 1 Ch. 304 ; 3 R. 171 ; 41 W. R. 357.

—— Payment away of Moneys Applicable to Annuity.]—A claim by an annuitant against a trustee for an account of moneys which ought to have been appropriated as a security for the payment of the annuity, but which were otherwise disposed of by the trustee in breach of trust more than six years before action brought, is barred by s. 8 of the Trustee Act, 1888. Bowden, In re, Andrew v. Cooper, supra, explained. How v. Winterton (Earl), 65 L. J., Ch. 832 ; [1896] 2 Ch. 626 ; 75 L. T. 40 ; 45 W. R. 103—C. A.

—— Conversion.]—Where trust moneys are advanced on mortgage and are handed over by the mortgagor's directions to a bank of which one of the trustees is a partner in payment of a prior charge of the bank on the property mortgaged, this is not in the absence of fraud "trust property received by the trustee and converted to his use," within s. 8, sub-s. 1 of the Trustee Act, 1888, and consequently the trustee may rely on the statute of limitations as a defence to an action to recover the trust property. Gurney, In re, Mason v. Mercer, [1893] 1 Ch. 590 ; 3 R. 148 ; 68 L. T. 289 ; 41 W. R. 443.

—— Directors of Company.]—As directors are trustees of the assets of their company which come to their hands or which are under their control, the statute of limitations may, by virtue of s. 8 of the Trustee Act, 1888, be pleaded by them where it is sought to make them liable for breach of trust for the improper application of such assets. Lands Allotment Co., In re, 63 L. J., Ch. 291 ; [1894] 1 Ch. 616 ; 7 R. 115 ; 70 L. T. 286 ; 42 W. R. 404 ; 1 Manson, 107—C. A.

—— Trustee in Liquidation.]—The provisions of s. 8 of the Trustee Act, 1888, have no application to a trustee under a liquidation. Cornish, In re, Board of Trade, Ex parte, 65 L. J., Q. B. 106 ; [1896] 1 Q. B. 99 ; 73 L. T. 602 ; 44 W. R. 161 ; 3 Manson, 48—C. A.

—— Money of Married Woman seized by Husband.]—In 1876 a husband took from his wife by force a legacy bequeathed to her separate use, which she had to his knowledge just received on her separate receipt. The wife repeatedly demanded the money from her husband until his death in 1894, but did not obtain it. In 1895 she brought an action against her husband's executors for the amount :—Held, that the husband knew or was affected with notice that the legacy was his wife's separate property, and had, by taking possession of it, made himself a trustee for her ; that as he had retained the money and not accounted for it, his executors could not, under the Trustee Act of 1888, s. 8, claim the benefit of the statute of limitations, and that his estate was liable to refund the amount. Wassell v. Leggatt, 65 L. J., Ch. 240 ; [1896] 1 Ch. 554 ; 74 L. T. 99 ; 44 W. R. 298.

—— Improper Investment—Action by Cestui que Trust—Interest on Money lodged in Court to satisfy Breach of Trust during Lifetime of Tenant for Life who has acquiesced in Breach of Trust.]—By a settlement executed on July 7, 1873, on the marriage of J. G. C. and E. M. C. (the plaintiff) of which E. F. W. and C. M. H. were trustees, the following property was put in settlement :—(1) a policy for 1,000*l.* on the life of J. G. C. ; (2) two policies for 200*l.* each on the life of J. L. ; (3) six shares of 20*l.* 10*s.* in the Great Western Railway of Canada ; and (4) 400*l.* on deposit receipt in the Munster bank. The property was settled upon trust for the plaintiff for life, with remainder to the children of the marriage, and the settlement contained a power to advance 400*l.* out of the trust funds to the husband, J. G. C. There were six children of the marriage. J. L. having died, a sum of 516*l.*, representing the two policies on his life, was paid to E. F. W. in April, 1877, and was lent by E. F. W. and C. M. H., to J. G. C. without security and was lost. The 400*l.* invested on deposit receipt in the Munster bank was advanced to J. G. C. under the power. In 1879, E. F. W. retired from the trusteeship, and S. J. S. was appointed in his stead. The trustees neglected to obtain a transfer of the Canadian Railway shares which remained in the plaintiff's name until 1884, when she transferred them to C. M. H. On March 1, 1884, C. M. H. sold these shares for 79*l.* 8*s.* and appropriated the proceeds. J. G. C. died in 1895. In an action by E. M. C. and the minor children, against E. F. W., C. M. H., and S. J. S., to replace the trust fund and for an account, E. F. W. lodged 516*l.* in court, and pleaded the statute of limitations :—Held, that by virtue of the Trustee Act, 1888, s. 8, on E. F. W. lodging the 516*l.* as he had done, and upon his paying the proceeds of sale of the Canadian Railway shares, in case of the default of C. M. H. so to do, no interest was payable to the plaintiff E. M. C. during her life, but that such interest was payable to the trustee

1. INVESTMENTS IN NAME OF OR UNDER THE CONTROL OF TRUSTEE.

a. In General.

General Rule—Mixed Fund.]—If a trustee mixes a trust fund with his own moneys, as long as the mixed fund remains under his control, either in its original shape or in such a substituted form that it can be traced, it is primarily liable to answer the trust. Frith v. Cartland, 2 H. & M. 417; 34 L. J., Ch. 301; 11 Jur. (N.S.) 238; 12 L. T. 175; 13 W. R. 493.

The rules as to following trust funds in the hands of a defaulting trustee apply against the assignees of the defaulting trustee as fully as against the trustee himself; and the evidence that the trust fund was acquired on the eve of the bankruptcy, and when the bankrupt was about to abscond with that and his other moneys:—Held, not to raise any equity in favour of assignees or general creditors, as against the owners of the trust fund. Ib.

If executor, for benefit of the testator's estate, should invest part of it in the funds, or transfer money from one stock to another, this is not a conversion, but it may still be followed as much as if it had continued in the same condition at the testator's death. Waite v. Whorwood, 2 Atk. 159.

When trust funds are invested on an improper security, the parties interested have a lien on the securities into which it is traced. Mant v. Leith, 15 Beav. 524; 21 L. J., Ch. 719; 16 Jur. 302.

Under circumstances of great peculiarity, and notwithstanding a great deal of intermixture backwards and forwards of cheques relating to trust funds:—Held, that the trust funds were traced into certain securities, and decree for redemption accordingly. Harford v. Lloyd, 20 Beav. 310.

Order for Payment into Court—Non-waiver of Right to follow Trust Money.]—Held, that by instituting an administration suit, and obtaining the order against the trustee personally for payment of the trust moneys into court (which order had not been obeyed), the cestuis que trust had not waived their right to pursue the trust money into the unauthorised investment. Francis v. Francis, 5 De G. M. & G. 108.

Shares in Banking Company held by Trustee and Mixed up with his Own.]—Trust funds were invested in the purchase of transferable shares of a banking company, in the name of one of the trustees, who executed a declaration of the trusts thereof (the rules of the company not allowing shares to stand in the name of joint owners or cestuis que trust). The trustee was also a proprietor of shares in his own right in the same company, and made various sales and purchases of shares therein. There was nothing to distinguish which were the individual shares held by the different proprietors, the same being in the nature of capital expressed by quantity. The trustee contracted to assign a certain number of shares to the banking company as a security for advances which they made to him; he afterwards became bankrupt:—Held, that the trustee must be presumed to have transferred or pledged such shares as belonged to himself, and, so far as he had shares of his own, not to have transferred or pledged the shares of his cestuis que trust; and that, therefore, the cestuis que trust were entitled to so many of the shares standing in the name of the trustee at the time of his bankruptcy as could be presumed to be identical with the shares in which the trust funds were invested, from the fact that such a number of shares had always thenceforward stood in the name of the trustee. Pinkett v. Wright, 2 Hare, 120; 12 L. J., Ch. 119; 6 Jur. 1102. Affirmed nom. Murray v. Pinkett, 12 Cl. & F. 764—H. L. (E.)

Informal Document signed by Trustee Debtor to Trust.]—An informal document, signed by a trustee who was indebted to the trust, construed to amount to an equitable mortgage in favour of the trust, notwithstanding a denial by the answer. Baynard v. Woolley, 20 Beav. 583.

Sole Trustee appropriating Part of Trust Money—Deposit of Policies with Memorandum in Box where Trust Deed kept.]—A sole trustee, who had appropriated 4,000*l.*, part of the trust property, deposited in the box in which he kept the trust deed and the securities for other portions of the trust funds two policies of assurance, one on his own life for 2,000*l.*, the other on the life of his father for 3,000*l.*, inclosing them in an envelope with a memorandum, that "in the event of his" (the trustee's) "death," the amount of the inclosed policies was to be applied to the repayment of 4,000*l.* borrowed by him of the cestui que trust. Six years afterwards the trustee became bankrupt. The policy for 2,000*l.* was found by the officer of the court of bankruptcy inclosed with the memorandum in the box, the other policy having been paid to the bankrupt upon his father's death:—Held, as between the cestui que trust and the assignees in bankruptcy, first, that notwithstanding the words importing contingency, the memorandum was a valid declaration that the policy was, in any event, subject to the trusts of the settlement. Bankhead's Settlement, In re, 2 K. & J. 560; 4 W. R. 589.

Held, secondly, that there being a valid declaration of trust by the sole trustee, he was the proper person to be in possession of the policy; in other words, "the true owner" within the meaning of the 12 & 13 Vict. c. 106; and he being also in the reputed possession of the property when the bankruptcy took place, there was no separation of interests, the true owner and the reputed owner were the same person, and s. 125 did not apply. And an order was made, under s. 130, for an assignment of the policy to the new trustees of the settlement. Ib.

Debentures in Banking Company acquired with Policy Money.]—E. effected a policy of assurance on his life in the name of two trustees, B. and M., for the benefit of his two daughters, and died largely indebted to M. M. received the policy money, and invested the greater part of it in debentures of a joint-stock banking company. These debentures he placed in a separate envelope, inscribed with the names of E.'s daughters, and paid them the interest until the bank stopped payment. The bank was subsequently wound up under the Joint Stock Company Winding-up Act, when M. was found to be largely indebted to the bank. M. survived his co-trustee, and became bankrupt (having previously handed over the debentures to a third party), and the official manager of the company was appointed official assignee of his bankruptcy. E.'s daughter claimed the debentures as being held in trust for them :—Held, first, that there was a valid trust of the policy money in the hands of M., notwithstanding the fact of E. being indebted to him ; secondly, that the debentures were well appropriated to the trust, and were not subject to M.'s liabilities to the bank. Boyd, Ex parte, Royal Bank of Australia, In re, 5 W. R. 634.

Policy effected by Defaulting Trustee as Security for Restoration of Trust Fund.]—A defaulting trustee effected a policy of assurance on his own account (but in the name of the next friend of the cestui que trust, who was a married woman) with the approbation of the master, as being the best security which it was in the trustee's power to give for the restoration of the trust fund. The amount secured by the policy became payable at the death of the trustee, which occurred before the master had made his report :—Held, that the money was not general assets of the trustee, but was applicable in the first place to compensate the loss occasioned by the breach of trust. Ward v. Ward, 2 Sm. & G. 125 ; 18 Jur. 529.

Purchase of Consols partly with Trust Money and partly with Trustees own Money.]—A testator, having moneys in his hands belonging to other parties, invested a portion, by their direction, together with his own moneys, in consols, and informed the parties of such investment, and duly accounted to them for the dividends. He afterwards sold out nearly the whole of the stock, and then replaced a portion of it, and, on his death, having directed his confidential clerk to buy stock to replace the rest, he expressed his wish that the stock to be purchased by the clerk should be appropriated to replace the trust stock. The clerk purchased a sum of stock in the testator's name ; but the whole stock standing in the testator's name at his death was not sufficient to replace the trust moneys :—Held, that, under the circumstances, the stock standing in the testator's name at his death was impressed with a trust, and did not form part of his general assets. Robertson v. Morrice, 9 Jur. 122.

Failure of Security taken for Trust Fund and also Trustee's own Money.]—Where a trustee mixes his own money with the trust fund, and takes security for the whole fund, if the security fail, the trust fund is entitled to priority of payment. But if the cestuis que trust have elected to adopt the loan, they cannot compel the trustee to make good the deficiency. Lamb v. Orton, 2 N. R. 435 ; 11 W. R. 1043.

Trustee becoming Insolvent having given Bond.]—Part of a sum of money which had been raised by a husband upon the security of property comprised in his marriage settlement, by means of a suppression of the settlement, was lent by him to the trustee of the settlement upon his bond, the trustee being ignorant of the means by which the money had been raised. After the death of the husband, the wife, who was entitled to a life interest in the settled property, with remainder to her children, took out administration to her husband, and filed a bill in her own name, and in the names of her children, by herself, as their next friend, against the trustee, who had, in the meantime, taken the benefit of the Insolvent Debtors Act, praying that the sum due upon the bond (which the widow, as administratrix, offered to deliver up) might be replaced with interest upon the trusts of the settlement : —Held, that the widow and children had a clear equity to follow the money in the hands of the trustee, and that they would have had the same equity if, instead of being a trustee, he had been a stranger ; and, semble, that such a claim would not have been barred by the trustee's discharge under the Insolvent Debtors Act, even if it had been proved (which it was not) that the bond debt had been included in his schedule. Buckeridge v. Glasse, Cr. & Ph. 126 ; 10 L. J., Ch. 134 ; 5 Jur. 163.

Farming Stock Ear-marked as Property.]—W. A., who at the time of his death in 1867 was carrying on the business of a farmer, gave his residuary personal estate to his widow and a co-trustee, upon trust to permit his widow to have the use and enjoyment of the household furniture, and the dividends, interest, and annual income and produce of his other residuary estate for life, and then upon trusts in favour of the testator's two sons. The testator's residuary estate consisted almost entirely of the household furniture and farm stock, and the widow, with the consent of her co-trustee, carried on the business of the farm. She took a new lease of the farm in her own name, and painted her name upon the carts ; but the financial part of the business was carried on through a joint banking account opened in the names of "the executors of the late W. A." In 1879 the widow presented her petition for liquidation. All the property in her possession consisted of the furniture and farm stock bequeathed by the testator, or of stock which had replaced the original stock in the ordinary course of business. Upon being sold, it realised a sum of 2,063*l.* 15*s.* 6*d.*, with produce estimated at 250*l.* still to be realised. The testator's residuary account had been passed at 1,917*l.* 7*s.* 6*d.* :—Held, that the farming stock in the hands of the widow was well ear-marked as trust property, and that only the life interest of the widow in the proceeds of the realisation passed to the trustees in the liquidation. Barber, Ex parte, Anslow, In re, 42 L. T. 411 ; 28 W. R. 522.

b. Shuffling the Funds of Two different Settlements.

Trustee of two Funds—Appropriation—Solicitor—Fraud.]—If a solicitor who is a trustee of two funds for different cestuis que trust, shuffles one for the other for the purpose of concealing a fraud he has committed, a co-trustee, who has unwillingly been led to do an act which enabled the solicitor to deal with the fund, cannot claim a restoration of the fund dealt with, though it remained in the name of the fraudulent trustee. Case v. James, 30 L. J., Ch. 749; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 869; 4 L. T. 664; 9 W. R. 771—L.JJ. Affirming 29 Beav. 512.

A trustee of a settlement, unknown to his cestuis que trust, sold the trust fund and applied the proceeds to his own use. He represented that the money had been lent on mortgage, and they pressed for its reinvestment. He afterwards induced his co-trustee of a second fund to join him in transferring it into his name, and take as security a transfer of a mortgage, which in the result proved to be a forgery. He afterwards made a small addition to the fund out of his own moneys, and gave notice to the cestuis que trust of the first fund that it had been replaced, and they immediately put a distringas upon the stock. He afterwards died insolvent, leaving the stock standing in his name. Upon a bill by the surviving trustee of the second fund, against the cestuis que trust of the first fund, asking that the stock might be restored to him:—Held, that the plaintiff had no remedy against the cestuis que trust of the first fund; that the cestuis que trust of the second fund, had they known the facts, might have stopped and reclaimed it prior to the notice; that the notice of reinvestment to the cestuis que trust of the first fund amounted to a valid transfer, which made them as against the plaintiff purchasers for value without notice of the fraud; and that the bill must be dismissed with costs. Ib.

—— Right to Follow Fund Paid into Court—Bonâ fide Purchaser.]—A trustee of two different settlements, having applied to his own use funds subject to one of the settlements, replaced it by funds which, under a power of attorney from his co-trustee under the other, he transferred into the names of himself and his co-trustee in the former. In a suit in respect of breaches of trust of the former settlement, the trustees of it transferred the fund thus replaced into court on motion:—Held, that the transfer was equivalent to an alienation for value without notice, and that cestuis que trust under the other settlement could not follow the trust fund. Thorndike v. Hunt, 3 De G. & J. 563; 28 L. J., Ch. 417; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 879; 7 W. R. 246.

c. Trust Money Invested in Land.

General Principles.]—The court is cautious in following money into land, but will do it if proved that the money was laid out in land; the doubt is on the proof: always done when admitted on the answer of person laying it out. Lane v. Dighton, Amb. 413.

Where money is sought to be followed into land, the admission by the personal representative of the party laying it out will not bind the heir, but it will be ground for inquiry. Ib.

Money settled to the separate use of the wife, and in the event of no children to her absolutely, surviving the husband; with power to the trustees, with her consent, to invest it in land:—Held, that no lien existed on estates purchased by the husband, having obtained the money from the trustee: the circumstances not raising the presumption, as if he had even under an engagement to purchase, that his purchases were in pursuance of that engagement; and upon the evidence the fact of the application of the trust fund, or the inability of the husband by other means, not being made out. Lench v. Lench, 10 Ves. 511.

Remedy for a breach of trust is personal, and money produced thereby, laid out on an estate in Ireland, cannot be specifically followed; the party's assets were, however, marshalled in favour of the claim. Cox v. Bateman, 2 Ves. sen. 19.

Presumption as to Lands Purchased.]—L. M. bequeathed 50,000*l.* to two trustees upon trust to invest in the purchase of lands in Wales, and to settle and convey the same to C. M. for life, with remainder to C. M.'s eldest son for life, with remainder to his first son in tail, with remainders over. C. M., who was also residuary legatee of the testator's estate, took out letters of administration, and subsequently he, with moneys amounting to 49,000*l.*, which were part of the testator's personal estate, purchased the Lamphey and other estates, of which he took conveyances to himself in fee. The Lamphey estate C. M., by his will, devised to his eldest son absolutely, subject, however, to the payments, charges, liabilities and demands of his uncle L. M.'s will, and in exoneration of his, C. M.'s, other estates, which he devised to his younger children. The Lamphey estate, subsequently to the purchase, became much improved in value. A bill was filed by the younger sons of C. M., praying for a declaration that the Lamphey estate ought to be taken in satisfaction of the 50,000*l.* directed by the will of L. M. to be laid out in land. By his report the master found that the Lamphey and other estates were purchased by C. M. by or with part of the personal estate of L. M., in execution or discharge of the trust for investment of the 50,000*l.* On exceptions to the report by the devisees of C. M.'s will:—Held, that the purchases having been made by the trustee C. M. with the trust moneys in his hands, a presumption arose that the purchases were made with a view to execute an obligation. Mathias v. Mathias, 3 Sm. & G. 552; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 429.

Held, also, that the moneys invested being trust moneys (and the circumstances attending the purchases of the estates were enough to attribute them to the performance of the trust), the trustee could have no right to deal with the estates so as to alter or prejudice the rights of the remaindermen. Ib.

Trustee for the purchase of land died without personal assets, but, having purchased land, the estates purchased were held not liable to the trust, the circumstances affording no presumption that they were purchased in execution of the trust. Perry v. Phelips, 17 Ves. 173.

A., by marriage articles, covenanted that all lands he should afterwards purchase in the parish of K. should be to the uses of the articles. He purchased lands in K., and took a conveyance in fee in the name of his youngest son, without a declaration of trust:—Held, that youngest son was a trustee as to the lands for the parties entitled under the settlement. Blake v. Blake, 7 Bro. P. C. 241.

An executor by the very will empowered to purchase lands for the heir; yet the purchase being in his own name, and he dead insolvent, as to the other assets the heir could not follow the land to make a trust for him, though the executor had told the mother of the purchase he was about to make, and had her consent; and so the executor's heirs went away with the land for want of express proof of the application of the trust money. Halcott v. Markant, Pre. Ch. 168.

A trustee purchases lands out of profits received out of the trust estate, and takes the conveyance in his own name; though possibly, if he be unable to make other satisfaction for the profits so misapplied, those lands may be sequestrated, yet they cannot be decreed to be a trust for the cestui que trust. Kirk v. Webb, Pre. Ch. 84. See also Heron v. Heron, id. 163.

A. dies intestate leaving a wife and two daughters; after his death 200*l.* is found hid in a wall, and 200*l.* in a box. The widow lays out this money in land, and settles it to the use of herself for life, remainder to her daughters in tail, remainder to her own right heirs. After the death of the mother and two daughters, plaintiff as administrator to the daughters, brings a bill against the heir-at-law, to have two-thirds of the 400*l.* out of the land as personal estate, and the master of the rolls decreed for him; but the decree was reversed by the lord keeper, money having no earmark. Kendar v. Milward, 2 Vern. 440. S. C., nom. Kinder v. Miller, Pre. Ch. 172.

Bank stock to the amount of 13,000*l* was transferred to a trustee to sell and invest the produce in lands, which were to be settled on certain uses and trusts. S., the administrator of the trustee, laid out 38,650*l.* in the purchase of lands, which were conveyed to him absolutely. The price of the stock at the time of the purchase was 23,630*l.* By a subsequent deed reciting the purchase of the lands thereby conveyed, and of other lands also therein mentioned, and that a portion of the purchase money of the several estates, lands and premises, consisted of the 13,000*l.* bank stock, and that the lands were conveyed to S., in pursuance and part performance of the trusts declared of the stock, and that he was desirous of fully performing the trusts by conveying the several lands on the trusts, he conveyed part of the purchased lands accordingly. The entire value of the stock was not represented by the lands so conveyed:—Held, that there was no dedication to the trusts of any other lands than those actually conveyed by the trust deed. Sealy v. Stawell, Ir. R. 2 Eq. 326.

Held, also, that there was no lien in favour of the persons entitled to the trust estate, on the other purchased lands, and that their claim was simply that of creditors on foot of a breach of trust. Ib.

The customer, having received a fund out of court, upon an undertaking to purchase and convey a house, &c., upon the trusts of his marriage settlement, and having deposited it with his bankers, drew on it from time to time, and amongst other things for the purchase of the house, which he procured to be conveyed to himself in fee, the deeds of which he deposited as a security for further advances; the court, in deciding between the bankers and the trustees of the settlement, would presume that the purchase-money of the house was drawn from the fund applicable for that purpose. Manningford v. Toleman, 1 Coll. C. C. 670; 14 L. J., Ch. 160; 9 Jur. 438.

Right of Legatees to Follow Money laid out in Land by Executor.]—Legatees allowed to follow money of testator laid out in land, &c., by executor. Ryall v. Ryall, 1 Atk. 59; cited in Amb. 411.

Right of Cestui que Trust where Trustee states that Part of Trust Moneys laid out in Certain Property.]—Where a trustee states in writing to his cestui que trust that part of the trust moneys are laid out in a certain property, although not an investment warranted by the terms of the trust, and although the cestui que trust goes on receiving interest, and not the rents:—Held, that the cestui que trust might at his option take the property in which the trust funds had been laid out as representing the whole trust fund, or might have it sold, and prove, if necessary, against the trustee's estate for the deficiency (if any). But the cestui que trust was not allowed to take the property as representing the actual portion of the trust fund laid out by the trustee, and prove for the balance. Thornton v. Stokill, 1 Jur. (N.S.) 751.

Payment off of Mortgage by Stranger.]—The plaintiffs, at the request of trustees of a marriage settlement, and of the tenant for life under the settlement, paid off 600*l.*, part of a mortgage debt of 1,000*l.* on a leasehold house comprised in the settlement. There was no transfer of the 600*l.* of the mortgage debt to the plaintiffs, but interest was paid to them. On the death of the tenant for life the appointees of the leasehold house obtained a transfer to themselves from the mortgagee of the remaining mortgage debt of 400*l.*, and of the premises, but subject to the equity of redemption, and they also obtained the title deeds. The plaintiffs advanced 600*l.* out of the trust money:—Held, that as the money was to the knowledge of all concerned trust money, the plaintiffs had a right to follow it. Patten v. Boyd or Bond, 60 L. T. 583; 37 W. R. 373.

Trust Fund Invested in Erection of Houses.]—A trust fund, with the concurrence of the trustees and in breach of the trust, was invested in erecting three houses on ground held under a lease to S., the tenant for life of the fund. One of the trustees brought an action against S. and the other trustee for a restoration of the fund by sale of the houses. The court ordered S. to bring the trust fund into court, or, in default, a sale of the houses, holding that a trustee may follow property in which a trust fund has been wrongly invested, though he has actively concurred in the breach of trust. The costs of an action for that purpose were decreed to the plaintiff trustee on the facts of the case. Carson v. Sloane, 13 L. R., Ir. 139.

2. Trust Moneys in Hands of Bankers or other Agents.

Bankers—Rule in Clayton's Case as applied to Trust Money.]—If money held by a person in a fiduciary character, though not as trustee, has been paid by him to his account at his banker's, the person for whom he held the money can follow it, and has a charge on the balance in the banker's hands. West of England and South Wales District Bank, In re, Dale & Co., Ex parte, dissented from. Hallett's Estate, In re, Knatchbull v. Hallett, 49 L. J., Ch. 415; 13 Ch. D. 696; 42 L. T. 421; 28 W. R. 732—C. A. And see Hallett & Co., In re, Blane, Ex parte, post, col. 907; Stenning, In re, Wood v. Stenning, post, col. 908; and Murray, In re, Dickson v. Murray, post, col. 909.

If a person who holds money as a trustee or in a fiduciary capacity pays it to his account at his bankers, and mixes it with his own money, and afterwards draws out sums by cheques in the ordinary manner:—Held, by the C. A. (dissent. Thesiger, L.J.), that the rule in Clayton's case (1 Mer. 572), attributing the first drawings out to the first payments in, does not apply; and that the drawer must be taken to have drawn out his own money in preference to the trust money. Pennell v. Deffell, infra, on this point not followed. Ib.

Held, by Fry, J., that, as between two cestuis que trust whose money the trustee has paid into his own account at his bankers, the rule in Clayton's case applies, so that the first sum paid in will be held to have been first drawn out. Ib.

When a trustee pays trust money into a bank to his credit to a simple account with himself, not distinguished in any other manner, the debt thus constituted from the bank to him is one which belongs as specifically to the trust as the money would have done had it specifically been placed by the trustee in a particular repository, and so remained; and the case would not be varied by the circumstance of the bank holding also for the trustee, or owing also to him money, in every sense his own. But cheques drawn by the trustee in a general manner upon the bank would, for every purpose be ascribed and affect the account in the mode explained and laid down in Clayton's case (1 Mer. 572). Pennell v. Deffell, 4 De G. M. & G. 372; 1 Eq. R. 579; 23 L. J., Ch. 115; 18 Jur. 273; 1 W. R. 499.

—— Priority.]—A banking company were employed as agents to collect money and to remit it to their employers. The bank received the money in cash, placed it with the other cash of the bank, and informed their employers that the money had been remitted; but before the money was actually remitted the bank went into liquidation:—Held, that the money was part of the general assets of the bank, and that the employers of the bank were not entitled to be paid in priority to the other creditors. Pennell v. Deffell, supra, considered. West of England and South Wales District Bank, In re, Dale & Co., Ex parte, 48 L. J., Ch. 600; 11 Ch. D. 772; 40 L. T. 712; 27 W. R. 815.

—— Appropriation by Beneficial Owner.]—H., having a balance of 3,961*l.* 10*s.* 3*d.* at his bank, paid in 5,000*l.* trust money. Between the time of doing so and his death he paid in various sums, together amounting to 12,533*l.* 11*s.* 6*d.*, and in the same interval drew out 18,847*l.* 4*s.* 4*d.* No part of this sum was devoted to the purposes of the trust, and he was still liable for the 5,000*l.* at the date of his death:—Held, that the balance remaining at his bank formed part of his general estate, and could not be appropriated by the beneficial owner of the 5,000*l.* Brown v. Adams, 39 L. J., Ch. 67; L. R., 4 Ch. 764; 21 L. T. 71; 17 W. R. 999.

—— Mere Allegation that Money Impressed with Trust.]—Where money has been paid in to the ordinary banking account of a company, not being in any way ear-marked, the company will not, on an allegation that the money is impressed with a trust, such allegation not being admitted by the company, be restrained, on motion, from dealing with the money. Bank of Turkey v. Ottoman Co., 14 L. T. 884; 14 W. R. 819.

—— Bequest of Shares on Trust—Transfer by Trustees—Registration of Transfer—Notice of Trust.] — Where a testator bequeaths his residuary estate to trustees upon trust to administer it for a period of ten years from his decease, and thereafter "to account for and give the said residue" to the residuary legatees named in the will, the legatees acquire their legal title from the trustees, and do not take directly under the will. Simpson v. Molson's Bank, 64 L. J., P. C. 51; [1895] A. C. 270; 11 R. 427—P. C.

Where a statute incorporating a bank provides that "the bank shall not be bound to see to the execution of any trust, whether express, implied or constructive, to which any of the shares of the bank may be subject," such provision must relate to, and free the bank from, liability for trusts of which the bank had knowledge or notice, as the bank could not, apart from the statute, incur liability by not seeing to the execution of a trust of which they had no knowledge. But assuming that the bank would be liable if it were shown that they were possessed of actual notice of the trust, the facts (i.) that a copy of the testator's will was in the possession of the bank; (ii.) that in the case of three of the testator's children, notice of the substitution of grandchildren was contained in the transfers registered by the executors in the bank's books on a previous occasion; (iii.) that one of the executors was president of the bank, and that the law agent of the executors was also law agent of the bank, are not sufficient to prove that the bank have received notice of the trust. Ib.

In 1843, trust moneys were standing to the credit of the trustees with certain bankers, who had clear and distinct notice that the money was trust money. The bankers transferred the money to themselves, without the knowledge or sanction of the trustees, in discharge of a debt due to them from the tenant for life of the fund, who afterwards became bankrupt. Decree for payment by the bankers of the trust fund, with interest, in a suit instituted against them by the trustees. Bridgham v. Gill, 24 Beav. 302.

—— Money Paid in for Specific Purpose, with Instructions in Writing.]—Where money is paid into a banker's by a customer for a purpose specified, and instructions are given in writing, and those instructions are acted upon, although such sum is carried to the general account of the party paying it in, and although the money is not eventually applied, but comes again into the banker's hands after business has ceased to be carried on:—Held, that it is sufficiently ear-marked to prevent its belonging to the general creditors. Farley v. Turner, 3 Jur. (N.S.) 532; 5 W. R. 666.

—— Liquidation of Joint Stock Company—Preferential Payment.] — By a mortgage, dated 12th February, 1883, D. mortgaged to the Ulster Land and Building Co. some house property to secure an advance of 600*l.* By two other mortgages, dated respectively the 9th March, 1883, and the 8th January, 1884, D. mortgaged the same property to F. to secure 250*l.* and further advances. The company entered into possession, and on the 20th July, 1885, sold. The company having gone into liquidation, F. required from the liquidator an account of the moneys received on account of the rents and the proceeds of the sale; and the account was furnished, showing that the company had received 135*l.* over and above all sums due. The proceeds of the sale, amounting to 746*l.* 19*s.* 11*d.*, were paid by the company on the 20th July, 1885, into a bank, along with other moneys of the company, making a total payment in of 902*l.* 11*s.* 10*d.* At the time this payment in was made, the company had money to its credit in the bank. At the same time the company had 1,000*l.* on deposit with the B. railway company, and they drew out the sum of 1,000*l.* from the bank, and lodged it with the railway company, making a total deposit with the railway company of 2,000*l.* After drawing out the sum of 1,000*l.*, there was a balance of 32*l.* 2*s.* 5*d.* due to the bank, and from that date down to the 17th August, 1885, the company's account was always overdrawn in a small varying amount. On the 17th August, 1885, the company cashed both the deposit receipts of the railway company, and paid into the bank the 2,000*l.*, with accrued interest. The moneys so lodged were applied by the company in payment of the interest due to the depositors, and in paying off some depositors who had required repayment. On the 31st August, 1885, by reason of these payments the bank account was overdrawn to the extent of 92*l.* 11*s.* 5*d.* From the 20th July, 1885, down to the 31st August, the company did not make any investments of any kind, except the lodgment of the said sum of 1,000*l.* with the B. railway company. The moneys so paid in were used in discharge of debts and liabilities of the company. Between the 31st August, 1885, and the 1st February, 1886, there was sometimes money to the company's credit in the bank, and sometimes the account was overdrawn; but no investments were made by the company during the period. From the 1st February, 1886, down to the date of the winding-up resolutions, the company's account was continuously overdrawn, and at the date of the company's winding-up resolutions the overdraft amounted to over 8,000*l.* In the month of April, 1886, the company's bankers required that the company's overdraft should be secured, when the company lodged with the bank, as security, a number of mortgages payable to the company. The property comprised in these mortgages was sold, and out of the proceeds the bank's claim was discharged:—Held, that F. was not entitled to follow the sum of 135*l.* in the hands of the liquidator, or to have his debt paid as a preferential claim. Ulster Building Co., In re, 25 L. R. Ir. 24.

—— Lease deposited with Bankers—Subsequent Notice of Trust.]—A., in whom a lease was vested, deposited it with his bankers by way of equitable mortgage. The bankers afterwards received notice, as the fact was, that he was a mere trustee of the leasehold, but they subsequently obtained from him a formal mortgage of the legal estate:—Held, that the cestuis que trust had priority over the bankers. Baillie v. M'Kewan, 35 Beav. 177.

—— Railway Stock—Constructive Notice.]—Bankers advanced to customers 300*l.* to redeem some railway stock which had been transferred to another firm as a security for that sum. The stock was thereupon transferred in blank to the bankers. Subsequently, the customers, in a letter to the bankers, stated that they had been requested by their principal to extend the term of the loan on the stock. The stock actually belonged to a third party, A.:—Held, that, after the receipt of this letter, the bankers had constructive notice of A.'s right to the stock, and that no subsequent advances made by the bankers to the customers could affect the stock. Locke v. Prescott, 32 Beav. 261.

—— Deeds deposited with Banker—Negligence of Co-trustees.]—Trust money was so placed to a banking account that any of the trustees could draw out separately. One of them drew out money and bought a house as a residence for some of the cestuis que trust, but took a conveyance to himself alone. He then deposited the deeds with another bank to secure his private balance, and afterwards became bankrupt. The co-trustees neglected to examine the banker's book for a long time after the purchase:—Held, that by reason of their negligence they were not entitled to priority over the security by deposit. Allan v. Scott, 12 L. T. 449.

—— Transfer to Trustee's Private Account—Liability of Bank.]—Where a sum of money was standing in the books of a banking company to the credit of "the account of the trustees of the late W. H.," and the bank, knowing that the trustees (each of whom had an overdrawn account at the bank) were not beneficially entitled, allowed them to transfer sums at different times from the trust account to their respective private accounts:—Held, that the cestuis que trust were entitled to recover from the bank the sums so allowed to be transferred, and that it was immaterial whether or not the bank knew what were the circumstances of the trust, and also whether or not the bank profited by the transfer from the one account to the other, so long as they were aware that the money dealt with was trust money. Foxton v. Manchester and Liverpool District Banking Co., 44 L. T. 406.

—— Mixing Trust Fund with Private Fund—Breach of Trust.]—The bankers of a sole trustee received a sum of over 1,400*l.* on his account, with notice that it was trust money. The trustee had not at the time a trust account, but a private account already overdrawn to a greater amount than the trust fund, by arrangement with the bankers, who had security. The bankers advised the trustee that the amount had been placed to his credit, and it was left on his private account, on which he continued to draw. Some years afterwards the trustee became bankrupt, his account being then overdrawn by several thousand pounds:—Held, that the bankers, not having designed or stipulated for any benefit to themselves on receiving the trust money, and not having at that time any suspicion that the trustee was insolvent, or intended to commit a breach of trust, were not bound to restore it to the trust estate. Foxton

v. Manchester and Liverpool District Banking Co., supra, distinguished. Coleman v. Bucks and Oxon Union Bank, 66 L. J., Ch. 564 ; [1897] 2 Ch. 243 ; 76 L. T. 684 ; 45 W. R. 616.

—— Customer's Money lodged in Bank—Bank's Lien — Appropriation — Marshalling.] — Money identified as belonging to a customer of the deceased, a stockbroker, was lodged by him to the credit of his current account with his bank. After his death, which occurred on the day after the lodgment, the bank transferred the balance due to the deceased on his current account to a loan account, on which he was indebted to the bank, and sold so much of certain stocks and shares (which they held as security for any balance which might be due to them on the loan account) as was sufficient to pay off the entire amount remaining due to them, and thereupon transferred the remaining securities to the credit of the matter to administer deceased's estate :—Held, that the deceased's customer was entitled to follow the money identified as his, and to stand in the place of the bank, and to have the benefit of their lien on the securities lodged in court. M'Mahon v. Fetherstonhaugh, [1895] 1 Ir. R. 83.

—— Separate Trusts Accounts—Set-off of Private Account.]—When a customer has opened with his bankers separate accounts specially headed with the names of the trusts to which the moneys paid into those accounts belong, the bankers are not at liberty upon the bankruptcy of the customer to apply those moneys in payment of the balance due to them upon the customer's overdrawn private account. Kingston, Ex parte, Gross, In re, 40 L. J., Bk. 91 ; L. R. 6 Ch. 632 ; 25 L. T. 250 ; 19 W. R. 910.

A county treasurer used to pay the county moneys into Bacon's Bank, but kept his private account at the National and Provincial Bank, and carried over the police rates to this account by cheques drawn on Bacon's Bank. In 1869 he opened a separate account with the National and Provincial Bank, headed "Police Account." Some of the items to his credit in this account could be traced as having come from county funds, but most of them could not. The cheques which he drew upon it were all headed "Police Account," and appeared to have been drawn only for county purposes. For the purposes of interest the National and Provincial Bank treated the accounts as one account, and the interest on the balance in his favour was carried to the credit of his private account. At the time when the police account was opened the manager of the bank knew that he was county treasurer, and understood that he had been in the habit of paying county moneys into the bank. In April 1870 he absconded, his private account being overdrawn, and the police account being in credit :—Held, that the bank was not entitled to set-off the one account against the other, but that the county magistrates were entitled to recover the balance standing to his credit on the police account. Ib.

—— Settlement of Accounts — Money not received in Specie — Bankruptcy.] — Trustees gave authority to a bank to receive the proceeds of certain debentures in the H. company which were being paid off, the bank being aware that the money formed part of a trust fund. The bank having cross transactions with the H. company, the proceeds of the above debentures were not actually paid over by the company to the bank, but a balance of account was arrived at, and the trustees' account with the bank was credited with the amount of the debentures. The custom of the bank was to make a daily transfer of their receipts to their London bankers. The bank suspended payment, having a sum to their credit with their London bankers :—Held, that there was nothing in the above transactions to show a receipt, either by the bank or by their London agents, of the sum received for the debentures so as to enable it to be identified and followed as trust money. Hallett & Co., In re, Blane, Ex parte, 63 L. J., Q. B. 573 ; [1894] 2 Q. B. 237 ; 9 R. 278 ; 70 L. T. 361 ; 42 W. R. 305 ; 1 Manson, 25—C. A.

—— Deposit—Forfeiture for Non-completion—Payment by Bankrupt in Fraud of Creditors.] —A bankrupt, having disposed of his goods in fraud of his creditors, opened an account in a bank with the proceeds, and having entered into a contract for the purchase of land in an assumed name, paid a deposit to the defendant, the auctioneer, by a cheque drawn upon the bank. The vendor and the defendant acted bonâ fide and without notice of the bankruptcy or of the fraudulent conduct of the bankrupt :—Held, that the bankrupt's trustee was not entitled to recover the deposit from the defendant so as to prevent it from being forfeited to the vendor on the non-completion of the contract. Collins v. Stimson, 52 L. J., Q. B. 440 ; 11 Q. B. D. 142 ; 48 L. T. 828 ; 31 W. R. 920 ; 47 J. P. 439.

—— Shares in Banking Company held by Trustee partly his Own and partly in Trust—Agreement to Assign Shares to Bank to secure Personal Advances.]—Trust funds were invested in the purchase of transferable shares in a banking company in the name of one of the trustees, who was also a holder of shares in his own right in the same company, and afterwards made various sales and purchases of shares therein. There was no distinguishing mark by which the shares could be traced, the same being in the nature of capital, expressed by quantity. The trustee agreed to assign some of the shares standing in his name to the banking company, as security for repayment of advances which had been made to him, but no transfer was made. He afterwards became bankrupt, without having shares sufficient to satisfy the trusts and his agreement to assign :—Held, first, that the banking company had no lien on any of the shares which had been held in trust ; secondly, that although the shares held in trust might have been changed by sale and re-purchase, the trustee must still be considered as holding for the purposes of the trust the same number of shares out of a larger number that were standing in his name at the time of his bankruptcy ; thirdly, that as no shares were transferred in pursuance of the agreement, no question as to whether the bank directors were purchasers with or without notice could arise ; and of the two equities, for the cestui que trust and for the bank, the former must be preferred. Murray v. Pinkett, 12 Cl. & F. 764—H. L. (E.). Affirming Pinkett v. Wright, 2 Hare, 120 ; 12 L. J., Ch. 119 ; 6 Jur. 1102.

—— Solicitor paying Client's Money into his Own Banking Account—Appropriation of Payments—Rule in Clayton's Case.]—Where a solicitor paid sums of money, received for clients, into his own banking account in which he had money of his own standing to his credit, and at the date of the last payment in there was only a sum equal to about a third of his client's money standing to his credit, and the client who claimed the first sum paid in failed to earmark such sum, the court, applying the rule in Clayton's Case (1 Mer. 572), held that the first sum paid in was the first sum drawn out, and consequently that the claim failed, and the client could only prove against the solicitor's general estate. Hancock v. Smith (58 L. J., Ch. 725; 41 Ch. D. 456; 61 L. T. 341—C. A.) distinguished. Stenning, In re, Wood v. Stenning, [1895] 2 Ch. 433; 13 R. 807; 73 L. T. 207.

Money handed to Solicitor—Right of Defrauded Person.]—A solicitor took money of his clients, and pretended to have invested it on mortgage; after the death of the solicitor there was money in the hands of his representative which could be identified as part of the money received by him from his client:—Held, that the client could follow this money, and require it to be applied in payment of the money of which he had been defrauded. Hallett's Estate, In re, Knatchbull v. Hallett, supra, col. 902, followed. Murray, In re, Dickson v. Murray, 57 L. T. 223.

—— Representation by Solicitor that Money Invested on Mortgage.]—Money was advanced to a solicitor by A. for the purpose of being invested on mortgage security. The solicitor wrote that he had invested the money on mortgage to M. on leaseholds in Camden Town, and that A. was receiving interest at the rate of 5 per cent. The solicitor in fact, subsequently to this, advanced large sums on mortgage to M., but no specific mortgage was made in favour of A. The draft, however, of a mortgage for the sum advanced in favour of A. was found unexecuted after the solicitor's death. The solicitor had died insolvent. A. applied that a sum equal to the sum advanced by him should be paid to him out of a large sum in court representing the moneys advanced by the solicitor to M.:—Held, that the solicitor was bound by his representation; that the money was trust money, and that A. ought to be paid in priority to the general creditors. Middleton v. Pollock, Wetherall, Ex parte, 46 L. J., Ch. 39; 4 Ch. D. 49; 35 L. T. 608; 25 W. R. 94.

—— Share Certificates — Appropriation to Trust Estates.]—A debtor, before his bankruptcy, deposited in a box in his office several parcels of share certificates, with a memorandum attached to each stating that the particular parcel was part of the trust estate mentioned therein:—Held, that this was a good appropriation of the share certificates to the several trust estates. Middleton v. Pollock, Elliott, Ex parte (45 L. J., Ch. 293; 2 Ch. D. 104), approved and followed. New's Trustee v. Hunting, 66 L. J., Q. B. 554; [1897] 2 Q. B. 19; 76 L. T. 742; 45 W. R. 577; 4 Manson, 103—C. A.

—— Equitable and Legal Mortgages—Negligence—Notice.]—R., a solicitor, in 1883, received money from a client for the purpose of investment, and represented to him that he had invested it upon the security of a particular mortgage. The mortgage, however, was one which R. had previously taken in his own name, and it was never transferred to the client. He afterwards deposited the title-deeds of the mortgaged property with his bankers to secure his overdrawn account, and paid interest on the mortgage to the client down to the death of the latter in 1885, and subsequently to his executors. R. died in 1888, his account being overdrawn to an extent exceeding the value of the mortgaged property, and the bank immediately gave notice of their claim to the mortgagors. The bank had no notice of the client's claim at the date of the deposit, and their notice to the mortgagors was prior to any notice given by the client's executors:—Held (1) that R. was a trustee of the mortgage for his client, and that neither the client nor his executors had been guilty of negligence so as to deprive them of their priority, and (2) that the principle of Dearle v. Hall (3 Russ. 1) did not apply, and therefore the bank were not entitled to priority by virtue of having given notice to the mortgagors before the executors. Richards, In re, Humber v. Richards, 59 L. J., Ch. 728; 45 Ch. D. 589; 63 L. T. 451; 39 W. R. 186.

—— Identification.]—Trust moneys cannot be followed unless clearly identified. Where, therefore, a solicitor, having trust moneys in his hands, paid certain sums, part of such moneys, into his banking account without distinguishing them as trust moneys, and subsequently filed a liquidation petition:—Held, that the trustee in the liquidation was entitled to the balance of the moneys in the hands of the bank as against the persons claiming to be entitled as trustees of the alleged trust funds under the marriage settlement of the bankrupt. Hardcastle, Ex parte, Mawson, In re, 44 L. T. 523; 29 W. R. 615.

A solicitor was employed by the trustees for sale of an estate, his duty being to receive the purchase moneys and pay them into the trustees' banking account. He received large sums, paid them in to his private account, and died insolvent. His banking account at his death showed a large credit, principally made up of specific sums which corresponded with receipts by him on account of sales of the trust estate:—Held, that these specific sums could be followed by the trustees, and that there could not be a set-off allowed in respect of sums alleged to have been paid by the solicitor on account of the trust estate. Birt v. Burt, 36 L. T. 943.

Payment into Bank by Broker of Proceeds of Consols held on Trust.]—A trustee employed a broker, who had notice of the trust, to sell out consols and invest the proceeds in railway stock. The broker sold the consols for cash, bought railway stock to the same amount for the settling day, and received the price of the consols in a cheque, which he paid into his account at his bankers'. He stopped payment before the settling day, and went into liquidation. The trustee claimed so much of the broker's balance at his bankers' as was attributable to the price of the consols:—Held, that as the price of the consols was known by the broker to be trust money, it could be followed, and that the claim must therefore be allowed. Cooke, Ex parte, Strachan, In re, 46 L. J., Bk. 52; 4 Ch. D. 123; 35 L. T. 649; 25 W. R. 171—C. A.

Payment by Auctioneer into Bank.] — An auctioneer received moneys from a sale of live stock, and paid them into his private account at the defendant's bank. His account was overdrawn to an amount not exceeding 2,500*l.*; but under an arrangement which was then subsisting, he was permitted to overdraw up to 2,500*l*., and he had no suspicion at the time when he paid in such moneys of any intention on the part of the bank to close his account. The bank shortly afterwards closed the account, and applied the proceeds of the sale in reduction of the overdraft. The bank had notice that the moneys so paid in were substantially the produce of the sale of stock. An action was brought by the plaintiff, on behalf of all the vendors at the sale, against the bank, to recover their respective purchase moneys, less the auctioneer's commission:—Held, that the auctioneer paid the proceeds of the sale to his private account in the ordinary course of business, and was not guilty of a breach of trust in so doing, and that therefore the plaintiff had no remedy against the bank. Marten v. Roche, 53 L. T. 946; 34 W. R. 253.

Sale of Goods Wrongfully Obtained—Proceeds.]—Where a person wrongfully obtained goods and sold them, and the proceeds of sale were paid into a colonial bank for the purpose of transmission to its London branch, he receiving bills of exchange to the amount of the proceeds drawn by the colonial bank on its London branch:—Held, that the owners of the goods were entitled to follow the proceeds in the hands of the bank, and to be paid the amount of the bills, as bills, as they became possessed of them. Comité des Assureurs Maritimes v. Standard Bank of South Africa, 1 Cab. & E. 87.

Money advanced to Purchase a Business—Non-application by Borrower—Right of Lender.]—Money had been advanced by the plaintiff to the defendant for the purpose of purchasing a certain business, and on an undertaking of the defendant so to apply it. The defendant did not apply it to that purpose, but spent some of it in paying debts of his own. He then became bankrupt. The plaintiff was able to trace the remainder of the money advanced by him:—Held, that a duty had been imposed on the defendant of applying the money in a particular way, and a fiduciary relation created, so that, the money not having been applied in the specified way, the plaintiff could recover in full so much as remained of it, notwithstanding the bankruptcy of the defendant. Gibert v. Gonard, 54 L. J., Ch. 439; 52 L. T. 54; 33 W. R. 302.

Principal and Agent—Goods Bought by Agent—Moneys held in a Fiduciary Character—Advances for Particular Purpose Misappropriated.]—The defendants were brewers, and employed F. as their "malting agent." The regular course of business between the defendants and F. was as follows. F. occupied the malting premises, and took out the necessary licences. It was his duty to buy barley in his own name as principal for cash, to send to the defendants certain periodical accounts of the barley so bought from time to time, and the prices of the same; to submit samples to the defendants, and if the barley was approved of by them to malt it, and deliver the malt to the defendants, receiving a commission upon the quantity of barley steeped. The quantity of malt required by large brewers being very great, the brewers, and not the malting agents, provide the capital for the purchase of the barley. In the present case the defendants kept accounts at certain provincial banks, upon which F. was empowered to draw, and from time to time the defendants paid in lump sums to the credit of those accounts, in accordance with current requirements, as shown by the accounts sent in by F. of barley purchased; but these sums were not intended to, nor did they, represent any payments for any specific barley. F.'s business was to act as malting agent for the defendants exclusively. The defendants paid the duty as the same became payable upon the malt in F.'s premises. F. had fraudulently departed from the regular course of business. Instead of buying barley for cash and applying the balances at the provincial banks in payment for the same, he had been in the habit of sending in to the defendants fictitious accounts of barley purchased, misapplying the sums paid in for his own purposes, and providing the malt needed for the defendants' purposes by purchasing barley or ready-made malt upon credit. He likewise from time to time sold barley which had been brought on to the maltings to raise money for his own purposes. The defendants believed, in consequence of the fictitious accounts and other false representations of F., that barley was from time to time purchased for cash in accordance with the regular course of business, and on the faith thereof continued to pay sums of money into the banks for the purpose of paying for such barley, which they believed were so applied. F. subsequently absconded, leaving upon his premises barley to the value of about 22,000*l*., and malt to the value of about 35,000*l*., upon part of which duty had been paid by the defendants. The value of such malt and barley was less than the amount drawn from the banks and misappropriated by F. He absconded and thereby committed an act of bankruptcy. Between the time of F.'s absconding and the time when he was adjudged a bankrupt, the defendants seized the barley and the malt left on his premises. The plaintiff, trustee in F.'s bankruptcy, sued the defendants for the value of the same:—Held, that the plaintiff could not recover, on the ground that the relation between the defendants and F. was that of principals and agent, and that the property in the barley and the malt had vested in the defendants, and that the barley and the malt were not in the order and disposition of F. as the reputed owner thereof, it being notorious that "malting agents" are in many instances not the owners of the barley and malt on their malting premises; and also, on the further ground that the moneys advanced by the defendants to provide for the purchase of the barley were impressed with a trust; that even if the barley and the malt left on the premises of F. were not bought in accordance with the authority given to him, and the legal property in the same was not vested in the defendants but in F., nevertheless F. was a trustee for the defendants, to the extent of the sums advanced by them, of such barley and malt, the same being either the product of the trust moneys, or in substitution for the barley in payment for which F. ought to have applied such trust moneys; that F. could not have set up his own breach of trust, or have been heard to allege that the barley was bought otherwise than according to the authority given to him by the defendants; and that the plaintiff, as F.'s trustee in bankruptcy, could not in this respect stand in a better position than F. himself. Harris v. Truman, 51 L. J., Q. B. 338; 9 Q. B. D. 264; 46 L. T. 844; 30 W. R. 533—C. A.

—— Undisclosed Principal—Principal cannot Recover Money or Goods from Third Persons without a general Set-off between Latter and Agent.] —The plaintiffs, who were landowners in New Zealand, were in the habit of shipping wheat from New Zealand to England for sale on the London market, taking bills of lading which made the wheat deliverable to themselves in London, and indorsing these bills to M. and T., merchants and factors at Glasgow, with instructions to sell the wheat in London. M. and T. having no house or agency in London were themselves in the habit of indorsing these bills of lading to the defendants, who were corn-factors and brokers in London, for the purpose of their selling there the wheat. When any sales were effected, M. and T. delivered account sales to the plaintiffs in the usual form, deducting a del credere commission of 3*l.* per cent., whilst the terms upon which the defendants were employed by M. and T. were different, being a factorage of 2*l.* per cent. and not a del credere commission. The indorsement of the bills of lading by the plaintiffs to M. and T. and by M. and T. to the defendants, was in each case only for the purpose of selling the wheat and without the intention of passing any property in it. The plaintiffs knew that the sales effected for them by M. and T. in London were made by brokers employed by M. and T., but the plaintiffs were in no way parties to the particular contracts of sale nor were their names disclosed upon them. The defendants effected sales of certain cargoes of wheat which had been so consigned for sale by the plaintiffs in the above mode, and paid the proceeds into their own account at their bankers', and from time to time made remittances to M. and T. on account of them; but upon reference to the defendants' books of account the proceeds of the particular cargoes could be separated and identified. M. and T. carried on a business at Leith as well as at Glasgow, and they employed the defendants in respect of both, and when they stopped payment, which they did, they were indebted to the defendants on the Leith account but not on the Glasgow account. The plaintiffs having brought an action against the defendants for the net balance of the proceeds of the said cargoes of wheat after deducting the remittances made to M. and T. in respect thereof, but without giving credit due to them from M. and T. on other transactions, the jury found at the trial, first, that the plaintiffs did not, through their agents, employ the defendants to sell and account for the proceeds of the wheat; secondly, that the defendants knew, or had reason to believe, that M. and T. were acting in the sales as agents for a third person:—Held, that the plaintiffs were not entitled to recover, as there was no privity of contract between them and the defendants, and the defendants did not stand in any fiduciary character towards the plaintiffs so as to entitle the latter to follow the proceeds of their property in the defendants' hands, and as whatever right the plaintiffs might have had as owners to claim the wheat before it had been sold, they had no right, after such sale, to the proceeds, without giving credit for the sum due to the defendants from M. and T. on their general account. New Zealand and Australian Land Co. v. Watson, 50 L. J., Q. B. 433; 7 Q. B. D. 374; 44 L. T. 675; 29 W. R. 694—C. A.

3. Relief Against Purchasers.

In General—With Notice.] —All persons coming into possession of property bound by a trust, with notice of the trust, are chargeable in equity as trustees. Adair v. Shaw, 1 Sch. & Lef. 262.

If the persons claiming under the breach of trust have notice of it, then they are subject to the same trust; so if the conveyance be voluntary, or without a valuable consideration; but if for a valuable consideration and without notice, the purchaser will hold the land discharged, and the trustees must buy and settle other land to the same uses. Mansell v. Mansell, 2 P. Wms. 681; Cas. t. Talb. 252; 2 Eq. Cas. Abr. 747, pl. 6; 748 pl. 2.

A purchaser or mortgagee shall not protect himself by taking a conveyance from a trustee after notice of the trust; for by taking such conveyance he becomes the trustee himself. Saunders v. Dehew, 2 Vern. 271.

Both the trustee and the assignee are responsible to the cestui que trust for profits subsequent to an assignment in breach of trust. Vandebende v. Lewingston, 3 Swanst. 625.

Relief for cestui que trust of lease against assignment or sale by trustee. Rook v. Staples, Cary, 76.

A purchaser, with notice implied or constructive, from a trustee, will be bound by the trust, although there has been a fine levied to him and five years' non-claim. Thompson v. Simpson, 2 Dr. & War. 459.

Length of possession will not prevail against charitable trusts, where the land was purchased with notice of the trusts. Att.-Gen. v. Christ's Hospital, 3 Myl. & K. 344.

Trustees to Preserve Contingent Remainders.]—Trustees in will to support contingent remainders, joining with tenant for life in destroying such remainders, are guilty of breach of trust, and purchaser with notice of trust is liable to make good the estate. Gorges v. Pye, 7 Bro. P. C. 221; Pre. Ch. 308; 1 P. Wms. 128.

If trustees to preserve contingent remainders join in sale to one without notice, the purchaser will be safe; contrà if he have notice. Willoughby v. Willoughby, Amb. 284.

Trustee De Facto.]—A trustee de facto held liable to account as a trustee de jure. Hennessey v. Bray, 33 Beav. 96.

The estate of a tenant for life was liable to forfeiture on his mortgaging it. He mortgaged it to A. unknown to the parties taking under the forfeiture:—Held, that A. was liable to account to them for the rents, at all events from the filing of the bill, and beyond that, from the time he had notice of the trusts creating the forfeiture. Ib.

—— Merchants Borrowing Money Settled to Separate Use of Married Woman.]—A., the trustee of a fund settled on B., a married woman, to her separate use, with a restraint against anticipation, lent the same to C., D. & Co., who were merchants, but not ordinary bankers, and who had actual notice of the nature of the trusts to which the fund was liable. C., D. & Co. entered the transaction in their ledger and balance book, as an account opened with B., and down to the time of their bankruptcy regularly paid the interest of the fund to her, during A.'s lifetime, through him, but, after his death, directly to her. C., D. & Co. became bankrupts:—Held, that they had made themselves in fact direct trustees of, and were jointly and severally liable to restore, the trust fund. Watson, Ex parte, Acraman, In re, 7 Jur. 1001.

——Trust Money Lent on Security of Judgment—Subsequent Notice of Trust.]—A trustee, in violation of his duty, lent the trust money to F., upon the security of a judgment; F. at the time not being aware that it was trust money. Subsequently F. was informed that it was trust money, and recognised and acknowledged the title of the trustee thereto:—Held, that from the time he had notice of the trusts, F. was a trustee of the money, and as such liable for the safety of it. Sheridan v. Joyce, 1 Jo. & Lat. 401; 7 Ir. Eq. R. 115.

Legal Title.]—A cestui que trust of an annuity, secured by a term in an estate, filed a bill against the trustee of the term and the purchaser for value of the estate, praying that the trusts of the term might be administered. The purchaser, who was in possession of the estate, had no notice of the term, or of any interest of the cestui que trust in the estate, and denied the existence of any term in the trustee:—Held, that until the trustee had established his right to the term at law, the cestui que trust could have no such relief as prayed in equity. Clemow v. Geach, 40 L. J., Ch. 44; L. R. 6 Ch. 147; 19 W. R. 53.

The tendency of modern legislation being to prevent unnecessary litigation, and to enable the tribunal which has been first applied to for redress to dispose of the case when possible, courts of equity may now determine legal rights where equitable relief is consequent upon, or ancillary to, their establishment: and in such instances (unless the balance of convenience be otherwise) a plaintiff having a reasonably clear legal title need not first establish his right by an action at law. Mulville v. Fallon, Ir. R. 6 Eq. 458.

Fraud of One Trustee—Transferee of Stock—Purchaser for Value without Notice.] — C., trustee with the plaintiff of a will, and also trustee with the defendant of a settlement, having misappropriated a portion of the settlement fund, applied an equal portion of the will fund in the purchase of stock, which he transferred into the names of himself and the defendant. The plaintiff and defendant were both innocent of C.'s fraud, and the defendant and the cestuis que trust under the settlement had no notice that the stock was purchased with part of the will fund. C. died insolvent. In an action by the plaintiff to compel the defendant to transfer the stock to him:—Held, that the defendant having by accepting the transfer of the stock given up his right to sue C. for his debt to the trust, was entitled to be treated as a purchaser for value without notice, and consequently to retain the stock as part of the settlement fund. Taylor v. Blakelock, 56 L. J., Ch. 390; 32 Ch. D. 560; 55 L. T. 8—C. A. Affirming 34 W. R. 175.

——Leaseholds—Right of Innocent Trustee to recover Property.]—The right of an innocent trustee guilty of no negligence to recover from an innocent defendant possession of a leasehold house fraudulently conveyed away to him by the partner of the co-trustee, is not taken away by the fact that the co-trustee connived at his partner's fraud. The prior equitable rights of the cestuis que trust prevail over the later equitable rights of the defendant. Isaac v. Worstencroft, 67 L. T. 351; 56 J. P. 393.

Fraudulent Abstraction by Trustee of Trust Funds and Fraudulent Receipt.]—A fraudulent abstraction of trust property by the trustee, and a fraudulent receipt and appropriation of it by another person for his own personal benefit, place the receiver in the same situation as the trustee from whom he received, and he becomes subject in a court of equity to the same rights and remedies as may be enforced by the parties beneficially entitled against the fraudulent trustee himself; and when it is said that the person who receives under such circumstances is converted by the court into a trustee, the expression is used for the purpose of describing the nature and extent of the remedy against him, and denotes that the parties entitled beneficially have the same rights and remedies against him as they would be entitled to against an express trustee who had fraudulently committed a breach of trust. Rolfe v. Gregory, 4 De G. J. & S. 576; 5 N. R. 257; 34 L. J., Ch. 274; 11 Jur. (N.S.) 98; 12 L. T. 162; 13 W. R. 355.

But the relief against the receiver in such cases is founded on fraud and not constructive trust, and therefore the right of the party defrauded is not affected by lapse of time, or, generally speaking, by anything done or omitted to be done so long as he remains without any fault of his own in ignorance of the fraud that has been committed. Ib.

Improper Mortgage by Trustee—Rights of Cestui que Trust.]—The plaintiff, being purchaser of an equity of redemption in leaseholds, had the equity assigned for his own convenience to C., as trustee, by a deed, which in no way disclosed the fact that C. was anything but absolute owner. C. executed a declaration of trust in favour of the plaintiff. Subsequently C. fraudulently borrowed money of the defendants, representing himself to be the absolute owner, executed a mortgage by demise of the equity of redemption to the defendants, and deposited with them the deed of assignment. The defendants had no notice of any trust. C. subsequently absconded. C. was a confidential clerk, and had control of the plaintiff's safe in which the deed of assignment was supposed to be kept. In an action by the plaintiff for a declaration that the defendants had no interest in the mortgaged property, and for delivery up of the deed of assignment:—Held, that the fact that the plaintiff had, under the circumstances, allowed C. to have the custody of the deed of assignment, was not negligence sufficient to deprive him of the benefit of his prior equitable title, which could not be affected by the fraudulent act of C., the trustee. Carritt v. Real and Personal Advance Co., 58 L. J., Ch. 688; 42 Ch. D. 263; 61 L. T. 163; 37 W. R. 677.

Forms of Conveyancing—Omissions in Recitals—Priorities.]—The ordinary recitals and forms commonly used in conveyances and assignments to trustees, with a view of keeping all notice of the trust off the title, are not misrepresentations on the face of the document which will displace the equitable title of a cestui que trust, even though they may have been fraudulently made use of by a dishonest trustee to show that he was in fact the absolute owner. Ib.

—— Trustee lending Trust Money.]—A person knowingly inducing trustees to lend trust money to his debtor, on a security not warranted by the trusts, in order that when advanced, such person may obtain thereon payment of his debt, is accountable to the cestuis que trust. Flyer v. Flyer, 3 Beav. 550; 5 Jur. 187.

Where a trustee lends trust money in breach of the trust, and the borrower, with notice of the trust, applies the money to his own use, he cannot be permitted to separate the loan from the trust, and insist that, the loan being barred by the statute, the trust is barred also. Ernest v. Croysdill, 29 L. J., Ch. 580; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 740; 8 W. R. 736.

—— Right of Cestui que Trust to Proceeds of Sale by Mortgagee with Notice of Trust.]—Where a mortgagee advances his money on a mortgage of trust property, of which trusts he has notice when the money is advanced, the cestui que trust has a right to adopt any sale by the mortgagee under his power of sale and to recover the purchase money received by him instead of following the land in the purchaser's hands. Champion, In re, Dudley v. Champion, 62 L. J., Ch. 372; [1893] 1 Ch. 101; 2 R. 162; 68 L. T. 694—C. A.

Demise of Trust Premises—Lease Void.]—A. made a voluntary surrender of copyholds to a trustee upon trust for F. during her life; and if at her death she left children who attained twenty-one, upon trust to sell and divide the money among them; but if that event did not take place, upon trust for A. in fee. Afterwards, by a deed reciting that the trustee was seised of the premises upon trust for F. and her husband and A., the trustee and F. and her husband and A. concurred in demising the premises for a valuable consideration to G., for a long term of years:—Held, that the lessee was to be considered as having notice of the trust for the benefit of the children of F., and that the lease was void as against them. Malpas v. Ackland, 3 Russ. 273.

M. devised estates to trustees, for his daughter, an infant, with power to the trustees to demise and lease the same for any term not exceeding twenty-one years at the best yearly rent that could be gotten for the same, without taking any fine or premium; with power to appoint new trustees. In pursuance of this power the trustees, some time afterwards, appointed R. sole trustee, and conveyed to him the devised estate upon the trusts and subject to the powers expressed and declared by the will of M., and for "no other trust, intent, or purpose whatsoever." By an indenture of lease between R. and B., certain part of the premises said to be described in and devised by the will of M., was demised by R. to B. for twenty-one years, in consideration of the yearly rent of 1,100*l.*, the first five years of which rent was to be paid in advance, in manner therein provided, and the remainder, after the expiration of such five years, by equal quarterly payments:—Held, first, that enough appeared from the evidence to fix B., the lessee, with notice of the trustees' title. Booth v. A'Beckett, 1 Moore, P. C. (N.S.) 201.

Held, secondly, that as the granting of such a lease was a breach of the trusts of the will of M., the same ought to be declared void and set aside, and the premises assigned to the persons to be appointed trustees of the will of M. Ib.

Purchaser of Leases from Husband of Cestui que Trust entitled for Separate Use.]—Testator gave leasehold premises to his daughter for life, if his term or terms and interest therein should so long subsist, for her sole and separate use, notwithstanding her present or future coverture; and after her decease to her children equally, their executors, &c., during all the remainder of the estate, term or terms, and interest therein, which should be then to come and unexpired. No trustees being interposed, the husband, having possession, was held accountable according to the uses of the will, both as to the original leases and also as to reversionary leases, granted to him, as the person entitled under the will of the former tenant, upon favourable terms; and the equity was established against a purchaser from him with notice. Parker v. Brooke, 9 Ves. 583; 7 R. R. 299.

Renewable Leases—Registered Settlement—Subsequent Unregistered Deed—Indemnity of Purchaser.]—In 1830, a settlement of certain property held under renewable leases was made in favour of A. In 1831, A., being about to marry, made a settlement of this property for the uses of the marriage. The deed of 1830 was not registered. The deed of 1831 was registered. In 1840, A., being in actual possession, sold to B., and B., who had no actual notice of the settlement of 1831, entered into possession, and made alterations in the premises. After the death of A., his son, who was entitled under the settlement of 1831, filed a bill against B. to set aside the sale, for an account, and for waste:—Held, that it was not necessary to register the deed of 1830; that the registered settlement of 1831 prevailed against the bonâ fide purchase of B., and that the court below had properly declared him to stand possessed of the leases as a trustee for the parties beneficially interested under that settlement. But held also, that he was entitled to indemnity against the covenants in the leases which he was thus declared to hold as trustee; that an inquiry ought to be made as to alleged improvements and as to alleged waste; and that he was entitled to be allowed the benefits of those improvements; and that, being a bonâ fide purchaser, without misconduct, he ought not to be charged with costs. Mill v. Mill, 3 H. L. Cas. 828.

Assignment of Life Interest to Person with Notice of Fraud.]—Where, by one deed of settlement, a sum of stock and estates of the wife were settled to her for life, with remainder in trust for the children of the marriage, and, by another deed, the husband settled a rent charge on his estates in trust for the wife for life; she, after her husband's death, fraudulently obtained a transfer of the stock, and sold it out; and afterwards assigned her life interest in her estates and the rent charge to a party with notice of the fraud:—Held, that the rents of her estates and the rent charge were liable to be applied in replacing the stock; and a receiver was appointed. Woodyatt v. Gresley, 8 Sim. 180.

Fraud of Trustee—Mortgaging and then Selling.]—The trustee of stock, being beneficially entitled to one moiety undivided, assigned his interest to a mortgagee, who placed a distringas on the moiety. The trustee afterwards sold out a moiety and absconded. On a bill by the cestui que trust of a moiety :—Held, that he was entitled to the remaining moiety, but the court gave the mortgagee his costs. Wilkins v. Sibley, 4 Giff. 442 ; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 888 ; 8 L. T. 760 ; 11 W. R. 897.

Specific Legacy Misapplied by Administrator traced into Post Obit Securities.] — The produce of a specific legacy misapplied by A., an administrator, being traced into post obit securities given by B. to C.:—Held, that the cestui que trust was entitled to a charge on the securities. Harford v. Lloyd, 20 Beav. 310.

A specific legacy of 6,000*l.* consols, bequeathed to the plaintiff, was unnecessarily and improperly sold out by the administrator, A., with the aid of B., and the produce carried partly to the banking account of A., and the remainder to that of B. A series of shifting of cheques and transfer of moneys took place, but the sum of 2,908*l.* was traced to B. About this time, B. laid out moneys in the purchase of a post obit security, and though the trust moneys could not be distinctly traced into the securities, yet the court held, from the suspicious character of the transactions, that such was the just inference, so far as to throw on the other side the onus of disproving it, and this not having been done :—Held, that the plaintiff had a charge on the securities for the 2,908*l.* and interest. Ib.

In addition to this, B. had sold and transferred the securities to C., in consideration of a debt then owing. C. had notice that the money by which the securities had been obtained had been derived from A., though C. had no notice of the breach of trust :—Held, that C. could not set up an adverse title against A., and à fortiori, that C. could not do so against the plaintiff's A.'s cestuis que trust. Ib.

Enforcing Execution of Trust of Chattels.]—Courts of equity will not lend their assistance to enforce the specific performance of ordinary contracts for the sale and purchase of chattels, unless there is something very special in the nature of the contract. On the other hand, if a trust be created, the circumstance that the subject matter is a personal chattel will not prevent this court from enforcing the due execution of that trust. Pooley v. Budd, 14 Beav. 34.

Trusts may be constituted not merely by direct declaration of trust, but also by the constructive operation of the consequences flowing from the acts of parties. Thus equity will enforce the execution of a trust, not only against the trustees themselves, but against all persons who obtain possession of the property affected by the trust, provided they had notice of it. Ib.

A., who sold 500 tons of iron, stacked on his wharf, to B., in consideration of a bill accepted by a third party, gave an acknowledgment engaging to deliver it to the bearer, he (A.) "having been paid for the same." B. mortgaged the iron, and the bill having been dishonoured, A. refused to deliver the iron. The mortgagee proceeded in equity to make A. responsible for the iron :—Held, that A. had no ownership or property in the iron so stacked, and was a trustee, and therefore a demurrer for want of equity was overruled. Ib.

Trust Moneys Improperly Advanced to Traders for Purposes of Trade.]—Where trust moneys are improperly advanced to traders for the purposes of their trade, they knowing them to be trust moneys, the court will not follow the moneys into the hands of the traders, so as to affect them with the consequences of a breach of trust ; and where moneys so lent produced a larger rate of interest to the tenant for life than if invested in the funds, the court will not, in favour of the persons entitled in remainder, make the trustees liable for the surplus, or hold that such surplus ought to have been converted into capital. Stroud v. Gwyer, 28 Beav. 130 ; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 719 ; 2 L. T. 400.

Solicitor—Assignment of Leaseholds—Forged Signatures of Co-Trustees—Constructive Notice.] —A., one of three trustees, executed an assignment of leasehold property held jointly by them, to a purchaser, and forged the signatures of his co-trustees, and also the requisite assent of the cestui que trust to the sale. A. was a solicitor, and acted as such on behalf of the purchaser :—Held, that the circumstances attending the transaction were sufficient to affect the purchaser with notice of some trust, if not the actual nature of it ; and that he had constructive notice of the trust through the knowledge of A., his solicitor. Boursot v. Savage, 35 L. J., Ch. 627 ; L. R. 2 Eq. 134 ; 14 L. T. 299 ; 14 W. R. 565.

Held, also, that the execution by one of the three joint tenants was a valid assignment of the legal interest in one-third to the purchaser, but that the actual and constructive notice of the trust disentitled him to the beneficial interest, and a reconveyance was ordered. Ib.

—— Conduct of the Trustee no Defence to Person with Notice.]—T., a trustee, lent trust money on mortgage to M. By an arrangement on the marriage of M.'s daughter a valuable leasehold interest was granted by M. out of the mortgaged premises and put in settlement, T. being the person who managed it and the solicitor who prepared the lease and settlement, neither the daughter nor her husband being informed of the mortgage. T., afterwards, with his co-trustee and their cestuis que trust, filed a bill to foreclose the mortgage and sell discharged of the lease, if necessary :—Held, that the parties deriving under the settlement must be fixed with notice of the mortgage and trust, and could not rely on T.'s conduct as a defence even against him, and therefore could not object to his being a co-plaintiff. Quære, whether, if notice were not shown, such an equity against a trustee would be a defence. Twycross v. Moore, 13 Ir. Eq. R. 250.

A trust fund of 1,500*l.* created under a marriage settlement by which certain lands were limited to husband for life, remainder to the first and other sons in tail, with a power to the husband of leasing for forty-one years, or three lives at best rent, was directed by the deed to be conveyed, &c., to the same uses, &c., and in meantime, the trustees, with the consent of husband, were empowered to lend the money on certain security. The husband purchased a leasehold for 8,911*l.*, of which he took the assignment to himself alone, and obtained purchase money out of trust fund to the amount of 11,696*l.*, taking security for 1,400*l.* less than 11,696*l.* The husband granted a lease at a great undervalue for his own term to the attorney who managed the purchase, which purchase proved very beneficial :—Held, that the first son of the marriage was entitled to follow that part of the trust fund which had been misapplied, and to have the benefit of the purchase, and to have the lands sold discharged of the lease to the attorney, whose equity against him (the son) as personal representative of his father, was barred by notice of the settlement and breach of trust. Phayre v. Peree, 3 Dow, 116 ; 1 Bligh (N.S.) 129, 594—H. L. (Ir.)

A person who has notice cannot avail himself of an act of trustees in breach of their trust. Ib.

In March, 1840, A., and B. a solicitor at Carmarthen, raised 2,500*l.* by sale of a sum of stock of which they were trustees, with the intention of lending it, on mortgage, to C., who resided at Carmarthen, but spent part of the year in London. A. enabled B. to receive the 2,500*l.* for the purpose of the loan, and intrusted him with the conduct of the transaction. Accordingly B. prepared the mortgage deed ; and, on the 29th May, 1840, through his London agents and by arrangement between him and C.'s solicitor, procured C. (who knew that the money was in B.'s hands) to execute it, and to sign a receipt, on the back of it, for the 2,500*l.* The agents took the deed away with them ; and, shortly afterwards, procured A. to execute it, and then sent it to B. It having been arranged, between B. and C., that the mortgage money should be paid into the Carmarthen Bank, to C.'s credit, B., on the 31st May, paid 513*l.*, and, on 31st October, 1,050*l.* accordingly, in part of the 2,500*l.* In November he died insolvent :—Held, that, as between A. and C., A. was to be treated as mortgagee for the whole 2,500*l.* West v. Jones, 1 Sim. (N.S.) 205 ; 20 L. J., Ch. 362.

Moneys of Building Society improperly Deposited with Finance Society].—The manager of a benefit building society established under 6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 32, deposited, in pursuance of a resolution passed by the directors but contrary to the provisions of the act and the rules of the society, money of the society with a finance company of which he was also manager. The company gave a cheque to the manager for the repayment of the money to the building society, but he did not pay over the money to the society :—Held, that the money was trust money improperly deposited with the finance company, that the giving the cheque to the manager was no discharge to the company, nor repayment to the building society, and that, therefore, the trust money being still in the hands of the finance company, a suit would lie on behalf of the real owners to recover it, and that, without making the directors of the building society parties to it. Hardy v. Metropolitan Land and Finance Co., 41 L. J., Ch. 257 ; L. R. 7 Ch. 427 ; 26 L. T. 407 ; 20 W. R. 425.

Forged Transfer of Debentures by One Trustee.]—Trust moneys standing in the names of three trustees were invested in railway debentures under the authority of the trust deed. These debentures were subsequently transferred to a purchaser for value by one of the three trustees, who forged the signatures of his co-trustees to the instrument purporting to effect the transfer, and absconded with the proceeds : —Held, that the purchaser who had taken the transfer with notice of the trust, and without inquiry into the circumstances attending the alleged signatures, could not insist upon his purchase as against the co-trustees, who were entitled to have such forged transfer cancelled. Cottam v. Eastern Counties Ry., 1 J. & H. 243 ; 30 L. J., Ch. 217 ; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 1367 ; 3 L. T. 465 ; 9 W. R. 94.

Sureties for Treasurer to Corporation.]—A., one of three sureties, who had become bound to the extent of 2,000*l.* to a corporation for the due accounting of the office of its treasurer by B., received formal notice from the corporation that B. was a defaulter, and on the next day took from B. a deposit note of a bank for 2,300*l.*, which had been placed in the bank by B., one month previously, in the name of his daughter. On a bill filed by the corporation against B., who had absconded, and the three sureties, to make good the amount found due by B., ultra the 2,300*l.* :—Held, establishing the liability of the trustees, that the circumstances under which A. received the 2,300*l.*, were such as ought to have induced him to make inquiry, and that, having neglected to do so, he was bound to restore that amount, with interest after the rate of 5*l.* per cent. Berwick-on-Tweed Corporation v. Murray or Dobie, 7 De G. M. & G. 497 ; 26 L. J., Ch. 201 ; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 847 ; 5 W. R. 208.

Advance by Father to Son—Breach of Trust—Satisfaction.]—A father obtained control over the funds subject to the trusts of a settlement under which his wife and he took successive life interests, with remainder to his two sons. He realised the funds, and treated the proceeds as his own property. He made to his sons certain advances which were held both by North, J., and the court of appeal not to be a satisfaction of his liability to the sons in respect of the trust funds. The advances to one of the sons comprised a sum of 4,000*l.* dock stock which had been purchased with a sum of 2,885*l.*, part of the proceeds of the trust funds. The father, his wife and son were all dead. There was nothing to show that the son was aware that there had been any dealing with the trust funds, or out of what money the dock stock had been purchased ; and the correspondence which passed on the occasion of the advance showed that the intention was that the father should make it out of his own money, and that the son's share under the settlement was not to be dealt with :—Held, that the son was not to be taken as having to the extent of the 2,885*l.* received his share of the trust funds, and the father's estate was accountable for that sum equally with the remainder of the proceeds of the trust funds. Crichton v. Crichton, 65 L. J., Ch. 491 ; [1896] 1 Ch. 870 ; 74 L. T. 357—C. A. Reversing 13 R. 770 ; 44 W. R. 203 ; 59 J. P. 792.

1. PAYMENT INTO COURT.

a. Voluntary Payment into Court.

Statute.]—Trustee Act, 1893, s. 42.

When Justifiable—Money Belonging to Wards of Court.]—Money in the funds belonging to wards of the court cannot be transferred into the name of the accountant-general, to the credit of the cause, until the account is taken by a master and his report made. This does not mean that such a transfer cannot be made, but that it could not operate as an acquittance and discharge of the trustees until they had passed their accounts. Beneroft v. Rich, 1 Bro. C. C. 56.

Semble, a trustee is always justified in transferring the trust fund into court. Croyden's Trust, In re, 19 L. J., Ch. 172; 14 Jur. 54. S. P., Biggs, In re, 11 Beav. 27; 11 Jur. 958.

Semble, trustees are always justified in not paying money into court; it may turn out that there was no occasion for them to do so. Mountain v. Young, 18 Jur. 769.

—— Nun—Civil Death.]—E. became a nun, and went into a convent abroad, and assigned all her property to trustees for the benefit of a Roman Catholic congregation:—Held, that she was not civiliter mortua, or in such a position as would justify the trustees of a fund to which she was entitled in paying the fund into court, and that the court on her petition would order payment of the fund to her trustees. Metcalfe's Will, In re, 33 L. J., Ch. 308; 10 Jur. (N.S.) 287; 10 L. T. 78; 12 W. R. 538—L.JJ.

—— Disputes between Trustees and Cestuis que Trust.]—Trustees, between whom and their several cestuis que trust disputes have arisen as to the amounts actually due to them respectively, are justified in paying into court, to the separate account of each cestui que trust, the sum to which they believe him to be entitled, and may have their costs of making such payment out of the respective funds. Wright's Trusts, In re, 3 K. & J. 419.

—— Stock Standing in Name of Lunatic Trustee.]—Where stock is standing in the name of a trustee who is of unsound mind, but not so found by inquisition, and it desired to bring such stock into court to the credit of a cause, the proper course is for the cause to be heard by the judge to whose court the cause is attached, and then to present a petition in lunacy to the lords justices. Dawson, In re, Barber v. Dawson, 6 N. R. 346—L.JJ. S. P., Jeffreys v. Drysdale, Drysdale, In re, 30 L. J., Ch. 612; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 667; 4 L. T. 454; 9 W. R. 428—L.JJ.

Apprehension of Litigation — Discharge of Trustee.]—A trust fund was paid into court by the trustees, in the apprehension of litigation as to the rights of the several parties to the fund. The affidavit, upon payment into court, did not mention the name of A., one of the persons claiming an interest in the fund. The court refused to declare the rights of A. upon a petition presented by him; but gave him liberty to file a bill to establish his claim. Jephson, In re, 1 L. T. 5.

Payment into court of the trust fund discharges the trustee from all claims whatever. Ib.

b. Order for Payment into Court.

In General—Application of Person having Contingent Interest.]—A party having a contingent interest in a trust fund may, in a proper case, have it brought into court for his protection, but he must show some sufficient ground for it. Ross v. Ross, 12 Beav. 89.

Motion to pay trust fund into court refused, on the ground that there was no allegation of danger, and that the fund might, if necessary, be sufficiently protected by a distringas. Ib.

A residuary sum of stock, standing in the names of trustees, the dividends of which were paid by them to the parties entitled thereto, ordered to be transferred into court to the credit of the cause, on the application of a party entitled to a mere contingent interest in the fund, and notwithstanding that all the parties entitled to vested interests therein were satisfied with the conduct and custody of the trustees, and opposed the application. Bartlett v. Bartlett, 4 Hare, 631.

Right of a party, entitled contingently in remainder, to have the trust fund brought into court at the hearing, though there be no imputation against the trustees. Governesses' Benevolent Institution v. Rushbridger, 18 Beav. 467.

—— Trust Money in Hands of Person without Primâ Facie Right to hold it.]—When a court of equity traces out trust money in the hands of a person who has not primâ facie a right to hold it, that money must be paid into court. Leigh v. Macaulay, 1 Y. & C. 260; 4 L. J., Ex. Eq. 37.

—— Where Trust Fund Lent.]—Trust fund which, under a power in marriage settlement, had been lent, decreed to be paid into court, the trustees representing it to be in danger. Payne v. Collier, 1 Ves. 170.

The testatrix, shortly before her death, expressed a wish that H., one of her trustees, should have the loan of the trust fund for a reasonable period. F., the other trustee, accordingly allowed H. to possess himself of the fund, agreeing that it should remain on his personal security for a year. Long after the expiration of that period, on motion, H. was ordered to pay the sum into court within a month, or find sufficient security. Foster v. Hewitt, 1 Jur. 839.

By a settlement moneys were directed to be laid out on Government or real securities; the trustees having lent the money to the husband on bond, were ordered, on motion, to pay the money into court. Collis v. Collis, 2 Sim. 365.

—— Where Trustee had Transferred Consols into his own Name.]—Where a trustee of a residue had transferred consols into his own name, and had permitted his cestui que trust to receive the dividends for a series of years under a power of attorney, and had died without further earmarking the fund, and his next of kin refused to meddle in the matter:—Held, that there was sufficient evidence to entitle the cestui que trust to have the money paid into court, and to have an order that she should be paid the dividends till further order. Thornton's Trusts, In re, 9 W. R. 475.

—— Application by Parties Beneficially Interested.]—In a suit for the administration of trust property, the court, on an application by the parties beneficially interested, and where there was no imputation against the trustees, ordered the trust money to be paid into court. Robertson v. Scott, 14 L. T. 187.

Party ordered to pay money into court in which he claimed the sole beneficial interest, he being also a trustee of the fund. Inman v. Whitley, 5 Jur. 287.

A solicitor who had received money for his client in her capacity of administratrix, and who had notice of the rights and claims of other next of kin, and who claimed to be in some sort a trustee of the fund, was nevertheless, on the petition of his client, ordered to bring the money into court and to pay the costs of the petition. Becke, In re, 18 Beav. 462.

—— Person having Reversionary Interest.]—Testator, having a debt secured on lands, gives the mortgage money to the mortgagor, and desires that he will give a reversionary interest therein to a third person; the mortgagor, selling the estate, shall bring the mortgage money into court for the use of the devisee, subject to the life estate. Lewis v. King, 2 Bro. C. C. 600.

—— Where one Trustee Improperly Invested on Mortgage.]—Two trustees were authorised to invest trust money in their names on good security. One trustee improperly invested 1,500*l.* on mortgage of leaseholds in his own name; the other had declined to act any longer. The security realised 215*l.* only. The trustee was, on motion, ordered to pay the difference into court. Bourne v. Mole, 8 Beav. 177.

The trustees of a settlement, having invested the settled funds on a mortgage security, which turned out insufficient, and it not appearing that they took due precautions to ascertain whether the security was sufficient, were ordered to pay into court the whole amount of the trust funds, taking upon themselves the security. By the decree in the court below they were declared liable to pay so much only as the mortgaged premises, when sold, should prove insufficient to answer. Lockhart v. Reilly, 3 W. R. 227.

—— Application of Government of Foreign State.]—The court refused to order dividends received before bill filed, of stock purchased by the old government of Switzerland, to be paid into court by the trustees on the application of the present government, without having the attorney-general a party. Dolder v. Bank of England, 10 Ves. 352.

—— Purchase Money on Application of Vendor.]—Purchaser (a trustee, acting on behalf of himself and others, his co-trustees, and of the cestuis que trust) ordered to pay purchase money into court; the agreement having been entered into in the name of himself alone; upon affidavits, that the plaintiffs (the vendors) had no notice of his acting for others, and of acts of ownership committed since possession given to him under the agreement; in opposition to the answer, alleging notice, and denying any acts of ownership by himself, or by any other person, to his knowledge. Crutchley v. Jerningham, 2 Mer. 502.

—— Where Trustees about to exercise Discretionary Power.]—Although the mere existence of a discretionary power in trustees over a fund affords no reason why the court should not order payment of the fund into court, unless such payment into court would interfere with the exercise by the trustee of such discretion; yet where it appeared that trustees were about, in the due exercise of a discretionary power, to deal with a fund, the court refused to order payment into court, although the trustees had not actually parted with the fund. Talbot v. Marshfield, 2 Dr. & Sm. 285.

—— Money Misapplied by Solicitor Trustee.]—Trustees authorised a firm of solicitors (one of whom, W., was a trustee) to draw the trust fund out of a bank. W. drew it out and misapplied it. The trustees were, on interlocutory application, ordered to pay the amount into court. Ingle v. Partridge, 32 Beav. 661; 32 L. J., Ch. 813.

Three trustees sold out trust funds, and the produce was paid to one alone. The other two were, on motion, ordered to pay the amount into court. Ib.

Admissions by Trustees in Answer — Judicial Discretion.]—In an action against a trustee and the executor of a deceased trustee to obtain repayment of part of the trust funds which were alleged to have been misapplied by the trustees, the court refused on an interlocutory application to order the executor of the deceased trustee to bring the sum claimed into court, although he admitted assets. There is a judicial discretion in such a case as to making an order for payment into court. Wright, In re, Kirke v. North, 65 L. J., Ch. 37; [1895] 2 Ch. 747; 13 R. 849; 73 L. T. 396; 44 W. R. 125.

Where a defendant admits by the answer that there is trust money in his hands, court will always, on an interlocutory application, order payment into court; so where an executor is a debtor to the testator at the latter's death. Rothwell v. Rothwell, 2 Sim. & S. 217.

Defendant, who had covenanted to pay a sum of money to the trustees of his marriage settlement, but had omitted so to do, ordered, upon motion in a suit for the performance of the trusts of the settlement, to pay the money into court. Ib.

Where one of two trustees admits by his answer that a certain fund is in the hands of himself and his co-trustee, but uses such language as is admitted to import that he dealt with it, although the expression is ambiguous, the court will, on motion on the answer, order payment into court of such fund. Pince v. Beattie, 5 W. R. 616.

On a motion by the executor of a legatee for the transfer into court by trustees of sums of stock admitted by their answer to be standing in their names, no fraud or misconduct on the part of the trustees being alleged:—Held, following Bartlett v. Bartlett (4 Hare, 631), that the stock should be transferred. Marryat v. Marryat, 2 Eq. R. 1138; 23 L. J., Ch. 876; 2 W. R. 576.

The court will not, under the above circumstances, order sums of money in the hands of trustees to be paid into court. Ib.

In an administration suit by the executor of a legatee against the testator's trustees and executors, the other legatees are not necessary parties. Ib.

Where there is no controversy as to facts, trustees will be ordered to transfer stock into court on motion. Ib.

Semble, not necessary to serve the cestui que trust. Ib.

—— Claim of Lien for Costs.]—Where the residue of a trust fund under a composition deed has been duly invested by the trustees, and they claim a lien thereon for their costs under the deed, and there is no imputation of misconduct, or of the fund being in danger, the court will not, on motion by a creditor who was a party to the deed, and had accepted a dividend under it, order the fund to be paid into court. The costs of such a motion are costs in the cause. Chaffers v. Headlam, 22 L. J., Ch. 1038; 17 Jur. 754.

—— Formal Denial of Fact of Trusteeship.]—Where the admissions made by the answer show the defendant to be a trustee of money, a mere formal denial of the fact will not prevent him from being ordered upon motion to bring the money into court. Hagell v. Currie, L. R. 2 Ch. 448; 16 L. T. 309; 15 W. R. 605.

—— Doubt whether Moneys Trust Moneys.]—Unless there is a distinct admission, or circumstances proved which raised the presumption, that certain moneys are trust moneys, the court will not interfere by injunction to order such moneys to be paid into court before the hearing of the cause, where there is a doubtful case to be tried at such hearing. Bank of Turkey v. Ottoman Co., 14 L. T. 884; 14 W. R. 819.

—— Defendant setting up Claim to Property.]—A defendant, who admits in his answer the possession of property upon a trust, will be ordered to pay it into court, although he sets up a claim to it, if, upon the facts disclosed in the answer, the court is satisfied that this claim is not well founded. Del Pont v. De Tastet, 2 L. J. (o.s.) Ch. 140.

The court refused, upon an interlocutory application by a party claiming as cestui que trust, to order money alleged to be trust money, and admitted to be in the possession of the defendant, to be paid into court, where the defendant, under circumstances stated on the record, claimed a title to the money for his own benefit, and did not, by his answer, admit his liability to pay it. Knight v. Haythorne, 4 Jur. 360.

—— Where Plaintiff Claims in Particular Character.]—When a plaintiff claims to be entitled, in a particular character, to a fund in the hands of a trustee, and the trustee, by his answer, says he does not know whether the plaintiff fills that character or not, the plaintiff cannot have the fund brought into court in the suit. Dubless v. Flint, 4 Myl. & Cr. 502.

—— Admission of Primâ Facie Title.]—In order to justify an order for payment into court of a trust fund, it is sufficient that the trustee's answer contains an admission of such a primâ facie title in the plaintiff as to afford a reasonable expectation of the plaintiff succeeding at the hearing in making out his title. Whitmore v. Turquand, 1 J. & H. 296.

Therefore where, by the answer of a trustee of a composition deed, it was admitted that the fund had been for five years in his hands, that some creditors had acceded within the time limited by the deed, but that the plaintiff had neither acceded nor refused to accede, an order was made for payment of the fund into court. Ib.

—— Application by One of Several Cestuis que Trust.]—A trustee admitted the whole of a trust fund, to a considerable amount, to be in his hands. The conduct of the trustee being proper, the court will not, on an application by one of several cestuis que trust, order payment into court of more than the aliquot share of the particular cestui que trust making the application. Hamond v. Walker, 3 Jur. (N.S.) 686.

Semble, the court has, on such an application, by any single cestui que trust, authority to order the whole fund to be brought into court, if the court shall so think fit. Ib.

—— No Admission or Denial of Title.]—Motion by infant cestuis que trust that their trustee might bring a fund into court allowed where, although he had not by his answer admitted their title, he had not denied it. Symonds v. Jenkins, 34 L. T. 277; 24 W. R. 512.

In a suit against a trustee for breach of trust and consequent loss of trust funds, he stated that he did not know, and could not set forth as to his belief or otherwise, whether the plaintiffs were the only children of S., or whether the eldest was seventeen years or the youngest two years of age, as alleged by the bill, or whether it was a fact that there had been no child who had attained twenty-one:—Held, that the title of the plaintiffs was sufficiently admitted to entitle them to have the fund brought into court. Ib.

The bill stated that some of the plaintiffs were children of another plaintiff, and that they and certain defendants were the only children of the marriage. The answers did not deny the statement, but merely stated that the defendants did not know whether these were all the children, and did not raise any objection for want of parties on this ground. There was no evidence of the relationship between the plaintiffs:—Held, at the hearing, that a case was made for inquiry as to this, and for payment into court of the trust fund. Fowler v. Reynal, 2 De G. & Sm. 749; 13 Jur. 649. And see 3 Mac. & G. 500; 21 L. J., Ch. 121; 15 Jur. 1019.

—— Admission of Misapplication of Trust Funds.]—Trustees, who had a sum of money standing in their names at their bankers', signed an order directing the bankers to honour the cheques of any two of them, or of Messrs. G. & Co., their solicitors. W., who was one of the trustees, and of the firm of G. & Co., drew out the money and applied it to his own use. Upon a bill against the trustees:—Held, on an admission of these facts by the co-trustees, that they must pay the money into court. Ingle v. Partridge, 32 Beav. 661; 32 L. J., Ch. 813.

A trustee, charged with misapplication of trust moneys, admitted by his answer that he had misapplied three sums, and set forth a debtor and creditor account, in which he credited himself with, amongst others, those three sums, and also with a fourth sum, which was equally inadmissible, but which turned the balance of the account in his favour. On a motion for payment of the three sums into court:—Held, that the plaintiff not having in his motion challenged the fourth sum, the motion could only be granted to the extent to which the answer admitted a balance after striking those three items out of the discharge. Nokes v. Seppings, 2 Ph. 19; 1 Cooper, 194.

—— Property Settled to Separate Use of Married Woman Restrained from Anticipation.]—By a marriage settlement in 1856, property was settled to the separate use of the wife for life, without power of anticipation, with remainders over. In 1866 the wife left her husband, and he instituted a suit against her in the divorce court for restitution of conjugal rights. Judgment was given against the wife with costs. The wife withdrew from the jurisdiction, and declined to obey the judgment. In 1870 the husband procured from the divorce court a writ of sequestration against the separate property of the wife for the costs of the suit. In October, 1869, dividends and interests on the settled property fell due, and were received by one of the trustees, who retained them in his hands. In December, 1869, a hostile suit was instituted by the wife against the trustee to compel the payment of the dividends and interest, and for the removal of the trustee, but not asking for the general administration of the fund. The trustee admitted that he had in his hands the greater part of the entire fund. A few days after his answer the trustee filed a bill in the rolls court for the administration of the trusts of the settlement. On motion by the wife, in the first of the two suits, that the trustee might be ordered to pay into court the entire sum admitted by him to be in his hands:—Held, that regard being had principally to the restraint on anticipation contained in the settlement, the money ought to be paid into court notwithstanding the writ of sequestration, and notwithstanding that the wife's bill had not prayed the general administration of the trust fund. Miller v. Miller, 18 W. R. 750.

—— Funds Admitted by One Trustee to have been Sold.]—In a suit against trustees for breach of trust, one of them admitted that the funds had been sold out, by means of a power of attorney executed by him for the purpose, as he stated, of investing them on more advantageous securities; but he stated he was not concerned in the receipt of the produce, but he had been informed that it had been received by his co-trustee, or by J. M. by his permission. The settlement contained a power to vary the investments:—Held, that there was not, on the answer, a sufficient admission to justify an interlocutory order on this trustee for payment of the money into court. Meyer v. Montriou, 4 Beav. 343.

—— Amount of Trust Money Specified by One Trustee only.]—An order upon motion for payment of money into court proceeds upon the admissions of the defendant, and evidence cannot be resorted to. Three trustees admitted that trust money was standing in their joint names, but one only specified the amount:—Held, that this was insufficient to found an order for its payment into court. Boschetti v. Power, 8 Beav. 98; 14 L. J., Ch. 63; 8 Jur. 1085.

—— Trust Stock Sold stated to be Re-invested.]—A trustee admitted he had sold out trust stock, but he stated that he had invested the produce in other securities. A motion was made before decree, that he might re-purchase the stock and transfer it into court:—Held, that the court could make no such order. Futter v. Jackson, 6 Beav. 424.

—— Indebtedness to Trust Estate Admitted by Trustee and his Partner.]—Testatrix devised her real and bequeathed her personal estate to A. and B. upon certain trusts, and appointed A., B., and C. executors of her will. B. and C. alone proved. On bill filed by C. alone—alleging that A. had not proved, that B. was mentally incapacitated, and that A. declined to act in the trusts, and also alleging that A. and his partner G., who was no party to the suit, were indebted to the estate of the testatrix, and praying for the administration of trusts of the will, for the usual accounts, and for the appointment of new trustees in the place of A. and B.—A. put in his answer, stating that he declined to act in the trusts, and substantially admitting that he and his partner were indebted to the estate of the testatrix. Thereupon C. moved that A. and his partner might pay into court the amount admitted to be due by A. and his partner to the estate, and although G., the partner of A., was no party to the record.—Ordered accordingly. White v. Barton, 18 Beav. 192.

—— Admissions in Letters and Recital in Settlement.]—Trust funds may be ordered to be brought into court by the trustee, an accounting party, upon admissions contained in letters written before action brought that he has received the money, and a recital to that effect contained in the settlement, his execution of which as trustee has been proved, although there is no formal admission in his pleadings or affidavits that he has received and holds the money. Hampden v. Wallis, 27 Ch. D. 251; 51 L. T. 357; 32 W. R. 977.

Practice — Service of Notice of Motion for Payment — Beneficiaries.]—The prayer of a bill for the removal of a trustee was, that he might be removed and the trust fund transferred into the names of new trustees, and that the parties beneficially interested for life, and in remainder in the fund, "might, upon being served with a copy of the bill, be bound by all the proceedings in the cause." Upon notice of motion to transfer the fund into court, which had been served upon the trustees only:—Held, that the parties beneficially interested ought to be served with notice of the application before the court could make the order. Lewellin v. Cobbold, 1 Sm. & G. 572; 17 Jur. 1111.

Disobedience to Order.]—When a trustee is ordered to transfer a fund of consols admitted to be due from him and subsequently default is made, a writ of attachment will issue. Digby v. Turner, 28 L. T. 296; 21 W. R. 471.

c. Under the Repealed Trustee Relief Acts.

Persons who might Pay in — Purchasers.]—Testatrix, by her will, declared that every person thereby made tenant for life should have such and the like powers of leasing, selling, and exchanging any part of the devised estate as were by her father's will given to the tenants for life and in tail mentioned in his will, or to the trustees thereof. It appeared that the father's will did not give a tenant for life or in tail any power of leasing, selling, or exchanging; but gave the trustees full power to sell and exchange the hereditaments therein comprised, and to give receipts for the purchase money:—Held, that a tenant for life in possession of the estate devised by the testatrix had the same powers of selling and exchanging that estate as were by the father's will given to the trustees, but that such powers did not extend to giving receipts. Semble, that the difficulties which might be met with in exercising such power of sale in the absence of a power to give receipts, might be removed by paying the money into court under the Trustee Relief Act, stat. 10 & 11 Vict. c. 96; and that, upon such payment, the purchaser might safely complete. Cox v. Cox, 1 K. & J. 251.

—— Purchasers of Estate Subject to Charges.]—Parties claiming the benefit of the trustee relief acts must be within the express words. Purchasers of an estate charged with the payment of two sums of 500*l.* will not be allowed to pay the money into court in exoneration of the estate; and having done so, on their applying to have it invested, the money was ordered to be repaid to them, upon their paying the costs of the petition. Buckley's Trust, In re, 17 Beav. 110; 1 Eq. R. 18; 22 L. J., Ch. 934; 17 Jur. 478.

—— Stakeholder.]—A stakeholder may pay money into court under the trustee relief act. United Kingdom Life Assurance Co., In re, 6 N. R. 59; 34 L. J., Ch. 554; 11 Jur. (N.S.) 424; 12 L. T. 441; 13 W. R. 645.

—— Bankers.]—Bonds of a foreign company were deposited by their agent at a bank in London, together with 5,000*l.* to be divided amongst the bondholders on non-payment of interest. The 5,000*l.* having become forfeited by non-payment of interest, one of the bondholders brought an action against the bankers for his share. Injunction granted to restrain this action, the bankers being trustees for an unascertained class, and therefore entitled to protection against a succession of actions, and not bound at their own risk and expense to ascertain the amount of bonds negotiated at the date of the forfeiture. Semble, that the 5,000*l.* might have been paid into court under the trustee relief act. Hankey v. Morley, 4 Jur. (N.S.) 234.

A banking company having received notice in writing of conflicting claims to moneys placed with them on deposit, paid such moneys into court, under the trustee relief act, after first deducting therefrom their costs of payment in. Upon petition by one of the claimants for payment out:—Held, that the proviso in s. 25, sub-s. 6, of the Judicature Act only applied to debts of which there had been an absolute assignment in writing; and that the banking company, not being trustees within the trustee relief act, were not entitled to pay the deposit moneys in court thereunder. Sutton's Trusts, In re, 48 L. J., Ch. 350; 12 Ch. D. 175; 27 W. R. 529.

But held, that the petitioner must be taken to have submitted to the jurisdiction under the trustee relief act, by petitioning the court, and upon the principle of Haycock's Policy, In re (1 Ch. D. 611), the bank were entitled to their taxed costs of payment in and of the petition, and such costs were directed to be taxed accordingly.

—— Surety of Administrator.]—The surety in the probate court of an administrator who has got money assets of the intestate in his hands may lodge it in court under the trustee relief act. Monahan's Trusts, In re, Ir. R. 8 Eq. 353.

See also INSURANCE.

—— Surviving Trustees.]—Stock standing in the joint names of surviving and deceased trustees may be transferred by the survivors to the accountant-general, under the Trustee Relief Act (10 & 11 Vict. c. 96). Parry, In re, 6 Hare, 306; 12 Jur. 721.

—— Majority of Trustees.]—Three trustees were possessed of a fund which it was desirable to pay into court. One of the trustees being invalided, the other two petitioned, under the Trustee Further Relief Act (12 & 13 Vict. c. 74), for leave to pay in the fund. The order was made. Broadwood's Trusts, In re, 8 L. T. 632.

What Securities might be Paid in—Foreign Bonds.]—As to transfer into court of foreign bonds under the trustee relief act. See Lloyd's Trust, In re, 2 W. R. 371.

—— Railway Stock.]—Railway stock may now be transferred into court under the Trustee Relief Act, 1847. Ross's Trusts, In re, 28 W. R. 418.

Money paid in without Order of Court.]—Before the general orders of June, 1848, money might be paid in to the name of the accountant-general, under the 10 & 11 Vict. c. 96, without any order of the court. Biggs, In re, 11 Beav. 27; 11 Jur. 958.

Affidavit on Payment in.]—In an affidavit made upon payment of money into court under the trustee relief act, the sum to be paid in must be expressed in words, and not in figures. Watts, In re, 34 L. T. 647; 24 W. R. 701.

If a trustee about to pay money into court under the trustee relief act becomes aware of the existence of a claim after he has filed his affidavit, he must file a supplemental affidavit stating the claim, and in default of so doing, he will be personally responsible for the costs of any application by the claimant necessitated by his neglect. Allen's Trusts, In re, 40 L. T. 466; 27 W. R. 529.

Order made under the circumstances for the accountant-general to receive a fund under the trustee relief act on the affidavit of one only of two trustees. Anon., 1 Jur. (N.S.) 974.

—— Service of Affidavit.]—The affidavit to be made on a lodgment of funds in court should be served forthwith on "the persons interested in or entitled to them," i.e., in the same way and upon the same parties as if the Chancery Funds Rules, 1874, remained in force, and had not been repealed by the Supreme Court Funds Rules, 1884. Stenning's Trusts, In re, 50 L. T. 586.

Notice to Persons entitled to Fund.]—A trustee who pays a fund into court under the trustee relief act, not being required, since the repeal of the Chancery Funds Consolidated Rules, 1874, to set forth in his affidavit the names of the persons entitled to the fund, is no longer required to give notice to such persons under Ord. V. of the Chancery Funds (Amended) Orders, 1874, that order having been rendered of no effect by such repeal. Graham's Trusts, In re, 60 L. J., Ch. 98; [1891] 1 Ch. 151; 63 L. T. 664; 39 W. R. 157.

When a legacy had been paid into court by trustees, and the persons entitled to it were resident in Canada:—Held, that notice sent through post by registered letter was sufficient notice. Merryweather, In re, 22 L. T. 603.

Where the person mentioned in an affidavit on payment into court under the trustee relief act as being the person interested in the fund could not be found, an opinion was intimated as to what would probably be held sufficient notice of the payment in, but the court declined to give any directions. Hardley's Trusts, In re, 48 L. J., Ch. 335; 10 Ch. D. 664; 40 L. T. 409; 27 W. R. 587.

—— When Notice Dispensed With.]—Where the only person entitled to a trust fund paid into court under the trustee relief act had gone to America, and had not been heard of since 1868, service of the notice of the payment into court required to be given by the trustees was dispensed with. Walters, In re, 22 L. T. 120.

Where property was given by will to a person, but should he not return to England within seven years of the testatrix's death then over to other persons, and the executor, the seven years having elapsed, and the legatee having been last heard of four years and a half ago in Australia, paid the money into court under the trustee relief act, the money was allowed to be paid to the persons entitled in default of the legatee's return in seven years, and service upon him of notice of the payment into court was dispensed with. Whitaker's Trust, In re, 47 L. T. 507; 31 W. R. 114.

On payment into court by trustees of a reversionary fund, which had fallen into possession since the death of a married woman entitled thereto:—Held, that upon production of a full affidavit as to unsuccessful inquiries for the husband, who had gone to Australia in 1850, and had not since been heard of, the court would dispense with notice to the husband. Hansford, In re, 7 W. R. 199, 254.

Title of Account.]—Executors paid money into court under the trustee relief act to an account headed "In the matter of the trusts of the will of S. J." The court held that the account was too general to enable it to act under this statute. Joseph's Will, In re, 11 Beav. 625.

Observations as to the effect of and the proper mode of proceeding under this act. Ib.

In order to indemnify a trustee or executor, who lodges funds in court under the Trustee Indemnity Act (11 & 12 Vict. c. 68), the funds must be lodged to the credit of a particular trust. The court will not make an order where the funds have been improperly lodged. The practice under the said and corresponding English act stated. Godfrey's Trust, In re, 2 Ir. Ch. R. 105.

To enable the court to distribute a fund under the act 10 & 11 Vict. c. 96, it must stand to an account which separates it from the other assets, and disconnects it from all the other trusts of the will. Everett, In re, 12 Beav. 485.

A fund bequeathed in aliquot parts, on distinct trusts, ought not to be paid by the trustees to the joint account of the several trusts, but ought to be carried to separate accounts. Tillstone's Trust, In re, 9 Hare (App.) lix.

Application to have some money paid out of court which had been paid in to an account intituled "The Trusts of the will of J. Robinson, deceased," the application being by the nine children of the testator, all of whom were adult and sui juris, and claimed as residuary legatees. The court, however, declined to pay out to residuary legatees a sum which had been paid in on so general a trust. After consideration of the will, however, the fund was directed to be carried over to an account intituled "The Account Residue," subject to the particular legacies; and then the residuary legatees claiming would be in their right. Robinson's Trust, In re, 1 Jur. (N.S.) 750.

Where a fund is paid into court under the trustee relief act to a general account of a will, the court will order it to be carried to the separate account of the person (an infant) named in the trustee's affidavit, as the only person entitled to such fund, and it is not necessary previously to change the title of the account. Coulson's Trust, In re, 4 Jur. (N.S.) 6.

Where under the trustee relief act money is paid into court "upon the trusts of a will," it involves the general administration of the estate, and the court will not order it to be transferred to a particular account, except at the request and on the responsibility of the trustee. Wright's Trusts, In re, 15 Beav. 367.

Form of order where cash and stock not admitting of division below 1*l.* are paid and transferred into court to separate accounts. Perry, In re, 24 W. R. 433.

The balance of the assets of an intestate, after they have been fully administered, should be lodged to a credit intituled, "In the matter of the 11 & 12 Vict. c. 68, and separate credit of the next of kin" of the intestate. Monahan's Trusts, In re, Ir. R. 8 Eq. 353.

A fund paid in under the trustee relief act to an account intituled, "In the matter of the estate of a deceased person," will not be paid out without the presence of his legal personal representative and an admission of assets by him. Edwards' Estate, In re, 4 W. R. 801.

d. Effect of Payment into Court on Powers of Trustees.

Appointment of New Trustees by Cestui que Trust.]—There being a question whether a fund should be paid to cestuis que trust, infants being interested, the trustee pays it into court under the trustee relief act, and the cestuis que trust appoint new trustees:—Held, that they could do so, as the payment into court specified a "desire to be discharged," and therefore it was competent for them to appoint other trustees under their power in that case to nominate and appoint any other persons, &c. Bailey's Trust, In re, 3 W. R. 31.

No Power to Prevent Money Paid in being Paid out.]—Trustees who have paid a fund into court under the 10 & 11 Vict. c. 96, cannot prevent its being paid out to a cestui que trust absolutely entitled to it, on the ground that he is about to file a bill against them to take accounts of the trust. Wright's Trusts, In re, 3 K. & J. 419.

Discretionary Powers of Trustees as to Application of Fund.]—Where under a will the income of a fund was payable for the maintenance of T. G.:—Held, that the trustee by paying the fund into court under the trustee relief act relinquished his discretionary power. Tegg's Trusts, In re, 15 L. T. 236; 15 W. R. 52.

A trustee having a discretionary power as to the application of a trust fund, does not necessarily abandon it by paying the trust fund into court. Landon's Trusts, In re, 40 L. J., Ch. 370.

Maintenance and Advancement.]—A testator gave all his property to trustees, upon trust to pay the income to his widow, and after her death "to make a weekly allowance to the testator's son S., or his children, for his and their maintenance and support, such allowance to be in the discretion of my trustees." He then gave his trustees a power of advancement, at their discretion, to S. or his children, and concluded, "it being my intention that S., if living, shall have the whole benefit of such moneys, if he shall conduct himself steadily and to the satisfaction of my executors." S., after the death of the widow, assigned the fund absolutely to A. The trustees, in consequence of doubts raised on the construction of the will as to the nature of S.'s interest, and without any observations favourable or otherwise to the conduct of S., paid the fund into court:—Held, that S. took an absolute interest in the whole fund, which passed to his particular assignee. Coe's Trusts, In re, 4 K. & J. 199; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 158.

A testator bequeathed to his executors a sum of 450*l.*, which he directed should be held by them in trust for his brother James's family, and should be by his said executors expended for the benefit of the said family, in such a manner as to them should seem most expedient. The executors having paid the 450*l.* into court under the trustee relief act:—Held, that the payment into court terminated the discretionary power of applying the funds. Mulqueen Trusts, In re, Mulqueen, Ex parte, 7 L. R., Ir. 127.

—— Power of Court to Exercise Discretion to make Advances for Maintenance.]—Where money vested by a deed-poll in trustees upon trust to apply it in such manner in every respect as they in their uncontrolled discretion should think fit for or towards the maintenance, education, advancement, or benefit in any way of all or any one or more exclusively of the other or others of the children of a certain person, and, as to all or any part of the said sum which should not have been applied as hereinbefore mentioned previously to the youngest attaining the age of twenty-one years, in trust for all the children in equal shares, is paid into court under the trustee relief acts, it is competent for the court to exercise the discretion as to advances for maintenance, education, advancement, or benefit originally given to the trustees, and the residue of the fund, after making such advances, will be divisible among the beneficiaries in equal shares without taking such advances into account. Ashburnham's Trust, In re, 54 L. T. 84. But see Nettlefold's Trusts, In re, 59 L. T. 315.

Retirement of Trustee.]—A trustee who had paid money into court under the Trustee Relief Act (10 & 11 Vict. c. 96):—Held, to have retired from his trust. Williams' Settlement, In re, 4 K. & J. 87; 6 W. R. 218.

—— Right to File Bill to be Relieved from Trusteeship.]—The 10 & 11 Vict. c. 96, by enabling a trustee to pay a trust fund into court, does not deprive him of the right to file a bill to be relieved from the trusteeship, and he will, in a proper case, be allowed his costs of such bill as between solicitor and client. Barker v. Peile, 2 Dr. & Sm. 340; 5 N. R. 425; 34 L. J., Ch. 497; 11 Jur. (N.S.) 436; 12 L. T. 50; 13 W. R. 573.

See also ante, B. 7.

e. Costs of Payment into Court.

Present Practice—Originating Summons.]—Trustees who pay money into court under the provisions of the trustee relief act, when the question arising might be decided upon an originating summons under Ord. LV. of the Rules of Court, 1883, will in future not be allowed the costs occasioned by such payment into court. Giles, In re, 55 L. J., Ch. 695; 55 L. T. 51; 34 W. R. 712.

Payment in Justifiable—Bonâ fide Doubt.]—A trustee will be allowed his costs of paying money into court under the trustee relief act where there is a case of bonâ fide responsibility. He is not bound to take upon himself the responsibility of deciding between adverse claimants. Headington's Trust, In re, 27 L. J., Ch. 175; 6 W. R. 7.

If a trustee entertains bonâ fide legal doubts as to the parties beneficially entitled to trust funds, he is justified in paying them into court, and he will not be made to pay the costs of payment out of court. Wylly's Trusts, In re, 28 Beav. 458; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 906; 8 W. R. 645.

Trustees not entitled as of course to their costs of paying a fund into court under the trustee relief act where such payment has been vexatious, and not justified by the possibility of a question as to the title to the fund. Where, however, the person entitled to the fund, and objecting to its being paid in, claims by representation, trustees will have their costs, as the possibility of a disposition by the deceased person through whom the claim is made is not excluded. Lane's Trusts, In re, 3 W. R. 134.

—— Refusal of Cestui que Trust to admit Account Correct.]—Trustees have a right to some sort of discharge from their cestuis que trust, not, perhaps, a release, unless the instrument creating the trust was under seal; and trustees, between whom and their several cestuis que trust disputes have arisen as to the amounts actually due to them respectively, are justified in paying into court, to the separate account of each cestui que trust, the sum to which they believe him to be entitled, and may have their costs of making such payment out of the respective funds. Wright's Trusts, In re, 3 K. & J. 419.

—— Married Woman Absolutely Entitled.]—A sum of money having been left by will to a married woman, it was agreed by the husband and wife that a settlement should be made. Difficulties subsequently arose, and the parties altered their views, and called upon the trustee of the will to hand over the money to the husband. The trustee declined to do so, and paid the fund into court under 10 & 11 Vict. c. 96. Upon a petition by the husband and wife that the money might be paid out to the husband, and that the trustee might pay the costs occasioned by his conduct:—Held, that no binding agreement for a settlement had been shown, but that the trustee was justified in the course he had pursued, and his costs must be paid. Bendyshe, In re, 26 L. J., Ch. 814; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 727; 5 W. R. 816.

Where a trustee has paid into court a fund to which a married woman is absolutely entitled, he is entitled as of course to his costs between solicitor and client, unless his conduct has been simply capricious or vexatious. Swan's Trusts, In re, 2 H. & M. 34 ; 4 N. R. 53 ; 10 L. T. 334 ; 12 W. R. 738.

Payment into court by an executor of a legacy bequeathed to a married woman, not specifically appropriated, the husband and wife being abroad, and the husband requiring it to be paid under a power of attorney :—Held, that the executor had a right to pay it in ; his costs of paying in to come out of the general estate, his costs of appearing on a petition to be paid out of the legacy. Jones, In re, 3 Drew. 679 ; 5 W. R. 336.

—— On Appointment of New Trustee.]—A trust fund was paid into court by a trustee upon being informed that a new trustee, to whose proposed appointment he had previously objected on the ground that he was unknown to him, and believed not to be a fit and proper person, had been appointed joint trustee with him over the fund :—Held, that the trustee was entitled to receive his costs upon the petition of the cestui que trust for a transfer of the fund to new trustees. Williams's Trust, In re, 4 K. & J. 87 ; 6 W. R. 218.

—— Assurance Company—Costs as between Solicitor and Client.]—An assurance company properly paying money into court under the trustee relief act is entitled to costs as between solicitor and client. Webb's Policy, In re, 35 L. J., Ch. 850 ; L. R. 2 Eq. 456 ; 12 Jur. (N.S.) 595 ; 14 L. T. 89 ; 14 W. R. 857. S. P., The United Kingdom Life Assurance Co., In re, 6 N. R. 59 ; 34 L. J., Ch. 554 ; 11 Jur. (N.S.) 424 ; 12 L. T. 441 ; 13 W. R. 645.

—— Cost of Copies of Affidavits of Claimants.]—Trustees who have paid trust funds into court under the 10 & 11 Vict. c. 96, and take copies of affidavits of parties claiming to be beneficially interested in the fund, will not be allowed their costs of the copies of affidavits so taken by them. Lazarus, In re, 3 K. & J. 555.

—— Lunatic Trustee—Costs of Transfer.]—Where a trustee becomes lunatic, and consequently an application to the court of lunacy becomes necessary for the purpose of obtaining a transfer of the trust funds, no order as to costs will be made. Garden, In re, 6 N. R. 347—L.JJ.

Payment in Improper—Executors Informed that Bill about to be Filed against them.]—Executors being informed that a bill was about to be filed against them by a person entitled to a share of residue, charging them with breaches of trust, paid a sum of money into court under the trustee relief acts, as the share of that person. The bill was afterwards filed, and, on an application for payment out of court by the person entitled, the trustees were not allowed their costs. Waring, In re, 21 L. J., Ch. 784 ; 16 Jur. 652.

—— Undisputed Balance.]—Trustees who had paid into court, under 10 & 11 Vict. c. 96, an alleged balance, the title to which they believed undisputed, the party they believed entitled having previously demanded payment, and offered a discharge pro tanto :—Held, not entitled to costs upon a petition for payment of the fund out of court. Heming's Trusts, In re, 3 K. & J. 40 ; 26 L. J., Ch. 106 ; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 1186 ; 5 W. R. 33.

—— Legacy to which Professed Nun was Entitled.]—Where a professed nun, while in a French convent, executed a deed, conveying all her real and personal estate to trustees upon trust to sell and pay the proceeds to the superior priest of a certain congregation, for the benefit of the congregation at his discretion, and covenanted to assign all her future property upon the same trusts, and subsequently upon the nun's becoming entitled to a legacy under a will, the trustees of the will paid the same into court under the trustee relief act, and a petition was presented by the nun and the trustees of the deed praying payment to the latter :—Held, by Romilly, M.R., that the fund ought not, without distinct evidence that the petition was her free and unbiassed act, to be paid out of court ; but upon appeal, the court directed the fund to be paid out either to herself or to the trustees she had appointed, and considering that the trustees of the will were not justified in paying the money into court, refused them their costs. Metcalfe's Will, In re, 33 L. J., Ch. 308 ; 10 Jur. (N.S.) 287 ; 10 L. T. 78 ; 12 W. R. 538.

—— No Sufficient Reason.]—Trustees who, after accepting the trust, had paid the trust fund into court without sufficient reason, refused their costs of an application to pay the income to the tenant for life. Leake's Trusts, In re, 32 Beav. 135 ; 1 N. R. 417 ; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 453 ; 7 L. T. 816 ; 11 W. R. 352.

A fund was held in trust for A., an unmarried lady, for life, but to cease if "by any means whatever" it should vest in or become payable to any other person. A. afterwards married, and her life interest was settled to her separate use without power of anticipation, by a settlement to which the trustees purported to be parties, but to which they never assented. The trustees thereupon paid the trust fund into court :—Held, that as the trusts which they had accepted had not been varied either by the marriage or the settlement, they were not justified in paying the money into court, and they were refused their costs of appearing on a petition for payment of the income to the tenant for life. Ib.

—— Unreasonable Doubts as to Trust.]—Trustees paying money into court, upon doubts as to questions of law and fact which the court thought unreasonable, were disallowed costs of appearing on the petition. Pearson's Trusts, In re, 20 L. T. 8 ; 17 W. R. 365.

The trustees of a trust fund to which their cestui que trust has become entitled in default of appointment by a tenant for life, are justified in paying it over to him on being informed in writing by the solicitor to the parties that he has reason to believe that no appointment has been made ; and would be free from liability in doing so. Cull's Trusts, In re, 44 L. J., Ch. 664 ; L. R. 20 Eq. 561 ; 32 L. T. 853 ; 23 W. R. 850.

Trustees who under such circumstances pay the trust fund into court under the trustee relief act will not, as a rule, be entitled to their costs. Wylly's Trusts, In re, supra, col. 936, explained. Ib.

Trustees will not be allowed the costs occasioned by paying money into court under the Trustee Relief Act, 10 & 11 Vict. c. 96, when they do so for the mere purpose of escaping liability, and when there is no reasonable doubt as to the performance of their trust. Elliot or Eliot's Trusts, In re, 42 L. J., Ch. 289 ; L. R. 15 Eq. 194 ; 21 W. R. 455.

A., the surviving executor of the last surviving trustee of a will, whereby a fund was settled upon B. for life, with remainder to the children, who survived her, paid the dividends to B. during her life, and then paid the fund into court :— Held, that A. had accepted the trust, and there being no difficulty in ascertaining what children B. left, the payment into court was unnecessary, and he could not be allowed his costs. Abbot's Trusts, In re, 38 L. T. 442.

—— Payment in after Notice of Objection by Cestuis que Trust.]—Trustees after being warned by their cestuis que trust that if they paid the trust fund into court under the 10 & 11 Vict. c. 96, the cestuis que trust should object to the trustees being allowed the costs of paying the fund into and taking it out of court, nevertheless paid the fund into court, stating by their affidavit, not that they had any doubts as to the title of their cestuis que trust, but that "to the best of their knowledge and belief the cestuis que trust were the only persons interested in or entitled to the trust fund, and that the facts mentioned in that affidavit were stated upon their own knowledge, and they had acquired such knowledge as trustees." The cestuis que trust then presented a petition for the payment of the fund out of court, and praying that the costs of the petition and of paying the fund into court might be paid by the trustees personally :— Held, that the trustees who had been served with and appeared upon the petition were not entitled to the costs of such appearance, but only to their costs of paying the money into court. Covington's Trusts, In re, 25 L. J., Ch. 238 ; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 1157.

Trustee ordered to pay Costs—Payment in without Waiting for Production of Evidence.]—The court has jurisdiction to order a trustee to pay the costs of an application for payment out of court of a fund paid in by him under the 10 & 11 Vict. c. 96. Woodburn's Trusts, In re, 1 De G. & J. 333 ; 26 L. J., Ch. 522 ; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 799 ; 5 W. R. 423, 642.

A trustee of a small trust fund, which had become divisible, called upon the claimants for proof of their title. They procured evidence which, though not technically complete, was tolerably satisfactory, and he declared himself ready to pay the fund to them. Afterwards, without assigning any reason, he receded from this determination, and the matter, which had been conducted on his behalf by his country solicitors, was placed in the hands of his London agents, who made various objections to the sufficiency of the evidence. The claimants produced additional evidence, and requested to know what more the trustee required, and offered to produce it. The trustee, however, without waiting for its production, paid the money into court. The applicants petitioned for payment of the fund to them, and made out their title to the satisfaction of the court :— Held, that the trustee had been properly ordered to pay the costs of the petition. Ib.

The opinion of Wood, V.-C., on this point, expressed in Heming's Trusts, In re, supra, col. 937, overruled. Ib.

—— No Inquiry as to Parties Entitled.]—A trustee paid money into court under the trustee relief act without making inquiries for the parties entitled to the fund :—Held, that he must pay the costs which the cestuis que trust, who were officers in the Austrian service, had been put to in obtaining payment of the money out of court. Knight's Trusts, In re, 27 Beav. 45 ; 28 L. J., Ch. 625 ; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 326.

—— Share of Married Woman.]—Trustees paid the ascertained share of a residue of a married woman into court, under the trustee relief act. The court refused to make the trustees pay the costs, observing that it was not desirable to act too strictly in such cases. Brocklesby, In re, 29 Beav. 652.

Trustees are not justified, as a matter of course, in paying a married woman's legacy into court, but will be liable for costs if such payment appears vexatious and unnecessary. Swan's Trusts, In re, supra, col. 937, questioned. Roberts' Trusts, In re, 38 L. J., Ch. 708 ; 17 W. R. 639.

—— Doubt as to Right of Claimant.]—A trustee is not justified in paying a fund into court under the 10 & 11 Vict. c. 96, s. 1, merely because, acting bonâ fide, he entertains a doubt as to the right of the claimant. There must be a reasonable case of uncertainty, or he may be ordered to pay the costs of the petition for payment out. Elgar, In re, 11 L. T. 415.

—— Refusal of Person entitled to give Release.]—A. and B., being each entitled to one-fifth of a reversionary fund, mortgaged their shares with a power of sale. B. was a mere surety for A., and A. afterwards assigned his share to B. for his indemnity, with a power to sell and to give receipts for the share and the produce of the sale. The mortgagees sold the reversionary interest, and refused to pay the surplus to B. without the concurrence and release of A., and they paid the fund into court :—Held, that this was improper, and they were ordered to pay the costs of a petition to get the money out of court. Folingo's Mortgage, In re, 32 Beav. 131.

A trustee vexatiously paying money into court under the trustee relief act ordered to pay the costs of the petitioner for obtaining payment. Cater's Trusts, In re, 25 Beav. 361.

A trustee paid a trust fund into court, under the trustee relief act, merely because other trustees to whom it was payable declined to give a release. He was ordered to pay the costs of getting the money out of court. Id. 366.

—— Request Refused to have Opinion of Counsel at Cost of Claimant.]—By a marriage settlement, which empowered the husband and wife, or the survivor of them, to appoint new trustees, a sum of money was vested upon certain trusts in trustees, their executors, &c. The last survivor of the trustees appointed Sir R. de B. and Lady de B. executor and executrix of his will, and died. They proved the will ; and afterwards the husband, who had survived his wife, by deed, indorsed on the settlement, appointed three new trustees, and required Sir R. de B. and Lady de B. to transfer the trust fund to them. Sir R. de B. requested to have the opinion of counsel, the costs to be paid out of the dividends. This request was refused, on the ground that there was not any difficulty or risk. Sir R. de B. and Lady de B. thereupon brought the trust fund into court under the trustee relief act. On a petition by the husband for a transfer of the fund to the new trustees:—Held, that Sir R. de B. should pay the costs. Wise's Trusts, In re, 3 Ir. Eq. R. 599.

—— Appointment by Donee under General Power by Will by which Executor also Appointed.]—A married woman having, under a settlement, a general power of appointment by will over a fund of personal estate, made a will directing that the fund should be divided among five persons, and appointed executors. The trustees of the settlement paid the fund into court under the trustee relief act, and the cestuis que trust presented a petition for payment out, and established their title by evidence. Malins, V.-C., ordered payment of the fund to the petitioners, but directed the trustees to pay the costs of the petition (except the costs of the evidence of title) on the ground that they ought to have paid the fund to the executor to be distributed:—Held, that the case was governed by Taylor v. Dowlen (38 L. J., Ch. 680; L. R. 4 Ch. 697; 21 L. T. 70; 17 W. R. 778), and that an appeal would not lie. Hoskin's Trusts, In re, 46 L. J., Ch. 817; 6 Ch. D. 281; 35 L. T. 935; 25 W. R. 779.

Semble, that the decision of the V.-C. on the question of law was right, and that the executor of the donee of the power was the proper person to give a discharge. Ib.

But see as to trustee's right to appeal in respect of costs, Turner v. Hancock, 51 L. J., Ch. 517; 20 Ch. D. 303; 46 L. T. 750; 30 W. R. 480.

Bill Filed on Trustees Refusing to Pay into Court.]—Any trustee who entertains a reasonable doubt or difficulty as to the title of the person who claims to be his cestui que trust should pay the funds into court. Gunnell v. Whitear, 39 L. J., Ch. 869; L. R. 10 Eq. 664; 22 L. T. 645; 18 W. R. 883.

A trustee who, entertaining such doubt, did not pay the funds into court, but by his conduct caused the institution of a suit, was allowed out of the funds only the costs that he would have been entitled to if he had paid the funds into court and the costs of appearing on the petition. Ib.

Where trustees of a legacy given for the benefit of a lady, with limitations over, one of which trustees being also the residuary legatee under the will, refused to comply with the request of the tenant for life, that they would pay the legacy into court under the provisions of the Trustee Relief Act, 1847, although she offered to pay the costs of the proceedings for that purpose, and she consequently instituted a suit and obtained an order for payment of the fund into court, the costs of the suit were directed to be paid out of the residue. Handley v. Davis, 28 L. J., Ch. 873; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 190.

On the sale of real estate part of the purchase money was invested in the names of trustees, who were to hold the fund until sufficient evidence should be produced of the death of a certain person, and on such evidence being produced were to pay the fund to the vendors. The vendors in the following year, thinking that they had sufficient evidence of the death, called upon the trustees either to pay the fund to them or to pay it into court under the trustee relief act. The trustees having refused to do so, a bill was filed to compel them to pay over the fund:—Held, that the trustees, having caused unnecessary expense by their refusal to pay the fund into court, were only entitled to such costs as they would have got if they had paid the fund into court, and the vendors had presented a petition for the payment of the fund to them. Weller v. Fitzhugh, 22 L. T. 567.

Bill Filed instead of Payment into Court by Trustee.]—The 10 & 11 Vict. c. 96, by enabling a trustee to pay a trust fund into court, does not deprive him of the right to file a bill to be relieved from the trusteeship, and he will, in a proper case, be allowed his costs of such bill as between solicitor and client. Barker v. Peile, 2 Dr. & Sm. 340; 5 N. R. 425; 34 L. J., Ch. 497; 11 Jur. (N.S.) 436; 12 L. T. 50; 13 W. R. 573.

Where a trustee has an ascertained sum in his hand which is claimed by opposite parties, the proper course is to pay the money into court under the trustee relief act. Wells v. Malbon, 31 Beav. 48; 31 L. J., Ch. 344; 8 Jur. (N.S.) 249: 6 L. T. 32; 10 W. R. 364.

Where a trustee, instead of so doing, files a bill, he will be allowed only such costs as he would have received if he had paid the money into court under that act. Ib.

Deduction of Costs by Trustees before Payment in.]—The trustee relief act provides no special means for making the costs, which trustees may deduct before paying money into court under its provisions, the subject of inquiry. Bloye's Trust, In re, 1 Mac. & G. 488; 2 Hall & Tw. 140; 19 L. J., Ch. 89; 14 Jur. 49—L.JJ. And see Parker's Will, In re, post, col. 943.

Upon a petition under the trustee relief act, the court has no jurisdiction to order the trustees to refund any sum retained by them for their costs. Leake's Will, In re, 32 Beav. 135; 1 N. R. 417; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 453; 7 L. T. 816; 11 W. R. 352.

Where an executor, paying into court a part of a legacy, has deducted his costs of paying it in, the court has no jurisdiction, under the trustee relief act, to order payment by the executor to the legatees of the amount of those costs. Barber's Will, In re, 2 N. R. 571; 32 L. J., Ch. 709; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 1098; 8 L. T. 825; 11 W. R. 1056.

Trustees, on paying a fund into court, retained a sum for their costs. On a petition to obtain the fund out of court, the trustees obtained the costs of their appearance, but all their costs were ordered to be taxed. Hue's Estate, In re, 27 Beav. 337; 28 L. J., Ch. 893; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 1235; 7 W. R. 562.

Trustees, on paying a fund into court, deducted 44*l.* 14*s.* 6*d.* in respect of their costs. On a petition by the person entitled to the dividends praying that the same might be paid to her, and that the costs of the trustees, who appeared on the petition, might be taxed:—Held, that the costs of their appearance and their costs, charges, and expenses properly incurred in relation to the fund in court, ought to be taxed, and that they ought to be charged with the sum deducted by them on payment into court. Sweeper's Trusts, In re, 24 L. T. 413; 19 W. R. 793.

When a trustee's claim for costs, charges, and expenses is contested, he is not entitled to retain the amount of such claim and pay the balance of the trust fund into court, but should pay the whole fund into court and leave it for the court to award the proper amount to which he is entitled in respect of his claim. Beaty v. Curson, 38 L. J., Ch. 161 ; L. R. 7 Eq. 194 ; 20 L. T. 61.

The sum of 8*l.* is the proper sum to be deducted by trustees in the first instance for the costs of lodging money in court under the trustee relief act. Blayney's Trust. In re, Ir. R. 9 Eq. 413. S. P., Boyd's Trusts, In re, Ir. R. 1 Eq. 489.

2. Administration of Fund and Payment out.

a. Jurisdiction of the Court.

Jurisdiction Limited to Fund brought into Court.]—On applications for payment out of a fund which has been paid into court under the Trustee Relief Act (10 & 11 Vict. c. 96), the jurisdiction of the court is limited to the fund which has been actually brought into court ; and repayment by the trustees of costs and expenses deducted by them from the fund before payment in cannot be ordered. If it can be shown that in such a case the costs and expenses have been improperly retained separate proceedings must be taken against the trustees to recover the amount. Parker's Will, In re, 58 L. J., Ch. 23 ; 39 Ch. D. 303 ; 60 L. T. 83 ; 37 W. R. 313—C. A.

A trustee paying into court a sum of money under the trustee relief act, although such sum may be less than the amount of the trust fund in his hands, is discharged as to the money so paid in, and after such payment the parties beneficially interested can proceed only under the act to recover the money so paid in, and the ordinary jurisdiction of the court as against the trustee is confined to the balance which may remain due from the trustee in respect of the trust fund after such payment. Goode v. West, 9 Hare, 378 ; 21 L. J., Ch. 127 ; 15 Jur. 1025.

The trustee relief act takes away the jurisdiction of the court by bill against the trustee in respect of the money which he has paid into court. Thorp v. Thorp, 1 K. & J. 438.

Question of Election.]—Quære, whether the court has jurisdiction to decide a question of election on a petition under the trustee relief act. Bernard, Ex parte, Leigh's Trust, In re, 6 Ir. Ch. R. 133.

Sanity of One of the Parties.]—Where a petition was presented under the trustee relief act, and a question as to the sanity of one of the parties arose :—Held, that the court had jurisdiction to decide the matter as if it were a suit, and if necessary the court could direct an issue. Semble, also, that where there are creditors or unascertained claims a suit is the proper course. Allen's Will, In re, Kay (App.) li.

Construction of Marriage Settlement.]—In a case upon the construction of a marriage settlement and the interest of the children of the marriage under it :—Held, that the question raised was a matter which it was competent for the court to deal with on petition, under the trustee relief act. Dalton's Settlement, In re, 1 De G. M. & G. 265 ; 21 L. J., Ch. 681 ; 16 Jur. 253.

Discretion to Direct Bill to be Filed.]—Under the trustee relief act it is entirely a matter for the discretion of the court to direct a bill to be filed, if such a mode of proceeding shall appear to be necessary ; but the lord chancellor has the same jurisdiction upon petition as upon a bill. Lewis v. Hillman, 3 H. L. Cas. 607. Affirming S. C. nom. Bloye's Trust, In re, 1 Mac. & G. 488 ; 2 Hall & Tw. 140 ; 19 L. J., Ch. 89 ; 14 Jur. 49—L.C.

Validity of Deed.]—On a petition presented under that act praying for the payment out of court of money then in court, and on cross-petition in opposition thereto, the court has full power to declare the validity or invalidity of any deed on which the claim to that money is rested. Ib.

Quære, whether this may not properly be done upon petition alone, without any necessity for filing a cross-petition. Ib.

Such necessity, if it exists, may be dispensed with by consent. Ib.

A. was entitled to a reversionary interest in one-fifth share of certain real and personal estate then held by a devisee for life. A. granted to B. an annuity upon it ; the annuity deed, which was registered, contained a power of sale ; the annuity fell into arrear, and B. determined to exercise the power of sale. The sale was effected for a sum of 900*l.* ; but the purchaser discovered an objection in the memorial registered, which rendered the annuity deed invalid, and he refused to complete the purchase, and obtained a return of his deposit money. The solicitors of B. (acting at the time, as they stated, from motives of kindness to A.) obtained from A., who had not the benefit of any solicitor's advice, an assignment of the reversionary interest to L. for the sum of 900*l.*, and after the reversion fell in by the death of the tenant for life, claimed the property as the purchaser's, alleging that the purchase had been made by L. as their agent and on their behalf. The executors declined to pay them the value of the property, which it was then found amounted to 1,770*l.*, but paid it into court, under the trustee relief act. The solicitors presented a petition to have the money paid out to them as purchasers of the reversionary interest under the deed of assignment to L. A. opposed the payment on affidavits, which set up a case of deception and fraud practised on him. The parties on both sides agreed that the case should be heard on petition and affidavits as if a petition and cross-petition had been filed. The vice-chancellor ordered the money to be paid out of court to the solicitors as purchasers. The lord chancellor, on appeal, reversed this order, declared the assignment to be invalid, and ordered the money to be paid back into court, reserved the costs, and gave either of the parties liberty to make any further application to the court :—Held, that the lord chancellor's order was correct ; that the purchase by the solicitors, who were at the time the solicitors of the vendor, was contrary to the rules of equity, and void ; that without any consent the court had jurisdiction, on petition or cross-petition, under the statute, to declare the deed of assignment invalid, as well as to order repayment of the money ; that the consent here given waived any possible necessity for a cross-petition ; and that the order was not bad for not directing a return to the solicitors of the money they had paid as purchase money ; for that the leave reserved to either party to make any further application to the court enabled them to obtain a return of this money. Ib. But see Way's Trusts, In re, 34 L. J., Ch. 49; 10 Jur. (N.S.) 1166; 11 L. T. 495; 13 W. R. 149.

Rectification of Settlement.]—A fund in court, which has, contrary to the intention of the parties, clearly proved, been included in a settlement, will only be paid out to the parties entitled under that settlement until it has been reformed; and the court has no jurisdiction upon petition to reform an instrument. Malet, In re, 30 Beav. 407; 8 Jur. (N.S.) 226. But see Hoare's Trusts, In re, 4 Giff. 254; 1 N. R. 161; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 167; 7 L. T. 523; 11 W. R. 181; and De la Touche's Settlement, In re, L. R. 10 Eq. 603.

Order for Distribution and Investment.]—The testator directed his debts and funeral and testamentary expenses to be paid out of his personal estate. He then devised his freeholds to trustees to be sold, and the proceeds, after deducting costs, to be deemed part of the residue of his personal estate, and to be subject to the dispositions thereinafter made of the same. The testator then gave a legacy of 1,000*l.* upon certain trusts, and finally directed all the rest and residue of his personal estate to go to his wife for life, remainder over. The pure personal estate being insufficient to pay all the debts and legacies:—Held, that the legacy of 1,000*l.* ought to be paid out of the moneys arising from the sale of the real estate. There was only one petition presented in the present case, and the petitioner being held not to be entitled, another petition ought to have been presented by the party whose claim was preferred. But in order to save expense, the court, having under the Trustee Relief Act the same jurisdiction on such a petition as on a bill, made an order for distribution and investment, according to the rights of the parties. Woollard's Trust, In re, 18 Jur. 1012.

Legal Estate in Trustees.]—A testator devised a freehold to trustees for the benefit of E. for life and for her separate use, and after her death upon trusts for such of the children of E. as, being sons, should attain twenty-one, or, being daughters, should attain that age or marry. E. died after the testator, leaving an infant daughter who did not marry before attaining twenty-one:—Held, that the legal estate was in the trustees, and the daughter of E. took the property on attaining twenty-one, but the interim rents went to the residuary devisee. Eddels' Will, In re, 40 L. J., Ch. 316; L. R. 11 Eq. 559; 24 L. T. 223; 19 W. R. 815.

On a petition for payment out of the interim rents which had been paid in under the Trustee Relief Acts, the court decided that the legal estate was in the trustees. Ib.

Question of Title—Petition or Action.]—Application by person claiming to be entitled to some money which had been paid into court under the Trustee Relief Act, 1847, asking for leave to make out his title to it on a bill rather than on a petition, stating that the only point to be decided was, whether a legacy "to the oldest son of my dear sister J." lapsed or not by the decease, in the lifetime of the testator, of the child who was eldest son at the date of the will, refused. Harris's Trust, In re, 2 Eq. R. 1110; 18 Jur. 721; 2 W. R. 442.

Where a fund is brought into court under the trustee relief act, and the title of one of the claimants is adverse to that of the trustees who brought in the fund, the court will not decide the case on petition under the act, but will direct a bill to be filed. Fozard's Trusts, In re, 1 K. & J. 233; 3 Eq. R. 759; 24 L. J., Ch. 441; 3 W. R. 219. S. P., Draper's Settlement, In re, 9 W. R. 805.

Petition to Appoint new Trustees.]—The surviving trustee under two wills, having gone abroad temporarily, pays the trust fund into court, and a petition is presented by the cestuis que trust to appoint new trustees: and upon the question whether the fund should not remain in court:—Held, that such was not the object of the Trustee Relief Act, but the parties interested must be satisfied with the trustees appointed. Lloyd's Trust, In re, 2 W. R. 371.

Question by Third Parties as to Amount of Fund.]—Where trustees pay a fund into court under the 10 & 11 Vict. c. 96, as the portion of A., the court will not, upon petition by A. for payment out to him of the fund, entertain any question by third parties as to whether it is the right sum. Jenkins's Trusts, In re, 3 N. R. 408; 10 Jur. (N.S.) 332; 10 L. T. 58.

b. Persons to whom Payment will be Made.

Trustees.]—Where an estate has been completely administered, the court will, in general, order the funds to be paid out to the trustees, and will not interfere with their discretion where they are agreed. Butler v. Withers, 1 J. & H. 333.

A fund in court ordered to be repaid to a trustee, he undertaking to allocate it to legatees residing in America. Ibberson v. Warth, 1 Jur. (N.S.) 440; 3 W. R. 230.

A trustee who has paid a sum of money into court under the 10 & 11 Vict. c. 96, may afterwards apply by petition, that the fund may be dealt with as in an administration suit. Trower's Trusts, In re, 1 L. T. 54.

—— Sole Trustee.]—The court will never order payment out of a fund in court to a sole trustee in the absence of any parties interested in the estate, unless such estate is substantially represented. Roberts, In re, 7 Jur. (N.S.) 818; 9 W. R. 758.

The residue of the purchase money, after payment of incumbrances upon lands sold to the landed estates court, will not be paid over to a sole trustee of such lands, although the instrument by which they were put in settlement appointed only one such trustee. Dickinson's Estate, In re, Ir. R. 3 Eq. 344.

—— Absence Abroad of One of several Trustees.]—In the absence abroad of one of several trustees the court may order a sum of money under its control to be paid to the other trustees, without requiring the absent trustee to join in giving the receipt by power of attorney. Clark v. Fenwick, 42 L. J., Ch. 320.

—— Infant Trustee.]—The sole surviving trustee of stock was an infant, and was also absolutely entitled beneficially to the fund. The court ordered the fund to be brought into court under the trustee relief act, and part of the capital to be sold out and applied for the infant's benefit. Pitt, In re, 1 Jur. (N.S.) 1155.

Pauper Tenant for Life.]—A party entitled for life to the dividends of a fund paid into court, under the 10 & 11 Vict. c. 96, allowed to apply for payment in formâ pauperis. Money, In re, 13 Beav. 109; 20 L. J., Ch. 274; 15 Jur. 51.

Executor.]—A sum of money was paid into court by an executor, in the belief that it was the clear residue. Debts were afterwards discovered to be due from his estate; and on a petition, consented to by the parties beneficially interested, an order was made for payment out to the executor of money to the requisite amount, he undertaking to apply it according to the trusts of the will. Tournay, Ex parte, 3 De G. & Sm. 677; 19 L. J., Ch. 257; 14 Jur. 263.

—— Supposed Intestacy—Money paid into Court by Administrator—Subsequent Discovery of Will.]—A woman died on October 27, 1889, as it was supposed, intestate. Administration was taken out to her estate, and the administrator paid into court under the trustee relief act, to the credit of several infants who were among her next of kin, sums of money representing their shares of her estate. A will being afterwards found, the grant of administration was revoked, and the will proved. The executor petitioned for payment out of the money to him. The court made the order asked for on proof that legacies given by the will to the infants were secured. Hood's Trusts, In re, 65 L. J., Ch. 372; [1896] 1 Ch. 270; 74 L. T. 77; 44 W. R. 382.

Administrator of Cestui que Trust.]—A trust fund paid into court under the trustee relief act, after the death of the cestui que trust, ordered to be paid to the administrator of the cestui que trust, under a grant of letters of administration by the archdeaconry court, obtained after the fund was in the court of chancery. Spencer's Trust Estate, In re, 9 Hare, 410; 1 De G. M. & G. 311; 21 L. J., Ch. 314; 16 Jur. 233.

Payment to Widow after Title found by Master.]—Where stock paid into court under 10 & 11 Vict. c. 96, was settled in default of issue of the marriage on the husband absolutely, and he, by his will, there being no children, bequeathed it to his wife, the court refused to order it, on petition, to be transferred to her until the fact on which her title depended had been found by the master. Woods' Settlement, In re, 15 Sim. 469.

Cestui que Trust absolutely entitled.] — Trustees who have paid a fund into court under the 10 & 11 Vict. c. 96, cannot prevent its being paid out to a cestui que trust absolutely entitled to it on the ground that he is about to file a bill against them to take the accounts of the trust. Wright's Trusts, In re, 3 K. & J. 419.

Foreign Settlement—Father as Guardian of Infant Child.]—Stock paid into court under the trustee relief act, and forming the subject of a settlement according to the law of Prussia, under which the husband took no interest, ordered, after the death of the wife, to be paid out to him in his capacity of guardian of the infant child of the marriage, who was entitled to the fund upon the death of her mother. Brown's Trusts, In re, 12 L. T. 488; 13 W. R. 677.

Wife Deserted by Husband.]—A wife who has been deserted by her husband for more than twenty years, and has heard nothing of him for more than five years, is entitled to receive a sum of money, paid into court, as though a feme sole. Pope, In re, 21 W. R. 646.

Minors.]—An annuity was bequeathed to the separate use of an unmarried minor; and some gales of the annuity having been lodged by the trustees under the trustee relief act, the court, on the petition of the minor's father, directed the trustees to hold the future gales of the annuity as they should accrue to the credit of the matter, and that they should be paid to the petitioner's solicitor, on his undertaking to transmit them to the petitioner, who also undertook to account yearly for their due application to the minor's education. Lloyd's Trusts, In re, Ir. R. 2 Eq. 507.

—— Scotch Minors and their Curators.] — Funds, lodged under the trustee relief act to the separate credit of minors, natives of and domiciled in Scotland, ordered to be transferred to the minors and their curator. Ferguson's Trusts, In re, 8 Ir. Eq. R. 563.

Conflicting Claims to Trust Fund standing in Name of one Claimant.]—When there are conflicting claims to a trust fund, and the trustees have paid it into court to the account of one of the claimants, without giving, at the same time, notice to the court of the adverse claims, payment of the fund to the person in whose name it stands ordered by the court, but without prejudice to any question as between the trustees and the adverse claimants. Jenkins's Trusts, In re, supra, col. 946.

Person not mentioned in Trustee's Affidavit.] —A person not mentioned in the trustee's affidavit may apply by petition for the payment out of court of moneys paid in under the trustee relief act. Jephson, In re (1 L. T. 5), not followed. Puttrell's Trusts, In re, 47 L. J., Ch. 11; 7 Ch. D. 647; 37 L. T. 374.

Lunatic.] — Where a person who has been found a lunatic is entitled to a fund which has been paid into court under the trustee relief act, a petition may be presented in chancery under the trustee relief act and in lunacy, and the court has jurisdiction to make an immediate order for the transfer of the fund to the account of the lunatic. Tate, In re, 20 Ch. D. 135; 47 L. T. 2.

—— Not so Found by Inquisition.] — The court of chancery, in its ordinary jurisdiction, can entertain applications relating to the property under its control of persons of unsound mind not found lunatic by inquisition. Macfarlane, In re, 2 J. & H. 673; 31 L. J., Ch. 335; 8 Jur. (N.S.) 208; 6 L. T. 154; 10 W. R. 369.

Stock transferred into court under the trustee relief act, and constituting the entire fortune of a person of unsound mind not found lunatic by inquisition, ordered, with the dividends thereon, to be paid to his father in part discharge of moneys expended for past maintenance, the father undertaking to continue the maintenance in future. Ib. S. P., Berry, In re, 13 Beav. 455.

The court ordered a fund of 379*l.* stock and 5*l.* cash paid into court under the trustee relief act, and constituting nearly the entire fortune of a lunatic not found such by inquisition, to be paid to his father in part discharge of moneys expended for past maintenance. Law, In re, 30 L. J., Ch. 512 ; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 410.

Investment of a fund belonging to a lunatic in an annuity for his life. Dodsworth's Trust, In re, 10 Hare, 16.

S., a person alleged to be lunatic, but not so found by inquisition, was entitled absolutely to 720*l.*, which had been paid into court under the trustee relief act. The father of S. presented a petition in his own right, and as next friend, praying that the income of the fund might be paid to him during the life of S., or until further order, he undertaking to apply it towards the maintenance of S. The evidence showed that S. was quite imbecile, and was not entitled to any property other than the 720*l.*, and that the father was not of ability to maintain her. The court made the order, but directed an application to be made once a year in chambers, showing the state of mind of S., and of what her property then consisted. Sturge's Trusts, In re, 5 Jur. (N.S.) 423 ; 7 W. R. 395.

—— Payment to Overseers of the Poor.]—Certain stock, belonging to a lunatic, though not found so by inquisition, had been paid into court under the trustee relief act. The expenses of the maintenance of the lunatic out of the parish fund had exceeded the value of the fund in court. The stock in court was ordered to be sold, and the produce to be paid to the clerk of the guardians of the poor of the parish. Parker, In re, 2 W. R. 139.

Order made, on a petition presented by guardians of the poor under the Trustee Relief Act, 10 & 11 Vict. c. 96, for payment to them, out of a fund paid in by trustees in which a lunatic was interested, of sums expended by the guardians in support of the lunatic, the lord chancellor holding that, by the act, the court was placed in the position of the trustees, and that the trustees might have made the payment under the 7 & 8 Vict. c. 101, s. 27. Upfull's Trust, In re, 3 Mac. & G. 281 ; 21 L. J., Ch. 119.

Expenses incurred by the overseers for the maintenance of a lunatic paid to them upon petition out of his share in a sum of stock paid into court under the trustee relief act. Ward's Estates, In re, 2 W. R. 406.

When a person of unsound mind, not found lunatic by inquisition, had been maintained in a lunatic asylum by his parish, the whole of the capital of a fund belonging to him, which had been paid into court under the trustee relief act, was ordered to be applied, so far as it would extend, in discharge of the past charges of the parish for maintenance. Phelps, In re, 28 L. T. 350.

Where a person of unsound mind had been maintained in a lunatic asylum by his parish, a portion of the capital of a fund belonging to him, which had been paid in under the trustee relief act, ordered to be applied in defraying the past charges of the parish. Buckley's Trust, In re, Johns. 700.

The court has a discretion to order such repayment or not, as it may think most for the benefit of the lunatic. Ib.

—— Order for Maintenance—Removal to new Asylum.]—A pauper lunatic in an asylum at Bethnal Green, but not found lunatic by inquisition, became entitled to a small fund in court. An order was made in 1856 on petition under the trustee relief act by his next friend directing that he should continue at the asylum until further order, and, the guardians of the poor of his parish undertaking to maintain him there, that 31*l.* a year should be raised out of the fund and paid to the guardians in repayment of the sums to be expended in his maintenance. In 1859 he was removed to the new asylum for his county by order of the justices, but without any order of the court of chancery. From this time no payments were applied for by the guardians. He remained in the county asylum till his death in 1875. His legal personal representative petitioned for transfer of the funds in court to him. The guardians appeared and claimed maintenance for the past time :—Held, that the guardians could not claim maintenance under the order, which ceased to be operative on the lunatic's removal to a fresh asylum. Marman's Trusts, In re, 8 Ch. D. 256 ; 38 L. T. 797 ; 26 W. R. 621.

—— Representatives of Deceased Lunatic.]—Held, also, that any claim for maintenance independently of the order was merely a debt of the lunatic, payable by his personal representative in due course of administration, and that the court had no jurisdiction in the matter to order payment of it, but that the whole fund must go to the personal representative. Ib.

A testator bequeathed one-third of the capital in a fund to A., a married woman. In 1835 (long after the death of the testator) A.'s husband took the benefit of the insolvent debtors act, and assigned all his property, present and future, to his assignee. In 1851 A. died, and the husband took out administration to her estate. In 1852 the husband became an inmate of a county lunatic asylum. In 1854 the annuitant died, and the fund became divisible :—Held, as between the assignee in insolvency of the husband and the overseers of the parish to which his maintenance was chargeable (who have, as to lunatics, a preferential claim to all others), that the assignee in insolvency was entitled to the share of the deceased wife jure mariti. Tyler's Trusts, In re, 2 Jur. (N.S.) 927 ; 4 W. R. 524.

The fund having been paid into court under the trustee relief act, the assignee in insolvency had presented his petition claiming the fund, which he had served on the overseers ; and the latter appeared and argued their claim :—Held, that they were not entitled to costs. Ib.

—— Payment out to Master in Lunacy in New South Wales.]—See Barlow's Will, In re, Barton v. Spencer, 56 L. J., Ch. 795 ; 36 Ch. D. 287 ; 57 L. T. 95 ; 35 W. R. 737—C. A.

—— So Found under Foreign Jurisdiction.]—When a fund belonging to an Englishman residing abroad and found lunatic there under a foreign inquisition is paid into court under the trustee relief act, the court has a discretion to refuse to transfer the corpus to the foreign provisional committee of the estate of the lunatic, though such committee is duly constituted according to the laws of the country where the inquisition was held, and has power to sue and give valid receipts for the fund. Garnier, In re, 41 L. J., Ch. 419; L. R. 13 Eq. 532; 25 L. T. 928; 20 W. R. 288.

A., being entitled to property under an English settlement, and being resident in Jersey, was found of unsound mind by a formal proceeding there, and his brother E. appointed his curator. The trustee of the settlement having paid the fund into court under the trustee relief act, the curator petitioned to have the dividends paid to him, he undertaking to apply them for the benefit of A. Order made on production of official and verified copy of the proceedings in Jersey. Albo's Trusts, In re, 7 L. T. 778; 11 W. R. 80.

And see LUNATIC.

c. Practice.

Petition — Creditor's Action — Further Consideration.]—Upon the further consideration of a creditor's action for inquiries as to incumbrances upon, and for distribution of, funds paid into court under the trustee relief act, an order will be made for payment out of the funds to the persons found entitled thereto, without a petition being presented for that purpose. Pullen v. Isaacs, 72 L. T. 834.

Semble, that money paid into court under the trustee relief act cannot be included in an order on further directions without a petition. Otte v. Castle, 1 W. R. 64.

Petition or Motion.]—Applications under the 10 & 11 Vict. c. 96, and the 12 & 13 Vict. c. 74, must be by petition, and not by motion. Masselin's Trusts, In re, 21 L. J., Ch. 53; 15 Jur. 1073. See also Magawley's Trust, In re, 5 De G. & Sm. 1; 15 Jur. 1005.

The court has not jurisdiction on motion, without a petition, to pay out funds lodged in court under the Trustee Relief Act. Stock, Ex parte, 5 Ir. Ch. R. 341.

—— Foreign Marriage — Decree of Foreign Court.]—The court will not, upon motion, direct the payment of trust funds out of court to parties declared, by a decree of a foreign court of competent jurisdiction, to be entitled, under a foreign marriage settlement, to receive the same, but will require a plenary suit for the purpose. Warburton v. Cicognara, Ir. R. 3 Eq. 592; 18 W. R. 396.

Petition or Action.]—Applications for payment out of court of a fund paid in under the trustee relief act must be made by petition, and not by action; and a person not named in the trustees' affidavit may petition for payment out of court. But where an action has been brought the court may make a declaration of right, leaving the payment to be made on petition. Pelling v. Goddard, 47 L. J., Ch. 646; 9 Ch. D. 185; 38 L. T. 811; 26 W. R. 476.

When a fund has been paid into court under the trustee relief act, a person not mentioned in the trustee's affidavit can apply by petition to the court for the distribution of the fund, and need not bring an action. Jephson, In re (1 L. T. 5), not followed. Puttrell's Trusts, In re, 47 L. J., Ch. 11; 7 Ch. D. 647; 37 L. T. 374.

As to filing cross-petitions. See Lewis v. Hillman, 3 H. L. Cas. 607.

Petition or Summons.]—A judge in chambers is not empowered, under s. 26 of the act (15 & 16 Vict. c. 80), to entertain applications with reference to funds paid into court under the acts for the relief of trustees; such applications must originate in and be founded upon a petition presented to the court, and applications cannot be made to a judge in chambers under the act unless subsequently to such petition being presented. Hodges, In re, 4 De G. M. & G. 491; 3 Eq. R. 123; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 73; 3 W. R. 151.

—— Adjournment into Chambers.]—A trust fund having been paid into court under the trustee relief act by the trustee of a will, a petition was presented by parties interested for an inquiry as to the persons entitled and for payment out to the persons found entitled under that inquiry. Upon the petition coming on for hearing an order was made directing the inquiry, and adjourning the further hearing of the petition in chambers:—Held, that the proceedings having been properly commenced by petition under s. 2 of the Trustee Relief Act, the court had jurisdiction, under s. 27 of the Masters' Abolition Act, 1852 (15 & 16 Vict. c. 80), to adjourn the petition into chambers. Frodsham v. Frodsham (15 Ch. D. 317; 43 L. T. 558; 29 W. R. 165) distinguished. Moate's Trusts, In re, 22 Ch. D. 635; 31 W. R. 497.

—— Order for Maintenance of Infant.]—Where money belonging to an infant has been paid into court under the Trustee Relief Act, 10 & 11 Vict. c. 96, a petition must, notwithstanding the act 15 & 16 Vict. c. 80, be presented in order to enable the court to make an order for the infant's maintenance. Rye's Trust, In re, 3 Eq. R. 368; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 222; 3 W. R. 198.

—— Fund Exceeding £500—Title depending only on Proof of Identity and Age of Applicant.]—Where the title to a fund in court depends only upon proof of the identity, or the birth, marriage, or death of any person, the mere fact that the fund exceeds 500*l.* does not prevent an application, under the trustee relief act, for the payment or transfer of the fund out of court being made by summons in chambers. Campbell's Trusts, In re, 31 L. R. Ir. 434.

Form and Contents of Petition.]—Petitions for the payment out of court of money which has been paid in under the trustee relief act must set out enough of the affidavit on which the payment was made to show the difficulty which occasioned the payment into court, and who are the parties that claim or are interested in the fund, but not necessarily all the details contained in that affidavit. Curtois' Will, In re, 10 Hare (App.) lxiv.; 22 L. J., Ch. 1045; 17 Jur. 852.

On a petition presented under the trustee relief act for payment of trust funds out of court, the statements in the affidavits made on payment of the trust money into court should be set out in the petition, as these statements form the only declaration of trust under which the court can act. Levett's Trust, In re, 5 De G. & S. 619; 16 Jur. 1063. S. P., Flack's Will, In re, 10 Hare (App.) xxx.

The prayer of a petition, and notice thereof under the trustee relief act, should specify the exact order which is sought for and the precise portions of the fund which are to be transferred to the several parties entitled to it. Bernard, Ex parte, Leigh's Trust, In re, 6 Ir. Ch. R. 133.

Money had been paid into court under the trustee relief act, and an affidavit of the trustees was intituled, "In the matter of the trusts of the settlement bearing date the 12th July, 1812, and made on the marriage of." A petition was presented for payment out of court of part of the money so paid in, and an affidavit in support was intituled, "In the matter of the trusts of an indenture of settlement bearing date the 12th July, 1812, and made on the marriage of":—Held, that the variation was not material, and that the affidavit might be received. Harris, In re, 8 Jur. (N.S.) 166.

Service—On Trustees.]—Where the trustee who has paid the trust fund into court under this act cannot be found, service on him of the petition for payment out of the fund, at the address given by him in his affidavit on the occasion of his paying in the money, will be deemed good service. Baugham, Ex parte, 16 Jur. 325.

Where a trustee pays money into court, and, in his affidavit, appoints a place for service on him of any legal proceedings, and he is not there to receive service, the court will not deem such service good unless he cannot be found elsewhere on search made. Lawrence's Trust, In re, 13 L. T. 580; 14 W. R. 93.

When the house named by trustees on payment into court as their address for service had been pulled down, and the trustees had not been heard of for ten years, service of the petition for payment out of court dispensed with, and an inquiry directed to ascertain who were entitled to the fund. Bolton, In re, 21 L. T. 413; 18 W. R. 56.

An administrator paid into court under the trustee relief act, to the separate account of an infant, a sum representing his share of the intestate's estate, as one of his next of kin. The administrator, in an affidavit, stated, that, to the best of his knowledge and belief, the infant was entitled to the fund. The infant having attained his majority, petitioned for a transfer of the fund:—Held, unnecessary to serve the administrator with the petition. Beauclerk, In re, 11 W. R. 203.

Where the court has decided a question under a will upon a fund being paid into court under the 10 & 11 Vict. c. 96, and a petition is presented for payment out of court of such fund, the court will dispense with service upon the trustee. Thomas's Will, In re, 11 W. R. 276.

A fund having been paid into court by the trustees under the trustee relief act, one-third was carried to the separate account of one of the cestuis que trust, who was a lunatic. Afterwards a petition was presented in lunacy for a transfer of the one-third belonging to the lunatic:—Held, that the trustees need not be served with notice of the petition. Young (a Lunatic), In re, 5 W. R. 400.

Semble: Where the title of the tenant for life is clear, the trustees ought not to appear upon a petition simply affecting the income. Evans' Trusts, In re, 41 L. J., Ch. 512; L. R. 7 Ch. 609; 26 L. T. 815; 20 W. R. 695.

—— On Remaindermen.]—Upon a petition by a tenant for life of a fund paid into court under the 10 & 11 Vict. c. 96, for payment of the income to him, the costs of the trustees and remainderman were ordered to be paid out of the corpus. Whitling's Settlement, In re, 30 L. J., Ch. 862; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 754; 4 L. T. 739; 9 W. R. 830.

In such cases it will, as a general rule, be unnecessary to serve the remainderman with the petition. Ib.

—— On other Parties Interested.]—A person claiming a particular share of an aggregate fund brought into court under the trustee relief act, presenting a petition to get that share out of court, ought to serve with the petition all the other persons whom the trustees have stated to be in their belief interested in the fund. Manning's Trusts, In re, 3 W. R. 379.

Upon an application for payment out of court of a fund paid in under the trustee relief act, one of the persons in consequence of whose claim it was paid into court was found to be out of the jurisdiction, and had not been served:—Held, that no service could be ordered in such a case, and the petition was directed to be proceeded with as if all parties were before the court. Naylor's Residuary Personal Estate, In re, 28 L. T. 18.

Where money has been paid into court under the trustee relief act, and the court, in an action brought for the fund, has declared the rights of the person interested, on an application made by the trustee and the person so interested for payment out, it is unnecessary to serve notice of the application on persons who, although stated in the trustee's affidavit as being interested in the fund, have not been declared to be so by the court. Fosbury's Trusts, In re, 39 L. T. 422.

Whether the parties beneficially interested in a fund which had been paid into court under the trustee relief act should be served with a petition for the payment of an annuity out of the dividends thereof when the petition prays costs out of the corpus of the fund. Greenland's Trusts, In re, 1 W. R. 46.

On a petition under the trustee relief act for payment out of court of a fund to which numerous parties were entitled, most of whom were not before the court, a former order having been made directing class inquiries, and the chief clerk having made his certificate, it was ordered that the petitioner be at liberty to serve a copy of the petition, the former order and the chief clerk's certificate, together with the present order, upon the several persons named in the certificate, and that the petition stand over till such persons had been served. Battersby's Trusts, In re, 10 Ch. D. 228.

As to service on some of a class only under the trustee relief act. See Colson's Trust, In re, Kay, 133; 2 Eq. R. 257; 23 L. J., Ch. 155; 2 W. R. 111.

Where the trustees had paid the fund into court, under the 10 & 11 Vict. c. 96, it was ordered to be transferred to a purchaser from the cestui que trust on the petition being served only on the trustees, and notice given to the assignees of the husband of cestui que trust. Stuteley, Ex parte, 1 De G. & Sm. 703.

Service out of Jurisdiction or Substituted.]—Upon a petition under the trustee relief act the court has jurisdiction to order service on a respondent out of the jurisdiction, and also substituted service. Bonelli's Electric Telegraph Co., In re, Cook's claim, 43 L. J., Ch. 720; L. R. 18 Eq. 655; 31 L. T. 83; 22 W. R. 856. S. P., Haney's Trusts, In re, 44 L. J., Ch. 272; L. R. 10 Ch. 275; 23 W. R. 602. Affirming 31 L. T. 645. But see Naylor's Residuary Personal Estate, supra; and Bernard, Ex parte, Leigh's Trust, In re, 6 Ir. Ch. R. 133.

The court has no jurisdiction to allow service out of the jurisdiction of a petition under the trustee relief act for payment of money out of court. Gordon's Settlement Trusts, In re (W. N. (1887), 192), not followed. Jellard, In re, 39 Ch. D. 424; 60 L. T. 83.

On appeal from this decision, it appearing that the order sought by the petition was only for carrying into full effect an order which had recently been obtained by the respondents, the court of appeal, without deciding that leave was necessary, gave leave to serve the petition on the solicitors who had presented the former petition, and who were willing to accept service. Ib.

Petition standing over for Amendment.]—Where a petition, under the trustee relief act, stands over for amendment by adding a next friend on behalf of the petitioner, it is not necessary to re-answer the petition. Medow's Trusts, In re, 10 Jur. (N.S.) 536; 10 L. T. 185; 12 W. R. 595.

Order of Revivor.]—A petitioner under the trustee relief act died pending the results of some inquiries:—Held, that an order of revivor might be made in favour of his executor. Staggoll, In re, 15 W. R. 974.

Order for Payment of Dividends.]—Some portion of a trust fund, payable by instalments, was paid by the trustee into court, under the trustee relief act. Upon a petition seeking payment of the fund so paid in, the trustee was ordered to pay the future instalments from time to time as he should receive them to the cestui que trust, whose title was clear. Wright's Settlement, In re, 1 Sm. & G. (App.) v.

When a fund which has been paid into court is settled on two successive tenants for life, an order may be made for payment of the dividends to the first tenant for life, and on proof of his death, to the second, without any further petition. Brent's Trust, In re, 8 W. R. 270.

Where, under the trustee relief act, a petition is presented for the payment of the share in an undivided fund of one of several children who has become entitled, the court will, if the amount be small, reserve liberty to each of the remaining children to apply at chambers in respect of their several shares as they successively become due. Tracey's Trusts, In re, Ir. R. 6 Eq. 271.

Drawing up the Order.]—Upon a written and reasonable application from claimants residing abroad, the court will postpone the drawing up of an order for payment out of court of money paid in under the trustee relief act. Hodson's Will, In re, 22 L. J., Ch. 1055; 17 Jur. 826.

Appeal and Review.]—Trustees of a fund to which a lady was entitled for life, with remainder to her children, on her death paid the fund into court under the trustee relief act, and under orders of the court three-fourths were paid out. One child then claimed the fund as the only legitimate child, and presented a petition for leave to file a bill of review:—Held, that orders under the trustee relief act stood, pro hâc, on the same footing as a decree in a suit, and a probable case being put forward, founded on facts discovered since the date of the orders, leave was given. Smyth and Arnold's Estate, In re, 2 N. R. 381; 32 L. J., Ch. 779; 8 L. T. 599; 11 W. R. 850.

Notice of appeals from orders made under the trustee relief act must, according to the true construction of the Judicature Act, Ord. LVIII. rr. 9, 15, be given within twenty-one days from the perfecting of the order, or, in the case of the refusal of an application, from the date of such refusal. Baillie's Trusts, In re, 46 L. J., Ch. 330; 4 Ch. D. 785; 35 L. T. 917; 25 W. R. 310.

d. Costs of Payment out.

Two Petitions.]—When two petitions are bonâ fide separately prepared for obtaining payment out of court of a sum paid in under the trustee relief acts, and both raise the same issue, the court will in general allow the costs of the preparation of the second petition, but where solicitors had been informed that a petition was presented, and they persisted in presenting another for the same object, the costs of the preparation and presentation of the second petition were disallowed. Chaplin's Trusts, In re, 3 N. R. 289; 33 L. J., Ch. 183; 9 L. T. 677.

Claimant who failed.]—A petitioner, claiming a fund under the 10 & 11 Vict. c. 96, allowed his costs although his claim failed. Birch's Legacy, In re, 2 K. & J. 369.

The court has jurisdiction to order an unsuccessful claimant on a fund paid into court under the Trustee Relief Act, 10 & 11 Vict. c. 96, to pay the costs of an application for payment of the fund out of court. Armston's Trusts, In re, 4 De G. J. & S. 454; 4 N. R. 450; 10 Jur. (N.S.) 715.

Respondents who make an unfounded claim to a fund, and so occasion the payment of it into court under the trustee relief acts, will be ordered to pay the costs of getting the fund out of court. Benton's Policy Trusts, In re, 43 L. J., Ch. 715.

Costs of Appearance—Trustees served with Petition.]—A trustee who has paid funds into court under the act 10 & 11 Vict. c. 96, and has been served with a petition, is entitled to his costs. Erskine's Trust, In re, 1 K. & J. 302; 24 L. J., Ch. 327; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 156; 3 W. R. 262. S. P., Burnell's Estate, In re, 10 Jur. (N.S.) 289; 10 L. T. 127; 12 W. R. 568.

Trustees who have lodged money under the trustee relief act will be allowed their costs of appearing on the hearing of a petition to draw it, if the claimant's title be doubtful. Blayney's Trusts, In re, Ir. R. 9 Eq. 413.

A fund paid in under the trustee relief act to an account entitled the estate of a deceased person, will not be paid out without the presence of his legal personal representative and an admission of assets by him. Administration having been taken out to remove the difficulty, the trustees were allowed their costs, and the costs of the administration were given out of the fund. Edwards' Estate, In re, 4 W. R. 801.

—— Insurance Company.]—Where an insurance company paid insurance money into court under the trustee relief act, and the company was afterwards served with and appeared on the petition to pay it out:—Held, that the company was entitled to costs as between solicitor and client. Cobbe's Settlement, In re, 15 L. T. 170; 15 W. R. 29.

—— Mortgagees of Reversionary Interest of Married Woman.]—Mortgagees of the reversionary interest of a married woman not allowed their costs of appearance to a petition for payment out of court of a fund representing such interest which had been paid in under the Trustee Relief Act. Insole, In re, 14 W. R. 160.

—— Overseers of the Poor.]—A testator bequeathed one-third of the capital in a fund to A., a married woman. In 1835 (long after the decease of the testator), A.'s husband took the benefit of the insolvent debtors act, and assigned all his property, present and future, to his assignee. In 1851 A. died, and the husband took out administration to her estate. In 1852 the husband became an inmate of a county lunatic asylum. In 1854 the annuitant died, and the fund became divisible:—Held, as between the assignee in insolvency of the husband and the overseers of the parish to which his maintenance was chargeable (who have, as to lunatics, a preferential claim to all other creditors), that the assignee in insolvency was entitled to the share of the deceased wife jure mariti. Tyler's Trusts, In re, 2 Jur. (N.S.) 927; 4 W. R. 524.

The fund having been paid into court under the trustee relief act, the assignee in insolvency had presented his petition claiming the fund, which he had served on the overseers; and the latter appeared and argued their claim:—Held, that they were not entitled to costs. Ib.

—— Other Parties.]—A party served with a petition under the 10 & 11 Vict. c. 96, does not necessarily get his costs of appearing at the hearing of the petition. Fisher, Ex parte, Smith, In re, 3 Jur. (N.S.) 659.

Thus, where assignees in insolvency alleged a claim, but failed to substantiate it, costs of their appearing at the hearing of the petition refused. Ib.

Costs of parties served with or appearing on a petition under trustee relief act. See Wilson's Trust, In re, 14 W. R. 161.

A petition for payment out of a fund paid in under the trustee relief act was served on a party who did not appear on the petition to have any claim, but had sent notice of a claim. She now disclaimed, and was not allowed her costs. Parry's Trust, In re, 12 Jur. 615.

On a petition under the Trustee Relief Act to apply a fund, a wife who was a cestui que trust, with her husband and her mortgagees, having appeared and opposed the distribution, the court properly ordered part of the fund to be applied to the costs of the opposition, and incurred by the husband's proceedings, though under the deed creating the fund it was to be paid to her separate use. Newton v. Ricketts, 7 Jur. (N.S.) 953; 5 L. T. 62; 10 W. R. 1—H. L. (E.)

—— Trustees Respondents.]—Trustees who were respondents to a petition under the trustee relief act, and were tendered 42*s.* for costs under Rules of Court, 1875 (Costs), Ord. VI. r. 17, will not be allowed their costs of appearance unless they appear for the sake of giving the court necessary information. Sutton, In re, 21 Ch. D. 855; 46 L. T. 740; 30 W. R. 657.

—— Executors Respondents.]—Executors who paid into court under the trustee relief act, a fund representing part only of a share, the title to which was disputed, and retained the remainder in their hands, were made respondents to a petition for payment out of the fund in court, and accepted a tender of 30*s.* for their costs, under Ord. LXV. r. 27, sub-r. 19:—Held, that they were entitled to their costs of appearance out of the remainder of the share. Vardon's Trusts, In re, 33 W. R. 297.

Costs of Affidavits of interested Parties.]—Trustees who have paid trust funds into court under the trustee relief act, taking copies of affidavits by parties claiming to be beneficially interested in the fund, will not be allowed the costs of the copies so taken by them. Lazarus, In re, 3 K. & J. 555.

Petition by Trustees for Distribution of Funds in Court.]—Although a trustee may, under Ord. IV. of June 10, 1848, present a petition under the Trustee Relief Act, 10 & 11 Vict. c. 96, as to moneys paid in by himself, the court, in making an order on such petition, gave him respondent's costs only, even where his petition was presented at the request of one of the parties beneficially interested in the fund. Hutchinson's Trusts, In re, 1 Dr. & Sm. 27; 29 L. J., Ch. 356; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 136; 1 L. T. 428; 8 W. R. 253.

Where trustees, having paid money into court under 10 & 11 Vict. c. 96, afterwards apply by petition under Ord. IV. of June 10, 1848, for a distribution of the fund, the court has jurisdiction to make an order upon the petition, and is bound to exercise that jurisdiction. Housman's Trust, In re, or Cazneau's Legacy, In re, 2 K. & J. 249; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 157; 4 W. R. 275.

But where such a petition was presented by trustees without consent of the parties claiming beneficial interests in the fund, and no cause was shown by the trustees for taking upon themselves to be movers in the matter, the court, to discourage such applications, allowed them only respondents' costs. Ib.

Whether Payable out of Income or Corpus—Petition by Tenant for Life for Payment of Dividends.]—The costs of all parties to a petition presented by a tenant for life and other persons interested in the fund for the payment of the income of a fund, which has been paid into court under the trustee relief act, are payable out of the income. Evans's Trusts, In re, 41 L. J., Ch. 512; L. R. 7 Ch. 609; 26 L. T. 815; 20 W. R. 695.

The rule laid down in Marner's Trusts, In re, post, adopted as the established practice of the court. Ib. S. P., Munton's Trusts, In re, 39 L. J., Ch. 764.

A fund was paid into court under the trustee relief act. The tenant for life petitioned for payment of the dividends. There being no general estate applicable:—Held, that the costs of the petition ought to be paid out of the income, and not out of the corpus. Lorimer, In re, 12 Beav. 521; 19 L. J., Ch. 524; 14 Jur. 1126.

Costs of petitions by tenants for life for payment of income arising from funds which have been paid into court under the trustee relief act must come out of the income, and not out of the corpus of the estate. Marner's Trusts, In re, 36 L. J., Ch. 58; L. R. 3 Eq. 433; 15 W. R. 99. S. P., Bangley's Trust, In re, 21 L. J., Ch. 875; 16 Jur. 682; Fletcher, Ex parte, 17 L. J., Ch. 169; 12 Jur. 619; Ingram's Trust, In re, 18 Jur. 811; 2 W. R. 679; and Hamersley, In re, 23 Beav. 267.

Where a fund has been paid into court under the trustee relief act, the costs of a petition by the tenant for life for the payment to him of the income are payable out of the corpus of the fund. Turnley, In re, 35 L. J., Ch. 313; L. R. 1 Ch. 152; 12 Jur. (N.S.) 305; 13 L. T. 662; 14 W. R. 322. S. P., Tanner's Trusts, In re, 35 L. J., Ch. 689; Butler's Trust, In re, 16 Jur. 325; Field's Trust, In re, 16 Beav. 146; 16 Jur. 770; and Leake's Trusts, In re, 32 Beav. 135; 1 N. R. 417; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 453; 7 L. T. 816; 11 W. R. 352.

Gift by will to trustees of 3,000*l.*, on trust to pay the interest to the separate use of R., and that the same should remain during her life under the direction of the said trustees, as a provision for her, and the interest of it be given to her, on her personal appearance and receipt, by any banker. After the death of R. the 3,000*l.* was to be rendered back to the testator's estate. R. married. The 3,000*l.* was paid into court by the trustees, under the trustee relief act. The assignee applied for the dividends:—Held, that the costs of all parties, except R., should come out of the corpus. Ross's Trust, In re, 1 Sim. (N.S.) 196; 20 L. J., Ch. 293; 15 Jur. 241.

On a petition by a tenant for life of a trust fund in court for the payment of the interest of that fund to him for life:—Held, that his own costs of such an application must be paid by himself, the costs of the trustees out of the corpus of the fund. Whitling's Settlement, In re, 30 L. J., Ch. 862; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 754; 4 L. T. 739; 9 W. R. 830. S. P., Hadland's Settlement, In re, 23 Beav. 266; 4 W. R. 690; and Tchitchakoff's Will, In re, 10 L. T. 860; 12 W. R. 1100.

The costs of a trustee, who was served with and appeared upon a petition by a tenant for life for payment of dividends, were ordered to be paid out of income. Mason's Trusts, In re, Smithett, Ex parte, L. R. 12 Eq. 111; 24 L. T. 869; 19 W. R. 1025.

When a fund has been paid into court by a trustee under the trustee relief act, his costs, charges, and expenses properly incurred in, about, and preliminary to the payment into court, are payable out of the capital of the fund; his costs of appearance on a petition for payment of dividends are payable out of income. Whitton's Trusts, In re, L. R. 8 Eq. 352. S. P., Smith's Trusts, In re, L. R. 9 Eq. 374; 22 L. T. 220; 18 W. R. 513.

Upon a petition by tenant for life of stock which had been paid into court under the trustee relief act for payment out of the dividends, the trustee, who appears on the petition after notice from the petitioner's solicitor not to do so, upon the ground that the petition relates to the income only, will not be allowed his costs of the appearance out of the funds representing income. Battell's Trusts, In re, 21 W. R. 138. And see Leake's Trusts, In re, supra.

Costs of trustees who were served with and appeared upon petition by a tenant for life for payment of dividends are payable out of corpus. Gordon's Trusts, In re, 37 L. J., Ch. 408; L. R. 6 Eq. 335. S. P., Knight's Trusts, In re, 37 L. J., Ch. 409.

When a fund had been paid into court on account of the inability of a sole trustee to act, on an application relating solely to the payment of the dividends, the costs of the appearance of the trustee may be properly charged on the corpus. Wood's Trusts, In re, 40 L. J., Ch. 179; L. R. 11 Eq. 155; 23 L. T. 586; 19 W. R. 227.

Liability of Testator's General Estate.]—The intention of the legislature by the 10 & 11 Vict. c. 96, was merely to relieve trustees, and not to throw any additional burden on the cestuis que trust or disentitle them to costs, which before the act would have been borne by the testator's general estate. Sharpe's Trustees, In re, 15 Sim. 470; 17 L. J., Ch. 395; 12 Jur. 492.

When a particular fund is paid into court by an executor who has the general residue in his hands, the court has jurisdiction to order the costs of a petition relating to the particular fund to be paid out of the general residue. Trick's Trusts, In re, Willoby, Ex parte, 39 L. J., Ch. 201; L. R. 5 Ch. 170; 21 L. T. 739; 18 W. R. 123.

Held, that the expenses attending the payment of money into court, under the stat. 10 & 11 Vict. c. 96, must be paid by the executor out of his testator's estate, but those of paying it out by the legatee. Cawthorne's Trusts, In re, 12 Beav. 56; 18 L. J., Ch. 116.

Upon a petition for payment out of court of the amount of a particular legacy paid in under the trustee relief act, the court has no jurisdiction to order payment of any of the costs in the matter out of the testator's general residuary estate. Observations upon the operation of the act with regard to costs. Bartholomew's Will, In re, 13 Jur. 380.

A question arose as to whether the next of kin (of which there were sixteen) of the testator's wife were entitled to a sum of money bequeathed to them as a class, or whether only such of the class were entitled as were living at the death of the testator. The trustees paid the amount into court under the above acts. The court, having decided that as to five shares such shares lapsed, and went to the residuary legatees, directed the eleven shares to be paid in full, and that the costs of all parties should be paid out of the five lapsed shares. Ham's Will, In re, 2 Sim. (N.S.) 106; 21 L. J., Ch. 217; 15 Jur. 1121.

Where the executors of a will pay money into court in consequence of a difficulty created by the testator himself, the executors may retain their costs out of the residue, but the costs of the parties entitled to the fund must come out of the fund itself. Feltham's Trust, In re, 1 K. & J. 528, 533.

Trust for Maintenance—Corpus.]—Costs occasioned by the fund being paid into court under the trustee relief act, in the case of a trust for maintenance, must come out of the corpus. Reid's Trust, In re, 1 W. R. 13. And see Robertson's Trust, In re, 6 W. R. 405.

Successive Beneficial Interests.]—Where a fund in which successive beneficial interests exist is transferred into court under the trustee relief act, the costs incurred by the trustees in proceeding under the statute are payable out of the corpus, not out of the income of the fund. Staples' Settlement, In re, 13 Jur. 273.

Distinct Legacies paid into Court.]—Where two distinct legacies have under the trustee relief act been paid in to two distinct accounts, the costs of paying out one of such legacies cannot be obtained out of the other legacy, notwithstanding that in the events that had happened such latter legacy had become residue. Observations on Tillstone's Trusts, In re (9 Hare, App. lix.) and Everett, In re (12 Beav. 485). Hodgson's Trust, In re, 18 Jur. 786; 2 W. R. 539.

Legacy paid in by Executor of Trustee who was Residuary Legatee.]—A husband and wife resident abroad give a general power of attorney to their solicitor to act for them in this country. The wife is entitled to a legacy, which has been retained for many years by the trustee, who is also residuary legatee. The trustee is dead, and his executor, considering that the solicitor under the power of attorney cannot give him an effectual discharge, pays the legacy into court under the Trustee Relief Act, and, notwithstanding he is requested not to do so, appears by counsel on the petition. On the question whether the costs of the payment into court and of the appearance of the executor are payable out of the legacy:—Held, that the executor is not entitled to the costs of payment in, but is entitled to the costs of appearing on the petition. Jones, In re, 3 Drew. 679; 5 W. R. 336.

1. VESTING ORDERS.

a. Under the Trustee Act, 1893.

Infant Tenant in Tail in Possession.]—Form of order declaring the infant tenant in tail a trustee, and directing a conveyance to the trustees of the will under the Trustee Act, 1893. Montagu, In re, Faber v. Montagu, 65 L. J., Ch. 372; [1896] 1 Ch. 549; 74 L. T. 346; 44 W. R. 583.

Appointment of Existing Trustees in Place of Themselves and a Trustee who cannot be found.]—There is jurisdiction under the Trustee Act, 1893, as also under the Lunacy Act, 1890, to make an order vesting trust property in existing trustees in the place of themselves and a trustee entitled jointly with them who cannot be found, without appointing a new trustee in his place. Lees' Settlement, In re, 65 L. J., Ch. 770; [1896] 2 Ch. 508; 75 L. T. 178; 44 W. R. 680.

Payment off — Death of Surviving Mortgagee—Disputed Will.]—Where the will of a surviving mortgagee is the subject of a disputed action in the probate division, the court may make a vesting order under s. 29 (e) of the Trustee Act, 1893. Cook's Mortgage, In re, 64 L. J., Ch. 624; [1895] 1 Ch. 700; 13 R. 391; 72 L. T. 388; 43 W. R. 461.

Request to Trustee to transfer Stock — Petition for Vesting Order presented within Twenty-eight Days—Liability of Trustees for Costs.]—The court will refuse to make a vesting order under s. 35, sub-s. 1 (ii.) (d) of the Trustee Act, 1893, which provides for the making of such an order, where a trustee refuses to transfer stock for twenty-eight days after a request in writing, upon a petition which has been presented before the expiration of such twenty-eight days. The respondent trustee may be required to pay the costs of a petition praying for such an order. Knox's Trusts, In re, 64 L. J., Ch. 402; [1895] 1 Ch. 538; 13 R. 392; 72 L. T. 761; 43 W. R. 442. Affirmed 64 L. J., Ch. 860; [1895] 2 Ch. 483; 13 R. 395, n.; 72 L. T. 761—C. A.

Death of Trustees of Railway Stock — No Personal Representative — New Trustees appointed under Power.]—Trustees, in whose name a sum of English railway stock stood, died, and there was no personal representative of the survivor. New trustees were appointed under a power in the settlement:—Held, that in the absence of a personal representative, there was no jurisdiction under the Trustee Act, 1893, to make an order vesting in the trustees so appointed the right to call for a transfer of the stock. Ellis' Settlement, In re (24 Beav. 426), considered. Carre's Trust, In re, [1895] 1 Ir. R. 172.

Colony — Australia — Appointment of New Trustee by Master.]—Sect. 30 & 32 of 16 Vict. (No. 19) authorise the supreme court to appoint a new trustee where it is expedient to do so, and "either by the same or any subsequent order" to vest the trust property in the trustee so appointed. It is competent for the court under these sections to refer the appointment to the master, and at the same time to make an order vesting the trust property in the trustee whom the master shall appoint. It is not necessary that in case of appointment by the master the court should make a subsequent order. Plomley v. Richardson, 64 L. J., P. C. 18; [1894] A. C. 632; 11 R. 324; 71 L. T. 377—P. C.

b. Under the Trustee Acts, 1850 and 1852.

i. In General.

Land in Ireland.]—Where a trustee of land in Ireland becomes a lunatic, the judges of the court of appeal in England can, on a petition intituled in the chancery division and in lunacy, appoint a new trustee under their jurisdiction in lunacy, and make a vesting order under their jurisdiction as additional judges of the chancery division. Smyth, In re, 55 L. T. 37 ; 34 W. R. 493—C. A.

The Trustee Act, 1850, does not give to the lord chancellor of Great Britain sitting in lunacy jurisdiction in Ireland. Davies, In re, 3 Mac. & G. 278.

Where the surviving trustee of property, consisting partly of real estate in Ireland, becomes lunatic, the court has jurisdiction to make an order, upon a petition presented both in lunacy and in the chancery division, appointing new trustees, and vesting the real estate in Ireland in them. Lamotte, In re, 4 Ch. D. 325 ; 36 L. T. 231 ; 25 W. R. 149.

Where land held in trust is situated in Ireland, the cestui que trust being in England, and a surviving trustee in Ireland, the court has jurisdiction under s. 54 of the Trustee Act of 1850 (13 & 14 Vict. c. 60) to appoint new trustees and make a vesting order. Hewitt's Estate, In re, 6 W. R. 537.

—— Refusal to Convey Land in Ireland.]—The court has jurisdiction, under s. 2 of the Trustee Extension Act, 1852, to vest land in the beneficiaries absolutely entitled thereto, where the trustee thereof wilfully refuses to convey to them, although the land and the trustee are both in Ireland, and the trusts were created by an Irish settlement. Steele, In re, Gold v. Brennan, 53 L. T. 716.

Land in Canada.]—A vesting order vesting the legal estate in the owner of lands in Canada may be made under the 13 & 14 Vict. c. 60, s. 54. Groom's Trusts, In re, 11 L. T. 326.

A. purchased an estate in Canada, and his conveyance was duly registered there. A mortgage thereon, made in 1837, had also been registered. The conveyance to A. was confirmed by the personal representative of the mortgagee, the mortgage having been satisfied in his lifetime. It subsequently turned out that the mortgage was a mortgage in fee, and the legal estate was outstanding in a grandchild of the mortgagee, an infant. On proof of these facts the court made an order vesting the estate in A. Ib.

Irish Railway Stock.]—One of the trustees of an estate which was being administered by the court having become of unsound mind, an order was made under the Trustee Act, 1850, s. 5, appointing a person to concur with the other trustee in transferring into court certain Irish railway stock standing in the names of the trustees. It being discovered before the order was drawn up that owing to s. 56 of the act such an order could not be made as to Irish stock, an order was made appointing a person new trustee of the Irish stock in the place of the person of unsound mind, and directing him to concur with the other trustee in transferring the stock into court. Hodgson, In re, Kerdis (Lord) v. Hodgson. 11 Ch. D. 888.

Intestacy—Escheat.]—Where the crown has become entitled to the whole of the trust estate of a testator, and also to a part of the beneficial interest therein, the court cannot, upon an application under the Trustee Acts for the appointment of new trustees of the will and a vesting order, make a vesting order against the crown, but an application must be made to the court under s. 5 of the Intestates' Estates Act, 1884. Pratt's Trusts, In re, 55 L. T. 313 ; 34 W. R. 757.

Effect of Vesting Order on Estate Tail.]—A vesting order, under the Trustee Act, 1850, will, if consented to by the protector of the settlement, bar all estates in remainder, and not pass a base fee only under the 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 74. Powell v. Matthews, 1 Jur. (N.S.) 973.

When, by order under the Trustee Act, 1850, the estate of a trustee tenant in tail who is of unsound mind is vested in any person the order should only direct the land to be vested in such person for all the estate which the trustee could convey, if sane, and need not refer to the execution of a disentailing deed, or to the Fines and Recoveries Act. Mason v. Mason, Mason, In re, 7 Ch. D. 707 ; 26 W. R. 565—C. A.

Sect. 3 of the Trustee Act, 1850, will then free the land from the estate tail. Ib.

Order Vesting Legal Estate in Purchaser to Uses to bar Dower.]—Upon a petition presented under the Trustee Act, 1850, s. 7, the court declined, without further consideration, to make an order to vest the legal estate in a purchaser to uses in bar of dower. Such an order was subsequently made by V.-Ch. Kindersley. Howard's Estate, In re, 5 De G. & Sm. 435 ; 21 L. J., Ch. 437.

As to limitations in an order under the Trustee Act, 1850, vesting the legal estate in a purchaser to uses in bar of dower. See Lush, In re, Grieve, Ex parte, 5 De G. & Sm. 436, n.

Upon petition presented under the Trustee Act, 1850, an order made vesting the legal estate in a purchaser to uses to bar dower. Davey v. Miller, 1 Sm. & G. (App.) xix. ; 1 Eq. R. 236 ; 22 L. J., Ch. 1054 ; 17 Jur. 908 ; 1 W. R. 465.

Death of Sole Trustee—No Personal Representative.]—The sole trustee of land appointed by a will died in the lifetime of the testator. The testator's heiress-at-law died intestate (after the Conveyancing Act, 1881, had come into operation), and there was no representative of her estate :—Held, that, on a petition for the appointment of new trustees of the will, which was served on the testator's heir, an order could be made vesting the property in the new trustees for such estate as was vested in the heiress-at-law at the time of her death. Williams' Trusts, In re, 56 L. J., Ch. 1088 ; 36 Ch. D. 231 ; 56 L. T. 884 ; 36 W. R. 100.

The last survivor of three trustees of real estate died, and no legal personal representative of his estate had been appointed. Upon a petition for the appointment of new trustees, and a vesting order of the trust property, an order was made vesting the estate in the new trustees for all the estate and interest which the deceased trustee had in him immediately before his death. Rackstraw's Trusts, In re, 52 L. T. 612 ; 33 W. R. 559.

Upon the death of a sole surviving trustee intestate the court made an order for the appointment of new trustees, and ordered certain lands forming part of the estate to vest in the new trustees "for the estate now vested in the heir-at-law of the deceased trustee." After the order had been passed and entered, administration was taken out to the estate of the deceased trustee. Upon motion that the order of the court might be altered by substituting the legal personal representative for the heir-at-law of the intestate trustee in accordance with s. 30 of the Conveyancing Act, 1881, the court made a new order that, notwithstanding the previous order, the lands should vest in the new trustees "for all the estate therein now vested in the legal personal representative of the deceased trustee." Pilling's Trusts, In re, 53 L. J., Ch. 1052; 26 Ch. D. 432; 32 W. R. 853.

New Trustees—Jurisdiction to Re-appoint.]—A new trustee was appointed, under a power, in place of a trustee who had become incapable:—Held, that there was no jurisdiction under the Trustee Acts to re-appoint the new trustee and vest the trust estate in the continuing trustees and the new trustee. Dalgleish's Settlement, In re, post, col. 971, overruled. Dewhirst's Will, In re, 55 L. J., Ch. 842; 33 Ch. D. 416; 55 L. T. 427; 35 W. R. 147—C. A. See also Batho, In re, post, col. 975.

Where there is no doubt that existing trustees of an instrument have been duly constituted, the court will not re-appoint them, with a view to making, under the Trustee Act, 1850, s. 34, a vesting order which will not sever the joint tenancy. Pearson, In re (5 Ch. D. 982), not followed. Vicat, In re, 55 L. J., Ch. 843, n.; 33 Ch. D. 103; 54 L. T. 891; 34 W. R. 645—C. A.

A., B. and C. were named trustees in a will. A. died, B. became of unsound mind, and C. appointed E. and F. trustees in the place of A. and B. Part of the trust estate consisted of a mortgage of freeholds. The appointment of E. and F. being unquestionably valid, the court refused to re-appoint them and make an order vesting the mortgage estate in C., E. and F., but made an order appointing C. in the place of B. to convey the mortgaged property for the estate of himself and B. to himself, E., and F. upon the trusts of the will. Ib.

One of two trustees was convicted of felony and sentenced to penal servitude, and upon an application to the palatine court a new trustee was appointed, jointly with the remaining trustee. The trust property consisted of land partly within and partly without the jurisdiction of the palatine court. On the appointment of the new trustee, the palatine court made an order, vesting such part of the land as lay within that court's jurisdiction in the new trustee and the remaining trustee. A petition was then presented to this court, asking for an order vesting the remaining land in the new trustee and the remaining trustee. The evidence showed that the convict trustee could not be found:—Held, that inasmuch as there was no appointment of new trustees to be made on the present petition, no vesting order could be made under s. 8 of the Trustee Extension Act, 1852, having regard to the decision of Dewhirst's Will, In re, supra. But held, that as there was sufficient evidence that the convict trustee could not be found, the court had jurisdiction, under s. 10 of the Trustee Act, 1850, to make a vesting order, and would accordingly make such an order. Hulme's Trusts, In re, 57 L. T. 13.

—— Continuing Trust—Decrease in Number of Trustees.] — It is the settled practice of the court under the Trustee Acts, when there is a continuing trust, not simply to remove or discharge a trustee, without appointing a new trustee in his place, by appointing the remaining trustees to be sole trustees in place of themselves and him. And though the court will deviate from this rule and make such an appointment if the trustees have no duty to perform but to distribute a fund which is immediately divisible, it will adhere to the ordinary rule if there is a continuing trust as regards even a relatively small part of the trust fund. Lamb's Trusts, In re, 54 L. J., Ch. 107; 28 Ch. D. 77; 33 W. R. 163.

Although, where one of the trustees of a trust fund becomes lunatic, the court will not in general vest the right to deal with the trust funds in the trustees of sound mind, but will require a new trustee to be appointed in the place of the lunatic, an order vesting the right to the fund in the trustees of sound mind will be made where the fund is immediately divisible. Martyn, In re, Toutt's Will, In re, 54 L. J., Ch. 1016; 26 Ch. D. 745; 50 L. T. 552; 32 W. R. 734—C. A.

Where one of three trustees was an absconding bankrupt, the court refused, notwithstanding evidence of great difficulty in getting a third person to act as trustee, to appoint the solvent trustees in place of themselves and the bankrupt, and to make an order vesting the trust estate in the solvent trustees alone, on the ground that the court will not reduce the number of trustees of a continuing trust; and also that there is no power to appoint existing trustees to be new trustees. Gardiner's Trusts, In re, 55 L. J., Ch. 714; 33 Ch. D. 590; 55 L. T. 261; 35 W. R. 28.

—— Special Circumstances.]—One of the four trustees of a settlement having been adjudicated a bankrupt and having absconded, an action was brought by one of the cestuis que trust against the other three trustees claiming to have the trusts carried into execution, and to have it declared that the defendants were bound to make good any loss which might accrue on three mortgages on which part of the trust funds had been invested, and which the plaintiff alleged to be insufficient securities. He also alleged that the fourth estate had acted fraudulently. The legal estate in the mortgaged properties was vested in all the four trustees, and the stocks, in which the remainder of the trust funds had been invested, stood in the names of the four trustees. Before issue was joined in the action the defendants, in pursuance of an order of the court, gave notice to call in two of the mortgages, and one of the notices had expired. Owing to the pendency of the action no one could be found willing to accept the trusts in place of the bankrupt:—Held, that under these circumstances, the court could properly appoint the defendants trustees in the place of themselves and the bankrupt. An order was accordingly made appointing the defendants, and vesting in them the mortgaged properties, and the right to sue for and receive the mortgage debts, and to call for a transfer of, and to transfer, the stocks into their own names, and to receive the dividends thereon, the defendants to pay into court the mortgage money when received. Davies v. Hodgson, 32 Ch. D. 225.

By a settlement made in 1859 four trustees were appointed, one of whom disclaimed. The existing three trustees desired to retire, and in the events that had happened the power to appoint new trustees contained in the settlement was not exercisable. A petition was accordingly presented for the appointment of three new trustees in place of the three who had acted and now wished to retire. Great difficulty was found in obtaining the consent of other persons to act as trustees, and this was alleged as a ground for the application that three new trustees should be appointed in the room of the original four:—Held, that on an appointment of new trustees by the court, assuming it was necessary to prove special circumstances to enable the court to appoint three new trustees when there had originally been four trustees, the disclaimer by one and the difficulty of obtaining new trustees constituted special circumstances. Whether special circumstances were actually necessary to be shown, quære. Fowler's Trusts, In re, 55 L. T. 546.

Absconding Trustee — Refusal to join in Appointment.]—The persons having power to appoint new trustees of a marriage settlement, viz., the husband and wife, appointed a new trustee in the place of one who had absconded abroad, and jointly with the continuing trustee. The trustee who had absconded declined to join in the appointment, and to execute the necessary transfers. The property subject to the trusts of the settlement consisted of policies of insurance and mortgages. It became therefore impracticable, having regard to sub-s. 3 of s. 34 of the Conveyancing Act, 1881, to vest such property in the trustees without the assistance of the court. A petition for a vesting order was accordingly presented, under the Trustee Acts, 1850 and 1852, by the husband and wife and the continuing trustee:—Held, that the order asked for might be made; but that the petition must be amended by adding the name of the proposed new trustee as a co-petitioner. Keeley's Trusts, In re, 53 L. T. 487.

Absconding Liquidator — Appointment of New Liquidator.]—After an order had been made for the compulsory winding-up of a company A. B. was appointed official liquidator. A. B. afterwards absconded, and he was removed from the post of official liquidator, and in his place C. D. was appointed official liquidator. It was found that a sum of consols, part of the assets of the company, was standing in A. B.'s name as official liquidator. An application, under the Trustee Act, 1850, ss. 22 and 43, was therefore made by motion ex parte for an order to vest such sum of consols in C. D. as official liquidator. A. B. had become bankrupt and could not be found:—Held, that the court had jurisdiction to make the order asked for upon motion; but that, except in simple cases like the present, the application should be made by petition:—Held, also, that the order asked for should be made, but not drawn up, within a week, and that the trustee in bankruptcy of the absconding liquidator should forthwith be served with notice of the order. Capital Fire Insurance Association, In re, 55 L. T. 633. See also Hulme's Trusts, In re, supra, col. 965.

ii. Copyholds.

Consent of Lord of Manor.]—It is not necessary for the lord of a manor to appear in court to consent to a vesting order under the Trustee Act. Ayles v. Cox, 17 Beav. 584.

After a decree for the sale of an intestate's copyhold estate in lots, but before the sale, the infant heir of the intestate was admitted:—Held, that a petition for a vesting order was properly presented by the purchaser, whose money was in court, and that the costs of the order were to be borne by the vendors, and to be paid out of the purchase-money of the particular lot, and not out of the fund in court generally. Ib.

Where the party entitled to the legal estate in copyholds has been admitted, and the legal estate descends on his death to his customary heirs, who disclaim, the consent of the lord will be necessary to a vesting order. Howard, In re, 3 Eq. R. 846; 3 W. R. 605.

The court will, on a petition to appoint a new trustee under the Trustee Act, direct copyholds to vest in the trustees appointed by the court, without requiring the parties to get the consent of the lord. Fliteroft, In re, 1 Jur. (N.S.) 418. And see Boyce, In re, 4 De G. J. & S. 210; 3 N. R. 396; 33 L. J., Ch. 390; 10 Jur. (N.S.) 138; 9 L. T. 670; 12 W. R. 359.

Where copyholds of inheritance had been sold by order of the court in a suit by an equitable mortgagee against the infant customary heir, who had not been admitted, and the personal representative of the deceased mortgagor, the consent of the lord of the manor evidenced either by his appearing and consenting, or by a verified certificate of his consent, was held to be a necessary preliminary to the drawing up of a vesting order under the 13 & 14 Vict. c. 60, made upon the petition of the purchaser, the infant heir, and the personal representative of the mortgagor. Cooper v. Jones, 25 L. J., Ch. 240; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 59.

Where a person to whom a trust estate in copyholds is devised disclaims, a vesting order, vesting in a new trustee the estate and interest in the copyholds, which would have vested in the disclaiming trustee if he had accepted the devise, is regular. Paterson v. Paterson, 35 L. J., Ch. 518; L. R. 2 Eq. 31; 14 L. T. 320; 14 W. R. 601. And see S. C., nom. Bristow v. Booth, 35 Beav. 506; 39 L. J., C. P. 47; L. R. 5 C. P. 80; 21 L. T. 427; 18 W. R. 138.

The consent of the lord is not necessary to a vesting order of copyholds, but his right to his fine is not prejudiced by such an order if made without his consent. Ib.

If the order is to be made without the consent of the lord, he ought not to be served with the petition. Ib.

A copyhold was vested in a married woman. It was sold under a decree, which ordered all proper parties to join. She stated in writing that she never would surrender:—Held, that the case came within the Trustee Act, and a vesting order was made. Rowley v. Adams, 14 Beav. 130; 20 L. J., Ch. 436; 15 Jur. 1002.

Whether, where a purchaser has paid his purchase-money into court, the petition under the Trustee Act should be presented by the plaintiff or the purchaser, quære. But held, that the objection might be removed by making them co-petitioners. Ib.

The tender of a notice requiring a trustee to surrender a copyhold is not sufficient, within s. 17 of the Trustee Act, 1850, but the tender of a deed appointing an attorney to surrender may possibly be sufficient. Ib.

Where an estate is sold in lots under a decree, one petition under the Trustee Act, as to the several lots, is not multifarious. Ib.

Form of order appointing a new trustee of a copyhold estate, and appointing a person to complete the assurance of the estate to such new trustee. Hey's Will, In re, 9 Hare, 221.

Covenant to Surrender Copyholds.]—Covenant by A. to surrender copyholds to the use of B., and in the meantime, and until such surrender should be made, that A. would stand seised of the copyholds "upon trust for, and to surrender the same unto B." A. went out of the jurisdiction without making any surrender. Order made, under the Trustee Act, 1850, for the appointment of a person to surrender the copyholds to B. Collingwood's Trusts, In re, 6 W. R. 536.

A vendor covenanted in the usual way to surrender copyholds to the purchaser, and the purchase-money was paid. The vendor died before surrender. His customary heir was of unsound mind. The covenant contained no declaration that the vendor and his heirs would until surrender hold the premises in trust for the purchaser:—Held, that a person might be appointed under the Trustee Act, 1850, to convey to the purchaser, without a suit being instituted to have the heir declared a trustee. Cuming, In re, L. R. 5 Ch. 72; 21 L. T. 739; 18 W. R. 157.

By their marriage settlement, husband and wife covenanted with the trustee to surrender copyholds of the wife to the uses of the settlement. The marriage was solemnised, but the wife died without ever having surrendered the copyholds, and upon her death they became vested in the youngest child of the marriage as her customary heir. Upon a petition presented by the trustee of the settlement, the eldest child, who was of age, and the other children of the marriage, infants, by their father and next friend, it was ordered by the court that the copyholds, without any surrender or admittance, should vest in the trustee of the settlement upon the trusts of the settlement for all the estate of the customary heir. Bradley's Settled Estate, In re, 54 L. T. 43; 34 W. R. 148.

Copyhold lands were devised to an infant for life, with remainder to his first and other sons in tail. By a decree made in a cause these copyholds were directed to be sold for the payment of the testator's debts, and an order was made under the Act 1 Will. 4, c. 47, directing the guardian of the infant to surrender the lands to the purchaser. The purchaser objected to the surrender of the copyholds in question without a petition presented under the Trustee Act, 1850, on the ground that there were contingent rights and interests subsequent to the infant's life estate, which the surrender as proposed would not defeat:—Held, that the purchaser was entitled to an order under s. 29 of the Trustee Act, 1850, discharging the contingent rights of the unborn issue of the tenant for life, but that such an order might be made in the suit without a petition entitled in the Trustee Act. Wood v. Beetlestone, 1 K. & J. 213; 3 Eq. R. 238.

A mortgagor of copyholds having refused for twenty-eight days to make a surrender in accordance with his covenant, an order was made vesting the legal estate in the mortgagee, subject to the proviso for redemption. Crowe's Mortgage, In re, 41 L. J., Ch. 32; L. R. 13 Eq. 26.

Copyhold premises were surrendered in 1829, by a debtor to the use of his creditor, his heirs and assigns, upon trust that he, his heirs, executors, administrators, or assigns, should sell the same, and, out of the proceeds, should pay to himself, his executors or administrators, 200*l.* then due, and interest. The creditor died in 1831. In 1851 his personal representative contracted to sell the copyhold premises for 100*l.* The customary heir of the creditor was an infant. On the petition of the personal representative of the creditor, it appeared that the debtor had died intestate, that there was no personal representative, and that proof of the title of the customary heir would be very expensive. The court made an order vesting the legal estate in the copyhold premises in the purchaser, without any service either on the customary heir or on the personal representative of the debtor. Wise, In re, 5 De G. & Sm. 415.

"Seised Jointly"—Coparceners.]—The words "seised jointly" in s. 10 of the Trustee Act, 1850, are not limited strictly to a legal joint tenancy, but are used in the widest sense, and they include the case of land vested in coparceners, one of whom is out of the jurisdiction of the court. Templer's Trusts, In re, post, col. 975, and M'Murray v. Spicer, post, col. 981, considered. Greenwood's Trusts, In re, 54 L. J., Ch. 623; 27 Ch. D. 359; 51 L. T. 283; 33 W. R. 342.

"Wilful" Refusal to Convey.]—Sect. 2 of the Trustee Extension Act, 1852, only applies to cases where the title to the lands of the person requiring a conveyance thereof is free from doubt. Where there is a bonâ fide doubt as to such title, the refusal of a trustee to convey the lands is not "wilful" within that section, and there is therefore no jurisdiction under it in such a case to grant a vesting order. Mills' Trusts, In re, 40 Ch. D. 14; 60 L. T. 442; 37 W. R. 81—C. A.

iii. Leaseholds.

Lessee Covenanting to Stand Possessed of Reversion of Term for Mortgagee.]—A lessee who mortgages his term with the reservation of a day, and covenants to stand possessed of the reversion for the mortgagee and his assigns, is not a trustee within the 13 & 14 Vict. c. 60. Roberts's Estate, In re, 1 W. R. 237.

Lunatic Trustee.]—A trustee of property held in trust for A. B. absolutely, having become lunatic, A. B. presented a petition asking that the property might be vested in himself:—Held, that such an order ought not to be made, but that a new trustee ought to be appointed, and the property vested in him. Holland, In re, Howarth's Trusts, In re, 50 L. J., Ch. 271; 16 Ch. D. 672; 44 L. T. 561; 29 W. R. 449.

Order vesting leaseholds in continuing and new trustees as joint tenants. Fisher's Will, In re, 1 W. R. 505.

Death of Trustee Intestate—Appointment by Court of New Trustee.]—The surviving trustee of leaseholds died intestate, and no administration had been taken out. The court appointed a new trustee, and made a vesting order in the absence of the owner of the fee. Matthew's Settlement, In re, 2 W. R. 85.

Semble, the court has no jurisdiction to make a vesting order, as to leaseholds, where the surviving trustee, who had died intestate, had not proved the will, or acted in the trusts, and no administration had been taken out to his estate. Robinson's Will, In re, 2 N. R. 504 ; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 885 ; 9 L. T. 12 ; 11 W. R. 1035.

—— Re-appointment of Trustees previously Appointed.]—When a sole trustee of leaseholds had died intestate, and had no legal personal representative, and new trustees had been duly appointed under the settlement, the court re-appointed the same two persons trustees, and made an order vesting the leaseholds in them. Dalgleish's Settlement, In re, 4 Ch. D. 143 ; 35 L. T. 829; 25 W. R. 122—C. A. Reversing 45 L. J., Ch. 68. But see Dewhurst's Trusts, In re, supra, col. 965.

New trustees had been appointed, under a power, of trust property, comprising freehold, copyhold, and leasehold estates, but the property remained vested in the representatives of a former trustee, who had died abroad. A petition was presented for a vesting order under s. 15 of the 13 & 14 Vict. c. 60 ; but the court made an order under s. 32, re-appointing the trustee who had been already appointed under the power, and ordered that the trust estates should vest in such trustees under s. 34. Mundel's Trusts, In re, 6 Jur. (N.S.) 880; 2 L. T. 653 ; 8 W. R. 688.

Upon an appointment of A. as a trustee under a settlement jointly with B., certain leaseholds were assigned to a provisional trustee, upon trust to re-assign the same to A. and B. No re-assignment was executed. The provisional trustee died intestate, and no legal representative could be found. Under s. 32 of the Trustee Act, 1850, A. was re-appointed a trustee of the settlement ; and, under s. 34, the leaseholds were vested in A. and B. jointly. Morris's Settlement, In re, 4 N. R. 480.

When a trustee of leaseholds has died intestate and has no legal personal representative, and a new trustee has been duly appointed in his place, the court will not re-appoint him trustee under the Trustee Act, 1850, s. 32, merely for the sake of making a vesting order under s. 34. Driver's Settlement, In re, L. R. 19 Eq. 352 ; 23 W. R. 587.

The court will, however, appoint an additional trustee under s. 32, and will thereupon make a vesting order under s. 34. Ib.

Agreement to grant Building Leases—Covenant for Quiet Enjoyment.]—The defendant agreed to grant to the plaintiff leases of houses built by the plaintiff on the defendant's land. Before leases were granted the defendant became of unsound mind, though he had not been so found by inquisition, nor had any committee of his estate been appointed. In an action for specific performance, the defendant offered to submit to a decree, and to have himself declared a trustee for the plaintiff under the Trustee Act, 1850, and to have a person appointed to execute the leases on his behalf, or to have the houses vested in the plaintiff on the terms of the agreement :—Held that the proposed order would vest a legal term in the plaintiff pursuant to the contract, but would not give him the benefit of the express covenant for quiet enjoyment. Cowper v. Harmer, 57 L. J., Ch., 460 ; 57 L. T. 714.

Leaseholds for Lives—Form of Vesting Order.]—In 1883 a lease for three lives of a certain manor was granted to A., B. and C., subject to the trusts declared by the will of a testator. C. survived his co-trustees A. and B., but afterwards died intestate as to the trust property. C. left a brother, D., who died intestate, leaving co-heiresses. A petition was presented for the appointment of new trustees of the lease and a vesting order. A question then arose as to the persons in whom the lease would be legally vested and the proper wording of the vesting order. It was sought to amend the petition by varying the proposed vesting order so as to vest the manor in the new trustees "for the same estate as C. would have had if he had been alive," and reference was made to the form in Seton (vol. 1, p. 539) :—Held, that no form ought to be adopted in which the heir was not named, except in cases where it was in fact inconvenient or impossible to identify the heir ; and that the court, on a broad view, ought to regard the fact that the estate might have been dealt with, since the death of the last surviving trustee, in such a way that the parties not before the court might be prejudiced by a vesting order in the form proposed. But held, that under the circumstances of the case and the court being satisfied that no parties could be prejudiced, the vesting order might be made in the form proposed. Sarum (Bishop), In re, 55 L. T. 313.

iv. Mortgages.

Mortgagor out of Jurisdiction.] — After a decree for foreclosure, the absconding mortgagor was declared a trustee and an order was made, under 13 & 14 Vict. c. 60, ss. 9, 43, vesting the mortgaged premises in the plaintiff, on non-payment of the principal, interest, and costs. Lechmere v. Clamp, 31 Beav. 578 ; 30 L. J., Ch. 651 ; 2 W. R. 860.

On making an order of foreclosure absolute, the court refused to add a declaration under the Trustee Act 1850, that the mortgagor, being out of the jurisdiction, is a trustee, in order to found upon it a subsequent application for a vesting order. Such a declaration can be obtained only on a separate application. Smith v. Boucher, 1 Sm. & G. 72 ; 16 Jur. 1154 ; 1 W. R. 51.

Leases were granted to A. B. for certain terms of years. He sub-demised to C. D. for the terms, less ten days. C. D. mortgaged to E. F. & Co., for securing money, and sub-demised for the last-mentioned terms, less one day, with a power of sale, and covenanted to assign the last day of each term to a purchaser. The mortgagees (E. F. & Co.) sold to G. H., and assigned the mortgage terms. G. H. then bought of A. B. the improved ground rents, and took an assignment of the leases granted to him. C. D., the mortgagor, being abroad, G. H. petitioned under the Trustee Act (13 & 14 Vict. c. 60), that the court would declare the last day of each of the terms, created by the underlease to him, vested in the petitioner : but the court, concurring in the opinion of one of the vice-chancellors, dismissed the petition. Propert's Purchase, In re, 22 L. J., Ch. 948 ; 1 W. R. 237.

Death of Mortgagor Intestate — Infant Heir — Equitable Mortgage.] — An equitable mortgage was created in 1886 by a deposit of title deeds accompanied by a memorandum, whereby it was agreed that the mortgagor would, when required, execute a legal mortgage to the mortgagees. The mortgagor died intestate and his heir-at-law was an infant:—Held, that a vesting order might be made under the Trustee Act, 1850, s. 7, vesting the legal estate in the mortgaged premises in the mortgagees subject to the heir-at-law's right to redeem. Jones and Co.'s Mortgage, In re, 59 L. T. 859.

Infant Devisee of Mortgagor.]—On a claim for foreclosure against the devisees of the mortgagor, one of whom was an infant, the infant did not appear, and the plaintiff obtained an order appointing the solicitor to the Fee Fund his guardian:—Held, on the hearing, that the plaintiff had a right to have the common decree of foreclosure, with a day for the infant to show cause, there being nothing in the Trustee Act to alter the rights of the infant. Newbury v. Marten, 15 Jur. 166.

In this case, and under the circumstances, the costs of the solicitor to the Fee Fund were ordered to be taxed and paid by the plaintiff, and added to the debt, as the solicitor only appeared for the convenience of the plaintiff. Ib.

Vesting order under s. 7 of the Trustee Act 1850, as to the equity of redemption in an infant, against whom, in a foreclosure suit, a decree for sale had been made, refused on the ground that a mortgagee had the legal estate, and that all equities were bound by the order for sale. Williams' Estate, In re, 5 De G. & Sm. 515; 21 L. J., Ch. 437.

In a foreclosure action, where the estate of the mortgagor was devised in trust for sale, and had become vested in an infant, who was one of the persons beneficially interested:—Held, that the decree should contain a direction that, in case the mortgagees were not redeemed within six months, the infant should be a trustee for them within the meaning of the Trustee Act, and the executrix of the mortgagor be ordered to convey the estate to the mortgagees on his behalf. Foster v. Parker, 8 Ch. D. 147.

Mortgagee—Heir Unknown.]—Under s. 19 of the Trustee Relief Act 1850, the court has jurisdiction, upon the petition of the personal representative of a mortgagee in fee, who has died intestate as to the mortgaged premises, and whose heir cannot be found or is unknown, to vest the mortgaged estate in such representative, subject to the equity of redemption, the mortgage debt remaining unpaid. Boden's Estate, In re, 1 De G. M. & G. 57; 9 Hare, 820; 21 L. J., Ch. 316; 16 Jur. 279. But see Meyrick's Estate, In re, 9 Hare, 116; 20 L. J., Ch. 336; 15 Jur. 505.

Where a mortgagee, with power of sale, and a trust to pay the residue to the mortgagor, took possession and so remained until his death, giving his estate generally to trustees, but left no heir-at-law, the court would not make a vesting order under ss. 9 or 10 of the 13 & 14 Vict. c. 60, but under s. 15. Keeler's Mortgage Trust, in re, 1 N. R. 44; 32 L. J., Ch. 101; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 95; 11 W. R. 62.

In consideration of money lent, real estate was conveyed to the lender, his heirs and assigns, upon trust, in case the principal money and interest should be re-paid by a given day, for the borrower, his heirs or assigns; but in case default should be made, then upon trust for sale, and the trusts of the purchase-money were declared to be for payment of the principal money, interest, and costs, and subject thereto for the borrower, "his executors, administrators, or assigns." Default having been made:—Held, that the trust of the surplus, being for the borrower, "his executors, administrators, or assigns," and not for him, "his heirs, or assigns," the deed operated to convert the property as between his real and personal representatives. It was therefore more than merely a security for money; more, that is, than a "mortgage," as defined by s. 2 of 13 & 14 Vict. c. 60; it was a deed of "trust" within the meaning of s. 15; and the lender having died intestate, and it being impossible to find the heir, the court had power to make a vesting order under that section. Underwood, In re, 3 K. & J. 745; 5 W. R. 866.

M., a mortgagee in fee, after directing payment of debts, &c., devised all her real and personal estate to B. upon certain trusts. M. was illegitimate, and had died without issue. The court made an order vesting the legal estate in the mortgaged premises in a purchaser, the money having been paid off. Minchin's Estate, In re, 2 W. R. 179.

—— Heir out of Jurisdiction.]—Vesting order made in the executors of a deceased mortgagee in fee, whose heir-at-law was residing out of the jurisdiction. Lea's Trust, In re, 6 W. R. 482.

When the personal representative of a mortgagee assigns the mortgage, the heir of the mortgagee being out of the jurisdiction, the assignee may, under s. 19 of 14 & 15 Vict. c. 60, obtain an order vesting the legal estate. The relief given by that section is not confined to the case of re-conveyance to the mortgagor. Quinlan, In re, 9 Ir. Ch. R. 306.

The court may, under s. 9 of the Trustee Act, make an order vesting in the executors of a deceased mortgagee in fee, who has died intestate as to trust estate, the legal estate outstanding in the heir-at-law out of the jurisdiction of the court, though the mortgagee had before her death been in the receipt of the rents and profits of the mortgaged property. Skitter's Mortgage Trusts, In re, 4 W. R. 791.

—— Infant Heir.]—A mortgagee in fee of lands of gavelkind tenure gave and devised all the residue of his estate, personal and real property, moneys, and securities, and all other effects, which should remain after paying his just debts, funeral and testamentary expenses, to his wife, for her own use and benefit:—Held, that in consequence of the devise by the will, no estate in the mortgage premises remained vested in the infant co-heirs in gavelkind of the mortgagee; and an order was therefore refused, upon a petition presented under the Trustee Act, 1850, praying an order vesting the infants' estate in the petitioner. Field's Mortgage, In re, 9 Hare, 414; 21 L. J., Ch. 175; 15 Jur. 1004.

Where the legal estate was outstanding in the infant heir of a deceased mortgagee, and the equity of redemption had been devised by the mortgagor to his three daughters charged with a pecuniary legacy, it was ordered, upon petition under the Trustee Act, 1850, that the legal estate should be vested in the daughters subject to the legacy. Elerthorpe, In re, 2 Eq. R. 1146; 18 Jur. 669.

One of the executors of a deceased mortgagee was a married woman, and the legal estate, as to which there was an intestacy, had descended to the infant heir-at-law of the mortgagee. To save the necessity of an acknowledgment under the Fines and Recoveries Act by the executrix upon a reconveyance to the mortgagor, order made upon petition under the Trustee Act 1850, vesting the legal estate in the executors, their heirs and assigns, to such uses, &c., as they should appoint; and in default of and until appointment, to the use of the executors in fee, subject to the equity of redemption therein. Powell, In re, 4 K. & J. 338; 6 W. R. 136.

Joint Mortgages—Two Coparceners One out of Jurisdiction.]—A legal estate vested in a mortgagee having descended on two coparceners, one of whom was out of the jurisdiction, an order was made vesting it in the other alone. Templer's Trusts, In re, 4 N. R. 494. But see Greenwood's Trusts, In re, supra, col. 970.

—— One Joint Mortgagee out of Jurisdiction.]—The court has no jurisdiction under the Trustee Act, 1850, to appoint a person to convey lands in mortgage for the estate therein of a joint mortgagee out of the jurisdiction of the court. Osborn's Mortgage Trusts, In re, 40 L. J., Ch. 706; L. R. 12 Eq. 392; 25 L. T. 151.

One of three joint mortgagees, who were trustees, went abroad, and in his absence the mortgage was paid off, and by a deed, to which he, with the other trustees, was named a party, but which he never executed, the debt and security, except the legal estate outstanding in him, were vested in the transferee of the mortgage. Afterwards a new trustee was by deed appointed a trustee in his place:—Held, that the neglect or refusal of the old trustee to convey the outstanding legal estate brought the case within the Trustee Acts, and that the court had jurisdiction under those acts to vest in the transferee the outstanding legal estate. Osborn's Mortgage Trusts, In re, supra, distinguished. Walker's Mortgage Trusts, In re, 3 Ch. D. 209.

Transfer of Mortgage Debt Ordered—Doubt as to Power of Trustees of Debt to Convey.]—The court has jurisdiction to make a vesting order of the legal estate in mortgaged lands, where a transfer of the mortgage debt had been ordered by the court, and it is doubtful whether the trustees of the debt have power to convey the legal estate. Hughes, In re, 2 H. & M. 695.

Trustee out of Jurisdiction—Mortgage Debt and Stock.]—The property comprised in a settlement consisted of money lent upon a mortgage of freeholds vested in the two surviving trustees, and of a sum of consols standing in their names. One of these two surviving trustees was a lunatic, and the other was resident out of the jurisdiction; and under a power in the settlement two persons were appointed new trustees in their places. Upon a petition by these two new trustees and by all the beneficiaries praying for an order reappointing the new trustees as trustees of the settlement, and vesting in them the trust property:—The court declined to reappoint the new trustees, but under s. 3 of the Trustee Act, 1850, vested the lands subject to the mortgage in the new trustees, and under s. 5 of the same act vested the mortgage debt and the right to call for a transfer of the consols in the trustee of sound mind resident out of the jurisdiction, and it appearing that he was out of the jurisdiction, vested the mortgage debt and the right to call for a transfer of the consols in the new trustees. Batho, In re, 58 L. J., Ch. 32; 39 Ch. D. 189; 59 L. T. 882—C. A. And see ante, col. 965.

—— Trustee of Mortgage Money.]—On the 1st July, 1881, a house was mortgaged to B. for 350*l*. On the 15th July, 1887, this mortgage was transferred to D. in consideration of 385*l*. This money was in fact found by S. and T., and the transfer was taken to D. as trustee for them, but there was no declaration of trust. Soon after the transfer D. was adjudicated bankrupt, and absconded. At the date of the petition he was out of the jurisdiction, and could not be found. The mortgagor and S. and T. presented a petition under the Trustee Act, 1850, for an order vesting D.'s estate in S. and T. D.'s trustee in bankruptcy admitted that he took no beneficial interest:—Held, that the court had jurisdiction to make the vesting order. Barber's Mortgage Trusts, In re, 58 L. T. 303.

—— New Trustee Appointed out of Court.]—Where one of two trustees resides permanently out of the jurisdiction, and a new trustee has been appointed out of court in his stead, by virtue of a power contained in the instrument creating the trust, the court has power, under s. 10 of the Trustee Act, 1850, to make an order vesting the trust property, consisting of money on mortgage, in trustees appointed out of court. O'Gorman's Trust, In re, 25 L. R., Ir. 93.

v. Stock and Choses in Action.

Refusal by Trustees to Transfer.]—The court has jurisdiction, under s. 23 of the Trustee Act, 1850, and having reference to the interpretation clause (s. 2) of the act, to make an order vesting trust property in new trustees, where two or more present trustees improperly refuse to transfer it. Hyatt's Trusts, In re, 51 L. J., Ch. 742; 21 Ch. D. 846.

—— Stock.]—The surviving trustee of a sum of stock neglected, for twenty-eight days after a request in writing had been made to him by persons who had been duly appointed new trustees, to transfer the stock to them. The court held, that they were persons absolutely entitled to the stock, within the meaning of the Trustee Act, 1850, and ordered the stock to be transferred to them. Russell's Trust, In re, 1 Sim. (N.S.) 404; 20 L. J., Ch. 196; 15 Jur. 100.

Stock was standing in the names of A. and B. upon trust for C. for life, with remainders over. By an order made in a cause instituted by C. against A. and B., with respect to the stock, it was ordered that A. and B. should transfer the stock to the credit of the cause. A. refused to make the transfer. A petition was presented by C. under the Trustee Act, 1850, and in that cause, praying that the right to transfer the stock might be vested in B. alone:—Held, that the court had not jurisdiction to make the order. Mackenzie v. Mackenzie, 5 De G. & Sm. 338; 21 L. J., Ch. 385; 16 Jur. 723.

The 13 & 14 Vict. c. 60, gives power to the court to make a vesting order in cases where a sole trustee, or one or two or more trustees of stock, shall refuse to transfer the same according to the direction of the person absolutely entitled. Where there were two trustees, and both refused to transfer:—Held, that the Act did not apply. Spawforth's Settlement, In re, 10 L. T. 641; 12 W. R. 978.

On the neglect of old trustees to transfer stock to new trustees appointed by the court, the court will upon motion, vest the right to transfer stock in the new trustees, and that whether the order upon the old trustees was made in a cause or upon petition. Holbrook's Will, In re, 29 L. J., Ch. 200 ; 1 L. T. 18 ; 8 W. R. 39.

On the refusal of a trustee to comply with an order directing the assignment of trust property, the court, after a lapse of twenty-eight days, and on an ex parte application, made an order vesting the property in the person entitled to it. Knight v. Knight, 14 L. T. 161.

—— Disobedience to Order—Attachment.]—The case of a trustee refusing to obey the order of the court is not a case provided for by the Trustee Act, 1850, but it is a case within the 1 Will. 4, c. 36, s. 15, the 15th sub-division ; and any proceeding to obtain the transfer should be taken under that act. Mackenzie v. Mackenzie, supra.

By an order expressed to be made in a cause and in the matter of the Trustee Act, 1850, a defendant was directed to transfer stock. Upon an affidavit of service of this order, which was intituled in the cause only, a writ of attachment for disobedience was issued, on which the defendant was in custody. The writ was discharged for irregularity on account of a variance, but the court declined to give the defendant costs. Ib.

When a trustee is ordered to transfer a fund of consols admitted to be due from him and subsequently default is made, a writ of attachment will issue. Digby v. Turner, 28 L. T. 296 ; 21 W. R. 471.

—— Dividends.]—The person entitled for life to the dividends of stock held in trust requested, in writing, two executors of a sole deceased trustee, in whose name the stock was standing in the bank-book, to receive the dividends, and they made default for twenty-eight days in doing so. Upon the petition of the person entitled for life to the dividends, the court declared that the right to receive the dividends which accrued due prior to such request was vested in the petitioner ; but held, that it had no authority to make any order as to any dividends accrued, or to accrue, subsequent to the date of the request. Hartnall's Trusts, In re, Hodges, Ex parte, 5 De G. & Sm. 111 ; 21 L. J., Ch. 384 ; 16 Jur. 33.

—— Shares.]—One of the three executors of a surviving trustee of canal shares was of unsound mind, and the other two, when applied to by the persons absolutely entitled to the shares, declined to do anything :—Held, that an order could be made vesting the right to transfer the shares in the persons beneficially entitled. White, In re, L. R. 5 Ch. 698.

One of the executors of the surviving trustee of a settlement was a lunatic. The other two executors refused to transfer some shares included in the settlement to the person absolutely entitled to them :—Held, that a vesting order could not be made under the Trustee Act, 1850, s. 24, but that a petition in lunacy must be presented. Nicholl, In re, 22 L. T. 323 ; 18 W. R. 443.

A trustee having refused to convey certain shares to new trustees duly appointed, a notice was served upon him under s. 24 of the Trustee Act, 1850, and on a petition being afterwards presented which was not served on the recusant trustee, the court made a vesting order. Baxter's Will, In re, 2 Sm. & G. (App.) v.

Trustee out of Jurisdiction or Uncertain—Stock.]—Husband of executrix out of the jurisdiction held to be a trustee within the Trustee Act, 1850, s. 22. Bradshaw, Ex parte, Dennison's Trust, In re, 2 De G. M. & G. 900 ; 22 L. J., Ch. 180.

Where a trustee is out of the jurisdiction, and it is uncertain whether he is living or dead, no order can be made under the latter part of s. 22, of the Trustee Act, 1850, in the absence of evidence proving him to be a sole trustee. Randall's Trust or Will, In re, 1 Drew. 401 ; 1 W. R. 207.

Stock was standing in the names of G. and H., trustees for a lunatic. G. died in 1864, and E. was his executor, H. having died long previously, but no such proof of his death as the bank would act upon could be furnished. An order was made under s. 22 of the Trustee Act, 1850, appointing the officer of the bank to concur with E. in transferring the stock into court :—Held, that such order could not be made on the petition of the committee alone. Bourne, In re, 2 De G. J. & S. 426.

—— Shares and Dividends.]—A., the owner of shares in a certain bank, wrote a letter from Calcutta to the manager in England, requesting him to deliver over the shares to the manager of another bank to which A. was indebted, and to pay all dividends on the shares to, and to sell them at, the order of this last-mentioned bank. A. being still in India, the shares were sold under the authority of this letter, and the purchaser applied for an order under the Trustee Act, 1850, to vest the shares and dividends in B., for the purpose of enabling the purchaser to obtain a transfer of the said shares and dividends from B. under the authority of the act. On proof of the signature of A. to the letter, of the sale, and that the debt had ever since existed and was still due, the order was made. Angelo, In re, 5 De G. & Sm. 278 ; 16 Jur. 831.

—— Future Dividends.]—The 13 & 14 Vict. c. 60, s. 22, authorises an order vesting the right to receive future dividends. Peyton's Settlement, In re, 2 De G. & J. 290 ; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 469 ; 1 L. T. 127 ; 6 W. R. 453.

One of four trustees of stock being out of the jurisdiction, an order was made under the 13 & 14 Vict. c. 60, s. 22, vesting the right to receive the dividends in the other three (25 Beav. 317 ; 27 L. J., Ch. 476); but was, on appeal by the bank, varied by restricting it to the dividends to accrue due during the joint lives of the three. Ib.

No Legal Personal Representative of Surviving Trustee.]—Stock was vested in the names of three trustees, in trust for the benefit of a lunatic for life, and, after her decease, for her children ; the last surviving trustee having died, his widow and executrix refused to prove his will. The court, upon petition, appointed new trustees, and directed that they should obtain a limited administration to the last surviving trustee for the purpose of procuring a transfer of the stock to themselves. Needham, In re, 1 Jo. & Lat. 34 ; 6 Ir. Eq. R. 557.

The 13 & 14 Vict. c. 60, held to apply to a case in which the executor of a surviving trustee had not proved the will, and had neglected to transfer stock on the requisitions of new trustees appointed out of court. Ellis' Settlement, In re, 24 Beav. 426.

The court directed the circumstances, bringing the case within the Trustee Act, to be inserted in an order vesting the right to transfer stock. Ib.

When the surviving trustee of a fund, standing in the names of trustees in the books of the Bank of England, died leaving no personal representative, the court, upon a petition by the person beneficially entitled, appointed him trustee of the fund, and ordered it to be transferred into his name. Dickson or Dixon, In re, 27 L. T. 671; 21 W. R. 220.

When the legal personal representative of the last surviving trustee of a settlement was dead, the court made an order vesting stock standing in the name of the last surviving trustee in the persons entitled thereto. Hilliard's Settlement Trust, In re, 42 L. T. 79.

The survivor of two trustees of stock under a will having died leaving no legal personal representative, the cestuis que trust and two new trustees, who had been appointed under a power in the will, presented a petition asking that the right to transfer the stock—which was then standing in the names of the deceased trustees—might vest in the new trustees, under s. 25 of the Trustee Act, 1850. The court made the order—considering itself bound by Dalgleish's Settlement, In re, supra, col. 971—but without re-appointing the new trustees. Crowe's Trusts, In re, 14 Ch. D. 304. Order corrected, Id. 610; 42 L. T. 822; 28 W. R. 885.

Where all the trustees of the stock had died, and there was no personal representative of the survivor, and new trustees had been appointed under a power in the settlement, the court, under s. 32 of the Trustee Act, 1850, re-appointed the same persons trustees, and under s. 35 made an order vesting in them the right to call for the transfer of the stock the subject of the trusts. M'Carthy, In re, 1 L. R., Ir. 16.

Personal Representative of Sole Trustee out of Jurisdiction.]—Under s. 25 of the Trustee Act, 1850, the court has power to make a vesting order in relation to stock standing in the sole name of a domiciled Scotchman whose executor has proved his will in Scotland, but has not proved it in England, and who is resident in Scotland. Trubee's Trusts, In re, 61 L. J., Ch. 715; [1892] 3 Ch. 55; 67 L. T. 161; 40 W. R. 552.

Infant Trustee — Stock — Maintenance — Appointment of Guardian.] — Under the will of her father (a domiciled Scotchman, who made his will in the Scotch form), an infant was entitled to a legacy. The will contained no express trust for maintenance. The court of session in Scotland appointed a curator bonis to the infant, who received the legacy, and invested it in the purchase of some New Zealand stock, in the sole name of the infant. This stock was transferable at the Bank of England. It was the only property of the infant, and the income derived from it was not sufficient to provide for her maintenance and education. The court of session authorised the curator bonis to advance from time to time sums out of capital, not exceeding in all 100*l.*, for the purpose of supplementing the income of the infant, and enabling her to be placed at a suitable school. The curator bonis, as next friend, presented a petition, asking that the right to transfer 100*l.* of the New Zealand stock might vest in him, and that he might be at liberty to sell and transfer the same, and to apply the proceeds in or towards the maintenance or education of the infant; that the dividends which had accrued, and which might, during the minority of the infant, accrue on the stock, or on the residue thereof after the transfer, might be paid to him, he undertaking to apply them in or towards the maintenance or education of the infant; and that he might be appointed guardian:—Held, that the infant was a "trustee" of the stock, within the meaning of the Trustee Acts, and an order was made vesting the right to transfer 100*l.* of the stock in the next friend (who was appointed guardian to the infant), and liberty was given to him to sell and transfer the same, and to apply the proceeds in or towards the maintenance or education of the infant; and that the dividends, accrued and to accrue during the minority of the infant, should be paid to the guardian, he undertaking to apply them in or towards her maintenance or education. Gardner v. Cowles, infra, followed. Findlay, In re, 55 L. J., Ch. 395; 32 Ch. D. 221, 641.

—— Infants entitled to Stock—Stock standing in Names of Infants and Others.]—Infants were entitled under a will to certain legacies, which had been invested in consols in the names of the executor and executrix, and of the infant in each case entitled thereto:—Held, that the court would, under s. 3 of the Trustee Extension Act, 1852, made an order vesting in the executor and executrix the right to transfer the stock and receive the dividends accrued prior to the transfer. Barnett, In re. Foster v. Barnett, 61 L. T. 676.

The sole trustee of money for A. and B. invested it in stock in the joint names of himself and B. (an infant); after the death of the trustee and A., the infant was held to be a trustee within the 13 & 14 Vict. c. 60, and 15 & 16 Vict. c. 55, s. 3, and a vesting order was made. Sanders v. Homer, 25 Beav. 467; 6 W. R. 476.

Where an investment in consols has been made by executors, by mistake, in the names of infants, for the purposes of re-investment, the infants must be considered as trustees for the executors, and a declaration will be made by the court to that effect. Rives v. Rives, 14 L. T. 351.

Money payable under a will to an infant at twenty one, with maintenance and education, out of the income in the meantime, was invested in stock in the joint names of the executors and the infant. The executors having died:—Held, that the infant was a trustee of the stock within the meaning of the trustee acts. Gardner v. Cowles, 3 Ch. D. 304; 24 W. R. 920.

An infant declared a trustee of stock standing in his own name, and to which he was absolutely entitled, in order to obtain payment of the dividends to his guardians. Westwood, In re, 6 N. R. 61.

Where stock to which an infant was beneficially entitled had been invested in the joint names of himself and another person:—Held, that the court had jurisdiction under s. 3 of the Trustee Extension Act, 1852, to make an order vesting in such other person the right to transfer such stock. Harwood, In re, 51 L. J., Ch. 578; 20 Ch. D. 536; 30 W. R. 595.

—— Infant Out of the Jurisdiction.] — Before the passing of the Trustee Extension Act (15 & 16 Vict. c. 55) the court had no authority to make a vesting order with regard to stock held by an infant sole trustee who was out of the jurisdiction of the court. Cramer v. Cramer, 5 De G. & Sm. 312 ; 16 Jur. 831.

An infant trustee of stock in the jurisdiction not being, within the Trustee Act, 1850, s. 22, an infant and sole trustee out of the jurisdiction, is not a sole trustee of stock out of the jurisdiction within the meaning of s. 22. Ib.

Vesting Right to Stock or Choses in Action in Beneficiaries.] — A surviving trustee of stock died leaving no personal representative. The person beneficially entitled was appointed trustee of the fund, which was ordered to be transferred into his name. Dickson or Dixon, In re, 27 L. T. 671 ; 21 W. R. 220.

Where a chose in action is vested in two trustees within the jurisdiction, the court will not make an order vesting it in the cestuis que trust only. Semble, the same rule applies to the case of an order directing the transfer of shares in a bank. Brass's Trusts, In re, 4 W. R. 764.

A sum of 500*l.* stood settled on the trusts of a marriage settlement. The trustees were dead ; there were no children ; the wife was fifty-eight years old, and had assigned all her interest to her husband, who was one of the cestuis que trust. On the petition of husband and wife, the court ordered that the right to transfer might vest in the husband, and that he might transfer to himself. Ryan, In re, 9 W. R. 137.

Trustee out of Jurisdiction.]—There being a direction in a will to sell real estate without naming the person to sell, and no devise of the real estate, and it not being clear that there was a sufficient legal power of sale (implied) in the executor, or a sufficient charge of debts to enable him to convey the legal estate to a purchaser, the court, at the hearing, directed a sale, declaring the heir-at-law, who was out of the jurisdiction, a trustee within the meaning of the 13 & 14 Vict. c. 60, and made a vesting order under s. 9. Hooper v. Strutton, 12 W. R. 367.

When two persons, of whom both were legally entitled as coparceners to copyholds, but one only had any beneficial interest therein, were admitted as tenants in common, and the lord afterwards enfranchised to both, their heirs and assigns, the other was held to be "solely seised upon trust" within the meaning of s. 9 of the Trustee Act, 1850. M'Murray v. Spicer, 37 L. J., Ch. 505 ; L. R. 5 Eq. 527 ; 18 L. T. 116 ; 16 W. R. 332. But see Greenwood's Trusts, In re, supra, col. 970.

After a bankruptcy, and the appointment of assignees, the proceedings were suspended under the Bankruptcy Act, 1861, s. 110, reserving the rights and jurisdiction of the assignees ; and the court held, that one of the assignees who had gone abroad was a trustee within the meaning of the Trustee Act, 1850. Joyce's Estate, In re, L. R. 2 Eq. 576.

Upon the sale of an estate which stood limited to the ordinary uses to bar dower, but over which the tenant for life was not entitled to a power, the objection was taken by the purchaser that the dower trustee, who was then in Australia, was a necessary party to the conveyance :—Held, on a bill for specific performance, filed by the vendor, that the purchaser was entitled to such estate as was then vested in the dower trustee. Specific performance was decreed, and a vesting order made under the Trustee Act, 1850. Collard v. Roe, 4 De G. & J. 525 ; 27 L. J., Ch. 295 ; 1 L. T. 148 ; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 431 ; 6 W. R. 348.

Absent Trustee (Trustee Act, 1850, s. 49).]—The court directed a cause to be certified as fit for hearing, although one of the defendants, a trustee, who could not be found, had not entered an appearance. Westhead v. Sale, 3 Jur. (N.S.) 1209 ; 6 W. R. 52.

The court ordered a cause to be set down for hearing, notwithstanding one of the defendants, who was a trustee, had not entered an appearance. Burrell v. Maxwell, 25 L. T. 655.

Vendor—Heir or Devisee.]—Two partners in a brewery, part of the property of which consisted of freehold and copyhold estates, covenanted that the survivor should have the option of purchasing the share of the deceased partner in the property of the partnership at a valuation ; and the survivor accordingly exercised such option, and paid to the executors of the said partner the amount at which his share was valued. The share of the deceased partner and his legal estate, in part of the freehold and copyhold estates of the partnership descended or became vested in his infant heir ; but the court refused, upon petition or motion under the Trustee Act, 1850, without suit, to declare the infant heir a trustee for the surviving partner. Burt, In re, 9 Hare, 289 ; 22 L. J., Ch. 153.

The infant heir of an intestate who had died after contracting to sell his real estate is not a trustee within the meaning of the Trustee Act, 1850, s. 29 (Trustee Act Extension, s. 1) until the constructive trust shall have been declared by a decree of the court. Carpenter, In re, Kay, 418.

Where a testator had, in his lifetime, agreed to give an option to his lessee to purchase the fee, and the lessee did not declare for the option until after the testator's decease, an infant tenant in tail of the legal estate under the will is not a trustee for the lessee desirous of purchasing within the meaning of the Trustee Act, 1850 ; but a claim for specific performance was directed to be filed. Weeding, In re, 4 Jur. (N.S.) 707.

Where a vendor, after conveying the equitable estate, became seised of the legal estate, and died intestate, and without an heir :—Held, that he was a trustee within the 13 & 14 Vict. c. 60. Wilkinson's Trust, In re, 10 Jur. (N.S.) 716 ; 10 L. T. 89 ; 12 W. R. 522.

Where a person seised in fee of land, which a railway company was empowered to take compulsorily, entered into a voluntary agreement for sale with the company, and after the purchase-money had been paid, and the company had taken possession, and had accepted the title, the vendor died intestate, leaving an infant heir-at-law :—Held, that the heir-at-law was a trustee within the Trustee Act, 1850, and that an order might be made for a conveyance of the legal estate without a bill filed. Russell's Estate, In re, 35 L. J., Ch. 461 ; 12 Jur. (N.S.) 224.

When the owner of lands agrees to sell to a railway company land which it has power to take for the purposes of its undertaking, and afterwards dies, having devised his real estate to an infant, the infant devisee is a trustee within the meaning of the Trustee Act, 1850, and a vesting order may be made on a petition under that act. Lowry's Trusts, In re, 42 L. J., Ch. 509 ; L. R. 15 Eq. 78 ; 21 W. R. 428.

In such a case service of the petition on the infant is necessary. Ib.

A., without devising lands to his executors, L. & G., directs them to sell the lands and to apply the money. A., after the date of his will, contracts to sell the land to X., who objects to the title of the executors, and requires the heirs of A. to join in the conveyance. The court made an order vesting the estate which was in A.'s heirs in the executors of his will. Badcock's Trusts, In re, 2 W. R. 386.

Semble, where two executors are appointed and only one proves, the court will not make a vesting order in favour of the one who proves, unless the other disclaims. Ib.

—— Contract for Sale of Realty—Death of Vendor before Completion.]—By an order under the Lunacy Regulation Act, 1862, the guardians of the poor of N. were authorised to sell a freehold belonging to A. C., a person of unsound mind, and to receive the purchase-money and execute a conveyance. The property was sold in May, 1885, the sale to be completed in November. An abstract of title was delivered, and no objection was taken to the title. On the 28th of June A. C. died. The guardians now presented a petition, asking that A. C. might be declared a trustee within the meaning of the Trustee Act, 1850, and that their clerk might be appointed a trustee of the property and the estate vested in him in trust to complete the sale:—Held, that A. C. could not be held a trustee within the meaning of the Trustee Act, 1850, and that the order could not be made. Carpenter, In re, supra, approved. Colling, In re, 55 L. J., Ch. 486 ; 32 Ch. D. 333 ; 54 L. T. 809 ; 34 W. R. 464—C. A.

In Case of Copyholds.]—See supra, col. 967.

vii. Other Cases.

On Appointment of New Trustees where Legal Estate already in them.]—A vesting order made on the appointment of new trustees, two of whom were possessed of the legal estate in the trust property under a previous attempted appointment of them as new trustees, the will creating the trust containing no power to appoint new trustees. Manning's Trusts, In re, Kay (App.) xxviii. ; 2 Eq. R. 221 ; 2 W. R. 289.

Devise to Two Trustees, One being an Infant.]—A testator having devised to two trustees upon trust to sell, and one of the trustees named being an infant, the court declined to make an order vesting the whole estate in the other trustee, being adult, but appointed a person to be trustee in the room of the infant, and vested the whole estate in such new trustee with the original adult trustee jointly. Porter's Trusts, In re, 25 L. J., Ch. 482 ; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 349 ; 4 W. R. 217.

Husband and Wife.]—A married woman who was the legal representative of a testator, in exercise of a power reserved to her by her marriage settlement, made her will and appointed her husband executor. The husband proved the will, and also obtained letters of administration to all other his wife's personal estate. He also applied for supplemental letters of administration, to enable him to continue the chain of representation to the testator ; but they were refused by the court of probate. The court made an order, appointing the husband trustee of the trust funds which were standing in the testator's name, and vesting in him the right to transfer them. Herbert's Will, In re, 8 W. R. 272.

Disputed Question of Title.]—The court has no jurisdiction on a petition presented under the Trustee Acts to decide on a disputed question of title. Draper's Settlement, In re, 9 W. R. 805.

—— Land Bought by Father in Name of Son.]—Lands bought by a father in the name of his son held, under the circumstances of the case, not to amount to an advancement ; but the lord chancellor declined to make an order to that effect on the petition of the father, though the petition was founded on the certificate of the master under s. 38 of the Trustee Act, 1850. Collinson v. Collinson, 3 De G. M. & G. 409.

Order to Defeat Extortion on the part of Trustee.]—The court will make a vesting order under 15 & 16 Vict. c. 55, s. 2, to defeat an attempt at extortion on the part of a trustee. O'Donnell, In re, 19 W. R. 522.

Investment by Married Woman in Names of Son and Daughter.]—A married woman living separate from her husband invested, in the names of her son and daughter, moneys arising from savings of her separate estate. The mother appointed her daughter her executrix. The son having become lunatic, a transfer to the daughter as executrix was ordered on petition without bill. De Visme, In re, 2 De G. J. & S. 17 ; 33 L. J., Ch. 332 ; 9 L. T. 668 ; 12 W. R. 140.

Trustee and Executor Proving Will only.]—When a trustee and executor has proved the will only, and done no other act, and taken no notice of applications, nor appeared on a petition served upon him, the court will appoint another trustee in his room, and make a vesting order under the Trustee Act, 1850. Byrne, In re, 18 L. T. 631.

Where Trustees have a mere Power and no Legal Estate.]—The court of chancery has not authority, under the Trustee Acts of 1850 and 1852, to make a vesting order of real estate in proposed trustees, where the testator by his will directed his "executors" to sell the estate after the death of one of them, who was also tenant for life ; the surviving executor being also a person of unsound mind, not found so by inquisition. Porter's Will, In re, Franklin, Ex parte, 3 Eq. R. 719 ; 3 W. R. 583. And see Badcock's Trusts, In re, supra.

The power of appointing new trustees conferred by the 13 & 14 Vict. c. 60, s. 32, applies to the simple office of trustee, and it is not necessary to the exercise thereof that any estate or property should be vested in the trustee. Boyce, In re, 4 De G. & Sm. 205 ; 3 N. R. 396 ; 33 L. J., Ch. 390 ; 10 Jur. (N.S.) 138 ; 9 L. T. 670 ; 12 W. R. 359.

c. Form of Vesting Order.

Stock—Transfer into Names of Trustees.]—An order under s. 35 of the Trustee Act, 1893, vesting stock in trustees, should direct the trustees to transfer the stock into their own names. Order in Gregson, In re, infra, followed. Price, In re, 8 R. 621.

—— Appointment of New Trustees—In an order made under s. 35 of the Trustee Act, 1850, and s. 6 of the Trustee Extension Act. 1852, vesting the "right to call for a transfer of and to transfer" stock in new trustees, it is not obligatory to insert the name of any transferee in the order, nor is there any general rule that the words "to any purchaser or purchasers" should be added; the insertion or omission of these words is a matter of discretion for the judge who makes the order. Peacock, In re, infra, explained. The word "stock," as defined in s. 2 of the Trustee Act, 1850, comprises shares in a limited company not fully paid up. New Zealand Trust and Loan Co., In re, 62 L. J., Ch. 262; [1893] 1 Ch. 403; 2 R. 151; 68 L. T. 593; 41 W. R. 457—C. A.

—— Appointment of Trustee of Unsound Mind.]—Upon the appointment of new trustees by the court the common form of vesting order in the case of government stock is to be adhered to, which vests in the trustees the right to call for the transfer of the same, and to receive the dividends due and to accrue due thereon, and which further directs the trustees to transfer the same "into their own names," but if in any particular case a judge thinks it proper to depart from the usual form, and to make a special order, it is perfectly competent for him to do so. New Zealand Trust and Loan Co., In re, supra, explained. Gregson, In re, 62 L. J., Ch. 764; [1893] 3 Ch. 233; 2 R. 513; 69 L. T. 73; 41 W. R. 641—C. A.

Form of order on appointment of new trustees where the trust funds are invested on unauthorised securities and it is desired not to transfer them into the names of new trustees, but to sell them and re-invest the funds in accordance with the trusts of the settlement. Peacock, In re, 49 L. J., Ch. 228; 14 Ch. D. 212; 43 L. T. 99; 28 W. R. 801.

Consols.]—On the appointment of new trustees of a fund of consols, the proper order is to direct the new trustees to transfer the consols into their own names. Joliffe's Trusts, In re, 3 R. 718; 68 L. T. 747.

Contents of Order.]—Vesting order prefaced with a statement that A. B. was a trustee within the meaning of the Trustee Act, 1850, and died without an heir. Hughes v. Wells, 2 W. R. 575.

A vesting order should contain some description of the property intended to be comprised in it. Ord's Trust, In re, 3 W. R. 386.

Where an order is made under the Trustee Acts, subject to the production of evidence to the registrar, the order will bear date on or after the day of the production of such evidence. Havelock, In re, 11 Jur. (N.S.) 906; 14 W. R. 174.

The court directed the circumstances bringing a case within the Trustee Act, 1850, to be inserted in an order vesting the right to transfer stock. Ellis, In re, 24 Beav. 426.

If the Bank of England is required to act upon an order made in pursuance of the 13 & 14 Vict. c. 60, and 15 & 16 Vict. c. 55, the circumstances bringing the case within the acts must appear upon the order of the court. Mainwaring, In re, 26 Beav. 172; 28 L. J., Ch. 97; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 52.

Bank of England—In Chambers—Right to Transfer Stock.]—On a petition for the appointment of new trustees and a vesting order, an order was made in court on the 28th of June, 1884, that two or more proper persons should be appointed trustees, and that an inquiry should be made of what the trust funds consisted; and the parties were to be at liberty to apply in chambers for an order to vest the trust property in the new trustees when appointed. On the 22nd of July, before any certificate as to the trust funds had been made, an order was made in chambers appointing new trustees, and directing that the right to call for a transfer of, and to transfer into their own names, certain sums of stock specified in the order "may" vest in the new trustees. This order mentioned, but did not recite, the order of the 28th of June. The Bank of England refused to act on it, and Bacon, V.-C., on the 28th of November, made an order directing them to do so. The bank appealed:—Held, that the matter having been properly brought before the court on petition, the judge had power, under the provisions of the Masters Abolition Act, 1852 (15 & 16 Vict. c. 80), to dispose in chambers of such parts of the matters brought before him on the petition as he thought could be more conveniently disposed of in chambers than in court, and that there was therefore jurisdiction to make the order of the 22nd of July. Frodsham v. Frodsham, infra, distinguished. Tweedy, In re, 54 L. J., Ch. 331; 28 Ch. D. 529; 52 L. T. 65; 33 W. R. 313—C. A.

But held, that the order was so irregular in form that the bank were justified in declining to act upon it, they being entitled to require a vesting order to be in such form as to show that the statutory requirements have been satisfied. Statement of the recitals which ought to be contained in a vesting order made in chambers under the Trustee Act. Ib.

In an action commenced by writ for the administration of a testator's estate, an order for accounts was made in chambers under Ord. XV. (Judicature Act). Subsequently an order was made in chambers directing the plaintiff and defendant to transfer a sum of stock into court. The defendant could not be found, and an order was made in chambers vesting the right to transfer the stock in the plaintiff, and directing him to transfer it into court. The bank objecting to act on this order, on the ground of its having been made in chambers, a motion was made by arrangement for an order directing the bank to act upon it:—Held, by Jessel, M.R., that the judge had jurisdiction to make the order on summons in chambers, and that the bank ought to be ordered to act upon it. Frodsham v. Frodsham, 50 L. J., Ch. 233; 15 Ch. D. 317; 43 L. T. 558; 29 W. R. 165.

Held, by the court of appeal, that, having regard to the 18 & 19 Vict. c. 134, s. 16, Cons. Ord. XXXV. r. 1, and the course of practice, there was so much doubt as to the jurisdiction as to render it unsafe to make such a vesting order in chambers, and that the order directing the bank to act upon it ought to be discharged. Ib.

An order discharged, on the objection of the bank as being unauthorised by the Trustee Act, 1850; and another order substituted under the 1 Will. 4, c. 65, s. 32. It is the duty of the Bank of England to bring an erroneous order, under which it is asked to act, under the notice of the court. Westwood, In re, 6 N. R. 316.

It is of great importance to have the books of the Bank of England clear; and upon the construction of an act directing a transfer of stock, if there is room for argument, the strict interpretation of the act must be followed. Therefore, under the Trustee Act, 1850, which authorises the court to vest in new trustees the right to call for a transfer of stock, forming part of the trust estate:—Held, before the Trustee Extension Act, s. 6, passed, that the order ought to be in that form, and should not purport to vest in the new trustees the right to the stock; and that the bank was not bound to permit the new trustees to make a transfer into their names. Smyth's Settlement, In re, 4 De G. & Sm. 499; 20 L. J., Ch. 255; 15 Jur. 644.

Stock was standing in the name of a person of unsound mind, part of the stock being his own beneficially, and part of it being vested in him as trustee. The court had made an order appointing new trustees, and vesting in them the right to call for a transfer of the trust stock, and to receive the arrears of dividends. It was found that an order in this form could not be acted on as to the arrears of dividend, since the bank could not pay arrears on part of a sum. The court therefore varied the order, so as to enable the new trustees to receive the past dividends on the whole stock, and to retain, for the purposes of the trust, that portion which had accrued due in respect of the trust stock. Stewart, In re, 2 De G. F. & J. 1; 8 W. R. 425.

d. Practice as to Vesting Order.

i. In general.

Form and Contents of Petition.]—A petition presented under the Trustee Act should mention the sections under which it is proposed that the order asked for should be made. Hall's Settlement Trusts, In re, 58 L. T. 76.

Petitions under the trustee acts should contain a statement indicating the particular sections of the acts under which the court is asked to make an order. Moss's Trusts, In re, 57 L. J., Ch. 423; 37 Ch. D. 513; 58 L. T. 468; 36 W. R. 316.

When a purchaser presented a petition for a vesting order intituled in the cause only, the petition was ordered to be amended by intituling it under the Trustee Act 1850 (13 & 14 Vict. c. 60, s. 43). Gough v. Bage, 25 L. T. 738.

Originating Summons—Jurisdiction.]—An originating summons having been issued under Ord. LV. r. 13a, for the appointment of a new trustee and vesting order:—Held, that this was a "matter" within s. 43 of the Trustee Act, 1850; and that the court had power to make an order vesting the trust property in the new trustee, with the right to call for a transfer of stock in the Bank of England. Jones, In re, 59 L. J., Ch. 157; 61 L. T. 554; 38 W. R. 203.

The court has no jurisdiction, upon an originating summons in chambers, to make an order appointing new trustees, and vesting in them the trust estate. Gill, In re, Smith v. Gill, 53 L. T. 623; 34 W. R. 134.

As to making vesting order on summons in chambers; see Tweedy, In re, and Frodsham v. Frodsham, supra, col. 985.

Slip—Second Petition—Further Vesting Order.]—An order was made, upon a petition, appointing new trustees of the will of a testator, and vesting in them the property mentioned in the petition, subject to the trusts of the will. After the order had been drawn up, passed, and entered, it was discovered that one part of the trust property had been inadvertently omitted in the order, and another part, by an accident, had not been mentioned in the petition. The new trustees were not able, therefore, to obtain a transfer of such property into their own names. A second petition was accordingly presented by the same persons, who were the petitioners in the first petition. Sections 22 and 35 of the Trustee Relief Act were referred to as giving jurisdiction to the court to make a further order. The court made an order vesting in the new trustees all the property which had been omitted, and directing the costs of the application to be paid out of the trust estate. Hopper's Trusts, In re, 54 L. T. 267; 34 W. R. 392.

—— Re-hearing.]—By an order made under the 13 & 14 Vict. c. 60, real estate was inadvertently vested in an alien. The court declined varying the order, by inserting the name of a natural-born subject, without the consent of the crown; but the order was made upon a re-hearing. Giraud, In re, 2 N. R. 9; 32 Beav. 385; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 862; 11 W. R. 607.

Supplemental Order.]—An order was made on a petition under the Trustee Act, 1850, appointing three new trustees, and vesting property in them jointly with a fourth surviving trustee, but subject to the production of certain evidence. Before this evidence could be obtained the fourth trustee died. Upon motion that the order might be dated on the day it was pronounced:—Held, that the proper course was to make a supplemental order on the petition. Havelock, In re, 11 Jur. (N.S.) 906; 13 L. T. 272; 14 W. R. 174.

Jurisdiction without Petition.]—An order under the Trustee Act, 1850, may be made in a cause without a petition presented in the act. Wood v. Beetlestone, 1 K. & J. 213; 3 Eq. R. 238.

Upon a petition for the reconveyance of mortgaged premises, the equity of redemption of which was in trustees, upon the question whether some of several cestuis que trust sufficiently represented the parties beneficially interested under the Trustee Act, 1850:—Held, that irrespective of that act, the court has power to adjudicate upon such a petition, under the 15 & 16 Vict. c. 86. Sharpley's Trust, In re, 1 Eq. R. 40; 1 W. R. 271.

The court will make an order under s. 4 of the 15 & 16 Vict. c. 55, upon motion made in a matter as well as in a cause. Holbrook's Will, In re, 29 L. J., Ch. 200; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 1333; 1 L. T. 18; 8 W. R. 3.

Order made vesting property in a mortgagee in a foreclosure suit without requiring a petition to be presented under the Trustee Act, 1850. Harrison v. Smith, 17 W. R. 646.

A debtor resident in India pledged shares, held by him in a joint stock banking company in England, with a creditor in England, with an authority by letter to sell, which was communicated to and recognised by the banking company. The creditor, in exercise of the authority, sold the shares to a purchaser. Upon the petition of the purchaser:—Held, that the shares were "stock," and that the debtor in India, being constructively a trustee, was a trustee for the purchaser within the Trustee Act, 1850; and the court made an order directing a specified person to transfer the shares to the petitioner. Angelo, In re, 5 De G. & Sm. 278; 16 Jur. 831.

Under the 1 Will. 4, c. 60, the court was prohibited from making any order upon such a petition until the rights of the petitioner had been ascertained by suit; but the Trustee Act, 1850, contains no such prohibition. Ib.

Parties.]—A mortgagor devised his real estate to a trustee on trust for sale, the proceeds to be divided amongst certain persons named in the will. The original mortgagee having died, and her heir not being found, a petition was presented by the trustee and one of the cestuis que trust for a vesting order under s. 19 of the Trustee Act 1850:—Held, that the trustee sufficiently represented the other cestuis que trust, whose appearance was, therefore, dispensed with. Blanchard's Trusts, In re, 2 N. R. 386; 8 L. T. 603.

Real estate was devised by C. D. to trustees upon trust, after paying debts and legacies, and, subject to a certain annuity charged thereon, to convey the same to use of A. A. in fee:—Held, upon petition by the devisee of A. B. for a conveyance by the trustee of C. D.'s will, all the debts and legacies having been satisfied, that the concurrence of the annuitant to this petition was not necessary. Winteringham's Trusts, In re, 3 W. R. 578.

Service of Petition.]—Shares in an assurance office were vested in trustees, one of whom refused to assign them to new trustees who had been duly appointed. A notice having been served on the old trustee under s. 24 of the Trustee Act 1850, and a petition having been presented but not served on the old trustee, order made vesting the shares in the new trustees. Baxter, In re, 2 Sm. & G. (App.) v.

Where a person seised in fee of land, which a railway company was empowered to take compulsorily, entered into a voluntary agreement for sale with the company, and after the purchase-money had been paid, and the company had taken possession, and had accepted the title, the vendor died intestate, leaving an infant heir-at-law:—Held, that the heir-at-law was a trustee within the Trustee Act, 1850. Russell's Estate, In re, 35 L. J., Ch. 461; 12 Jur. (N.S.) 224.

In such a case service of the petition on the infant is necessary. Ib.

It is not necessary to serve a petition for a preliminary order, under the Trustee Extension Act, 1852, s. 4, upon the trustee. Mount, In re, 24 L. T. 290.

The court has authority to order service upon minors residing out of the jurisdiction of a petition under the Trustee Acts 1850 and 1852 (13 & 14 Vict. c. 59, and 15 & 16 Vict. c. 55); and also a petition under the Trustee Relief Act (11 & 12 Vict. c. 68). Wycherley, In re, Dunne, In re, 1 L. R., Ir., 12.

A petition under the 13 & 14 Vict. c. 60, for the appointment of a person to convey, in the place of an infant heir of a deceased mortgagee, need not to be served upon the infant. Willan, In re, 2 W. R. 689.

A petition for vesting a legal estate outstanding in the infant heir of a deceased mortgagee must be served upon the infant. Jones, In re, 22 W. R. 837.

A petition for vesting in beneficiaries lands of which the legal estate had descended to the infant heir of the last surviving trustee, ordered to be served on the infant. Adams' Trusts, In re, 57 L. T. 337; 35 W. R. 770.

The trustees of a will conveyed all their beneficial interest in a certain property to a purchaser. The legal estate in the property was in the heir of a deceased sole trustee to whom the legal estate had been conveyed to prevent merger. On petition for a vesting order:—Held, that service of the petition on the heir, who resided abroad, might be dispensed with. Stanley's Trusts, In re, 62 L. J., Ch. 469; 3 R. 368; 68 L. T. 197; 41 W. R. 343.

A petition for an order vesting the trust estate in continuing trustees, and a new trustee having been presented:—Held, that service on the trustee of unsound mind was not necessary. The power was well exercised. East, In re, Bellwood's Trusts, In re, 42 L. J., Ch. 480; L. R. 8 Ch. 735.

Appeal.]—Notice of appeals from orders made under the Trustee Relief Act must, according to the true construction of Ord. LVIII. rr. 9, 15 (Judicature Act), be given within twenty-one days from the perfecting of the order, or, in the case of the refusal of an application, from the date of such refusal. Baillie's Trusts, In re, 46 L. J., Ch. 330; 4 Ch. D. 785; 35 L. T. 917; 25 W. R. 310.

ii. Lunacy.

Jurisdiction — Chancery or Lunacy — Where Vesting Order only.]—Whether the lords justices acting in lunacy under the royal sign-manual, have jurisdiction to make an order vesting a trust estate, of which a person of unsound mind, who was heir-at-law of a deceased trustee, was seised, the words of the Trustee Act, 1850 (13 & 14 Vict. c. 60), being "the Lord Chancellor intrusted by virtue of the Queen's sign-manual," quære. Pattinson, In re, 21 L. J., Ch. 280.

Semble, that the lords justices intrusted by warrant under the sign-manual to make orders in lunacy, have jurisdiction to make a vesting order under the Trustee Act, where the heir of the survivor's trustee is of unsound mind; but for the greater certainty, the lord chancellor made the order. Waugh's Trust, In re, 2 De G. M. & G. 279.

Where a trustee is an infant as well as lunatic, the court of chancery has jurisdiction to make an order for conveying his estate under the Trustee Act; and recourse need not be had to the jurisdiction in lunacy. Arrowsmith's Trusts, In re, Thompson, In re, 27 L. J., Ch. 704; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 1123; 6 W. R. 642.

The case of an imbecile trustee is not within the jurisdiction of this court, and an application to the lords justices or lord chancellor is necessary. Good Intent Benefit Building Society, In re, 2 W. R. 671.

When a decree in a partition suit had declared a lunatic a trustee of an allotted portion of land for the plaintiff:—Held, that the court of chancery could make a vesting order under the Trustee Act, 1850. Bloomar, In re (2 De G. & J.

88; 27 L. J., Ch. 173; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 546; 6 W. R. 178), discussed. Molyneux, In re, Spencer, Ex parte, 4 De G. F. & J. 365: 10 W. R. 512.

One of the two trustees of a will became lunatic, and a new trustee was appointed under a power in the will. A petition was then presented entitled in lunacy only, asking for a vesting order:—Held, that the petition must be entitled in chancery as well as in lunacy, and must ask for the re-appointment of the new trustee by the court, as, if the order were made in lunacy only, it would have the effect of severing the joint tenancy. Chell, In re, 49 L. T. 196; 31 W. R. 898.

The meaning of s. 28 of the Charitable Trusts Act, 1853, is to confer on the master of the rolls and vice-chancellors at chambers the same jurisdiction as before the passing of the act they could have exercised in a suit regularly instituted, or upon petition. Consequently, where a vice-chancellor had in chambers, appointed new trustees of a charity, and the surviving trustee was a lunatic:—Held, that he might also in chambers make an order under the trustee acts vesting the charity property in the new trustees. Davenport's Charity, In re, 4 De G. M. & G. 839.

When the legal estate in land sold under the order of the court is vested in a person of unsound mind, but not found lunatic, an order may be made by the lord chancellor on a petition in chancery, under the Trustee Acts, appointing a person to convey the legal estate so vested. Herring v. Clark, L. R. 4 Ch. 167.

—— Where Appointment of New Trustees with or without Vesting Order.]—The court made an order, upon one petition, for the appointment of new trustees in the place of retiring trustees and a lunatic trustee, and that the trust estates should vest in the new trustees; but directed that the order should be intituled both in lunacy and in chancery, and be entered in the registrar's book. Davidson, In re, 20 L. J., Ch. 644.

An appointment under the Trustee Act, 1850, of a new trustee in the place of one of unsound mind not so found by inquisition, belongs to the jurisdiction in lunacy, and not to that of the court of chancery. It cannot therefore be exercised by the court of chancery of Lancaster. Ormerod, In re, 3 De G. & J. 249; 28 L. J., Ch. 55; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 1289; 7 W. R. 71.

A summary petition under the Acts of 1850 and 1852, for the appointment of a new trustee in the place of one who has become imbecile, though not so found by inquisition, can only be disposed of by the lord chancellor sitting in lunacy. Burton, In re, L. R. 7 Eq. 270.

When a petition is presented under the Trustee Acts, 1850 and 1852, for the appointment of new trustees in the place of trustees some of whom are dead and the survivor a person of unsound mind, not so found by inquisition, the petition may be presented in lunacy only, and not in chancery. Owen, In re, L. R. 4 Ch. 782; 17 W. R. 1035.

When a trustee of a trust deed registered under the Bankruptcy Act, 1861, had become of unsound mind, and there was no power in the deed to appoint new trustees, the court of chancery appointed a new trustee under the Trustee Acts. Donisthorpe, In re, Thompson's Trusts, In re, 44 L. J., Ch. 536; L. R. 10 Ch. 55; 31 L. T. 369; 23 W. R. 100.

A testator devised real estate to trustees, their heirs and assigns, upon certain trusts. The surviving trustee devised all estates vested in him as a trustee to three persons, one of whom, after proving his testator's will, became of unsound mind. A petition was presented for the appointment of new trustees, and for the appointment of a person to convey on behalf of the devisees of the surviving trustee:—Held, that the petition was properly presented in lunacy as well as in chancery. Mason, In re, 44 L. J., Ch. 678; L. R. 10 Ch. 273; 23 W. R. 737.

A petition under the Trustee Acts of 1850 and 1852, for the appointment of new trustees in the place of trustees two of whom were dead, and one of the surviving two was a person of unsound mind, but not so found by inquisition (not asking for a vesting order), may be presented in chancery and not in lunacy. Vickers' Trusts, In re, 46 L. J., Ch. 16; 3 Ch. D. 112; 24 W. R. 755.

A petition for the appointment of new trustees and for a vesting order, where the existing sole trustee is of unsound mind and out of the jurisdiction, need not be presented in lunacy as well as in chancery. Gardner's Trust, In re, L. R. 10 Ch. 29; 40 L. T. 52; 27 W. R. 164.

The surviving trustee of property, consisting partly of land in Ireland, having become lunatic, an order was made, upon a petition instituted both in lunacy and in the chancery division, appointing new trustees and vesting the Irish land in them. Lamotte, In re, 4 Ch. D. 325; 36 L. T. 231; 25 W. R. 149.

Where a new trustee of a settlement had been appointed in the place of a trustee who had become of unsound mind, a petition for an order appointing the new trustee by the court and vesting the real estate, and the right to call for a transfer of the personal property in the new trustee, together with the continuing trustee, was directed by the court to be entitled in chancery as well as in lunacy, otherwise the vesting order will sever the joint tenancy. Pearson, In re, 46 L. J., Ch. 670; 5 Ch. D. 982; 37 L. T. 299; 25 W. R. 853. And see Chell, In re, supra.

—— Where Trustees have a Mere Power and no Legal Estate.]—A testator gave all his real and personal estate to his wife, and after her death he desired the same to be sold by his executors, the proceeds to be divided amongst legatees as directed by his will. He appointed his wife and S. F., his daughter, executors. After the death of the wife S. F. became lunatic, but was not found so by inquisition. Upon a petition being presented by the legatees praying for the appointment of new trustees under the Trustee Acts:—Held, that S. F., as surviving executor, had no power to convey or assign, the interest having descended to the heir subject to her power; and therefore the court could not make a vesting order under s. 3 of the Trustee Act, 1850. Porter's Will, In re, Franklin, Ex parte, 3 Eq. R. 719; 3 W. R. 583.

A husband appointed his wife executrix, and A. executor and trustee of his will. He devised his real estate to his wife during her life or widowhood, but in case she should marry again he gave her, by way of legal limitation, an annuity out of his realty, with powers of entry, distress, and sale; and directed his trustee to invest and accumulate the surplus of the rents and profits of his real estate, and on the death of his wife to sell the real estate, with power to execute such instruments and assurances as might be requisite for effecting the sale. The will contained a power to appoint new trustees in the place of any trustee dying, or becoming unwilling or unable to act. The donee of this power having died, and the original trustee having become of unsound mind, although not so found by inquisition :—Held, that the order for the appointment of the new trustees and the vesting order should be drawn up in chancery, as well as in lunacy. Boyce, In re, 4 De G. J. & S. 205 ; 3 N. R. 396 ; 33 L. J., Ch. 390 ; 10 Jur. (N.S.) 138 ; 9 L. T. 670 ; 12 W. R. 359.

Semble, there is no power under the Trustee Act, 1850, to appoint, in lunacy, a new trustee in the room of a lunatic trustee, except where some property is vested in him. Ib.

—— Stock Vested in Lunatic—Transfer of and Vesting in New Trustees.]—The wife of a lunatic was sole surviving trustee of stock. An order was made appointing new trustees in the place of the married woman and the deceased trustees, and vesting in the new trustees the right to transfer the stock. Wood, In re, 3 De G. F. & J. 125 ; 30 L. J., Ch. 453 ; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 323 ; 4 L. T. 104.

Stock was standing in the name of a person of unsound mind, part of the stock being his own beneficially, and part of it being vested in him as trustee. The court had made an order appointing new trustees, and vesting in them the right to call for a transfer of the trust stock, and to receive the arrears of dividends. It was found that an order in this form could not be acted on as to the arrears of dividend, since the bank could not pay arrears on part of a sum. The court, therefore, varied the order, so as to enable the new trustees to receive the past dividends on the whole stock, and to retain, for the purposes of the trust, that portion which had accrued due in respect of the trust stock. Stewart, In re, 2 De G. F. & J. 1 ; 8 W. R. 425. S. P., Skynner v. Pelichet, 9 W. R. 191.

Out of the four trustees of a settlement, one was a lunatic, so found by inquisition, and another was, through ill health, unfit to act. The court appointed two new trustees in their room, and made an order that the real estates, subject to the settlement, should vest in the new trustees jointly with the two continuing old ones, and that the right to call for a transfer of some stock, also subject to the settlement, should vest in the same persons. Chauncey, In re, 14 W. R. 849.

The sole surviving trustee of a sum of stock under a settlement having become of unsound mind, the persons beneficially entitled presented a petition in lunacy for an order vesting in them the right to transfer the stock and receive the dividends :—Held, that such an order ought not to be made, as it would be administering the trust in lunacy ; but, on the petition being amended and intituled in the chancery division as well as in lunacy, an order was made appointing the petitioners trustees of the settlement, and vesting in them, as such, the right to transfer the stock and receive the dividends. Currie, In re, 10 Ch. D. 93 ; 40 L. T. 110 ; 27 W. R. 369.

Where one of three trustees was dead, one an absconding bankrupt, and one a lunatic, on a petition being presented intituled both in lunacy and in the chancery division, the court under the Trustee Act, 1850, ss. 5, 32, and 35, appointed three new trustees, and vested the right to transfer stock in them. Druce's Trusts, In re, 46 L. T. 669 ; 30 W. R. 759.

Where one of three executors of the surviving executor of a testator was of unsound mind, an order was made under section 5 of the Trustee Act, 1850, giving the right to transfer a sum of stock belonging to the estate of the original testator, although the stock still remained standing in the name of the original testator. Wacher, In re, 22 Ch. D. 535 ; 48 L. T. 552.

One of the executors of the surviving trustee of a settlement was a lunatic. The other two executors refused to transfer some shares included in the settlement to the person absolutely entitled to them :—Held, that a vesting order could not be made under the Trustee Act, 1850, s. 25, but that a petition in lunacy must be presented. Nicholl, In re, 22 L. T. 323 ; 18 W. R. 443.

When one of several trustees of stock becomes lunatic or of unsound mind, the court, although it may have jurisdiction under s. 5 of the Trustee Act, 1850, to make an order vesting the right to transfer the stock solely in the co-trustees, will not do so, but a new trustee in the place of the lunatic must be appointed before a vesting order will be made. Nash, In re, 16 Ch. D. 503 ; 44 L. T. 40 ; 29 W. R. 294.

One of three trustees of a sum of stock had been found lunatic. The fund having become divisible, a petition, intituled both in lunacy and in chancery, was presented for the appointment of a new trustee and a vesting order :—Held, that the appointment of a new trustee was unnecessary, and that the petition ought to be intituled in lunacy only. Order made vesting the right to call for a transfer of and to transfer the stock in the two trustees who were not under disability. Nash, In re, supra, not followed. Watson, In re, 19 Ch. D. 384 ; 45 L. T. 513 ; 30 W. R. 554.

Where one of four trustees of stock became lunatic, and there was no difficulty in finding a new trustee to be appointed in his place, the court, though having discretion under s. 5 of the Trustee Act, 1850, to do so, refused to make an order vesting the right to transfer the stock in the three remaining trustees, and ordered a new trustee to be appointed in the place of the lunatic trustee. Nash, In re, supra, and Watson, In re, supra, considered. Ray, In re, 47 L. T. 500.

—— Transfer into Court.]—Where stock is standing in the name of a trustee, who is of unsound mind, but not found so by inquisition, and it is desired to bring such stock into court to the credit of a cause, the proper course is for the cause to be heard by the judge to whose court the cause is attached, and then to present a petition in lunacy, to be heard before the lords justices. Dawson, In re, Barber v. Dawson, 6 N. R. 346.

Where stock is standing in the names of two trustees, in whom alone a power of appointing new ones is vested, and one of the existing trustees is found lunatic by inquisition, the proper course, in order to obtain a transfer of the fund into court, is by petition in lunacy. Jeffreys v. Drysdale, Drysdale, In re, 30 L. J., Ch. 612 ; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 667 ; 4 L. T. 454 ; 9 W. R. 428.

iii. Costs.

Lunatic Mortgagee—Liability of Mortgagee.]—Where, through the unsoundness of mind of a mortgagee (not found lunatic by inquisition), proceedings under the Trustee Act (13 & 14 Vict. c. 60) are rendered necessary to obtain the re-conveyance of the estate, the costs must be borne by the mortgagee. Sargeant, Ex parte, 25 L. J., Ch. 656.

A mortgage debt having been paid off, the committees of the estate of the mortgagee, who had become lunatic, presented a petition, which they served upon the mortgagor, for an order enabling them to re-convey the mortgaged property. The costs of the mortgagor's appearance were directed to be paid by the petitioners, and allowed to them out of the estate, with an intimation that for the future petitions of the kind ought not to be served upon mortgagors. Rowley, In re, 1 De G. J. & Sm. 417 ; 32 L. J., Ch. 158 ; 7 L. T. 702 ; 11 W. R. 297.

The costs of the proceedings for obtaining from the committee of a lunatic a re-conveyance of premises mortgaged to the lunatic, will be ordered to be paid out of the lunatic's estate where the lunatic is beneficially interested in the mortgage money, and the petition is presented by the committee. Wheeler, In re, 1 De G. M. & G. 434 ; 21 L. J., Ch. 759.

This rule will not, however, be acted on if the mortgagor presents the petition, unless in cases where the committee has declined to take that step. Ib.

Upon the petition of the committee of a lunatic mortgagee, an order was made vesting the estate in the mortgagor, the costs of the order to be paid out of the lunatic's estate, with the exception of the stamp, which was to be paid by the mortgagor. Thomas, In re, 22 L. J., Ch. 858 ; 1 W. R. 155.

Where through the lunacy of a mortgagee not found lunatic by inquisition, a petition under the Trustee Act (13 & 14 Vict. c. 60) is rendered necessary, in order to enable the mortgagor to pay off the mortgage debt, the costs must be paid out of the mortgage debt. There being no committee, but only a receiver of the mortgagee's estate, under the 8 & 9 Vict. c 100, the costs of the appearance of the heir-at-law and next of kin were allowed. Biddle, In re, 2 Eq. R. 71 ; 23 L. J., Ch. 23 ; 2 W. R. 50.

A plaintiff in a suit for the administration of a mortgagor's estate, and the purchasers under a decree in the suit, presented a petition under the Trustee Act, seeking an order to vest in the purchasers the legal estate in the purchased property, which was vested in a lunatic mortgagee not found so by inquisition :—Held, that a portion of the costs ought to be paid out of the mortgage money. Hawkins v. Perry, Viall, In re, 8 De G. M. & G. 439 ; 4 W. R. 686.

When the committee of a lunatic mortgagee presents a petition under the Trustee Act for a re-conveyance of the mortgaged estate to the mortgagor, the mortgagor is not entitled to his costs out of the lunatic's estate, even though served with the petition. Phillips, In re, L. R. 4 Ch. 629 ; 17 W. R. 904.

When a mortgagee becomes of unsound mind, not so found, and the mortgagor applies for a vesting order on payment into court of the mortgage debt, making the mortgagee a respondent to the petition, the court has no jurisdiction to make an order for the costs to be paid out of the mortgage debt, but each party must bear his own costs. Sparks, In re, L. R. 6 Ch. 361 ; 25 W. R. 869.

A trustee having advanced money on mortgage became lunatic. Upon redemption of the estate and a petition to appoint a person to re-convey, it appearing that the mortgagor had no knowledge that the money was trust money, the costs of the application were ordered to be paid out of the trust estate. Jones, In re, 45 L. J., Ch. 688 ; 1 Ch. D. 70 ; 34 L. T. 470 ; 24 W. R. 377.

—— Liability of Mortgagor.]—Where a mortgage in fee had been paid off to the mortgagee's executor, and a petition was presented under the Trustee Act, 1850, by the mortgagor for a re-conveyance from the mortgagee's heir, who was a lunatic, or for a vesting order :—Held, that the mortgagor must pay the costs of the proceeding. Stuart, In re, Marshall, Ex parte, 4 De G. & J. 317 ; 3 L. T. 495.

A mortgagee died intestate as to estates whereof he was a mortgagee, leaving an heir-at-law, who was a lunatic. The costs of obtaining a vesting order, and of all proceedings necessary to effect a re-conveyance, were directed to be borne by the mortgagor. Jones, In re, 2 De G. F. & J. 554 ; 30 L. J., Ch. 112 ; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 115 ; 9 W. R. 175.

Vendor and Purchaser.]—A vendor agreed to surrender, or procure some person to surrender, and the costs of the surrender were to be paid by the purchaser. It was necessary to procure a surrender under the Trustee Act, 1850 :—Held, that the costs of the proceedings ought to be paid by the vendor. Bradley v. Munton, 16 Beav. 294.

After a decree for the sale of an intestate's copyhold estate, in lots, but before the sale, the infant heir of the intestate was admitted :—Held, that a petition for a vesting order was properly presented by the purchaser, whose money was in court, and that the costs of the order were to be borne by the vendors, and to be paid out of the purchase money of the particular lot, and not out of the fund in court generally. Ayles v. Cox, 17 Beav. 584.

Where a vendor dies intestate, leaving an infant heir, and a bill is filed to make him a trustee to convey under the Trustee Act, 1850, each party must pay his own costs. Scott v. Scott, 8 L. T. 450 ; 11 W. R. 766.

Where, by the lunacy of a vendor, a decree in a suit for specific performance is necessary as ground for a vesting order, no costs will be given on either side. Cresswell v. Haines, 31 L. J., Ch. 237 ; 8 Jur. (N.S.) 208 ; 10 W. R. 121.

See, as to vesting order and costs, Fulham, In re, 15 Jur. 69.

Lunatic Husband of Sole Surviving Trustee.]—Where a widow, a sole surviving trustee of a will, married, and her husband was afterwards duly found lunatic, such husband was held a trustee within the 13 & 14 Vict. c. 60, and the costs of his committee, who appeared, were allowed out of the corpus of the trust fund. Wood, In re, 3 De G. F. & J. 125 ; 30 L. J., Ch. 453 ; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 323 ; 4 L. T. 104.

Bare Trustee Lunatic.]—The costs of applications to the court, in respect of trust property, necessitated by the lunacy of a bare trustee, will not be ordered to be paid either by or to the lunatic's estate. Garden, In re, 6 N. R. 347 ; 34 L. J., Ch. 466—L.JJ.

Refusal of Assignee of Bankrupt Trustee to sign Disclaimer.]—Under the Trustee Acts the court has not jurisdiction to give the costs to a cestui que trust, compelled, in consequence of the assignees of a bankrupt trustee refusing to sign a disclaimer, to apply to the court to procure a transfer of the trust funds. Primrose, Ex parte, 26 L. J., Ch. 666; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 899; 5 W. R. 508. But see Woodburn's Trusts, In re, 26 L. J., Ch. 522; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 799; 5 W. R. 642.

Infant Heir of Mortgagor.]—An equitable mortgagee filed a bill against an infant heir of the mortgagor (upon whom a vesting order had been made under the Trustee Act, 1850), for a sale of the property. The proceeds being insufficient to satisfy the mortgage debt and costs:—Held, that the infant heir was not entitled to his costs of the suit, but he was allowed the costs of the vesting order. Wade v. Ward, 4 Drew. 482; 29 L. J., Ch. 42; 7 W. R. 542.

2. CONVEYANCES AND TRANSFERS.

a. Under the Trustee Acts, 1850 & 1852.

Appointment of Person to Convey — Order for Sale — Vendor found Lunatic.] — An order was made in a partition action for sale of the leasehold estate in respect of which the action was brought. After a sale had been made it was discovered that one of the beneficiaries was a lunatic so found, but that no committee had been appointed. The court then made an order declaring the other beneficiaries seised of the property upon a trust within the meaning of the Trustee Act, 1850, and the Trustee Extension Act, 1852, and appointing another party to the action to convey the property to the purchaser for the estates of the beneficiaries therein other than the lunatic. A petition was then presented to the Lord Chancellor, intituled in lunacy and in the chancery division, asking for a declaration that the lunatic was to be deemed seised of his share upon a trust within the meaning of the Trustee Act, 1850, and that the same person might be appointed to convey such property to the purchaser for all the estate and interest of the lunatic:—Held, that, as the order for sale had been made, the lunatic was, under s. 1 of the Trustee Act, 1852, to be deemed to be possessed upon a trust within the meaning of the act of 1850, and that, although the rest of that section only gave jurisdiction to the chancery division, the court sitting in lunacy could, under ss. 3 and 20 of the Trustee Act, 1850, appoint a person to convey the lunatic's interest. Watson, In re, 58 L. T. 509—C. A.

—— Committee.]—A devisee of real estate, subject to payment of debts, became of unsound mind, and was so found by inquisition. A committee was appointed, and an action for the administration of the testator's real and personal estate was commenced, with the sanction of the master in lunacy, in the chancery division, by the lunatic and his committee, and, the testator's personal estate proving to be insufficient for payment of his debts, an order was made for sale of all the testator's real estate upon payment of the purchase money into court. Under this order the real estate was sold, and the purchaser paid the purchase money into court. He, however, raised an objection to the title of the vendors, on the ground that they could not convey without an order in lunacy:—Held, that, the administration action in which the order for sale was made having been properly commenced with the sanction of the master in lunacy, the lunatic plaintiff was entitled to carry on the action, and was, therefore, also bound by the order for sale made in it; that the lunatic was, therefore, a trustee within the Trustee Extension Act, 1852, s. 1, of the real estate, and that his committee should be appointed to convey. Stamper, In re, Stamper v. Stamper, 46 L. T. 372.

—— Tenant in Tail — Person of Unsound Mind not so Found, confined in a Foreign Asylum—Chief Clerk Appointed.] — The chief clerk's certificate made in a partition action found that a person of unsound mind not so found was entitled as tenant in tail to a share of land in England in respect of which an order for sale had been obtained. The lunatic was confined in an asylum in Virginia, U.S.A., under an order of the court of that state, and a committee of his property had been appointed by that court, but the committee, who was resident in Virginia, declined to act in conveying the lunatic's property in this country, although he was willing to abide by any order of the English court. The lunatic was one of the defendants in the partition action by his guardian ad litem. Upon a summons taken out in the action by the guardian ad litem asking that the lunatic might be declared a trustee of his one-third share in the land within the meaning of the Trustee Acts, and that the applicant might be appointed to convey the fee of the lunatic's share to a purchaser of the land:—Held, that the lunatic might be declared a trustee of his share, and the chief clerk was appointed to convey the fee of the lunatic's share of the land to a purchaser, but the proceeds of the sale of the lunatic's share were ordered to be paid into court, and remain subject to the same uses to which the lunatic's share was subject before the sale of the land. Caswell v. Sheen, 69 L. T. 854.

—— Plaintiff's Solicitor.]—Real estates devised to married women and infants having been sold under a decree in a creditor's suit, in several lots, upon petition under the Trustee Acts, the court appointed the plaintiff's solicitor to convey their shares to the several purchasers; form of the order. Hancox v. Spittle, 3 Sm. & G. 478.

—— On Disclaimer by Trustees.]—A testator devised real estates to trustees, upon trust to sell and pay debts, and apply the surplus as in his will mentioned. The trustees disclaimed the trusts by deed; the heir-at-law of the testator could not be found:—Held, in a suit for the sale of the estates and administration, that the case fell within the meaning of s. 9 of the 13 & 14 Vict. c. 60; and that an order appointing a party to convey to a purchaser was correct. Wilks v. Groom, 6 De G. M. & G. 205; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 1077; 4 W. R. 828.

—— Infants — Constructive Trustees.] — A testator devised his freehold estates to his granddaughter for life, with remainder to all her children as tenants in common in fee, on their attaining twenty-one. In a suit for the administration of the testator's real and personal estate, certain parts of the real estate had been contracted to be sold by order of the court, to provide a fund for payment of costs. The only two infant children of the granddaughter were parties to the suit. On their petition in the cause, and under the Trustee Act, 1850, praying a declaration that the petitioners and the unborn children of the granddaughter would, on attaining twenty-one, be trustees of the estate devised to children of the granddaughter for the purpose of the decree, and that their respective rights might be vested in the respective purchasers, or that some person might be ordered to convey for them :—Held, that ss. 29 and 30 of the Trustee Act, 1850, did not apply, and that the infants were not constructive trustees; and the court refused to make any order. Weston v. Filer, 5 De G. & Sm. 608; 16 Jur. 1010.

—— Discharge of Contingent Rights of Unborn Children.]—The court will, upon petition under the Trustee Acts, discharge the contingent rights of unborn children in favour of purchasers under a decree, and make an order vesting in such purchasers the estates of infants and the contingent estates of unborn infants. Wake v. Wake, 17 Jur. 545; 1 W. R. 283.

Where copyholds devised to an infant for life, remainder to his first and other sons in tail, were decreed to be paid to pay the debts of the testator, and an order was made in the cause, and pursuant to the 1 Will. 4, c. 47, that the guardian of the infant should surrender them to the purchaser :—Held, that the purchaser was entitled to require that an order should be made discharging the contingent rights of the unborn issue of the infant, under s. 29 of the Trustee Act, 1850. Wood v. Beetlestone, 1 K. & J. 213; 3 Eq. R. 238.

After a sale under a decree for partition in a suit under the Partition Act, 1868, it appeared that one-sixth of the estate was vested in B. (one of the parties to the suit), a bachelor, for life, with remainders to his issue in tail, with ultimate remainders to the right heirs of the plaintiff :—Held, that the power (to make declarations as to the interest of unborn persons, and that such persons on coming into existence would be trustees) given by the Trustee Act, 1850, s. 30, which is incorporated in the Partition Act, 1868, enabled the court to make an order to appoint a person to convey the legal estate in the one-sixth limited to the right heirs of the plaintiff. Basnett v. Moxon, 44 L. J., Ch. 557; L. R. 20 Eq. 20; 23 W. R. 945. And see Lees v. Coulton, 44 L. J., Ch. 556; L. R. 20 Eq. 182; 23 W. R. 544.

Contracts for sale of different parts of an estate held under the same title had been entered into with different purchasers by a father and son, who had a joint power of appointment under a settlement. The son died before the conveyances were executed. The legal estate under the settlement thereupon became vested in the father for life, with remainder in tail to an infant. A bill was filed by one of the purchasers, on behalf of himself and all other purchasers, &c., for the purpose of having the several contracts carried into effect. The cause coming on to be heard before Turner, V.-C., he declined to make a decree against the infants in a suit of that form, but suggested his willingness to do so if the bill were amended by making the several purchasers parties as co-plaintiffs, and the defendants undertook not to raise the objection of multifariousness. The bill having been amended accordingly, the decree was now made, and directions given for the completion of the several purchases against the infants and unborn persons claiming under the settlement. Hargreaves v. Wright, 1 W. R. 408.

Shares Minute and Complicated—Estate Vested in Single New Trustee.]—Upon a partition, the shares of the parties were very minute and complicated. The court, to save expense, and instead of directing a conveyance of the several shares, declared each of the parties trustees as to the shares allotted to them, and then vested the whole trust estate in a single new trustee, under the Trustee Acts, with directions to convey to the several parties their allotted shares. Shepherd v. Churchill, 25 Beav. 21.

—— New Trustees Appointed—Conveyance by Deed.]—In cases where new trustees are appointed under the Trustee Act, 1850, the real estates subject to the trust ought to be conveyed to them by deed, and the vesting order ought only to be resorted to when it is inconvenient to obtain a conveyance. Langhorn v. Langhorn, 21 L. J., Ch. 860.

Specific Performance—Refusal to obey Order.]—A decree was made for specific performance of an agreement to grant a new lease of certain premises, and the defendant was ordered to execute such new lease to the plaintiff. The defendant having refused to obey the order, the plaintiff moved for leave to issue a writ of attachment against her :—Held, that there having been a decree for specific performance, the court had jurisdiction, under s. 30 of the Trustee Act, 1850, to appoint a person to execute the lease in place of the defendant, and the motion was directed to be amended accordingly. The motion having been amended, an order was made declaring the defendant a trustee of the premises within the meaning of the Trustee Act, and a person was appointed in place of the defendant to execute the lease to the plaintiff. Hall v. Hale, 51 L. T. 226. See now 47 & 48 Vict. c. 61, s. 14.

A donee of a power of jointuring under a settlement was ordered, in a specific performance suit instituted by his wife, to execute the power by a deed to be approved of by the master, whereby 1,000*l.* per annum was to be appointed as the plaintiff's jointure. On his refusal to obey the decree :—Held, that under the Trustee Acts 1850 and 1852 he might be declared a trustee of all the rights, interests, estates, and property acquired by him under the settlement; and the court appointed a person to execute the requisite deed in his place, under the Trustee Act, 1850. Mornington (Countess), Ex parte, Mornington v. Mornington, 4 De G. M. & G. 537; 1 Eq. R. 368; 1 W. R. 248. S. C., nom. Wellesley v. Wellesley, 22 L. J., Ch. 966.

—— Attachment.]—When a person has been directed to execute a lease, but refuses to do so, the court can only enforce such execution by attachment, the Trustee Act, 1850, having omitted to provide for such a case. Grace v. Baynton, 25 W. R. 506.

—— Mortgagee a Lunatic—Direction to Transfer.]—Section 3 of the Trustee Act, 1850, is not confined to a case where the lunatic or person of unsound mind is a sole trustee or mortgagee, but extends to the case where he is one of several trustees or mortgagees. One of two trustees being of unsound mind, a new trustee was appointed in his place under a power :—Held, that the court has jurisdiction to appoint a person to convey the interest of the trustee of unsound mind in a mortgage, forming part of the trust estate, for the purpose of vesting the mortgaged estate in the continuing trustee and the new trustee. Jones, In re, 56 L. J., Ch. 272; 33 Ch. D. 414; 55 L. T. 498; 35 W. R. 172—C. A.

Where a person of unsound mind is possessed of an estate by way of mortgage, the court can, under the Trustee Act, 1850, s. 3, appoint a person to convey the estate for the purpose of effectuating a transfer of the mortgage. Nicholson, In re, 56 L. J., Ch. 1036; 34 Ch. D. 663; 56 L. T. 770; 35 W. R. 569—C. A.

The court has jurisdiction under s. 3 of the Trustee Act, 1850, where a mortgagee is a lunatic, to direct the committee to transfer the mortgage. Peel, In re, 55 L. T. 554; 35 W. R. 81—C. A.

The master in lunacy having reported that it was desirable that property of which the lunatic was mortgagee should be sold under a power of sale in the mortgage, the court declined to make an order authorising the committee to sell and to convey the estate to the purchaser, but only directed him to sell, leaving the transfer of the legal estate to be dealt with on a subsequent application under the Trustee Act, 1850. Harwood, In re, 56 L. J., Ch. 974; 35 Ch. D. 470; 56 L. T. 502; 36 W. R. 27—C. A.

A. gave all his real and personal estate and effects, of what nature or kind soever, to B., upon trust to pay to his wife for life the rents of this real estate, and the interest on all sums due to him on mortgages, bond, note, or other security, and after her death to get in all debts owing to him on any security, and pay the same over to other persons. B. died intestate, leaving C., his eldest son and heir-at-law, a person of unsound mind and an infant:—Held, that the legal estate in the mortgaged property passed to B., and that he was a trustee; and persons were appointed to convey the property comprised in the mortgages to the purchasers thereof, under ss. 3 and 20 of the Trustee Act, 1850. Arrowsmith's Trusts, In re, Thompson, In re, 27 L. J., Ch. 704; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 1123; 6 W. R. 642.

b. Under the Trustee Acts prior to 1850.

i. Conveyances under 7 Ann. c. 19.

Infant Trustee.]—The stat. 7 Ann. c. 19, enabling infant trustees to convey, extends only to plain and express trusts, not to such as are implied, or constructive only. Goodwyn v. Lister, 3 P. Wms. 387.

Infant devisee of land, charged with payment of money, is a trustee in equity, but not within the stat. 7 Ann. c. 19. Anon., 2 Eq. Cas. Abr. 521, pl. 6.

An infant, the surviving life in a bishop's lease, not beneficially interested, held to be an infant trustee within the statute of 7 Ann. Hodges, Ex parte, Dick. 737.

Where a trust to be executed vests in an infant, he is not a trustee within 7 Ann. c. 19, but he must be decreed to convey on suit for that purpose. Riggs v. Sykes, Dick. 400.

Infant trustee for sale is not within the stat. 7 Ann. c. 19, though the persons entitled to the produce of the sale are adult and join in the petition, semble. Chasteney, Ex parte, Jacob, 56.

Infant trustee within the stat. 7 Ann. c. 19, notwithstanding an interest as co-executor and co-residuary legatee, entitled to the mortgage money; the receipt and discharge of the other executor leaving the infant a mere trustee. —— v. Handcock, 17 Ves. 383.

Infant trustee within the stat. 7 Ann. c. 19, must be a dry trustee. Id. 384.

An infant directed to convey charity estates to new trustees, under the act of 7 Ann. c. 19, he having nothing to do but to make such conveyance; but where infant has any duty to perform as such trustee, beyond the mere conveyance, the case is not within the statute. Att.-Gen. v. Pomfret, 2 Cox, 221.

—— Property Abroad.] — Infant trustee directed to convey under the stat. 7 Ann c. 19, though the trust estate abroad. Prosser, Ex parte, 2 Bro. C. C. 325.

An infant trustee ordered to convey an estate in Calcutta under the stat. 7 Ann. c. 19. Anderson, Ex parte, 5 Ves. 240.

—— Order to Convey.]—Infant trustee within 7 Ann. c. 19; purchaser to enjoy, and infant to convey at full age. Chandler v. Beard, Dick. 392. S. P., Benton, Ex parte, Dick. 394.

Infant trustee refusing, ordered to convey by a given day, and if he still refused, plaintiff to move that he stand committed, unless cause, &c. Beech, In re, 4 Madd. 128.

Order upon petition, under the stat. 7 Ann. c. 19, for an infant trustee to convey to the persons absolutely entitled, or as they shall appoint, but not to convey to a new trustee, upon trusts to be executed without a bill. Anderson, Ex parte, 5 Ves. 240.

Infant Heir.]—The infant heir of a messenger, to whom in bankruptcy a provisional assignment had been made, and who died before the choice of assignees:—Held, to be a trustee within the 7 Ann. c. 19. Carter, Ex parte, Portsmouth Bank, In re, 5 Madd. 81.

A decree having been made for sale of an estate, and that a trustee should join in the conveyance; that trustee dying, his infant heir bound to execute a conveyance under the stat. 7 Ann. c. 19. Such a decree against the ancestor would obviate any doubt as to whether his infant heir were or were not a trustee within the act. Hawkins v. Obeen, 2 Ves. Sen. 559.

Tenant in tail, with remainder over, by bargain and sale conveyed to B. for the purpose of making him tenant to the præcipe in a recovery. By mistake recovery was suffered before bargain and sale was executed. Tenant in tail died:—Held, infant heir of B. was not a trustee within 7 Ann, c. 19. Boehm, Ex parte, 5 Madd. 124.

Court refused to direct an infant customary heir to surrender copyhold premises to a purchaser, which had been sold and conveyed to him by deceased ancestor of infant for valuable consideration, and for which ancestor had received purchase money in his lifetime, on a motion made to confirm report which found those facts, and that the infant was a trustee within 7 Ann. on the ground that it was an ex parte proceeding; and non constat, that ancestor was competent to sell; and therefore court would not declare infant a trustee within the statute. Janaway, In re, 7 Price, 679.

Infant heir of nominal vendee in trust, being reported to be within the statute, may be ordered to convey to the devisee of the real vendee, as being the cestui que trust. Vernon, Ex parte, 7 Price, 685, n.; 2 P. Wms. 549.

The court will not, on motion or petition, order an infant trustee to convey, unless the trust appear in writing; but in such case will leave the cestui que trust to get a decree by bill. Ib.

—— To Convey at full Age.] — Bill to execute articles for the sale of lands against the devisee for life and the infant heir of the vendor:—Decreed to be executed, and that plaintiff should be let into possession and hold against the infant, who should convey when of age, unless cause shown within six months after. Sikes v. Lister, 5 Vin. Abr. 541, pl. 28.

The vendor dying intestate, and leaving an infant heir, the purchase money being paid into court in a suit for specific performance instituted after his death, will be retained till the heir attains twenty-one, and conveys. Bullock v. Bullock, 1 J. & W. 603.

Form and Contents of Conveyance.]—Assuree dies before assurance, heir unknown. Assurer, on bill of interpleader, ordered to assure to two six clerks, they to re-assure heir, when discovered. Anon., Cary, 29.

The manner in which infant trustees are to convey the estates devolved on them, pursuant to the Act of Parliament. Anon., Pre. Ch. 284.

In a marriage settlement, husband made tenant for ninety-nine years if he so long lived, remainder to trustees during the life of the husband, etc., remainder to the first, etc., son by the marriage in tail male, remainder to the first, etc., son of any other wife, remainder over. A son is born, and of age, the wife dead, and there are no other sons by the second marriage; the trust for preserving contingent remainders descends to an infant; if for the benefit of the family, equity will decree the infant trustee to join in a recovery. Winnington v. Foley, 1 P. Wms. 536.

An infant trustee may levy a fine; but Lord Hardwicke doubted whether he could suffer a recovery without a privy seal. Bowes, Ex parte, 3 Atk. 164. And see Johnson, Ex parte, 3 Atk. 559; Smith, Ex parte, Amb. 624.

Court will, if necessary, order an infant feme covert, being heir or trustee, to levy a fine. Anon., 2 Comyn, 615.

An infant mortgagee or trustee, who is a feme covert, may convey by fine under 7 Ann. c. 19. Maire, Ex parte, 3 Atk. 479.

Conveyance by infant trustee voidable, as not within the statute; if he would be bound to convey when adult, he would in equity be restrained from setting it aside. —— v. Handcock, 17 Ves. 383.

Costs.]—An infant trustee, ordered to convey under the statute of Ann. is entitled to his necessary costs. The Lord Chancellor said, that in taxing them, the master would not allow anything that was not necessary; as, for instance, a brief to counsel to consent for an infant, to which no attention could be paid. Cant, Ex parte, 10 Ves. 554.

Infant Mortgagee.]—The Lord Chancellor and the Master of the Rolls inclined to think the legal estate in mortgaged premises passed by a general residuary devise by the mortgagee to A., who was also executor, his heirs, executors, administrators, and assigns for ever, on the side of his mother. A. being nineteen, the Lord Chancellor would not order him to join in conveyance, under the statute 7 Ann. c. 19, but ordered the money to be put into the bank, ex parte the infant, and said, when he should come of age, it would be very reasonable that he should join. Sergison, Ex parte, 4 Ves. 147.

An infant mortgagee is within the statute notwithstanding he may be beneficially interested in the mortgage money. Bellamy, Ex parte, 2 Cox, 422.

A mortgage in fee, devised to A., B., and C., and the "survivor, and the heirs of such survivor." The infant heir of the testator was directed to join in reconveying to the mortgagor, as having the fee in him during the joint lives of the devisees. Harrison, In re, 3 Anstr. 836.

Mortgagee within the statutes 7 Ann. c. 19, as to infants, and 4 Geo. 2, c. 10, as to lunatics, though entitled as co-executor and residuary legatee to the mortgage money, the discharge of the other executor leaving a naked trust. Tutin, Ex parte, 3 V. & B. 151.

Estate in Ireland ordered to be conveyed by an infant mortgagee, under the stat. 7 Ann. The order under the statute for the reference to the master as well as that for the infant to convey, must be on petition, not on motion. Evelyn v. Forster, 8 Ves. 96.

ii. Conveyances under 4 Geo. 2, c. 10.

Lunatic Trustee.]—A trustee found a lunatic, by the master's report, could not be ordered to convey under the stat. 4 Geo. 2, c. 10, unless a commission of lunacy had issued. Gillam, Ex parte, 2 Ves. 586.

Lunatic trustee within 4 Geo. 2, c. 10, must be without interest or duty; therefore, having an interest as creditor, trust being to sell for payment of debts, he is not within the act. Tutin, Ex parte, 3 V. & B. 149.

The heir of one who had covenanted to surrender copyholds to the uses of a settlement on his daughter's marriage being a lunatic, a surrender cannot be made under the stat. 4 Geo. 2, c. 10. Currie, Ex parte, 1 J. & W. 642.

Lunatic Mortgagee.]—One found non compos before the senate of Hamburg a mortgagee within stat. 4 Geo. 2, c. 10, and will be directed to convey. Otto Lewis, Ex parte, 1 Ves. Sen. 298.

Mortgagee is within the statutes 7 Ann. c. 19, as to infants, and 4 Geo. 2, c. 10, as to lunatics, though entitled as co-executor and residuary legatee to the mortgage money, the discharge of the other executor leaving a naked trust. Tutin, Ex parte, 3 V. & B. 151.

Costs.]—The costs of a committee of a lunatic mortgagee requisite to enable him to re-convey to the mortgagor under the stat. 4 Geo. 2, c. 10, including the costs of the reference, are to be paid out of the lunatic's estate, whether the application be made by the mortgagor, or by the committee, which is the usual course. Richards, Ex parte, 1 J. & W. 264; 21 R. R. 166.

If the mortgagor be ready to pay the committee of a lunatic, mortgagee should apply for a reference under the statute, and it seems he would not be allowed to bring an action. Ib.

Costs of the committee of a lunatic trustee conveying within the statute must be paid out of the lunatic's estate. Brydges, Ex parte, G. Cooper, 290.

The costs of the committee of a lunatic trustee, conveying under the statute, must be paid by the cestuis que trust. The estates being vested in the lunatic upon trusts for securing an annuity, and subject thereto upon trust for the grantor of the annuity, were ordered to defray equally the committee's costs of an application by them for a re-conveyance of the estate. Pearse, Ex parte, Turn. & R. 325.

iii. Conveyance under 6 Geo. 4, c. 74.

Infant Heir or Trustee.]—A copyholder covenants to surrender to trustees in trust to sell, and dies before surrender, leaving an infant heir; the covenantees agree to sell the estate, and afterwards file a bill for a specific performance:—Held, that the heir is not an infant trustee within 6 Geo. 4, c. 74, and therefore cannot be ordered to surrender immediately; and the bill was dismissed with costs. King v. Turner, 2 Sim. 549. But see 1 Myl. & K. 456; Coop. t. Brough. 64.

A. contracted to sell a freehold estate to B., and by will gave the purchase money to trustees for certain purposes; and if the contract should not be completed, he devised the estate to the trustees for the same purpose. A. died, leaving a son, who died, leaving an only daughter, an infant:—Held, that she was not a trustee within the stat. 6 Geo. 4, c. 74. Moody, In re, Tam. 4.

Court has no jurisdiction in bankruptcy to declare an infant heir of assignee a trustee of bankrupt's estate; the petition must be entitled under 6 Geo. 4, c. 74. Kirk, Ex parte, Buck, 478. S. P., Beddam, Ex parte, 1 Rose, 310.

iv. Conveyances under 11 Geo. 4 & 1 Will. 4, c. 60.

General Principles.]—The 11 Geo. 4 & 1 Will. 4, c. 60, s. 8, applies to cases where conveyances are to be made, and not where sales are to be effected. Down, In re, 2 Jur. 886.

Section 8 of the stat. 11 Geo. 4 & 1 Will. 4, c. 60, relates to trusts only, and not to mortgages, and to positive or naked trustees, and not to constructive trustees, or trustees by operation of law. Dearden, In re, 3 Myl. & K. 508; 4 L. J., Ch. 186.

The stat. 11 Geo. 4 & 1 Will. 4, c. 60, intituled "an act for amending the laws respecting conveyances, and transfers of estates, and funds vested in trustees and mortgagees," applies only to cestuis que trust who are named in the instruments upon which their title depends, or to persons who claim directly under such cestuis que trust, as real or personal representatives, or as assignees. Merry, In re, 1 Myl. & K. 677.

The act, 11 Geo. 4 & 1 Will. 4, c. 60, does not apply to lands out of the Queen's dominions; nor is a party having the legal interest in a debt (which he has been decreed to assign) a trustee of such debt within the act. Price v. Dewhurst, 8 Sim. 617; 8 L. J., Ch. 267.

An exchange of lands, or an exchange of lands where a sum of money forms part of the consideration by way of equality of exchange, is not within the stat. 11 Geo. 4 & 1 Will. 4, c. 60. Turner v. Edgell, 1 Keen, 502; 6 L. J., Ch. 201.

The stat. 1 Will. 4, c. 60, does not apply to cases of partition. Nearhell, In re, 14 L. J., Ch. 121.

The proper reference under the Escheat Act is, "whether the party is within the meaning of the Escheat Act, and also within the meaning of 1 Will. 4, c. 60." Anon., 4 L. J., Ch. 73.

Vendor dying before Completion.]—A vendor who dies before the completion of the contract is a trustee within the meaning of the 4 & 5 Will. 4, c. 23, though expressly excepted out of the 1 Will. 4, c. 60. Lowe's Estate, In re, 2 Ph. 690; 17 L. J., Ch. 430; 12 Jur. 638.

Executor of Surviving Trustee declining to prove Will.]—The executor of the survivor of three trustees declined to prove his will:—Held, that the case was within the 11 Geo. 4 & 1 Will. 4, c. 60. Hagger, Ex parte, 1 Beav. 98.

Heir of Testator.]—Real estate having been applied for a century and a-half upon the trusts specified by a will, the court assumed that the will created a trust, and that the heir of the testator became a trustee, and, the present heir not being known, the case was held to be within 11 Geo. 4 & 1 Will. 4, c. 60, s. 23. Gore's Charities, In re, 2 Con. & L. 411; 4 Dr. & War. 270.

Devise in 1677 to the use of the poor of the parish of A. The master was unable to ascertain in whom the estate was vested:—Held, that the case was not within the Trustee Acts. So also where charity money had in 1745 been laid out by a parish in the purchase of an estate for the poor of the parish, and it could not be ascertained in whom it was vested. Att.-Gen. v. Randles, 8 Beav. 185.

Estates decreed to be Sold—Tenant for Life.]—Tenant for life of estates decreed in a creditors' suit to be sold for payment of debt, is a trustee for the purchaser within the meaning of 1 Will. 4, c. 60, s. 18. Milfield, In re, 2 Ph. 254. And see 5 Hare, 538.

—— Devisee subject to Charge.]—An estate was devised to A., subject to a charge of 5,000*l.*, payable to the executors in a suit to which A. was a party; the estate was sold, and all proper parties were ordered to join in the conveyance. A., refusing to execute the deed, was declared a trustee for the purchaser under the stat. 11 Geo. 4 & 1 Will. 4, c. 60, and another person was directed to convey in his stead. The petition for the above purposes was presented by a defendant in his character of purchaser: the court refused to give costs. Robinson v. Wood, 5 Beav. 246.

Feme Covert.]—A woman who was sole trustee for sale of real property married a man who absconded, and had not been heard of up to the hearing of the cause. The court decreed a sale, and that the husband should be declared a trustee within the 11 Geo. 4 & 1 Will. 4, c. 60, s. 19, but declined to appoint a person to convey in his room under s. 8, on the ground that he was not the trustee "last known to have been seised," there being a joint seisin in him and his wife. Moore v. Vinten, 12 Sim. 161; 10 L. J., Ch. 345.

A feme sole, trustee, marrying, and her husband refusing to join her in a proper conveyance to the cestui que trust, is a refusal within 1 Will. 4, c. 60, s. 8. Phillips v. Cornish, 4 L. J., Ch. 27.

—— Heiress-at-Law.]—Where the heiress-at-law, a feme covert, declined acknowledging the conveyance upon the sale of an intestate's estate under a decree, semble, that the heir was a trustee within 11 Geo. 4 & 1 Will. 4, c. 60. Billing v. Webb, 1 De G. J. & S. 717; 12 W. R. 427.

Heir of Trustee.]—The heir of a trustee of the lessee's interest in a lease of lives renewable for ever, having been applied to to accept a renewal to him, refused to execute the conveyance:—Held, that s. 8 of the Trustees Act, 11 Geo. 4 & 1 Will. 4, c. 60, did not extend to such a case. Fitzgibbon v. Lewis, 6 Ir. Eq. R. 560.

Infant Heir.]—Estates were conveyed to A. and B. and the heirs of A. A. died, having devised the estates to C. in tail. C. alone, in B.'s lifetime, conveyed the estates to D., to make him tenant to the præcipe, and a recovery was suffered to the use of C. in fee. D. died, leaving an infant heir:—Held, that the heir was not a trustee, for though the recovery did not bar the estate tail, it drew out from D. the whole estate that was vested in him, under the recovery deed. Debary, In re, 5 Sim. 283.

Four co-partners purchased an estate out of the partnership assets, and took a conveyance to themselves as tenants in common in fee. One of them died intestate as to his real estate, leaving an infant heir. The survivors settled with his executors for the value of one-fourth of the estate, and then petitioned under the 11 Geo. 4 & 1 Will. 4, c. 60, that the infant might be declared a trustee of one-fourth of the estate, and might join in conveying the estate to a purchaser. The court refused to make the order, and said that a bill must be filed. Williams, Ex parte, 11 Sim. 54.

A trader, who had freehold, copyhold, and personal estate, died in September, 1832, leaving an infant heir. His estate was insufficient to pay his debts and charges. His partners, however, by deed took upon themselves to pay all the debts, and secured the principal part of his property for his family. A suit was instituted for carrying the deed into execution, and the master found that it would be for the benefit of the infant heir that the real estate should be sold and applied in the manner mentioned in the deed. A decree was made for sale, and the infant was declared a trustee within the 11 Geo. 4 & 1 Will. 4, c. 60:—Held, that a sale under the decree could not be enforced; that the court had no jurisdiction to order the sale; that the infant was not a trustee within the act; that the purchaser was not bound to wait until the error was corrected; and the court, therefore, discharged him with his costs, charges, and expenses. Calvert v. Godfrey, 6 Beav. 97; 12 L. J., Ch. 305.

After decree in a suit for specific performance, against the infant heir of the vendor, a petition must be presented under 11 Geo. 4 & 1 Will. 4, c. 60, for an order that the infant may convey to the purchaser. The costs of the suit were ordered to be paid out of the purchase money. Prytharch v. Havard, 6 Sim. 9.

—— Beneficiaries.] — A testatrix directed funds to be transferred in the bank books, into the names of A. B. and wife, and their children, who were infants, for the benefit of A. B. and wife for life, with remainder to their children. This was done, and a suit being instituted for the performance of the trusts:—Held, that the court had no jurisdiction, under the 11 Geo. 4 & 1 Will. 4, c. 60, to order the infants to transfer the fund into court. Watts v. Scrivens, 1 Beav. 223.

Where the widow and administratrix of an intestate transferred money into the names of herself and infant child, it was ordered, under the 11 Geo. 4 & 1 Will. 4, c. 60, that the child should join in transferring the third to which the widow was entitled. Kidd v. Kidd, 1 Beav. 225, n.

—— Minor not Party to Cause.]—Where an order was obtained on petition against a minor, not a party to the cause, to execute the conveyance, and the minor refused to obey the order, it is necessary, to present a further petition to obtain an order that an attachment should issue against the minor, that a person appointed by the court should execute in his name. Semble, the 4 & 5 Will. 4, c. 78 (Irish Statutes), does not apply to minors. Moore v. Grogan, 9 Ir. Eq. R. 472.

—— Tenant in Tail.]—The infant tenant in tail of lands decreed to be sold for an equitable charge is a trustee under ss. 8 and 18 of the 11 Geo. 4 & 1 Will. 4, c. 60; and if he refuse to execute, the master will be directed to do so in his name, under 11 Geo. 4 & 1 Will. 4, c. 60. Semble, the 4 & 5 Will. 4, c. 78, s. 8, does not apply to infants. Peyton v. M'Dermott, 6 Ir. Eq. R. 220.

—— Devisees.] — Where the master finds that in a certain construction of a devise the infant therein named is a trustee within the act 11 Geo. 4 & 1 Will. 4, c. 60, but that on a different construction another person would be such trustee, the court may declare the infant to be the trustee, and make the order for conveyance, without sending the case back to the master. Langford v. Auger, 4 Hare, 313.

A testator agreed to let land on a building lease, but died before the execution of the lease, having devised the land:—Held, on a bill for specific performance by the intended lessee, that the devisees, including an infant, were trustees for the plaintiff, under the statute 11 Geo. 4 & 1 Will. 4, c. 60, for the purpose of executing the lease. Cullum v. Upton, 19 L. J., Ch. 276; 14 Jur. 187.

An infant devisee had been ordered to convey real estate sold for payment of testator's debts; and having made default, and not being within reach of process, a person was appointed by the court, under 1 & 2 Will. 4, c. 60, s. 8, to convey. Thomas v. Gwynne, 9 Beav. 275.

Upon a direction for the sale of testator's real estate to pay debts, infant devisees refusing to convey, were declared by the court to be trustees within 11 Geo. 4 & 1 Will. 4, c. 60. Warburton v. Vaughan, 4 Y. & C. 247.

—— Heir of Devisee.]—In a decree for raising legacies against an infant heir of a devisee, whose estate was charged with the legacies, a sale may be directed, but the infant will not then be declared a trustee, so as to enable the court to order a conveyance under ss. 6 and 18 of the 11 Geo. 4 & 1 Will. 4, c. 60. Walters v. Jackson, 12 Sim. 278; 10 L. J., Ch. 383.

—— Trustee.]—Bill filed to have a sale of lands, the legal and beneficial estate in which was vested in the plaintiff, an infant. Order for sale made:—Held, that this order was tantamount to declaring that the infant was a trustee for the purchaser within the act 11 Geo. 4 & 1 Will. 4, c. 60, s. 18; and upon the petition of the purchaser, the court ordered an immediate conveyance by the infant, without a previous reference to the master to inquire whether he was a trustee within the meaning of the act. Blackwell, In re, 7 Jur. 9.

Where a freehold estate was vested in an infant trustee on a plain trust, an order for a conveyance was made on a petition presented under the 11 Geo. 4 & 1 Will. 4, c. 60, without a reference to the master. Trapp, In re, 13 L. J., Ch. 168; 8 Jur. 437.

A petition under the 11 Geo. 4 & 1 Will. 4, c. 60, stated, that in 1823 the testator devised real estate to a trustee to pay debts, and after payment thereof in trust for the petitioner; that he died in 1824, and thereupon the petitioner entered; that many years ago petitioner and the trustee sold part of the estate, and paid all the debts; that the trustee had died, and that his heir was a minor; and it prayed a conveyance of the real estate. The court directed inquiries whether the minor was a trustee for the petitioner alone, discharged of debts and the trusts of the will. Barry, In re, 2 Jo. & Lat. 1.

——Partition.]—The stat. 11 Geo. 4 & 1 Will. 4, c. 60, does not apply to cases of partition, and an infant will not be directed under the provisions of that act to execute a conveyance upon a partition, unless the rights of the parties have been previously established by a decree. Neachell, In re, 14 L. J., Ch. 121.

Mortgages—In General.]—The devisee of a mortgage is not a trustee for the executors of the testator, within 11 Geo. 4 & 1 Will. 4, c. 60. Payne, Ex parte, 6 Sim. 645; 5 L. J., Ch. 259.

Section 8 of the 11 Geo. 4 & 1 Will. 4, c. 60, relates to trusts only, and not to mortgages, and to positive or naked trustees, and not to constructive trustees, or trustees by operation of law. Dearden, In re, 3 Myl. & K. 508; 4 L. J., Ch. 186.

Appointment of person to convey for the heir of a mortgagee under the 11 Geo. 4 & 1 Will. 4, c. 60, s. 8, 4 & 5 Will. 4, c. 23, and 1 & 2 Vict. c. 69. Wilson, In re, 2 Jur. 987.

Mortgagees and the heirs of mortgagees are within s. 8 of the 11 Geo. 4 & 1 Will. 4, c. 60, explained by the 4 & 5 Will. 4, c. 23, s. 2. Whitton, Ex parte, 1 Keen, 278.

An order of reference to inquire whether the heir of the mortgagee was a trustee within the acts 11 Geo. 4 & 1 Will. 4, c. 60, and 1 & 2 Vict. c. 69, was made upon the petition of the executors of the mortgagee; and the mortgage debt being paid off pending the reference, the master found that the heir was not a trustee for the petitioners, but for the mortgagee, whereupon the court allowed the petition to be amended and made the petition of the mortgagor, and then directed the reconveyance. Manifold, In re, 4 Hare, 308.

—— Assignment of Mortgage Debt.]—The 11 Geo. 4 & 1 Will. 4, c. 60, being intended only to provide means for conveying the legal interest:—Held, that an assignment of a mortgage debt was not within the act; nor was the act intended to apply to land out of the queen's dominions. Price v. Dewhurst, 8 Sim. 617; 8 L. J., Ch. 267.

——Heir of Mortgagee out of Jurisdiction or not to be Found.]—A mortgagee in fee died intestate as to his real estate, and his heir was not known. The court had no authority, under the 11 Geo. 4 & 1 Will. 4, c. 60, s. 8, to appoint a person to reconvey the estate to the party entitled to the equity of redemption on his payment of the mortgage money to the executor of the mortgagee. Goddard, In re, 1 Myl. & K. 25; 2 L. J., Ch. 16.

A mortgagee in fee died intestate as to the mortgaged premises, but having bequeathed her personal estate to B. The mortgage money remaining unpaid, B. presented a petition, under 11 Geo. 4 & 1 Will. 4, c. 60, praying that some person might be appointed, in the place of the mortgagee's heir (who could not be found), to convey the premises to him; but the court refused to make any order. Stanley, In re, 5 Sim. 320; 3 L. J., Ch. 240.

On a further application to the court:—Held, that his heir was to be regarded as a trustee within the meaning of the 11 Geo. 4 & 1 Will. 4, c. 60, s. 8, as explained by 4 & 5 Will. 4, c. 23, s. 2, and the court made the order. S. C., 7 Sim. 170; 6 L. J., Ch. 361.

A mortgagee was resident out of the jurisdiction:—Held, that the case was not within the 11 Geo. 4 & 1 Will. 4, c. 60, the 4 & 5 Will. 4, c. 23, or the 1 & 2 Vict. c. 69. Green v. Holden, 1 Beav. 207.

The act 1 & 2 Vict. c. 69, does not repeal any part of 11 Geo. 4 & 1 Will. 4, c. 60, nor of the 4 & 5 Will. 4, c. 23, and therefore, since the passing of the 1 & 2 Vict., according to previous decisions upon the meaning of the 4 & 5 Will. 4, an order will be made for the reconveyance of the legal estate when the heir of a mortgagee is either an infant or cannot be found. Wilson's Estate, In re, Gathorne, In re, 8 Sim. 392; 8 L. J., Ch. 45; and id. 46.

The case of a mortgagee leaving an heir, though such heir be unknown, is within the stat. 11 Geo. 4 & 1 Will. 4, c. 60, s. 8, as expounded by the stat. 4 & 5 Will. 4, s. 23. Williams, In re, Bird, Ex parte, 9 Sim. 642. Reversing id. 426; 9 L. J., Ch. 353; 4 Jur. 912.

Section 8 of 11 Geo. 4 & 1 Will. 4, as expounded by s. 2 of 4 & 5 Will. 4, c. 23, applies to the case of the heir of a mortgagee being out of jurisdiction of the court. Thomson, In re, 12 Sim. 392.

The heir-at-law of a mortgagee who had never been in possession, was out of the jurisdiction, and the produce of the sale of the mortgaged lands under a decree was insufficient to pay off the mortgage by reason of prior incumbrances:—Held, that the court had no jurisdiction to make an order for the conveyance of the legal estate to the purchaser either under the 11 Geo. 4 & 1 Will. 4, c. 60, s. 8, or 1 Vict. c. 69, s. 1. The decision under these statutes reviewed. Thompson, In re, supra, disapproved of. Spunner v. Walsh, 10 Ir. Eq. R. 214.

Copyholds which were mortgaged in fee, descended to the customary heir of the devisee of the mortgagee, who was also beneficially interested therein under the mortgagor; the mortgage money was afterwards paid off to the personal representatives of the mortgagee:—Held, that such customary heir, who was residing out of the jurisdiction, was not, under the circumstances, within 1 Will. 4, c. 60; and the court refused to appoint a person in his stead, to be admitted, and to surrender the copyholds in his absence. Newman, In re, 4 L. J., Ch. 124.

—— Infant Heir of Mortgagee.]—The infant heir of a mortgagee, who had obtained a decree for a sale, being out of the jurisdiction:—Held, a trustee within ss. 8 and 18 of 11 Geo. 4 & 1 Will. 4, c. 60. Prendergast v. Eyre, Ll. & G. t. Sugd. 11.

The executors of a mortgagee in fee who had died intestate, leaving an infant heir, having in exercise of a power in the mortgage deed agreed to sell the estate, the heir was ordered, on a petition presented by the executors under the 11 Geo. 4 & 1 Will. 4, c. 60, s. 6, to convey the estate to the purchaser. Kent, In re, 9 Sim. 501; 8 L. J., Ch. 169.

Form of order upon an application for an infant mortgagee to convey, under the stat. 11 Geo. 4 & 1 Will. 4, c. 60, s. 6. Halliday, In re, Dr. 3.

And see Wilson's Estate, In re, Gathorne, In re, supra.

—— Mortgagor out of Jurisdiction.]—In a suit by an equitable mortgagee of leaseholds to enforce his security, a decree was made for sale in default of payment, and the premises were sold under the decree; the mortgagor, then out of the jurisdiction, was held not to be a trustee, within the act 11 Geo. 4 & 1 Will. 4, c. 60, for the purchaser, but he was held to be a trustee within that act for the plaintiff, and a person was appointed to execute the assignment in the place of such trustee. King v. Leach, 2 Hare, 57.

—— Devisees of Equity of Redemption.]—In a creditors' suit for the administration of a testator's estate, a decree was made that the devisees of real estates subject to a mortgage, two of whom were married women, should execute a conveyance of the equity of redemption to the mortgagee, if the latter were willing to release the testator's estate from the mortgage debt. The devisees refused to execute a deed of conveyance, prepared in pursuance of the decree by the mortgagee, and approved of by the master:—Held, upon petition by the mortgagee, that he was entitled, under stat. 11 Geo. 4 & 1 Will. 4, c. 60, to an order for the appointment of a person to execute the conveyance in the place of the devisees. Hood v. Hall, 19 L. J., Ch. 312; 14 Jur. 127.

—— Infant Heir of Mortgagor.]—In a suit by an equitable mortgagee against the infant heir of the mortgagor, the estate having been directed to be sold as most beneficial to the infant, the latter was, under s. 11 of the stat. 11 Geo. 4 & 1 Will. 4, c. 60, directed to convey to the purchaser. Scholefield v. Heafield, 8 Sim. 470; 7 L. J., Ch. 4.

Where lands are decreed to be sold in a mortgage suit, the infant heir-at-law of the mortgagor is not a trustee within ss. 8 or 18 of the 11 Geo. 4 & 1 Will. 4, c. 60. Goddard v. Macaulay, 6 Ir. Eq. R. 221.

Semble, the court has jurisdiction, under 11 Geo. 4 & 1 Will. 4, c. 47, s. 11, to make an order directing such infant heir to execute the conveyance. Ib.

He is not within the provisions of the 28 Geo. 3, c. 25. Nor is he a necessary party to the conveyance to the purchaser. Ib.

Lunatic Trustee.]—The stat. 11 Geo. 4 & 1 Will. 4, c. 60, applies only to the case of a trustee who, by reason of mental incapacity, is incompetent to the execution of a trust. Jones, In re, 6 Jur. 545.

The summary jurisdiction given to the lord chancellor by the 11 Geo. 4 & 1 Will. 4, c. 60, s. 5, for the conveyance of property vested in trustees or mortgagees who are lunatic, but not found so by inquisition, does not apply to cases in which the fact of lunacy is contested. Walker, In re, Cr. & Ph. 147; 10 L. J., Ch. 355; 5 Jur. 571.

Where the evidence adduced of unsoundness of mind of a lunatic trustee, but not found such by inquisition, is very strong, the court will make the order for a conveyance of the trust property in the first instance, without directing a reference to the master. Daniel, In re, 11 L. J., Ch. 123.

Lands having been sold under a decree for payment of charges which were prior to the estate of one of the defendants, who was a lunatic, the court referred it to the master to appoint a person in his place to convey them to the purchaser. When the sale is under a decree of the court, the granting parties do not fill the character of vendors within the exception in the 11 Geo. 4 & 1 Will. 4, c. 60, s. 18. Blake, In re, 3 Jo. & Lat. 265.

Where a lunatic, who had no issue, was seised of an estate tail in possession, with the immediate reversion to himself in fee, and the land had been sold under the 1 Will. 4, c. 65, for payment of his debts, an order was made on the committee to suffer a recovery on behalf of the lunatic, in order to complete the title to a purchaser. Brand, In re, 1 Myl. & K. 150; 2 L. J., Ch. 12.

R. B. was entitled to a rent-charge for life, and legal estate for life in remainder in lands decreed to be sold for paramount incumbrances. After decree he became lunatic, but no commission issued. A conveyance by him to a purchase was ordered under s. 5 of the Trustee Act, 11 Geo. 4 & 1 Will. 4. Blake v. Blake, 9 Ir. Eq. R. 592.

A petition, praying that the committee of a lunatic may be ordered to transfer property vested in a lunatic as a trustee, ought to be entitled in the lunacy, and need not be entitled in the matter of the act which authorises the lord chancellor to make the order. Fowler, In re, 2 Russ. 449.

Ad interim committee incapable of conveying under the act 1 Will. 4, c. 60, s. 3. Poulton, In re, 1 Mac. & G. 100; 1 Hall & Tw. 476.

—— Mortgagee.] — Property, of which a lunatic (not so found) was mortgagee in fee for 1,300*l.*, was sold for 900*l.* His beneficial interest in the mortgage money having been by means of an equitable charge reduced below 700*l.*:—Held, that this case fell within s. 5 of the act 11 Geo. 4 & 1 Will. 4, c. 60. Sandford, In re, 1 Mac. & G. 538; 2 Hall & Tw. 137.

—— Mortgagor.] — A., after making an equitable mortgage of freeholds, became lunatic. The mortgaged estate was sold under a decree in a foreclosure suit. The lunatic was held to be a trustee within the 11 Geo. 4 & 1 Will. 4, c. 60, and a conveyance was ordered to be made by the plaintiff's solicitors in the name of the lunatic, without a reference. Rogers, In re, 13 L. J., Ch. 262; 8 Jur. 229.

—— Devisees.] — After a decree in a creditors' suit for the sale of the real estate of the testator, and the application of the proceeds in payment of the debt, and after a sale under that decree, the devisees of the estate, being lunatic or out of the jurisdiction, are trustees of the estate, within the stat. 11 Geo. 4 & 1 Will. 4, c. 60, for the plaintiff in the cause, semble. Jackson v. Milfield, 5 Hare, 538.

Practice—Order to Convey.]—An application, under the 11 Geo. 4 & 1 Will. 4, c. 60, to appoint a person to convey in the place of an absent trustee, who has been discharged by a decree of the court, ought to be by motion in the cause in which the decree was pronounced, a petition for that purpose being unnecessary. Callaghan v. Egan, 1 Dr. & Wal. 187.

Where an order that the master or any other person appointed by the court should convey in the name of a defendant, under the 11 Geo. 4 & 1 Will. 4, c. 60, s. 8, cannot be made contemporaneously with the decree at the hearing of the cause, in consequence of the party to whom the conveyance is to be made not being then ascertained (e.g., where lands are by the decree directed to be sold), an application, under the 11 Geo. 4 & 1 Will. 4, c. 60, that the master should execute a conveyance in the name of such defendant, must be made by petition. Newman v. Fitzgerald, 13 Ir. Eq. R. 65.

Under the 11 Geo. 4 & 1 Will. 4, c. 60, the master has no power to appoint a person to convey. It is for the master to "approve," and for the court to "appoint." Fowler v. Ward, 8 Beav. 488; 14 L. J., Ch. 321.

One of two executors appearing, from the proceedings in the cause, to be a trustee within the meaning of the 11 Geo. 4 & 1 Will. 4, c. 60, of a fund standing in the testator's name, and it being proved by affidavit that he was living out of the jurisdiction, the court, without a reference to the master, made an order, under this act, for the transfer of the fund by his co-executor. Parker v. Burney, 1 Beav. 492; 8 L. J., Ch. 107.

Where the court, in any proceeding in a cause, declares a party to be a trustee, within 11 Geo. 4 & 1 Will. 4, c. 60, it may, by the same order, direct a conveyance to be made. Walton v. Merry, 6 Sim. 328.

Where the court, by its decree, declares that an infant heir is a trustee, and the right of party entitled to a conveyance is established by that decree, the court will at the same time direct a conveyance from the infant heir, a petition for that purpose being unnecessary. Broom v. Broom, 3 Myl. & K. 443. S. P., Meller v. Knight, 1 Keen, 129; 5 L. J., Ch. 168.

—— Execution of Conveyance.]—Where a person has been ordered, under the 11 Geo. 4 & 1 Will. 4, c. 60, to execute a deed in place of a refusing trustee, it is sufficient that he should execute the same deed that has been tendered to the refusing trustee, it being expressed, in the attestation clause, that he has executed it in place of the trustee, and in pursuance of the order. Foley, Ex parte, 8 Sim. 395; 8 L. J., Ch. 56; 2 Jur. 1012.

—— Reference.]—For the proper form of the reference under the stat. 11 Geo. 4 & 1 Will. 4, c. 60. See Pigott, In re, 2 Russ. & M. 683.

Where one of two executors, defendants in an administration suit, was stated by affidavit to be out of the jurisdiction, an order was made for the transfer of a fund, under the 11 Geo. 4 & 1 Will. 4, c. 60, without a reference, it appearing from the proceedings in the cause, as was stated in the order, that he was a trustee within the meaning of the act. Parker v. Burney, supra.

Reference directed under 11 Geo. 4 & 1 Will. 4, c. 60, in a case where the cestui que trust, making the application, claimed in respect of interests devised in remainder after the determination of prior estates tail which had failed. De Clifford Estates, In re, 2 Myl. & K. 624.

—— Supplemental Affidavit.]—In proceedings under the 11 Geo. 4 & 1 Will. 4, c. 60, all the circumstances giving the court jurisdiction should be stated in the petition, as a supplemental affidavit cannot be read. Hartford, In re, 1 Con. & L. 394; 2 Dr. & War. 292.

—— Proof of Search.]—Proof of search for a trustee under the 11 Geo. 4 & 1 Will. 4, c. 60, s. 24, may be given at the hearing of the cause, by affidavit. Moore v. Vinten, 12 Sim. 161; 10 L. J., Ch. 345.

—— Title of Petition.]—The title of a petition presented, under an act of parliament, as the Trustee Act (11 Geo. 4 & 1 Will. 4, c. 60), should contain a reference to that act, as well as to the matter of the petition. Law, In re, 4 Beav. 509; 11 L. J., Ch. 118; 6 Jur. 615.

Costs—Infant Heir of Mortgagee.] — The infant heir of a mortgagee is entitled to the costs incurred on the reference, under 11 Geo. 4 & 1 Will. 4, c. 60. Miltown (Earl) v. Trimleston (Lord), Fl. & K. 338.

The infant heir of a mortgagee in fee having been found by the master to be a trustee of the mortgaged estate for the executor of the mortgagee, the executor petitioned that the infant might be ordered to reconvey the estate to the mortgagor on payment of the principal and interest due on the mortgage and costs:—Held, that the costs of the proceeding before the master must be paid by the mortgagor. Ommaney, Ex parte, 10 Sim. 228; 10 L. J., Ch. 315; 5 Jur. 647.

—— Devisees of Mortgagee.]—The costs of the petition and order, under the stat. 11 Geo. 4 & 1 Will. 4, c. 60, for the reconveyance of a mortgaged estate to the mortgagor or his representatives, upon payment of the mortgage money, are to be borne by the mortgagor or his estate, although such proceedings were rendered necessary by the circumstance that the mortgagee had devised the legal estate in the mortgaged premises to three trustees, one of whom could not be found. King v. Smith, 6 Hare, 473; 18 L. J., Ch. 43; 12 Jur. 1083.

—— Lunatic Mortgagee or Trustee.]—Costs of the committee of a lunatic trustee, conveying within the statute, must be paid out of the lunatic's estate. Brydges, Ex parte, G. Cooper, 290.

Semble, the expenses of proceedings, under the 11 Geo. 4 & 1 Will. 4, c. 60, s. 5, for the purpose of obtaining a reconveyance of a mortgaged estate from a mortgagee of unsound mind, but not found such by inquisition, are to be borne by the mortgagor. Marrow, In re, Cr. & Ph. 142; 10 L. J., Ch. 340.

Where it clearly appeared that the lunatic was a trustee of mortgaged premises, and the mortgage deed contained a declaration to that effect:—

Held, that the costs of proceedings under the act 11 Geo. 4 & 1 Will. 4, c. 60, to obtain a reconveyance, must be borne by the mortgagor. Lewes, In re, 1 Mac. & G. 23 ; 1 Hall & Tw. 123 ; 18 L. J., Ch. 153 ; 13 Jur. 548.

The costs of proceedings for a reconveyance by the committee of a lunatic of premises mortgaged to the lunatic will be ordered to be paid out of the lunatic's estate, where the lunatic is beneficially interested in the mortgage money, and the petition is presented by the committee. Wheeler, In re, 1 De G. M. & G. 434.

This rule, however, will not be acted on if the mortgagor presents the petition, unless in cases where the committee has declined to take that step. Ib.

Application of the rule as to the costs of proceedings under 11 Geo. 4 & 1 Will. 4, c. 60, for the purpose of obtaining a reconveyance of mortgaged premises, to the case of a lunatic mortgagee who was a trustee, and where the existence of the trust did not appear on the mortgage deed. Townsend, In re, 1 Mac. & G. 686 ; 2 Hall & Tw. 185 ; 2 Ph. 348 ; 16 L. J., Ch. 456.

—— Resisting Improper Order.]—If a motion is made to enforce an order under the 11 Geo. 4 & 1 Will. 4, c. 60, and the order appears to be an improper one, the court has jurisdiction to give the party resisting it the costs of the motion. King, In re, 10 Sim. 605 ; 9 L. J., Ch. 257.

—— Recusant Trustee served with Petition Appearing.]—If a petition is presented under the 10 Geo. 4, c. 56, or under the 11 Geo. 4 & 1 Will. 4, c. 60, to have a person appointed to convey property in the place of a recusant trustee, the latter ought not to be served with the petition ; and if he is served, he will be entitled to costs. Third Burnt Tree Building Society, In re, 16 Sim. 296 ; 12 Jur. 595. And see S. C., 1 Mac. & G. 607 ; 2 Hall & Tw. 44.

—— Infant Heir of Trustee.]—Upon an order, under the 11 Geo. 4 & 1 Will. 4, c. 60, for the infant heir of a trustee under a settlement to convey to parties who claimed under the will of a party who claimed under the limitation in the settlement to the right heirs of the settlor :—Held, that such heir need not be served with the order of reference to the master, or other orders in the matter of the reference ; and the petition of such infant, that he might be directed to convey upon the trusts of the settlement, instead of the trusts of the subsequent will, and that he might be served with such orders as aforesaid, being wrong, the petitioner could not have his costs of opposing the cestui que trust. Bradburne, In re, 12 L. J., Ch. 353.

v. Transfer of Stock under the 36 Geo. 3, c. 90, and Succeeding Statutes.

Under the 36 Geo. 3, c. 90 — Trustee of Unsound Mind.]—Stock ordered to be transferred, under the stat. 36 Geo. 3, c. 90, the trustee being of unsound mind, though no commission had issued, and having actually refused to transfer, the refusal proceeding from mere weakness of mind. Simms v. Naylor, 4 Ves. 360.

A lunatic abroad, under a judicial proceeding in the nature of a commission of lunacy, is not within the stat. 36 Geo. 3, c. 90, s. 3. Sylva v. Da Costa, 8 Ves. 316.

A trustee, who is in a state of mind which renders him incompetent for the management of business, may refuse to transfer within the meaning of the 36 Geo. 3, c. 90, s. 1. West v. Ayles, Turn. & R. 330.

Construction of the act 36 Geo. 3, c. 90, s. 3, directing the transfer in certain cases of stock standing in the name of a lunatic or his committee, not to extend to stock standing in the name of another to which the lunatic is entitled as administrator. Adams, Ex parte, 2 Mer. 112.

—— Trustees under Foreign Will—No Representatives Here.]—Trustees under a foreign will dead, and no personal representation taken out in this country, is a case for relief, by directing a transfer of stock, within the stat. 36 Geo. 3, c. 90. Lee v. Bank of England, 8 Ves. 44.

Order for a transfer of stock within the stat. 36 Geo. 3, c. 90, as upon a refusal by a party appearing by counsel, and admitting that she had disobeyed an order to transfer. Rider v. Kidder, 13 Ves. 123.

—— Trustee out of Jurisdiction.]—Under 36 Geo. 3, c. 90, on proof that one trustee had become bankrupt, and absconded, and was abroad, and not likely to return, order was made that remaining trustee should transfer stock into name of himself and another as co-trustees. Williams v. Bird, 1 V. & B. 3.

Where a bill is filed under the 36 Geo. 3, c. 90, merely to obtain a transfer of stock standing in name of a trustee who is out of the jurisdiction of court, the order must be made at the hearing of the cause, and cannot be obtained by petition. Burr v. Mason, 2 Sim. & S. 11.

—— Absconding Trustee.]—Trustee of fund absconding, dividends of fund ordered to be paid to the cestui que vie. Wharton v. Massey, Dick. 429.

Under the 6 Geo. 4, c. 74—Act only Extends to Express Trusts.]—A. and B., the residuary legatees of a deceased person, obtained administration of and had part of the assets transferred to their names. The letters of administration were afterwards recalled, and administration granted to B., the sole next of kin of the deceased, who was declared to have died intestate. A. was abroad, and B. a prisoner for contempt, for not obeying an order of the court to transfer to the credit of the cause certain stock, which they had admitted, by their answer, to belong to the deceased. A petition was presented, under the 6 Geo. 4, c. 74, to have the stock transferred ; but the court held, that the act extended only to express trusts, and refused to make the order. Dew v. Clarke, 4 Russ. 511.

——Refusal by Executors of a Deceased Trustee to take out Probate.]—The executor of a surviving trustee appointed three executors, who in an adverse litigation procured probate of his will to be decreed to them, but afterwards refused to take out probate. They are legal personal representatives of the surviving trustee, within the meaning of 6 Geo. 4, c. 74, and an order will be made under that act for the transfer of stock standing in the trustee's name. An affidavit that they refuse to take out probate of the testator's will is not sufficient to ground an order under the act; it should state that they refuse to take the steps necessary for enabling them to transfer. Winter, Ex parte, 5 Russ. 284.

Under the 11 Geo. 4 & 1 Will. 4, c. 60—Construction of Act.]—Construction of 11 Geo. 4 & 1 Will. 4, c. 60, s. 10. Anon., 2 Jur. 886.

Construction of 11 Geo. 4 & 1 Will. 4, c. 60, ss. 10, 11. There must be a clear case of trust to justify the court in transferring. Crouch v. Crouch, 2 Jur. 773.

The request in writing mentioned in the stat. 11 Geo. 4 & 1 Will. 4, c. 60, s. 10, as to the transfer of stock, means a private request by the party requiring the transfer, and service of an order of court directing such transfer is not sufficient. Madge v. Riley, 3 Y. & C. 425.

A decree declared a defendant, against whom the bill had been taken pro confesso, to be a trustee of stock for the plaintiffs; but the court declined to refer it to the master to appoint a person to transfer the stock, in the place of the defendant, except upon a petition presented under 11 Geo. 4 & 1 Will. 4, c. 60. Fellowes v. Till, 5 Sim. 319.

But where the widow and administratrix of an intestate, who had also left a child, of her own accord had transferred money in the funds into the names of herself and the infant child, it was ordered, under the 11 Geo. 4 & 1 Will. 4, c. 60, that the child should join in transferring the third to which the widow was entitled. Kidd v. Kidd, 1 Beav. 225, n.; 2 L. J., Ch. 24.

—— Infants.]—A testatrix directed funds to be transferred in the bank books into the names of A. B. and wife, and their children, who were infants, for the benefit of A. B. and wife for life, with remainder to their children. This was done, and a suit being instituted for the performance of the trusts:—Held, that the court had no jurisdiction, under 11 Geo. 4 & 1 Will. 4, c. 60, to order the infants to transfer the fund into court. Watts v. Scrivens, 1 Beav. 223.

—— Bengal Government Notes.] — Bengal government notes are land within the meaning of the act 11 Geo. 4 & 1 Will. 4, c. 60. Dyce Sombre, In re, 1 Mac. & G. 101; 13 Jur. 218.

—— Trustee refusing to Transfer.]—The executor of a surviving trustee declined stating whether he would or would not prove the will, and neglected for thirty-one days after notice to transfer trust-stock standing in the name of the testator:—Held, that he was a trustee within the 11 Geo. 4 & 1 Will. 4, c. 60, and a transfer was ordered to new trustees. Cockell v. Pugh, 6 Beav. 293.

Petition, under the 11 Geo. 4 & 1 Will. 4, c. 60, s. 10, for the appointment of a person to transfer stock in the place of a trustee refusing. Crowther, In re, 3 Jur. 21.

A. and B. claimed adversely a sum of stock standing in the names of A. and two other persons as trustees. A. filed an amicable bill to have the rights and interests of himself and B. declared; A. was beyond sea, commanding a merchant vessel on a voyage to India. B. presented a petition, under 11 Geo. 4 & 1 Will. 4, c. 60, praying that the stock might be transferred into court in the cause. Petition refused, the case not being within the act. Hutchinson v. Stephens, 5 Sim. 498; 3 L. J., Ch. 239.

—— Trustee refusing to Receive Dividends.]—Stock was vested in trustees in trust to pay the dividends to persons successively entitled for life. One of the trustees had acted, by joining in a power of attorney to receive the dividends, but, a new power of attorney being necessary, he refused to join in giving it, or in receiving the dividends. There was a power to appoint new trustees vested in the acting trustee of the deed. A petition was presented by the person entitled to the first life interest to have a trustee appointed to receive and pay over the dividends:—Held, not a case within s. 10 of 11 Geo. 4 & 1 Will. 4, c. 60. Byrne, In re, 1 Jo. & Lat. 535; 6 Ir. Eq. R. 563.

—— One Trustee out of Jurisdiction.]—Stock was invested in the names of two persons upon trust, as was alleged, for the petitioners. The only evidence of the trust was the statements in the petition and verifying affidavits of a letter written by the donor for the purposes of the application. One of the alleged trustees being resident in some place unknown, out of the jurisdiction, a petition was presented, praying that the stock might be transferred to the petitioners; but the court refused to make the order in his absence, though it was stated that he declined to act, and the other trustee submitted to act as the court should direct. Dunbar, In re, 2 Jo. & Lat. 120; 8 Ir. Eq. R. 71.

—— Executor out of Jurisdiction.]—Testator gave an annuity to his widow, and the residue of his estate to his children. The executors paid the testator's debts and legacies, and purchased stock in their names to answer the annuity, and paid the dividends to the widow. One of the executors went to reside abroad, and the other died:—Held, that they were trustees of the stock, within 11 Geo. 4 & 1 Will. 4. Dover, Ex parte, 5 Sim. 500.

One of two executors appearing, from the proceedings in the cause, to be a trustee, within the meaning of the 11 Geo. 4 & 1 Will. 4, c. 60, of a fund standing in the testator's name, and it being proved by affidavit that he was living out of the jurisdiction, the court, without a reference to the master, made an order under this act for the transfer of the fund by his co-executor. Parker v. Burney, 1 Beav. 492; 8 L. J., Ch. 107.

—— Refusal of Next of Kin of Surviving Trustee to Administer.]—The survivor of four trustees of a sum of stock died intestate, and his sole next of kin refused to administer to him:—Held, that the case was not within s. 10 of 11 Geo. 4 & 1 Will. 4, c. 60, and therefore the court could not appoint a person to transfer the stock. Lunn's Charity, In re, 15 Sim. 464. On appeal, 11 Jur. 256.

—— Lunatic Trustee.]—Upon an application, under the 11 Geo. 4 & 1 Will. 4, c. 60, for a transfer of stock standing in the name of a lunatic trustee, the lord chancellor will not adopt the facts as found in the proceedings in a suit in the court of exchequer, but will require them to be ascertained by the usual reference. Prideaux, In re, 2 Myl. & Cr. 640; 7 L. J., Ch. 82.

Where stock is standing in the names of trustees, one of whom becomes a lunatic, and new trustees are appointed in his place, the court will not order a transfer of the stock to be made to the cestui que trust, but it must be transferred to the old and new trustees. Smith, In re, 17 L. J., Ch. 415.

1. In General.

General Rules.]—As a general rule, trustees have a right to their costs out of the estate; but the application of the rule depends upon the conduct of the trustees and their strict observance of the duties of their trust. Beer v. Tapp, 31 L. J., Ch. 513; 6 L. T. 269; 10 W. R. 277.

A trustee seeking the direction and indemnity of court, as to the execution of his trust, is always allowed his costs; unless the act required to be done leads to no responsibility, and the motive of the trustee is obviously vexatious. Curteis v. Chandler, 6 Madd. & Geld. 123.

Trustees who file a bill for the administration of a testator's estate, are entitled to their costs, however small the estate may be, and however small the risk in administering the estate. Hodgkinson v. Gilbert, 19 L. J., Ch. 424.

Costs of course out of the fund to agents, receivers, and trustees, who have accounted fairly and paid money into court. Costs cannot be given to a college individually, nor as a corporation, unless proved so. Att.-Gen. v. London (City), 1 Ves. 246; 3 Bro. C. C. 171.

A trustee is entitled to be reimbursed out of the trust property all the charges and expenses incurred in the execution of the trust, and in this the court will always deal liberally with a trustee acting bonâ fide. Courtney v. Rumley, Ir. R. 6 Eq. 99.

A trustee is entitled to his costs, unless he acts from motives of obstinacy and caprice. Taylor v. Glanville, 3 Madd. 176; 18 R. R. 210.

No costs to any party claiming under a contract not meritorious, even though recovered upon; not even to a trustee. Colman v. Sarrel, 1 Ves. 55; 1 R. R. 83.

Neglect of Trustees.]—Trustees neglecting their trust not entitled to their costs. England v. Downs, 6 Beav. 279.

Where trustee by neglect occasions the suit, no costs are given him, but against him, of course. O'Callaghan v. Cooper, 5 Ves. 117; Caffrey v. Darby, 6 Ves. 488.

A court of equity will not entertain a suit for enforcing a foreign judgment against a defendant unless he has been duly served with notice of the proceedings in the foreign court, and has had an opportunity for making his defence there. Griffin v. Brady, 39 L. J., Ch. 136; 18 W. R. 130.

But when, by reason of the neglect or refusal of a trustee to do his duty, a cestui que trust is compelled to resort to a foreign court for enforcing his right against the trustee, though the trustee should not be served with a notice of such proceedings, the court will, on application by the cestui que trust, order the trustee to pay the costs of such proceedings, as being costs necessarily incurred in consequence of the refusal of the trustee to do his duty. Ib.

Where, under the trusts of a doubtful will, the tenant for life, who was also a trustee, neglected to make proper investments, she was held chargeable with interest at 4 per cent. only, and the decree was made without costs. Mousley v. Carr, 4 Beav. 49; 10 L. J., Ch. 260.

Acting unreasonably—Vexatious and Unjustifiable Conduct—Costs thereby Incurred.]—A trustee may be honest, and yet from over-caution or some other cause he may act unreasonably, and if his conduct is so unreasonable as to be vexatious, oppressive, or otherwise wholly unjustifiable, and he thereby causes his cestuis que trust expense which would not otherwise have been incurred, the trustee must bear such expense, and it ought not to be thrown on the trust estate or on his cestuis que trust. Chapman, In re, Freeman v. Parker, 72 L. T. 66—C. A.

Right to set off Debt due against Costs.]—Where a person at the time of an order being made for payment of his costs by trustees on a petition in the matter of a trust is indebted to the trust estate, although the amount is not then ascertained, he cannot get any of such costs until he has paid the amount due from him to the trust, and the trustees, therefore, can set off the costs payable by them against the amount due from him. Harrald, In re, Wilde v. Walford, 53 L. J., Ch. 505; 51 L. T. 441—C. A.

Lien for Costs.]—Trustees for sale on the decease of a tenant for life having a prior legal estate:—Held, not to have any lien upon the property in respect of the costs of an abortive sale attempted by them during the tenancy for life, or of proceedings against them at law and in equity in reference thereto, notwithstanding such sale was attempted on the solicitation of the tenant for life, and with the consent and approbation, and by the direction of the cestuis que trust, one of whom was sui juris, the shares of the others, who were married women, being settled to their separate use without power of anticipation. Leedham v. Chawner, 4 K. & J. 458.

Improper Appointment of Trustee.]—A party accepting the office of trustee, though the form of appointment is legally followed, does so at his peril. If he is a stranger to the cestuis que trust, it is his duty to communicate with them before accepting the office. Peatfield v. Benn, 17 Beav. 522; 23 L. J., Ch. 497; 2 W. R. 68.

A defaulting trustee, pending a suit for an account and for the appointment of new trustees, appointed another person trustee; he accepted the office without any communication to the cestui que trust; upon a supplemental bill his costs were refused, but he was not made to pay any. Ib.

Mistake.]—Trustees who had acted bonâ fide, though upon an erroneous construction of a will, not ordered to pay costs. Harper v. Munday, 2 Jur. (N.S.) 1197; 5 W. R. 62—L.C.

Where a trustee committed a breach of trust from a mistake of his powers, he was made to pay costs. Powlett (Earl) v. Herbert, 1 Ves. sen. 297.

Appeal for Costs—"Charges and Expenses."]—Costs incurred by a trustee in actions relating to the estate are not "costs" in administration proceedings, but only "charges and expenses," and therefore an appeal lies from an order of the judge in such administration proceedings, allowing a trustee his costs of such actions out of the estate. Charles v. Jones (33 Ch. D. 80) explained; Chennell, In re (8 Ch. D. 492), approved. Beddoe, In re, Downes v. Cottam, 62 L. J., Ch. 233; [1893] 1 Ch. 547; 2 R. 223; 68 L. T. 595; 41 W. R. 177—C. A.

Right of Trustee's Executor to Costs out of Assets.]—The trustee of a marriage settlement invested the trust moneys, with the consent of the husband, who had a life interest under the settlement, in an unauthorised security. On the trustee's death, his widow, as his administratrix, became trustee, and, on ascertaining that the settlement fund was in great danger of being lost, instituted an action for administration of the trusts of the settlement, under which the greater part of the trust fund was recovered. It was contended, on the authority of Haldenby v. Spafforth (9 Beav. 195), that the plaintiff was entitled to her costs of the action:—Held, that that case must be understood to decide that the representative of a defaulting executor is entitled to costs out of the executor's assets, not out of the assets of the original testator whose estate is being administered. Gurney v. Gurney, 48 L. T. 529.

Held, accordingly, that the plaintiff could not be allowed to retain her costs of the action as against the cestuis que trust, though she was entitled to her costs, charges, and expenses as trustee other than those of the action. Ib.

Originating Summons — Costs.]—An originating summons under Rules of Supreme Court, 1883, Ord. LV. r. 3, for inquiries or directions, without administration, is equivalent to the old chancery practice of commencing an administration suit, raising the particular point by the pleadings, obtaining an inquiry by direction upon that point, and then staying further proceedings. Accordingly, upon such a summons, the court has jurisdiction, provided it has proper parties before it under r. 5, to deal with the question of costs, although no estate or fund is sought to be administered; and if the summons has been taken out by trustees, they are precisely in the same position, as regards their rights to costs under Ord. LXV. r. 8, as if it were an ordinary action for administration. Medland, In re, Eland v. Medland, 58 L. J., Ch. 572; 41 Ch. D. 476; 60 L. T. 851; 37 W. R. 753—C. A.

An originating summons was taken out under Rules of the Supreme Court, 1883, Ord. LV. r. 3 (g), by one of the three trustees of a will, against his co-trustees, to determine whether the trustees ought to call in certain mortgages on which the testator's residuary estate had been invested. One of the defendants was also tenant for life or widowhood of part of the residue, and the other was beneficially entitled absolutely to a moiety of the residue. The person beneficially entitled to the other moiety, a daughter of the testator, was not a party to the summons, but the plaintiff and one of the defendants were two of the three trustees of her marriage settlement which comprised her moiety:—Held, by North, J., that the court had jurisdiction, notwithstanding the summons did not ask for administration, to direct an inquiry what the trustees ought to do with regard to the calling in of the mortgages, but had no jurisdiction to make any order as to costs, all the persons interested in the trust estate not being before the court:—Held, on appeal, that the summons had been properly taken out under Ord. LV. r. 3 (g), and that under r. 5, a sufficient number of the persons beneficially interested in the estate had been served to give the court the same jurisdiction as to costs as in an ordinary administration action, though the court had power, if it thought fit, to require any other persons to be served before deciding the question of costs; and that the judge below ought to have exercised his discretion as to costs under Ord. LXV. r. 1, by reserving them, as in an administration action, until the inquiry directed had been answered. Ib.

Retainer of Costs—Order—"The Judge doth not think fit to make any Order as to Costs."]—Where in an action between a cestui que trust and a trustee the judge, having his attention directed to the question of the payment of the costs of the action, and having the estate sufficiently represented before him, makes an order that he "doth not think fit to make any order as to the costs," the trustee is not entitled to retain the costs out of the trust estate in his hands. Hodgkinson, In re, Hodgkinson v. Hodgkinson, 64 L. J., Ch. 663; [1895] 2 Ch. 190; 12 R. 297; 72 L. T. 617; 43 W. R. 594—C. A.

—— Statute-barred Items.]—Trustees acting honestly are entitled to pay and retain the amount of a bill of costs, although some of the items in it are statute-barred, and the cestuis que trust cannot intervene and prevent the payment. Budgett v. Budgett, 64 L. J., Ch. 209; [1895] 1 Ch. 202; 13 R. 1; 71 L. T. 632; 43 W. R. 167.

Trustee not Appearing at Hearing.]—A trustee not appearing at the hearing of the cause, a decree was made against him, with liberty to show cause against it. Under this order, he set down the cause again, and prayed his costs, which were given him on paying the costs of the day on the former hearing. Norris v. Norris, 1 Cox, 183.

Action to Enforce Pre-existing Interests.]—A party becoming a trustee under a deed creating interests adverse to interests already existing may be liable to costs in a suit instituted to enforce such pre-existing interests in the trust property. Heap v. Tonge, 9 Hare, 105; 20 L. J., Ch. 661.

Action of Covenant—Bill of Interpleader.]—An action of covenant was brought against a trustee, who lodged the amount claimed in court, and filed a bill of interpleader, which was dismissed with costs on demurrer:—Held, he was entitled to have the money returned without deducting the costs. Doyle v. Dumoncel, 11 Ir. Eq. R. 517.

Claim of Trustee to Trust Property.]—Where a suit was not occasioned by the claim of a trustee to the trust property, and the costs had not been increased by that claim, the costs of the trustee were allowed. Rittson v. Stordy, 1 Jur. (N.S.) 771; 3 W. R. 627.

Trustees appearing without being Served.]—Where an infant defendant had married without obtaining the consent of the court, funds in court in her name were ordered to be paid to her husband with her consent, no settlement having been made. The trustees of the fund, who appeared without having been served, were not allowed their costs. Bennett v. Biddles, 10 Jur. 534.

Question as to whether Legal Estate passed.]—It not being clear whether the legal estate in the realty passed by the codicil of the survivor of the two trustees, or descended to his heir, the costs of making such heir a party to a suit, brought by the executors of such surviving trustee against the cestuis que trust, were given to the plaintiffs. Greenwood v. Wakeford, 1 Beav. 576; 8 L. J., Ch. 333.

Action for Specific Performance.]—Agreement for a lease of a farm, referring to a paper containing the terms: bill for specific performance according to such clauses, as had been read to the plaintiff: parol evidence to prove that was refused, and the bill dismissed. Bill being dismissed without costs, as a hard case, parties made trustees without their knowledge, and as such being necessary parties to the bill, cannot have costs against plaintiff, but left to their remedy against their principal: otherwise perhaps, if plaintiff had prevailed; because then those costs might have been given over against other defendants. Brodie v. St. Paul, 1 Ves. 326.

Where plaintiff's bill for specific performance of an agreement for sale was dismissed, plaintiff must pay the costs, though he was only a trustee for sale. Edwards v. Harvey, G. Cooper, 40.

New Trustees liable to pay Costs preliminary to Appointment—Costs of old Trustees—Costs of Donee of Power.]—In a partition action an order was made directing the taxation of the costs of the parties, including in the costs of the defendants, the trustees, "one moiety of any costs, charges, and expenses properly incurred by them as trustees of the will of the testator beyond their costs" of the action. The taxing-master disallowed the costs of former trustees, who were dead, paid to the executor of the survivor in consideration of his transferring the trust property, also costs of examining into the state of the trust property, and the validity of the power, before the appointment, also costs of the donee of the power in appointing. On summons to review taxation:—Held, that the trustees were bound to pay the costs of the old trustees properly incurred; that the burden of proof that the payments were wrong lay on the objectors:—Held, also, that it was not only the right, but the duty, of the new trustees to see what the estate consisted of and that the power was properly exercised; also that they were entitled to the costs of the donee of the power which they had paid. The trustees were therefore on principle entitled to the costs disallowed, subject to the discretion of the taxing-master as to items. Harvey v. Olliver, 57 L. T. 239.

Solicitor-Trustee, Rights of.]—See ante, C. 8.

2. Rights of Co-trustees Inter se.

Lien.]—A large balance was found due jointly from a trustee and the representatives of a deceased trustee; but costs were given to both when such balance had been paid. It being admitted that no part of it could be recovered from the estate of the deceased trustee:—Held, that the surviving trustee, on payment by him of the share of the deceased trustee, was entitled to a lien for it on the costs awarded to the representatives. The court ordered such costs to be carried over to a separate account, with liberty to apply. Birks v. Mucklethwait, 33 Beav. 409.

Solicitor-Trustee—Negligence.]—Where there were two trustees, one of whom was a solicitor, and entrusted by the other with the management of the trust estate, to which, by his negligence, loss accrued, as between the two trustees, the solicitor-trustee was held bound to reimburse his co-trustee all the costs, charges, and expenses properly incurred by the latter in suits and other proceedings rendered necessary by such negligence of the former. Lockhart v. Reilly, 25 L. J., Ch. 697; 3 W. R. 227.

—— Vexatious Proceedings.] — Where two co-executors of a trustee, one of them a solicitor, were jointly liable in respect of a breach of trust committed by their testator, the solicitor having had the sole management of the trust estate, and having resorted to vexatious means to evade legal proceedings, an order was made, as between him and his co-trustee, that the latter was entitled to recover from him the whole costs of the action. Price v. Price, 42 L. T. 626.

Joint Retainer of Solicitor.]—Though a solicitor who accidentally (or upon separate retainers) represents two or more parties ought to distinguish the charges incurred for each separate party, yet where there is a joint retainer (or by trustees not severing in their defence) he can enforce the whole bill of costs incurred against either of the parties. Watson v. Rowe, 43 L. J., Ch. 664; L. R. 18 Eq. 680; 22 W. R. 793.

Two trustees gave a joint retainer in a suit to administer the trust estate. One became insolvent and was indebted to the estate:—Held, that the solvent trustee should have the whole costs of himself and his co-trustee allowed out of the estate without any set-off in respect of the estate. Ib.

3. Indemnity to Trustee by Cestui que Trust.

Cestui que Trust using Trustee's Name as Co-defendant.]—A cestui que trust, using trustee's name as co-defendant, ordered to give latter security for costs. Annesley v. Simeon, 4 Madd. 390.

Cestui que Trust about to bring Action.]—A cestui que trust, about to file a bill, should apply to his trustee to become a co-plaintiff, indemnifying him against costs. If he refuses, he must abide his own costs, as a defendant. If he is not applied to, plaintiff must pay his costs. Reade v. Sparkes, 1 Moll. 8.

Trustee requested to bring Action to Compel Payment of Settled Debt.]—Where, by the terms of a marriage settlement, it was declared that a trustee should stand possessed of a debt, upon trust, in the first instance, to call in or compel payment of such debt, unless the cestuis que trust consented to its remaining outstanding, and the trustee is requested by the cestuis que trust to call in the debt, he is not entitled to an indemnity from them previous to his bringing an action, if necessary, for the same; and a trustee, under such circumstances, was made to pay the costs of a suit made necessary by his neglecting to bring the action. Kirby v. Mash, 3 Y. & C. 295; 8 L. J., Ex. Eq. 33; 3 Jur. 221.

Receiver appointed to bring Actions in Name of Executrix.]—A receiver appointed to collect in assets, and to bring actions in the name of an executrix, must give security to indemnify the executrix on account of such actions. Taylor v. Allen, 2 Atk. 213.

4. Trustees Acting in a Professional Character.

Auctioneers.]—A. by deed assigned to B. timber and stock in trade, upon trust to sell and apply the money arising from the sale in paying the expenses of preparing for, making, and completing such sale or sales, "including the usual auctioneer's commission, and otherwise incidental to the aforesaid trusts." B. was an auctioneer, and had been employed as such by A.:—Held, that the words appeared to have been inserted to provide for B. being employed in the sale, and that B. was entitled to charge his commission. Douglas v. Archbutt, 2 De G. & J. 148; 27 L. J., Ch. 271; 4 Jur. (N.S) 315; 6 W. R. 306.

An assignee of a mortgage, being one of a firm of auctioneers, sells under a power contained in the mortgage deed, and charges for personal trouble and commission. On the question whether he was entitled to those charges:—Held, that so far as and when he was mortgagee in possession he was a trustee, and the rule of equity applied, and he was therefore not entitled to charge for personal trouble during that period. Mathison v. Clarke, 3 Drew. 3; 3 Eq. R. 127; 24 L. J., Ch. 202; 18 Jur. 1020; 3 W. R. 2.

Broker.]—A broker, having taken an assignment of several cargoes in trust to sell them on their arrival, and, out of the proceeds, to repay himself the amount of his advances, took possession of some of the cargoes, and sold them under the power in the deed, while the rest were sold under an order made in a suit instituted by him to enforce his security, by which it was directed, that they should be sold by him in such manner and at such time as he and the receiver in the cause should agree, and in the event of their differing, then as the master should direct:—Held, that, in the latter sales he was entitled to the usual commission allowed to brokers employed by the court, but that in the former he was not entitled to any commission, having sold as trustee. Arnold v. Garner, 2 Ph. 231; 16 L. J., Ch. 329; 11 Jur. 339.

Bankers.]—Where bankers become also trustees, they are not entitled, in the absence of any contract, either express or implied, to make a profit of their fiduciary duties, by employing themselves as bankers, and by advancing, in that character, to their cestuis que trust, money to be repaid with compound interest. Crosskill v. Bower, 32 Beav. 86: 1 N. R. 379; 32 L. J., Ch. 540; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 267; 8 L. T. 135; 11 W. R. 411.

The trustees were held not to be legally entitled to claim more than simple interest at 5 per cent. per annum on sums advanced by them. Ib.

Surveyors.]—When a testator declared that "his trustees should be entitled to receive all costs, charges, and expenses, fees to counsel, and for advice and for professional assistance and loss of time," one of the trustees, who was a land surveyor, was held entitled to compensation for loss of time. Willis v. Kibble, 1 Beav. 559.

A testator gave all his residuary real and personal estate to trustees, upon trust for his wife for life; and after her death he directed that a just and true valuation should be made of "all his freehold and leasehold estates, stocks, funds, and securities, and other residuary personal estate," and directed the same to be divided, or considered as divided, into seven equal parts, and then disposed thereof; and the testator directed that A. B., one of his executors, who was a surveyor by profession, "should be entitled to charge, and should be allowed all reasonable charges, as a surveyor, in valuing his said freehold and leasehold estates, and in letting the same, and in collecting the rents, or otherwise in the management of his said estates, whenever requested or instructed so to act by his co-trustees":—Held, that this latter clause applied solely to the valuation and management of the freehold and leasehold estates, and that A. B. was not entitled, under this clause, to make any charges in respect of valuations made by him of the residuary's personalty after the death of the testator's widow. Knott v. Cottee, 16 Jur. 752.

Solicitor—Trustee—Out of Pocket Expenses.]—A trustee, who is a solicitor, is entitled to be repaid such costs, charges, and expenses only as he has properly paid out of pocket; and it makes no difference in this respect that the instrument creating the trust may have directed that the trust moneys should be applied (inter alia) in payment of all expenses, disbursements, and charges to be incurred, sustained, or borne by the trustee in professional business, journeys, or otherwise, and that the trustee might retain all reasonable costs, charges, and expenses, which he might sustain or be put unto, such costs, charges, and expenses to be reckoned, stated, and paid as between attorney and client. Moore v. Frowd, 3 Myl. & Cr. 45; 6 L. J., Ch. 372; 1 Jur. 653.

A solicitor, who is trustee, is not entitled to charge for his professional services, which must be assumed to have been rendered in his character of trustee; but under a contract entered into, he may be entitled to his professional charges. Sherwood, In re, 3 Beav. 338; 10 L. J., Ch. 2; 4 Jur. 982.

Where a trustee acts as solicitor in the trust matters, he is only entitled to costs out of pocket, although the rule is not inflexible, and, under special circumstances, the court may authorise compensation by a fixed salary, but not by allowing him to make the usual professional charges. Bainbrigge v. Blair, 8 Beav. 588; 9 Jur. 765; S. C., nom. Blair v. Bainbrigge, 14 L. J., Ch. 405.

A trustee, who was a solicitor, came to a final settlement of accounts with his cestuis que trust, and thereupon a general release was executed. In the accounts, the trustee had taken credit for bills of costs for professional services, to which, under the general rule, he was not entitled. The cestuis que trust were assisted on the occasion by an independent solicitor, who perused the bills, and settled and attested the release:—Held, under the circumstances, that the trustee was entitled to the benefit of the release. Stanes v. Parker, 9 Beav. 385; 10 Jur. 603.

On a settlement of account between a cestui que trust and trustee (a solicitor), the latter charged for professional services in the trust; a release was executed, but the cestui que trust not having had any independent professional assistance on the occasion, the court relieved him from the professional charges, beyond costs out of pocket. Todd v. Wilson, 9 Beav. 486; 15 L. J., Ch. 450; 10 Jur. 626.

Unless there be an agreement for the purpose, a trustee who is a solicitor is not entitled to charge his cestui que trust more than the money out of pocket for his services in carrying on suits in relation to and managing the trusts. Gomley v. Wood, 3 Jo. & Lat. 678; 9 Ir. Eq. R. 418.

A solicitor, who accepts a trust under a will or settlement, is not entitled to charge for work and labour done by him as a solicitor in executing the trust. New v. Jones, 1 Hall & Tw. 631, n.; 1 Mac. & G. 668, n.

—— Limit on Rule.]—The rule that a solicitor, being also a trustee and a party to a cause, is not entitled to charge costs except costs out of pocket, does not extend beyond the case of his acting as solicitor for himself alone. Cradock v. Piper, 17 Sim. 41. Affirmed, 1 Mac. & G. 664; 1 Hall & Tw. 617; 19 L. J., Ch. 107; 14 Jur. 97.

Under an order to tax costs generally, or to tax costs as between solicitor and client, the taxing masters are at liberty to take notice of the fact that the solicitor is also a trustee, and to apply the rule accordingly. Ib.

The costs of a defendant trustee, notwithstanding he was a solicitor, ordered to be taxed as between solicitor and client. York v. Brown, 1 Coll. C. C. 260; 8 Jur. 567.

A trustee who acts as solicitor for himself is entitled to his full costs against parties, who unsuccessfully endeavour to set aside the trust deed. Pince v. Beattie, 2 N. R. 546; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 1119; 9 L. T. 315; 11 W. R. 979.

The trustee of the separate property of a married woman acted as her attorney in three several suits instituted in relation to the trust property. In the first of these suits he was not a party; in the others he was:—Held, that in the first suit he was entitled to his costs as between solicitor and client, but in the two others only to costs out of pocket. Fraser v. Palmer, 4 Y. & C. 515.

A decree in a redemption suit directed that solicitors who were mortgagees, and who acted for themselves, should be allowed their principal, interest, and costs, and the master allowed full costs. A motion for an order to review the taxation, on the ground that the costs out of pocket only ought to have been allowed, was refused, but without costs, there having been no objection to the form of the decree at the hearing. Price v. M'Beth, 33 L. J., Ch. 460; 10 Jur. (N.S.) 579; 10 L. T. 521; 12 W. R. 818.

A cestui que trust agreed that her trustee, if he acted as solicitor in a suit, should receive full costs. A bill was delivered on February 18, and on March 8, the solicitor ceased to act. After discussion as to the amount, and having received other professional advice, the client paid the bill on May 22, a deduction being made therein. On an application being made within twelve months, the court refused to order a taxation. Wyche, In re, 11 Beav. 209.

—— Not Confined to Express Trust.]—The rule that a solicitor trustee acting in the trust shall not be allowed profit costs is not restricted to cases of express trust, but applies to an executor or trustee, though there be no express trust. Pollard v. Doyle, 1 Dr. & Sm. 319; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 1139; 3 L. T. 432; 9 W. R. 28.

Profit costs disallowed to an executor who had acted as his own solicitor, upon an objection taken by a creditor who was a party to the suit. Ib.

—— Acting for a Body of Trustees of whom he is One.]—Where one of a set of trustees is a solicitor, and by the direction of his co-trustees acts professionally in matters relating to the trust estate (such business being done out of court, and not in a cause in chancery), he will not be allowed any remuneration for professional services, but only be entitled to costs out of pocket. Broughton v. Broughton, 5 De G. M. & G. 160; 25 L. J., Ch. 250; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 965; 3 W. R. 602.

Where one of a set of trustees is one of a firm of solicitors, and the firm act, by the direction of the trustees, professionally in the matters of the trust estate (such business being done out of court, and not in a cause in chancery), the firm will not be allowed any remuneration for their professional services, but only be entitled to costs out of pocket. Ib.

The principle of the general rule applicable to such cases explained. The case of Cradock v. Piper, infra, and, in connection with it that of Lincoln v. Windsor, infra, remarked upon. Ib.

The rule that a solicitor, being also a trustee and a party to a cause, is not entitled to charge costs, except costs out of pocket, does not extend beyond the case of his acting as solicitor for himself alone. Cradock v. Piper, 1 Mac. & G. 664; 1 Hall & Tw. 617; 19 L. J., Ch. 107; 14 Jur. 97.

Application of the rule to the case of a solicitor acting for a body of trustees, of whom he himself was one. Ib.

Under an order to tax costs generally, or to tax costs as between solicitor and client, the taxing masters are at liberty to take notice of the fact that the solicitor is also a trustee, and to apply the rule accordingly. Ib.

The rule which allows a solicitor, being also a trustee and a party to a cause, to charge full costs where he acts in the suit for a body of trustees, of which he himself is one, does not apply to the case of a solicitor being a trustee and acting as solicitor for himself and his co-trustees in the administration of the trust estate out of court. Lincoln v. Windsor, 9 Hare 158; 20 L. J., Ch. 531; 15 Jur. 765.

Employing a professional person implies an undertaking to remunerate him, but the inference may be rebutted. Monson v. Baillie, 2 Macq. H. L. 80.

Six trustees appointed one of their own body, a solicitor, to act, with an allowance "of his necessary charges and expenses, and a reasonable gratification." He had an interest in the estate; those who appointed him had not. He contended, however, that they were responsible for the expenses incurred by him in attempting to realise the property for his own benefit, and that he was himself to be absolved from all participation in that responsibility:—Held, that he was wrong. Ib.

—— Principal and Agent—Division of Profits.]—A solicitor, one of three trustees, appointing another solicitor to act for him on agency terms, does so for the benefit of the trust, although it be done with the consent of his co-trustees; and any advantage which may arise to him by the contract is for the benefit of the trust estate:—Held, therefore, that a taxation of the solicitor's costs was properly made as between principal and agent, instead of solicitor and client. Taylor, In re, 23 L. J., Ch. 857; 18 Jur. 666; 2 W. R. 249.

—— Executor.]—Whether an executor, being a solicitor and acting as such in the administration of the estate, by bringing or defending suits or otherwise, is entitled to an allowance for costs in respect of his professional labour, beyond costs out of pocket, and if so, whether as between solicitor and client, quære. Carmichael v. Willson or Wilson, 4 Bligh (N.S.) 146; 2 Dow. & Cl. 51—H. L. (Ir.)

A solicitor was appointed executor, and was to be at liberty to charge for his professional services:—Held, that he was only entitled to charge for services strictly professional, and not for matters which an executor ought to have done without the intervention of a solicitor, such as for attendances to pay premiums on policies, attendances at the bank to make transfers, and attendances on proctors, auctioneers, legatees, and creditors. Harbin v. Darby, 28 Beav. 325; 29 L. J., Ch. 622; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 906; 8 W. R. 512.

The solicitor for the plaintiff in a mortgage suit, being also a co-plaintiff, as executor of the mortgagee is only entitled to the costs out of pocket. Macartney v. Dickey, 16 Ir. Ch. R. 409. And see Pollard v. Doyle, supra.

—— Executor of Solicitor himself an Executor.]—A solicitor, who was one of the executors of a testator, paid himself out of the assets a bill for business done for the testator. Twenty-six years after the death of the testator, and ten years after the death of the solicitor, a decree was made directing the usual accounts of the testator's personal estate. The executor of the solicitor, in bringing in his accounts under the decree, inserted the bill of costs as one of his items of discharge:—Held, that although as between solicitor and client the bill was no longer subject to taxation, yet, as against the executor, the persons beneficially interested were entitled to question its amount as an item of discharge, but that an order referring it for taxation was not proper, the right course being to direct the taxing master to state whether any items objected to were fair and proper to be allowed, and to what amount. Allen v. Jarvis, L. R. 4 Ch. 616; 21 L. T. 280; 17 W. R. 943.

—— Partners.]—Where one of the two partners was a trustee under a will:—Held, that the firm could only charge the testator's estate for costs out of pocket. Collins v. Carey, 2 Beav. 149.

Trustees can only be allowed costs out of pocket for professional business transacted by a firm one of whom is a trustee, though the business be done by one of the partners who is not a trustee. Christophers v. White, 10 Beav. 523.

The rule that a trustee shall make no profit of his trust does not extend to his partner, and therefore where a trustee, being a solicitor, employed his partner professionally in the matter of the trust, upon the terms of such partner being alone entitled to the profits, the court allowed the professional charges. Clack v. Carlon, 30 L. J., Ch. 639; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 441; 4 L. T. 361; 9 W. R. 568.

In a suit by a trustee against his co-trustee, a solicitor, and the parties beneficially interested under a will, some of them being infants, the costs of all parties had been ordered to be taxed and paid. It appeared that the defendant trustee, the solicitor, had conducted his defence by his partner. The taxing master allowed the solicitor trustee costs out of pocket only:—Held, that the rule which had allowed to solicitor trustees costs out of pocket only being well established, the court would not, with reference to the question of costs, inquire whether the conduct of the suit by the partner of the solicitor trustee was beneficial for all parties, though no party objected to such inquiry, but that all costs beyond those out of pocket must be disallowed. Lyon v. Baker, 5 De G. & Sm. 622.

5. Where Settlement Set Aside.

Voluntary Settlement — Bankruptcy.] — A voluntary settlement made by an insolvent having been set aside at the suit of the assignee, the court refused to order the trustee of the settlement to pay the plaintiff's costs, but gave him no costs as against the plaintiff. Townsend v. Westacott, 4 Beav. 58; 5 Jur. 743.

—— Attempt to uphold Settlement—Lien on Fund.]—Trustees of a settlement, originally valid, but which becomes void on the bankruptcy of the settlor, are entitled as against the trustee in bankruptcy to a lien on the trust property for expenses properly incurred in the performance of their duty as trustees. Official Receiver, Ex parte, Holden, In re, 57 L. J., Q. B. 47; 20 Q. B. D. 43; 58 L. T. 118; 36 W. R. 189.

The settlor of a post-nuptial settlement brought an action to set it aside. The trustees of the settlement defended the action, which was dismissed with costs, but the costs were not paid. The settlor became bankrupt within two years after the date of the settlement, which accordingly became void under s. 47 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1883 :—Held, that, as the settlement was originally valid, and as the costs of the action had been incurred by the trustees in the performance of their duty as trustees, they were entitled, as against the official receiver, to a lien on the trust fund for such costs. Ib.

—— Rectification—No Claim by Trustees.]—In an action against the trustees of a voluntary settlement for rectification :—Held, that as they did not set up any claim, but represented absent parties, who could not be ascertained, it was their duty to attempt to maintain the settlement, and therefore the costs of the trustees were declared to be a charge on the trust estate. James v. Couchman, 54 L. J., Ch. 838; 29 Ch. D. 212; 52 L. T. 344; 33 W. R. 452. And see Everitt v. Everitt, 39 L. J., Ch. 777; L. R. 10 Eq. 405; 23 L. T. 136; 18 W. R. 1020.

—— Appeal.] — The judge of the county court set aside a voluntary settlement. He gave the trustee in the liquidation his costs out of the debtor's estate, but made no order as to the costs of the trustees of the settlement. The trustees of the settlement appealed to the chief judge, who discharged the order of the county court. The court of appeal restored the order of the county court :—Held, that the trustees of the settlement ought to have been satisfied with the decision of the county court, and that they must bear their own costs of the appeals, and must pay the costs of the trustee in the liquidation of both appeals. Russell, Ex parte, Butterworth, In re, 51 L. J., Ch. 521; 19 Ch. D. 588; 46 L. T. 113; 30 W. R. 584—C. A.

Where a settlement is set aside the trustee has no right to his costs as a matter of right, there being no contract in existence; and, therefore, if costs are given against him, he has no right of appeal. Dutton v. Thompson, 52 L. J., Ch. 661; 23 Ch. D. 278; 49 L. T. 109; 31 W. R. 596—C. A. And see Turner v. Hancock, 51 L. J., Ch. 517; 20 Ch. D. 303; 46 L. T. 750; 30 W. R. 480—C. A.

6. Opinion of Counsel.

Trustees Acting on Opinion.]—If counsel undertake to say they consider trustees would not have acted safely without taking the opinion of the court, semble, the court will not give costs against them, though in a clear case. Young, Ex parte, Shanks or Gowen, In re, Mont. & C. 599.

It is not necessarily sufficient to entitle trustees to their costs of a suit that they have acted under the advice of counsel. Devey v. Thornton, 9 Hare, 232; 22 L. J., Ch. 163.

Semble, where a trustee, on a doubtful point, has taken the opinion of counsel, which is directly opposed to that of counsel taken by the opposite party, but the trustee offers to be guided by the opinion of a third counsel, on a case stated on instructions approved by both parties, he is entitled to his costs of a suit under which a decree is made against him, directing him to do an act which his counsel advised him he was not bound to do, and especially where the trustee was not permitted to inspect the case and opinion of counsel taken by the other party. Poole v. Pass, 1 Beav. 600; 8 L. J., Ch. 325.

—— Costs of Opinion.]—A trustee is entitled to the costs of taking the opinion of counsel for his guidance. Ib.

A. B. was entrapped into becoming a trustee; but it was agreed that he should be discharged. He consulted counsel as to the liability he had incurred, and instructed him to prepare proper deeds for his protection. It was discovered that a breach of trust had been committed previous to his becoming trustee, and counsel prepared a bond and release for A. B.'s protection, but which were never executed, in consequence of a suit having been instituted by A. B. to set the matter right. During the above-mentioned suit the tenant for life made proposals to A. B. for a settlement, and on which the advice of counsel was obtained by A. B. in conference :—Held, that A. B. was entitled to the fee paid by him for this conference. Stephens v. Newborough (Lord), 11 Beav. 403; 17 L. J., Ch. 332; 12 Jur. 319.

—— Not Acting on Opinion.]—Funds were settled for the benefit of the survivor of husband and wife for life, and after the death of the survivor, to be held in trust for all or one of the children or child or remoter issue of the marriage as husband and wife should jointly appoint, and in default as the survivor should appoint. There was only one child of the marriage, a son, and the wife died without having exercised the joint power. Two months after the son came of age the father appointed that the fund should be paid to him after his own decease. Soon after this the father and son applied to the trustees to transfer the funds into their joint names. The father had also, during the minority of the son, applied to the trustees to transfer the far greater part of the fund into his sole name. The trustees laid a case before counsel, who advised that if certain requisitions were complied with, the trustees might safely transfer without suit. The requisitions were complied with, but the trustees refused to transfer without the protection of the court. The father and son filed a bill to compel the transfer to them, and prayed that the trustees might pay the costs. One of the vice-chancellors made a decree for the transfer, but ordered the father and son to pay the costs of the suit; and upon appeal, as to costs, by the father and son :—Held, that the decree was correct : Knight Bruce, L.J., dissenting. King v. King, 1 De G. & J. 663; 27 L. J., Ch. 29; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 721; 6 W. R. 85.

7. Unsubstantiated Charges of Breach of Trust or Fraud.

In General.]—Where fraudulent charges are made against trustees, and inquiries into the truth of them are directed by the court, if in the result it is proved that such charges were unfounded, the costs consequent upon the investigation will be thrown upon the party making them. Bartlett v. Wood, 30 L. J., Ch. 614; 4 L. T. 692; 9 W. R. 817—L. C.

A bill contained allegations of great fraud against trustees, which all failed. The trustees were removed, but not, however, on the ground of misconduct :—Held, that they were entitled to the costs of the whole suit. Passingham v. Sherborn, 9 Beav. 424.

On a devise to two trustees, with a leasing power, and that they might become lessees, one declined to act, and the other became lessee, and was afterwards removed by order of the master of the rolls, at the instance of the cestuis que trust, on the ground of the inconsistency of the character of trustee and lessee:—Held, to have been properly dismissed. Ib.

An action having been brought to try the question of injury to the estate and mismanagement, and on the account taken a balance having been found due to the trustees, and the charges of breaches of covenant having been abandoned at the hearing:—Held, that the trustees were entitled to the costs of the suit. Ib.

On a bill filed by C. against A. and B., alleging that F. would have made a higher offer if the negotiations had been continued, and charging the trustees with the consequent loss to the estate:—Held, that the trustees could not, under any circumstances, be made liable, and that they ought to be allowed the usual trustees' costs of the suit. Selby v. Bowie, 1 N. R. 420; 8 L. T. 18; 11 W. R. 559.

—— Allegation that Compromise was Improper.]—The trustees of a will agreed to settle disputes with the surviving partner in a firm of which the testator had been a member by selling the testator's share to him at a certain price. They then filed a bill to have this agreement sanctioned; a decree was made accordingly, and the sale carried out. Some years afterwards some of the residuary legatees, who were infants, filed a bill by their next friend to set aside the decree on the ground that the compromise was an improper one, and that it had been entered into, and the decree sanctioning it obtained, by the personal fraud of one of the trustees. This trustee answered separately; and at the hearing Lord Romilly dismissed the bill with costs, being of opinion that the compromise had been beneficial and the decree sanctioning it properly obtained. The next friend could not pay the costs, and the trustee applied by summons in a suit for the administration of the testator's estate to have them taxed as between solicitor and client and paid out of the estate:—Held, that the trustee was entitled to be paid his costs out of the estate, as he had defended the suit for the benefit of the estate, though he had at the same time defended his own character. Walters v. Woodbridge, 47 L. J., Ch. 516; 7 Ch. D. 504; 38 L. T. 83; 25 W. R. 469—C. A.

—— Charges of Breach of Trust abandoned at Trial.]—One of two tenants for life under a settlement brought an action, claiming to have the trusts executed by the court. The statement of claim alleged that the surviving trustee had committed a breach of trust, and asked to have new trustees appointed in the place of him and a deceased trustee. The settlement contained a power to appoint new trustees, exercisable by the tenants for life. The plaintiff's income had always been regularly paid to him. At the trial the charges against the trustee were abandoned, and it was admitted that there was no ground for his removal:—Held, that the plaintiff was entitled to judgment for the execution of the trusts, but that, the action being unnecessary, he must pay the costs of it up to and including the trial. Fane v. Fane, 49 L. J., Ch. 200; 13 Ch. D. 228; 41 L. T. 551; 28 W. R. 348.

8. Misconduct and Breach of Trust.

a. In General.

Misconduct—Liability for Costs.]—Considering the importance of securing intelligent, competent, and responsible persons to act as trustees, it is not the practice of the court to visit trustees with costs, except when they act from interested motives, or intentionally and wantonly conduct themselves in a vexatious and oppressive manner. Noble v. Meymott, 14 Beav. 471; 20 L. J., Ch. 612.

Matters of personal or private feeling cannot be considered in a question either of merits or of costs, as between trustee and cestui que trust; and therefore a trustee who deems himself to be or is assailed by imputations cast upon him by his cestui que trust, is not justified in refusing to do an act which his trust requires, until he receives an apology from the cestui que trust; and if he refuses, from want of such apology alone, to do an act which his duty as trustee requires, he will be liable to the costs of a suit brought to enforce the performance of such duty. Moore v. Prance, 9 Hare, 299; 20 L. J., Ch. 468; 15 Jur. 1188.

On a mortgagee of settled estates requiring to be paid off, or to have the interest increased, the tenant for life proposed a new mortgagee at same rate. The trustees insisted on being the proper persons to carry the transaction into effect, and procured another mortgagee, but at a higher rate; and, in order to raise the expenses thereby incurred, they proceeded to sell the estate under the ordinary powers of sale and exchange in the settlement, whereupon the tenant for life filed a bill to restrain the sale:—Held, that the conduct of the trustees was unjustifiable, and that they ought to pay all the costs of the suit. Marshall v. Sladden, 4 De G. & Sm. 468; 7 Hare, 428; 19 L. J., Ch. 57; 14 Jur. 106.

Trustee ordered to pay costs on misconduct. Dawson v. Parrot, 3 Bro. C. C. 236.

A trustee misbehaving himself ordered to pay costs out of his own pocket, and not out of the trust estate. Lloyd v. Spillet, 3 P. Wms. 347; 2 Eq. Cas. Abr. 241, pl. 30; 776, pl. 25. Affirmed, 2 Atk. 148. S. P., Fell v. Lutwidge, Barnard. 314.

Trustee how far charged with interest and costs and profits of a farm carried on by aid of testator's personal estate. Killick v. Flexney, 4 Bro. C. C. 163.

A trustee who has purchased the trust property, and sold it at a profit, and who has been compelled by a suit in equity to refund that profit, will not, except under circumstances affecting him with moral fraud, be charged with the costs of the suit. Baker v. Carter, 1 Y. & C. 250; 4 L. J., Ex. Eq. 12.

Relief on a bill charging default against trustee, who had changed the fund, and the trust fund secured, but costs given to the trustee against the plaintiff and the fund; the rule that trustee not having acted regularly shall pay costs being subject to be qualified where, though the conduct was irregular, the motive was not corrupt. Fitzgerald v. O'Flaherty, 1 Moll. 347.

A trustee, against whom a bill had been filed for breach of trust, after decree declaring him liable and ordering accounts to be taken, paid 4,000*l.* into court. On taking accounts it was found that the sum of 1,200*l.* more was still owing from the trustee:—Held, that he was liable for the costs of taking the accounts as well as for the costs up to the decree. Payne v. Parker, 17 W. R. 640.

—— Depriving Trustee of Costs.]—Costs refused to a trustee, setting up a trust different from what it really was; but general misconduct, &c., is not a sufficient ground. Ball v.

Montgomery, 2 Ves. 191; 4 Bro. C. C. 339; 2 R. R. 197.

The right of a trustee to his costs, like that of a mortgagee, is a matter of contract, and is not in the discretion of the judge; although he may be deprived of them for misconduct. The mere fact that a trustee denies that he is indebted to the estate, and on taking the accounts turns out to be indebted, is no reason for depriving him of the costs. Turner v. Hancock, 51 L. J., Ch. 517; 20 Ch. D. 303; 46 L. T. 750; 30 W. R. 480—C. A.

If a bill be filed against a trustee for an account to which he submits by an answer, though, on taking the account, he be found in debt, yet he shall not pay costs unless he has misbehaved himself. Secus, if he controverts the account; there, if found in arrear, he shall pay interest and costs. Parrot v. Treby, 1 Eq. Cas. Abr. 125; Pre. Ch. 254.

Trustee not deprived of costs for slight misconduct, in respect of which he is charged with interest. Sammes v. Rickman, 2 Ves. 36.

Trustees and executors do not necessarily lose their costs because charged with interest. Woodhead v. Marriott, C. P. Cooper, 62.

If a trustee has not misconducted himself, even though the court punish him, as by making him pay interest on funds in his hands, yet he shall get the costs of the suit; but if his account be greatly reduced in the office, he shall not get the costs of passing it. Fozier v. Andrews, 2 Jo. & Lat. 199; 7 Ir. Eq. R. 595.

A trustee in a will which directed money to be lent at such a rate of interest as the trustees should think reasonable, by consent of his co-trustee, keeps it at 4 per cent. Ordered to pay 5, and the executors to pay the costs of taking the accounts as to that interest. Forbes v. Ross, 2 Bro. C. C. 430.

—— Costs subsequent to Judgment.]—Where an action against a trustee has been occasioned by the trustee's own misconduct, his costs before and subsequent to judgment are in the discretion of the court. Hewett v. Foster, infra, explained. Easton v. Landor, 62 L. J., Ch. 164; 2 R. 176; 67 L. T. 883—C. A.

A trustee was declared liable for a breach of trust, and was ordered to pay the costs up to the hearing. He complied with the decree:—Held, that he was entitled to the costs of his subsequent proceedings for clearing and distributing the fund. Hewett v. Foster, 7 Beav. 348; 8 Jur. 769.

Costs, Allowance of, out of Estate.]—A trustee who, without the sanction of the court commences or defends an action unsuccessfully, does so at his own risk, and the court ought not to allow him such costs out of the estate except under very exceptional circumstances. Beddoe, In re, Downes v. Cottam, 62 L. J., Ch. 233; [1893] 1 Ch. 547; 2 R. 223; 68 L. T. 595; 41 W. R. 177—C. A.

Where the misapplication of the funds of a public body had gone on for a great length of time, and no imputation was cast upon the trustees, they, though removed, were allowed their costs out of the fund; this, however, not to be a precedent for cases which should be defended afterwards, where the same point should arise. Att.-Gen. v. Drummond, 2 Con. & L. 98; 3 Dr. & War. 162.

When the costs or expenses claimed have been incurred through the misconduct or negligence of the trustee, he will not be allowed them; but the fact of his having been unsuccessful in litigation, either as plaintiff or defendant, will not, in the absence of misconduct, disentitle him to be reimbursed his costs. Courtney v. Rumley, Ir. R. 6 Eq. 99.

—— Tacit Obstruction to Cestui que Trust.]—The executors of the sole executor of a deceased sole trustee whose sole executor had never acted in the trust, were applied to in April, 1883, to take steps to enable the tenant for life of a small sum of stock standing in the name of the deceased trustee to receive the dividends. In May, 1883, the executors handed to the solicitor of the tenant for life the probate of their testator's will, that he might produce it at the Bank of England, which he did. After some correspondence, in the course of which the executors asked for evidence of the title of the cestuis que trust, which did not appear to have been produced, the solicitor of the tenant for life, about the end of May, sent a power of attorney to be executed by the executors to enable her to receive the dividends. The executors did not execute or return the power. In July the solicitor of the tenant for life applied to the executors to appoint new trustees under the Conveyancing and Law of Property Act, 1881, to which the executors replied, stating their ignorance of the title of the cestuis que trust. Ultimately, in November, 1883, the cestuis que trust presented a petition for the appointment of new trustees and a vesting order:—Held, that the conduct of the executors, who appeared to have accepted the trust by taking a transfer of the stock into their own names, had been vexatious, and that they must pay the costs which would have been occasioned by a petition simply asking for payment of dividends to the tenant for life, and that they could not be allowed any costs out of the fund. But held, on appeal, that as the cestuis que trust had not taken proper steps to satisfy the executors as to their title, the executors had not been guilty of any such misconduct as is necessary to deprive a trustee of his right to costs out of the trust fund, and that they must have their costs below, but that as the court of appeal was not satisfied with their conduct they ought to have no costs of their appeal. Knight's Trusts or Knight's Will, In re, 26 Ch. D. 82; 50 L. T. 550; 32 W. R. 417—C. A. Reversing 53 L. J., Ch. 223.

—— No Loss to Estate.]—A trustee is not, in the absence of misconduct, to be deprived of costs by reason of his having invested in what is not, strictly speaking, an authorised security, if at the time of the judgment the fund has been replaced without loss. Peacock v. Calling, 54 L. J., Ch. 743; 53 L. T. 620; 33 W. R. 528—C. A.

Where improper application of a trust fund was of a small part, and promptly offered to be restored, and no imputation, trustee not disentitled to costs, a suit being necessary for another purpose of the trust. Fitzgerald v. Pringle, 2 Moll. 534.

Trustees had lent money on a technically insufficient security. In the master's office, they entered into evidence to prove its sufficiency, but failed; and they afterwards presented a petition for calling in and investing the money. This was done, and no loss occurred:—Held, that the trustees were entitled to their costs of both proceedings. Royds v. Royds, 14 Beav. 45.

When trustees in good faith invest on a security not in strictness justified by the instrument creating the trust, but which is practically secure, and from which no loss to the trust fund occurs, they will not be decreed to pay the costs of a suit to compel them to bring in the fund so invested. In this case the court refused the trustees their costs, and directed the petitioner's costs to be paid out of the fund. Fitzgerald v. Fitzgerald, 6 Ir. Ch. R. 145.

Breach of Trust.]—On a decree against several trustees for breach of trust, the costs of suit are decreed against all, without regard to the degrees of culpability, but for the greater security for their payment. Lawrence v. Bowle, 2 Ph. 140 ; 1 G. Cooper, 241.

Generally, where trustees are guilty of a breach of trust, they must pay the costs of a suit to repair it. Byrne v. Norcott, 13 Beav. 336.

When in an action for administration of trusts the plaintiff makes a special case of breach of trust in relation to the property, not depending upon a mere point of construction, the rule is, that the breach of trust being established, the trustee must bear the costs of the action so far as it relates thereto. Bell v. Turner, 47 L. J., Ch. 75.

—— Trustees Acting bonâ fide.]—Trustees were directed by a will to place the trust moneys in the public funds, or on some good and approved freehold or leasehold securities, at interest. The trustees, acting bonâ fide, had, in 1828, upon the report of a surveyor (who had valued the property at 3,500*l.*, and the annual rental at 175*l.*), lent 2,600*l.*, part of the trust moneys, upon a mortgage, with powers of sale, of the valued property, and which consisted of four freehold messuages, at the time in an unfinished state, the actual yearly rent of which being only 105*l.* The mortgagor having become insolvent, the trustees sold the property in 1836, which then realised less than the amount lent by 353*l.* 4*s.* 2*d.*; and that sum was lost to the estate. In a suit by a cestui que trust, the court declined to charge the trustees with the loss, and allowed them their costs of suit, and their costs, charges, and expenses. Jones v. Lewis, 3 De G. & Sm. 471 ; 18 L. J., Ch. 430 ; 13 Jur. 877.

Costs of administration suit given to an executor, though charged with the consequences of an improper investment. Knott v. Cottee, 16 Beav. 76 ; 16 Jur. 752.

Where a trustee, at the request of the cestui que trust, a married woman, and tenant for life of the fund for her separate use, sold out the trust fund, and invested it on an improper security :—Held, in a suit by such tenant for life against the trustee to have the trust fund replaced in a proper state of investment, that no costs ought to be given, as between the plaintiff and the defendant, on either side :—Held, also that the costs of the parties entitled in remainder were to be paid by the plaintiff. Mant v. Leith, 15 Beav. 524 ; 21 L. J., Ch. 719 ; 16 Jur. 302.

Where a trustee commits a breach of trust and dies, and his heir incurs costs in unsuccessfully defending an action for trespass brought in consequence of steps taken by him to obtain possession of freeholds lost by reason of such breach, he was allowed such costs. Melling v. Melling, 6 W. R. 121.

Trustees having committed a breach of trust by granting longer leases than they had power by the deed to do, the fact of the cestui que trust receiving rents from the lessees, in ignorance of the invalidity of the leases, does not operate as a new agreement. But an account was only directed from the filing of the bill, without costs to the plaintiff. Bowes v. East London Waterworks, 3 Madd. 375 ; 23 R. R. 84.

Trustees who were directed to sell an estate as soon as conveniently might be after their testator's death, refused, by the desire of one of the parties interested, an offer of 6,600*l.* for the estate ; but they afterwards sold it for 3,600*l.* The court charged them with the loss, but gave them their costs, as their conduct had not been wilful nor perverse. Taylor v. Tabrum, 6 Sim. 281 ; 1 L. J., Ch. 189.

—— Leaving Trust Money with Trading Firm.]—A trustee of a marriage settlement, who allowed a sum of 350*l.* to remain in the hands of a trading firm for a period exceeding fifteen years after the death of the tenant for life, but who eventually, and before the bill was filed, paid the principal, with 5*l.* per cent. interest :—Held, liable to account with annual rests, and also to the costs of the suit. Jones v. Foxall, 21 L. J., Ch. 725.

—— Mixing Trust Funds.]—A trustee, with power to invest the trust property in leasehold or chattel personal securities, or upon the personal security of any person, advanced, at the request of his cestuis que trust, some of the property to two ladies on the security of mortgages (with the usual covenants) of a leasehold house in which the ladies were living, and of the furniture in it. The trustee was also the lessor of the house. The mortgagors became insolvent, paid no rent, and no part of the principal or interest on the loan. The trustee, as lessor, determined the lease by entry, and then sold all his interest in the leasehold premises and the furniture ; but he thereby so mixed up the trust property with his own that it was impossible to distinguish the one from the other, or to pronounce with certainty how much of the proceeds of the sale was his, and how much belonged to the cestuis que trust. The advance had been made at 5*l.* per cent. After some delay, the trustee replaced the principal money of the loan, but invested it against the wishes of his cestuis que trust in 3*l.* per cent. consols, the dividends on which, however, were paid to them :—Held, that the trustee was bound to make good to the trust estate the whole of the money advanced on the loan, with all interest due thereon at the rate of 5*l.* per cent. per annum, to be computed up to the date of the decree ; and that he must pay the costs of the suit. Cook v. Addison, 38 L. J., Ch. 322 ; L. R. 7 Eq. 466 ; 20 L. T. 212 ; 17 W. R. 480.

Trustees having mixed balances of the trust estate with their own moneys, and used them in their own business, although authorised to invest the trust funds in good private securities :—Held, liable to the costs of an unnecessary inquiry as to the state of the testator's family. Westover v. Chapman, 1 Coll. 177.

Defaulting Trustee—Payment into Court.]—Where in a chancery action money has been found due from a trustee, the proper form of order is to direct the money due to be paid into court before the trustee in default is allowed to receive his costs out of the trust estate, or even to receive any share in the trust estate to which he is entitled. Staniar v. Evans, 56 L. J., Ch. 581; 34 Ch. D. 470; 56 L. T. 87; 35 W. R. 286.

A. and B., executors and trustees of a testator, set apart a fund to answer an annuity bequeathed to the plaintiff. A. and B. committed a breach of trust by means whereof the fund came into the name of B. alone, who misappropriated it. A. died, and by his will gave a legacy to B. and J. on certain trusts. B. having become bankrupt, in an action by the annuitant, J., was ordered to refund the trust legacy in his hands, which was insufficient to answer the breach of trust committed by his testator:—Held, that neither J. nor the trustee in bankruptcy of B. was entitled to have his costs out of the fund before it was paid into court. Knott, In re, Bax v. Palmer, 56 L. J., Ch. 318; 56 L. T. 1611; 35 W. R. 302.

—— Bankruptcy of Defaulting Trustee.]—A defaulting trustee is entitled to his costs of a suit for the execution of the trusts incurred after his bankruptcy, or after the registration of a creditor's deed, executed by him under the Bankruptcy Act, 1861. Bowyer v. Griffin, 39 L. J., Ch. 159; L. R. 9 Eq. 340; 18 W. R. 227.

In an administration action one defendant was an executor. He was a defaulting trustee under a settlement. After the action was commenced he was adjudicated bankrupt, and a trustee in bankruptcy was appointed and made a defendant:—Held, that the defaulting trustee was entitled to be paid his costs incurred after his bankruptcy. Bowyer v. Griffin, supra, followed. Clare v. Clare, Clare, In re, 51 L. J., Ch. 553; 21 Ch. D. 865; 46 L. T. 851; 30 W. R. 789.

Two executors, defendants in an administration action, were represented by the same solicitor, to whom they had given a joint retainer, and one of them was a debtor to the estate, and became bankrupt after the passing of the Bankruptcy Act, 1869:—Held, that the solvent executor was entitled to be paid his separate costs out of the estate, and that the separate costs of the insolvent executor must be set off against the debt due from him to the estate; but that whether the whole or what part of the common costs of both executors was to be paid out of the estate was a question for the taxing master to determine according to the settled practice of the taxing office. McEwan v. Crombie, 53 L. J., Ch. 24; 25 Ch. D. 175; 49 L. T. 499; 32 W. R. 115.

Where, after the commencement of an administration action against a defaulting executor or trustee, he becomes bankrupt, and, under s. 49 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1869, his debt remains undischarged by the bankruptcy, he is not entitled to be paid any of his costs of the action, whether incurred before or after the bankruptcy, until he has made good his default. But where the debt of the defaulting executor or trustee has been discharged by his bankruptcy, as where the bankruptcy has taken place prior to the Bankruptcy Act, 1869; or where, after the bankruptcy, his debt remaining undischarged, he renders services in the action in his character of executor or trustee, he is entitled to be paid his costs incurred subsequently to his bankruptcy, though his prior costs must be set off against his debt. Lewis v. Trask, infra, followed. Clare v. Clare, supra, not followed. Basham, In re, Hannay v. Basham, 52 L. J., Ch. 408; 23 Ch. D. 195; 48 L. T. 476; 31 W. R. 743.

Where the trustee of a settlement became bankrupt shortly after the commencement of an action for the execution of the trusts, and an order was made for payment by him into court of a sum of money certified to be due from him to the estate, he was held entitled to his costs of the action, though he was not to receive them until he had made good his default. Bowyer v. Griffin, supra, considered. Lewis v. Trask, 21 Ch. D. 862.

The official assignee of a defaulting trustee, whose assets had been distributed:—Held, not entitled to costs. Williams v. Nixon, Beav. 472; 9 L. J., Ch. 269.

Upon a bill to establish a lien upon real securities in respect of the trusts of a fund improperly applied by a trustee who afterwards became bankrupt, when it appeared that there was a possibility of an interest in the assignee in bankruptcy after the trust was satisfied, and he did not disclaim until the hearing:—Held, that he is not entitled to his costs. Allan v. Sugden, 10 Jur. (N.S.) 459; 10 L. T. 492.

In a suit to administer the estate of a testator, an executor had retained balances in his hands, and had subsequently become bankrupt:—Held, that he was entitled to his costs, although he was charged with interest on the balances in his hands from time to time:—Held, also, that he was entitled to have his costs out of the estate, and that they were not to be set off against what should be found due from him in respect of interest on the balances in his hands. Cotton v. Clark, 16 Beav. 134; 16 Jur. 879.

A suit was instituted against an executor and a trustee under a will for an account. On the hearing, a decree for a reference to take accounts of the real and personal estate was directed. He afterwards became bankrupt, and the suit was continued as against his assignees under the bankruptcy:—Held, that he was entitled to the costs of the suit as between solicitor and client from the date of his bankruptcy, and also the costs of his appearance on a petition for a vesting order in new trustees. Turner v. Mullineux, 3 L. T. 687; 9 W. R. 252.

b. Wilful Misconduct.

Liability for Costs.]—Interest and costs decreed against a steward upon fraud, wilful concealment, &c., and in such cases generally there is no limitation of time. Hardwicke v. Vernon, 14 Ves. 504; 9 R. R. 329.

Where trustees for infants persisted in unnecessary litigation, they were ordered to pay the costs generally. Campbell v. Campbell, 2 Myl. & Cr. 25.

If a trustee files a bill, and brings the cestui que trust before the court for his own private interest, he shall pay the whole costs of the suit. Henley v. Philips, 2 Atk. 48.

Where trustees, throughout transactions in reference to trust estates of a wife, endeavoured to aid the husband in defeating the wife's enjoyment of her separate estate:—Held, that the decree was right in ordering those trustees and the husband to pay the costs of the suit, the same having been rendered necessary by the unfounded claims of the husband, improperly recognised and supported by those two trustees. Bagot v. Bagot, 10 L. J., Ch. 116.

Held, also, that the husband and the two trustees hostile to the wife were properly ordered to pay the costs of the parties interested in remainder under the settlement, and who were not necessary parties to the suit, inasmuch as they, on the part of the husband, set up the claim to a tenancy for life in the timber money, which raised a question (however untenable) in which the other persons entitled in remainder were interested. Ib.

By settlement, a trustee was required, immediately after the marriage, to compel payment of a sum of money secured by a covenant in the deed; he neglected to do so even when required to call it in, and allowed the interest to fall into arrear; he was held liable to pay the costs of a suit instituted to compel him to perform the trusts. Kirby v. Mash, 3 Y. & C. 295; 8 L. J., Ex. Eq. 33; 3 Jur. 221.

In a suit by the legatee of the vendor, against the devisees in trust of the purchaser, for payment of part of the purchase-money not payable by the contract till the death of the vendor, the trustees were decreed to pay the costs out of their own estate, because they had occasioned the suit by unfounded doubts they had raised as to whether the plaintiff was entitled absolutely or for life only. Burrows v. Greenwood, 4 Y. & C. 251; 5 Jur. 384.

So, where rents were allowed to fall into arrear in consequence of disputes between the trustees, the court compelled them to pay the costs of a suit by the tenant for life. Wilson v. Wilson, 2 Keen, 249.

Where trustees for sale purchased through a trustee at an undervalue, though without fraud, and by auction, and the cestuis que trust were infants, and therefore incapable of discharging the trustees, relief as to a re-sale was given with costs against them; but as to the other part of the case, with regard to accounts that must have been taken, they must have their costs, as they would have been entitled to them in the ordinary case. Sanderson v. Walker, 13 Ves. 601; 9 R. R. 234. And see Hall v. Hallet, 1 Cox, 134, 141; 1 R. R. 3.

A trustee unreasonably resisting the claims of his cestui que trust ordered to pay the costs of the suit. Price v. Loaden, 21 Beav. 508.

If trustees, by wilful neglect of their duty, render a suit for the administration of the estate under their charge necessary, they will be ordered to pay the costs of it. Jefferys v. Marshall, 23 L. T. 548; 12 W. R. 94.

On a marriage, the father of the wife purchased 1,000*l.* consols, and the same were vested in trustees to pay the dividends to the wife for her life; and then trusts were declared for the children of the marriage, under which the court had decreed, in a former suit, that the only child of the marriage, a daughter, took a vested interest. This daughter married J. M., and died in the lifetime of the mother, leaving J. M. her surviving. J. M. did not take out administration to the effects of his deceased wife, and afterwards died:—Held, that his executors were entitled to the 1,000*l.* consols, and that the representatives of the wife were not entitled. One of J. M.'s executors, who was a defendant, having colluded with the other defendant, the court gave costs against both of them. Platt v. M'Dougall, Tam. 390; 9 L. J. (o.s.) Ch. 150.

A trustee filing an administration suit against his cestui que trust in order to avoid a bill against himself for an account which he had neglected to render, was not made to pay costs, but the carriage of the decree was given to the cestui que trust. Naylor v. Smith, 15 W. R. 528.

Costs Disallowed.]—A trustee refused to join his co-trustee in suing to recover trust property, and put in an answer. He was disallowed costs. Gompertz v. Kensit, 41 L. J., Ch. 382; L. R. 13 Eq. 369; 26 L. T. 95; 20 W. R. 313. S. P., Holcombe v. Jones, 1 L. J., Ch. 46.

Trustee disallowed the costs of an improper answer. Eddowes v. Eddowes, 30 Beav. 603.

Where a trustee executed a deed of declaration of trust in favour of the wife, falsely reciting that the fund was the wife's separate property, and which was afterwards set aside as in fraud of creditors, the court refused to give the trustee his costs. Turquand v. Knight, 14 Sim. 643; 9 Jur. 546.

Trustees raising a charge of fraud, and taking no steps to satisfy themselves when they might easily do so, will not be allowed their costs of the discussion in court, if upon the evidence the court considers there was no reasonable ground of suspicion. Cockroft or Cockcroft v. Sutcliffe, 25 L. J., Ch. 313; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 323; 4 W. R. 339.

Costs Improperly Incurred—Costs of Action against Trustees.]—The trustees under a will employed a solicitor to collect the rents, and allowed him to deduct from the rents certain costs. The tenant for life brought an action against the trustees, alleging that some of the costs were chargeable against corpus and not against income, and that other of the costs had been unnecessarily incurred. The trustees alleged that the tenant for life was aware of what had been done and assented. The court thought that the tenant for life had not assented, and decided that the defendants had been wrong throughout:—Held, that the trustees must pay the costs of the action. Weall, In re, Andrews v. Weall, 58 L. J., Ch. 713; 42 Ch. D. 674; 61 L. T. 238; 37 W. R. 779.

—— Of Administration Action.]—Plaintiff, a trustee and executor under a will, brought an action for the administration of a small estate, on the ground that it was in the interest of all parties, as there were doubts as to the true construction of the will, and difficulties and disagreements with regard to the interpretation of the trusts, and that he needed the protection of the court. The defendants, the beneficiaries (who, after the commencement of the action, had suggested that the quickest and least expensive mode would be to state a special case for the opinion of the court), denied that it was in the interest of all parties that the estate should be administered under the direction of the court, and contended that the question of construction was in no way doubtful. They submitted that the action should be dismissed, as being unnecessary, harassing, and destructive of the trust property:—Held, that the action must be dismissed with costs to be paid by the trustee personally, as the court will not allow itself to be made an instrument or mere agent of oppression, nor interfere where the only result must be to despoil of their property persons unable to protect themselves, and in this case there was no ground whatever on which the court could be asked to interfere except the question of construction of the will, and that was not in doubt. Cabburn, In re, Gage v. Rutland, 46 L. T. 848.

—— Suit Pending when the Judicature Act came into Operation.]—A motion was made for leave to take evidence in a suit by affidavit. It was opposed by the defendants, who were trustees, and the court held that they were entitled to have the evidence taken viva voce, but reserved the costs of the motion. On the cause coming in for hearing no witnesses were called, and no reason was given for insisting upon the evidence being taken viva voce:—Held, that the costs of the motion must be paid by the defendants, the trustees, who had perversely, unreasonably, and unjustly refused to adopt the cheaper and more familiar mode of taking evidence. Patterson v. Wooler, 45 L. J., Ch. 274; 2 Ch. D. 586; 34 L. T. 415; 24 W. R. 455.

Trustees Paying Money into Court.]—Trustees who pay into court a fund claimed in default of appointment after satisfactory evidence of non-exercise of the power, will be ordered to pay the costs of paying the fund into court. Cull's Trusts, In re, 44 L. J., Ch. 664; L. R. 20 Eq. 561; 32 L. T. 853; 23 W. R. 850.

Trustees who have lodged money under the Trustee Relief Act will be allowed their costs of appearing on the hearing of a petition to draw it, if the claimant's title be doubtful. Blayney's Trust, In re, 9 Ir. Eq. R. 413.

The sum of 8*l.* is the proper sum to be deducted by trustees in the first instance for the costs of lodging the money. Ib.

Trustees, on paying a fund into court, deducted 44*l.* 14*s.* 6*d.* in respect of their costs. On a petition by the person entitled to the dividends, praying that the same might be paid to her, and that the costs of the trustees, who appeared on the petition might be taxed:—Held, that the costs of their appearance, and their costs, charges, and expenses properly incurred in relation to the fund in court, ought to be taxed, and that they ought to be charged with the sum deducted by them on payment into court. Sweeper's Trust, In re, 24 L. T. 413; 19 W. R. 793.

And see ante, G. 1. e.

—— Appearing on Petition for Payment out of Dividends.]—Upon a petition by tenant for life of stock which had been paid into court under the Trustee Relief Act, for payment out of the dividends, the trustee, who appears on the petition after notice from the petitioner's solicitor not to do so, upon the ground that the petition relates to the income only, will not be allowed his costs of the appearance out of the funds representing income. Battell's Trust, In re, 21 W. R. 138.

And see ante, G. 2. d.

c. Disclaimer or Refusal to Act.

Trustee who has not Acted putting in full Answer.]—Trustee who had not acted, putting in a full answer, disallowed the costs of such vexatious answer, and order made at the hearing to tax and allow the costs only of such answer as would have been necessary and proper. Martin v. Persse, 1 Moll. 146.

Answering Interrogatories and Disclaiming.]—A trustee who was required by the bill to answer certain interrogatories answered them and disclaimed:—Held, that he was only entitled to the costs of the disclaimer. Murphy v. O'Shea, 2 Jo. & Lat. 422; 8 Ir. Eq. R. 329.

Refusal to Act.]—Where the representative of a deceased trustee made a suit necessary by a wanton refusal to act in the trust, and to receive the dividends of the trust fund:—Held, she was entitled to the costs of a bill filed to remove her and appoint other trustees. Legg v. Mackrell, 2 De G. F. & J. 551; 4 L. T. 568. Reversing 1 Giff. 165; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 1154.

A person named a trustee in a deed, who declines to accept the office, is in the situation of any other defendant against whom a bill is dismissed, and can only have his costs, &c., between party and party. Norway v. Norway, 2 Myl. & K. 278; 3 L. J., Ch. 111, 163.

Trustee having Acted declining to perform Trusts.]—The court will not allow costs to a trustee who, after having acted, declines to perform the trusts reposed in him, and thereby renders a suit for the appointment of a new trustee necessary. Howard v. Rhodes, 1 Keen, 581; 6 L. J., Ch. 196.

9. Trustee Refusing to Give Accounts or Information.

In General.]—Owners of a privateer acting for themselves and the crew, in the sale of the prizes, having neglected to render accounts, and delayed the distribution of the proceeds, charged with interest on the balances, and costs. Pearse v. Green, 1 J. & W. 135; 20 R. R. 258.

The first duty of an agent, receiver, trustee, or executor, is to be constantly ready with his accounts, and neglect in this is a ground for charging him with interest. Ib.

Where trustees for creditors neglected, on the application of a creditor, to furnish an account of the trust estate, and the creditor filed a bill, to which the trustees put in an answer, setting forth an account substantially correct, the court made the acting trustee pay the plaintiff's costs to the hearing, but gave both trustees their subsequent costs out of the estate. Springett v. Dashwood, 2 Giff. 521; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 93; 3 L. T. 542.

—— Refusal to Render Account.]—A trustee refused to render sufficient accounts of a legacy bequeathed to a married woman for life, with remainder to her children, on the ground that the legatees wished to deal with the legacy in a manner inconsistent with the terms of the will, and stated her intention of retiring from the trusts by payment of the legacy into court:—Held, in a suit by the legatees, that the trustee was not justified in such refusal, and must pay the costs of the suit. Henry v. Macdonald, 15 W. R. 165.

An executor or trustee is bound, in the absence of very strong reasons to the contrary, to render the accounts of his testator's estate to the solicitor of the residuary legatee; and if he pertinaciously refuse to do so, will be ordered to pay the costs up to the hearing of a suit to have the accounts taken, although such suit may embrace other matters. Kemp v. Burn, 1 N. R. 257; 4 Giff. 348; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 375; 7 L. T. 666; 11 W. R. 278.

Trustee, under deed of trust, by a former petition, upholding the trust and praying to annul fiat, and failing, but consenting to have the account against him taken on that petition by reference, ordered to pay the costs of that petition, and to pay balance in his hands, under trust deed, to assignees, with interest at 4 per cent. from date of order of reference, although there was no evidence of interest having been made. Costs of reference to be paid by estate. Harding, Ex parte, 4 Deac. & C. 793.

Where, after applications to see trusteeship accounts were refused, a bill was filed for the administration of real and personal estate, and the trustees by their answer denied that there was anything due from, but that a balance was due to them, and that the prosecution of the suit could lead to no useful result, as there was no estate remaining unapplied, but that they were ready to account on being paid their costs, and the chief clerk certified that a balance was due from the trustees, the court considered the conduct of the trustees, who had had the management of the estate, unsatisfactory; ordered them to pay the balance due, with interest at 4*l.* per cent., and directed them to pay all the costs of the suit, excepting the costs of the proceedings in reference to the real estate, the charge in the bill that the testator had real estate not having been proved by the plaintiff. Eglin v. Sanderson, 3 Giff. 424; 8 Jur. (N.S.) 329; 6 L. T. 151.

—— Omitting to keep Accounts.]—The estate of a testator, who died in 1832, was distributed in 1847, at the written request of the persons beneficially entitled. Another part of the estate, which fell in in 1852, was distributed also at the request, but not in writing, of the beneficiaries, and in 1871 the acting trustee died. No accounts or vouchers were forthcoming from the trustees. A bill filed in 1872 by one of the beneficiaries and her husband against the surviving trustee and the representative of the deceased trustee for administration was dismissed, but, owing to the negligence of the trustees in not keeping accounts and vouchers, without costs. Payne v. Evens, L. R. 18 Eq. 356.

Refusal of Information.] — When trustees refused information and an account of the property to the plaintiffs, who had an interest in the estate, and other proceedings had subsequently been taken whereby the costs of the suit were greatly increased, the trustees were directed to pay the costs of the suit up to the hearing, as if it had been an ordinary administration suit, and as to the rest of the costs each party to bear his own. Talbot v. Marshfield, L. R. 3 Ch. 622; 19 L. T. 223.

Repeated applications were made to a trustee requiring to know in what way certain legacies given by the will of the testator, and in which certain parties had life interests, had been invested. To these applications the trustee gave evasive answers:—Held, that he must individually pay the costs of a suit to secure those legacies. Grierson v. Astle, 3 L. T. 288.

10. Trustee Refusing to Convey or Transfer the Trust Fund.

Refusal to Convey.]—A man may be a trustee of land in such a sense as that the court will direct him to convey the legal estate without considering him entitled to trustee's costs and allowances. Carter v. Carter, 3 K. & J. 617; 27 L. J., Ch. 74; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 63.

An heir-at-law, claiming as such, was put to prove, and did prove his pedigree, as stated in his bill in detail:—Held, that the court might and ought to decide without a jury; and it appearing that the evidence of heirship was previously to the institution of a suit, submitted to the defendants, the trustees, and was such as they ought to have been satisfied with, the court gave the plaintiff the costs of the suit as against the trustees, including the expenses of the genealogical evidence. Lancashire v. Lancashire, 1 De G. & Sm. 283; 11 Jur. 1024.

A bill for a specific performance of an agreement was made necessary by a trustee refusing to join in the conveyance. The court being of opinion that the trustee ought to pay all the costs of the suit, the decree was, that the plaintiff should pay the costs of all the other defendants (although he had a decree against them), and recover over the whole costs from the defendant, the trustee. Jones v. Lewis, 1 Cox, 199.

Where, upon the sale of an estate by the equitable owner, the party having the mere legal estate refused to convey unless the cestuis que trust of the proceeds (declared by a deed of even date) were made parties to the conveyance:—Held, that he could not justify such refusal; but, as he appeared to have acted bonâ fide under advice which misled him, the court would not charge him with costs of the suit occasioned by his refusal. Angier v. Stannard, 3 Myl. & K. 566; 3 L. J., Ch. 216.

The wife of a testator having disposed of a moiety of his real estate by her will, purporting to be in exercise of the power given her by his will, her executor claimed to be entitled to receive a moiety of the proceeds of the testator's real estate from the trustees of his will; which claim they refused, on the ground that a later codicil did not revoke the power given by the will, although they were previously advised, by the opinions of two counsel, which they concealed from the executor of the wife, that it did:—Held, that they were liable to pay the costs of a suit instituted by the executor of the wife to recover a moiety of the proceeds of the testator's real estate, so far as it was rendered necessary by their conduct. Ankers v. Sandford, 4 Jur. 817.

A. filed a bill against B., praying that C. might be declared a trustee for him of a farm, and that an account of the profits of the farm might be taken, A. offering to allow for the sums advanced or expended by C., and to pay to C. what, if anything, should be found due on taking the account. C., by his answer, denied that he was a trustee, and stated that the carrying on of the farm had been attended with considerable loss. At the hearing, A.'s counsel waived the account which he had asked for, but Wood, V.-Ch., declared C. to be a trustee for A., and gave to A. costs up to the hearing, and directed the accounts to be taken. A. appealed from so much of the decree as directed the accounts, but the appeal was dismissed without costs, and the decree was varied by giving A. leave to apply for his costs subsequently to the hearing, on his paying C. what should be found due to him on taking the account. Kendall v. Masters, 29 L. J., Ch. 805.

Trustees refusing to recognise an appointment made by their cestui que trust, a tenant for life, in favour of his two sons, on the ground that such appointment is fraudulent from some supposed benefit resulting to the appointor, will not be allowed their costs of a suit to compel a conveyance of the legal estate where all taint of fraud is distinctly disproved by the evidence, and the trustees have contented themselves with taking counsel's opinion without taking any steps to inform themselves as to the circumstances.

Cockcroft or Cockroft v. Sutcliffe, 25 L. J., Ch. 313; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 323; 4 W. R. 339.

Where a trustee refused to re-convey trust property until the cestui que trust had apologised for an alleged imputation on the trustee, the costs of a suit for re-conveyance, occasioned by such refusal, were directed to be paid by the trustee. Moore v. Prance, 9 Hare 299; 20 L. J., Ch. 468; 15 Jur. 1188.

In a suit to compel the defendant to deliver up certain deeds and execute certain conveyances, the defendant having at last done what was required, and having been paid on the other hand a small part of his counter demand:—Held (notwithstanding the general rule as to suits which have been compromised), that the plaintiffs were entitled to bring the suit to a hearing for the purpose of getting their costs, and decree against the defendants accordingly. Griffin v. Brady, 39 L. J., Ch. 136; 18 W. R. 130.

Refusal by Trustees—To Assign Term.]—Trustees of a term, the trusts of which had been put an end to by the cestui que trust:—Held, entitled to their costs of a suit to compel an assignment of the term to the purchaser of the property, on the ground that full and accurate information had not been tendered them before bill filed. Holford v. Phipps, 4 Beav. 434; 10 L. J., Ch. 209.

Trustees who unsuccessfully resisted the claim of the assignees from the cestui que trust to have a term merged:—Held, entitled to trustees' costs. S. C., 4 Beav. 475.

—— To pay Legacy.]—A trustee, refusing to pay a legacy without the direction of the court in a case which admitted of no doubt, was refused his costs, but was not made to pay the costs of the suit, because he might have acted from ignorance, and not from any improper motive. Knight v. Martin, 1 Russ. & M. 70; Tam. 237.

A legatee immediately upon attaining twenty-one required payment of a pecuniary legacy to which she then became entitled. The trustees of the will, who had stock to answer the legacy, were supplied with evidence of the legatee's age and identity and that she was unmarried, but, acting on representations made by the legatee's brother, they required that they or one of them should have a personal interview with the legatee for the purpose of explaining her rights, and guarding her against the influence of her mother and stepfather, with whom she was residing; and they proposed, unless such interview were granted, to pay the legacy into court under the trustee relief act. The legatee having brought an action to recover the legacy:—Held, that the trustees were not justified in withholding or delaying payment of the legacy, and they were ordered to pay the costs of the action. De Burgh v. M'Clintock, 11 L. R., Ir. 220.

A cestui que trust will have to pay his own costs if he institutes proceedings against his trustee for payment of a sum due unless every feasible means have been adopted by him to obtain payment without suit. Aylmer v. Winterbottom, 4 Jur. (N.S.) 19.

—— To Transfer Trust Fund.]—Trustees who had declined to transfer a fund to an assignee, on the ground of an alleged fraud in the assignment, were held entitled to costs as between solicitor and client, although the assignment was decreed to be carried into execution; there being some circumstances of suspicion attending the assignment, particularly a variance between the consideration expressed in the deed and the actual consideration. Whitmarsh v. Robertson, 1 Y. & C. C. C. 715; 11 L. J., Ch. 404; 6 Jur. 921.

A party to whose name a trust fund has been transferred by mistake is entitled to the sanction of the court before he joins in any transfer, and to his costs. Dunkin v. Ward, 1 Jur. 735.

It is the duty of the court to protect trustees to the utmost in exercising every reasonable caution, and requiring full proof; yet if a trustee, after having received full evidence of the title, perseveringly persist in withholding the fund from the party entitled to it upon grounds which wholly fail, and especially where a part of those grounds is a claim in which that trustee is himself interested, the court will not allow him so to conduct himself without paying the costs of such a mode of proceeding. Froste v. Hamilton, 6 Jur. 525.

If trustees take upon themselves to inquire into matters which do not concern them, and to raise questions of the title of their cestuis que trust, they must bear their own expenses of proceedings resulting from their own conduct. And the fact of their acting under the advice of counsel will not, in all cases, entitle them to the costs of a suit. Devey v. Thornton, 9 Hare, 22; 22 L. J., Ch. 163.

A trustee of two separate funds held not entitled to require from the cestui que trust of both funds a covenant of indemnity in respect of dealings with one of the funds before paying over the other fund, as to which there was no question; and the trustee was made to pay the costs of a suit instituted by the cestui que trust to obtain payment of the latter fund without any such indemnity. Price v. Loaden 21 Beav. 508.

An executrix of a deceased and sole trustee having declined to receive and pay the dividends on stock standing in the name of the trustee, the cestui que trust filed a bill against her for the appointment of new trustees, a transfer of the trust fund, and payment of a dividend:—Held, that the executrix was entitled to her costs out of the fund. Legg v. Mackrell, 2 De G. F. & J. 551; 4 L. T. 568. Reversing 1 Giff. 165; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 1154.

Executors of trustees decreed to pay the costs of a suit rendered necessary by their having refused to pay over the trust fund on reasonable evidence of a person's death; but inasmuch as the trustees had been guilty of a breach of trust in relation to the fund, such costs were decreed to be paid out of the assets of the trustees, and not personally by the executors. Syse v. Kingdom, 1 Coll. C. C. 184.

—— Estate of Married Woman.]—Trustees of the separate estate of a married woman decreed to pay the costs of a suit instituted to compel them to transfer the fund into her name. Thorby v. Yeats, 1 Y. & C. C. C. 438; 6 Jur. 939.

Where a married woman is entitled to a life interest to her separate use, under her marriage settlement, her receipt alone to be a sufficient discharge, that is not a restraint upon anticipation; but where the trustees, upon the clause as to the separate receipt, consider it so far doubtful that they refuse to pay either to the married woman or her assignee, and a bill is filed, they are still entitled to their costs in priority. Rose v. Sharrod, 1 N. R. 419; 11 W. R. 356.

An unmarried lady transferred a sum of stock to trustees for herself. The letter supposed to contain the terms of the trust was lost, and no evidence was given of its contents. After the marriage of the lady, the husband and wife demanded a transfer of the fund, which the trustees refused to make without the direction of the court, unless the fund should be settled for the benefit of the wife and her issue:—Held, that the trustees ought to have transferred the fund without suit, and must, therefore, pay the costs. Penfold v. Bouch, 4 Hare, 271.

—— Appointment.]—By a post-nuptial settlement, property in the funds, belonging to the wife, was settled in trust for the husband and wife for their lives, and then for such of their children in such parts, &c., as the wife should by deed or will appoint. There were four children. The husband died, and the wife appointed the whole fund, and assigned her life interest therein to the eldest (a daughter), who had attained the age of twenty-one, but who, together with the other children, was living with her mother. A trustee refusing to join in the transfer of the fund pursuant to the appointment, was not allowed his costs of a suit brought against him by the daughter to compel the transfer, though, under all the circumstances of the case, he was not decreed to pay the costs of the suit. Campbell v. Home, 1 Y. & C. C. C. 664; 7 Jur. 365.

Testatrix, having certain sums of stock standing in the joint names of herself and A., B. and C., bequeaths the same to A., D. and B. on certain trusts, and directs C. within six months after her decease to execute and deliver to the executors of her will a deed declaring that he, C., his executors, administrators, and assigns, would thenceforth stand and be possessed of the sums of stock respectively and the dividends on the trusts in her will mentioned, and she appointed A., D. and B. executors. C., having executed the deed, filed a bill to have the rights declared and the trusts executed. On the question as to costs, whether C. ought not to have transferred the funds into the names of A., D. and B. without suit:—Held, that he was a co-trustee of the funds, and could not safely transfer them to A., D. and B., without the sanction of the court. Iredell v. Iredell, 18 Beav. 202.

A fund was settled on A. for life, with remainder to such of his children or remoter issue by his deceased wife as he should appoint. Shortly before his son, the only child of the marriage, attained twenty-one. A. requested the trustees to prepare for a transfer of the fund to himself and his son, such transfer as to the greater part of the fund to be into A.'s own name. Not long before this A. had complained to one of the trustees of his son's extravagance, and had said to the solicitors of the trustees that a son ought to be dependent on his father. On the son's coming of age A. made an appointment of the fund to him, and they then applied to the trustees to transfer it into their joint names. The son was living with the father's solicitor:—Held, by Turner, L.J. (dissentiente Knight Bruce, L.J.), that the trustees had been rightly allowed their costs of a suit to obtain such transfer; for that they were justified in declining to make it without the sanction of the court, though the son was represented by a separate solicitor, and declarations were made that there was no bargain between him and the father for the father's benefit. King v. King, 1 De G. & J. 663; 27 L. J., Ch. 29; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 721; 6 W. R. 85.

—— New Trustees.]—Where a trustee is required to make a transfer of a fund to new trustees, and he alleges that he has a lien for charges (though he may have a right, under the act of parliament under which he acts, or by agreement, to recover payment), he has no right to interpose any delay in the way of making the transfer in respect of his alleged claim. Wilson v. Parker, 10 Jur. 979.

A surviving trustee who, without sufficient reason, declined to transfer trust funds to new trustees, duly appointed under a power in the instrument creating the trust, was ordered to pay the costs of an action to compel such transfer. Coppinger v. Shekleton, 15 L. R., Ir. 461.

11. Separate Defences.

General Rule.]—The mere fact of a trustee severing in his defence from his co-trustee is not, in the absence of evidence that the severance was improper, a ground for depriving him of costs. Isaac, In re, Cronbach v. Isaac, 66 L. J., Ch. 160; [1897] 1 Ch. 251; 75 L. T. 638; 45 W. R. 262—C. A.

"Outlay in Strict Line of Duty."]—Costs incurred by an executor, who, to meet a possible charge of devastavit, separately defends an action brought jointly against residuary legatees and himself, are not "an outlay in the strict line of his duty" towards his cestuis que trust; and he cannot call upon them to indemnify him in respect of his expenditure. Hosegood v. Pedler, 66 L. J., Q. B. 18.

Trustees in Same Interest.]—Trustees in the same interest will be allowed the costs of separate answers if the master finds the circumstances justified them in so answering. Dudgeon v. Cormley, 2 Con. & L. 422; 4 Dr. & War. 158.

Where several persons are made defendants in respect to a joint fiduciary character only, or if any beneficial interest which they may have does not conflict with their duty, they ought not to sever in their defences; otherwise one set of costs only will be allowed them. Gaunt v. Taylor, 2 Beav. 346; 4 Jur. 166.

The rule that where a joint fiduciary character exists, a joint defence should be always adopted, is too general. It does not apply where the joint parties are liable to account, and incur responsibility. Reade v. Sparkes, 1 Moll. 8.

Where the bill was dismissed with costs, the court referred it to the master to inquire whether it was necessary for parties, trustees, and cestuis que trust, appearing by same solicitor, to file separate answers. Woods v. Woods, 5 Hare, 229.

Trustees severing, even as defendants, are not allowed more than one set of costs without some very special reason. Hughes v. Key, 20 Beav. 395.

One Trustee out of Jurisdiction.]—If trustees separate in defence, they are only entitled to divide amongst them altogether the reasonable costs of one answer as against the fund, and the absence of one trustee out of the jurisdiction, it appears, makes no difference. The executor of mortgagor who has proved cannot have costs out of the surplus of the real estate. Whether a person named executor, but not having proved or acted as a necessary party, and by whom his costs are to be paid, quære. Nicholson v. Falkiner, 1 Moll. 555.

Trustees Residing in Different Parts.]—The two co-heiresses of a trustee, who lived at a distance from each other, were made parties to a suit for enforcing the performance of marriage articles. They submitted to act as the court might direct, and defended separately:—Held, they were entitled to two sets of costs. Aldridge v. Westbrook, 4 Beav. 212; 10 L. J., Ch. 363.

Trustees appeared separately; one lived in a distant part of the country. The court declined making any special order as to costs. Wiles v. Cooper, 9 Beav. 298; 15 L. J., Ch. 129.

Trustees and their cestuis que trust and next of kin in the same interest, severing in their defences, entitled only to one set of costs, although stated (at the bar, but not by the answers) to reside in parts of the country remote from each other. Farr v. Sheriffe, 4 Hare, 528; 15 L. J., Ch. 89; 10 Jur. 630.

A hostile claim was filed for an account and administration against three trustees, only one having ever acted, and the acting trustee resided in a different part of England from the other two. No unreasonable conduct was proved against the acting trustee:—Held, that he was justified in appearing separately from his two co-trustees; and a double set of costs was allowed. Cummins v. Bromfield, 3 Jur. (N.S.) 657.

Declining to Transfer to Husband, Administrator of Wife.] — One of two trustees having declined to transfer the fund to the surviving husband, who was his wife's administrator, and having severed in his defence in a suit to obtain a transfer, was allowed no costs. Allen v. Thorp, 7 Beav. 72; 13 L. J., Ch. 5.

Filling Different Characters.]—Where trustees put in separate answers, and appeared by different solicitors, on the ground that in that case they filled different characters, the court gave them all costs as between solicitor and client. Kampf v. Jones, C. P. Cooper, 13.

Similar Demurrers.]—Defendants (trustees), who had severally filed similar demurrers, instead of joining in one demurrer, not allowed the costs of the demurrers, although successful. Cooke v. Courtown (Lord), 6 Ir. Eq. R. 279.

One Trustee charged with Misconduct.]—Two trustees severed in their defence; one was charged with misconduct, but not the other. The court allowed only one set of costs, and gave the whole of them to the innocent trustee. Webb v. Webb, 16 Sim. 55; 17 L. J., Ch. 13.

Refusal to Join in Answer of Co-trustee.]—A trustee who refuses to join in the answer of his co-trustee, and does not put in an answer differing from that of his co-trustee, is not entitled to his costs. Young v. Scott, 1 Jones, 71.

Trustee Dying before Further Consideration of Case.]—A trust fund, consisting of a debt from the estate of a testator, was recovered in a creditors' suit by the cestuis que trust; in which suit the two trustees of the fund were defendants. The two trustees (for reasons which were not denied to be sufficient) appeared separately; and one of them dying before the cause was heard on further directions:—Held, that he had acquired no lien for his costs on the trust fund in court; and the petition of his personal representative, that his costs might be taxed, and provided for out of the fund, was refused, with costs. Malins v. Greenway, 7 Hare, 391; 17 L. J., Ch. 26, 331; 18 L. J., Ch. 154; 12 Jur. 66, 319.

One Set of Costs Allowed—Contribution.]—Two trustees (A. and B.) were ordered to pay a sum of money into court; this was paid by A. alone. They had severed in their defences, and obtained but one set of costs. B.'s share of the costs was ordered to be paid to A. by way of contribution. Prince v. Hine, 27 Beav. 345.

—— Apportionment of Costs by Taxing-Master.]—When two trustees sever in their defence to an administration action, and it appears that the trustee who has separated himself from his co-trustee has separately done work in the administration of the trust estate, the proper order is to allow one set of costs only to the trustees, and to direct that such costs should be apportioned by the taxing-master between the trustees, but so as only to give to the severing trustee the costs of work actually done by him. Isaac, In re, Cronbach v. Isaac, supra.

Two trustees, who severed in their defences, were allowed one set of costs only. Course v. Humphrey, 26 Beav. 402; 28 L. J., Ch. 327; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 615.

One of them, by his answer, imputed misconduct to the other, which rendered it necessary for him to sever, and he asked for the whole costs. The court, being unable, on the answers, to determine the question, left the division to the master. Ib.

One set of costs being allowed to trustees who had severed in their defences, the division of it was left to the taxing-master. Att.-Gen. v. Wyville, 28 Beav. 464.

Allegation by Severing Trustee of Ignorance of the Accounts.]—Where one of two trustees, not the acting trustee, took a power of attorney from one of the cestuis que trust, and acted on her behalf, and claimed a payment in her right; and afterwards, on a suit being instituted by another cestui que trust, severed in his defence from the acting trustee, alleging that he knew nothing of the accounts:—Held, that only one set of costs could be allowed. Hodson v. Cash, 1 Jur. (N.S.) 864.

A trustee is not justified in severing in his defence on either of these ground: 1. That he did not know what the accounts were, or what had been done by his co-trustee; he ought to have inquired, and not severed unless he found something wrong. 2. That he was solicitor for one of the cestuis que trust, and held her power of attorney, that being a position which a trustee ought not to accept. Ib.

Charges of Personal Fraud against Severing Trustee.]—The trustees of a will agreed to settle disputes with the surviving partner in a firm of which the testator had been a member by selling the testator's share to him at a certain price. They then filed a bill to have this agreement sanctioned; a decree was made accordingly, and the sale carried out. Some years afterwards some of the residuary legatees, who were infants, filed a bill by their next friend to set aside the decree on the ground that the compromise was an improper one, and that it had been entered into, and the decree sanctioning it obtained, by the personal fraud of one of the trustees. This trustee answered separately; and at the hearing Lord Romilly dismissed the bill with costs, being of opinion that the compromise had been beneficial and the decree sanctioning it properly obtained. The next friend could not pay the costs, and the trustee applied by summons in a suit for the administration of the testator's estate to have them taxed as between solicitor and client and paid out of the estate:—Held, that the trustee was entitled to be paid his costs out of the estate, as he had defended the suit for the benefit of the estate, though he had at the same time defended his own character. Walters v. Woodbridge, 47 L. J., Ch. 516; 7 Ch. D. 504; 38 L. T. 83; 26 W. R. 469—C. A.

12. FUND LIABLE FOR PAYMENT OF COSTS.

Action Instituted Unnecessarily by Owner of One Share.]—An action to carry into execution the trusts of a fund having been instituted unnecessarily by the beneficial owner of one out of six shares, the other beneficiaries, who had not been served with notice of or attended proceedings in the action, or derived any benefit therefrom, received payment for their shares in full from the trustee pending the action:—Held, that the costs of the action were to be borne by the plaintiff's share alone. Chennell, In re, Jones v. Chennell, 47 L. J., Ch. 80. Affirmed 47 L. J., Ch. 583; 8 Ch. D. 492; 38 L. T. 494; 26 W. R. 595—C. A.

Trustee Appearing on Petition for Payment of Dividends.]—The costs of a trustee, who was served with and appeared upon a petition by a tenant for life for payment of dividends, were ordered to be paid out of income. Mason, In re, Smithett, Ex parte, L. R. 12 Eq. 111; 24 L. T. 869; 19 W. R. 1025.

When a fund has been paid into court on account of the inability of a sole trustee to act, on an application relating solely to the payment of the dividends, the costs of the appearance of the trustee may be properly charged on the corpus. Wood's Trusts, In re, 40 L. J., Ch. 179; L. R. 11 Eq. 155; 23 L. T. 586; 19 W. R. 227.

Representatives of Defaulting Executor.]—The representative of a defaulting executor is entitled to costs out of the executor's assets, not out of the assets of the original testator, whose estate is being administered. Gurney v. Gurney, 48 L. T. 529.

Suit to Secure Particular Legacy.]—Executors and trustees having appropriated a legacy, and divided the residue:—Held, that the costs of a suit to secure the particular legacy must be paid thereout. Governesses' Benevolent Institution v. Rushbridger, 18 Beav. 467.

Trustee—Suing for Debt—Circumstances of Suspicion.]—Where the plaintiff is suing as a trustee, and there are circumstances of suspicion in the case, the court will stay proceedings on payment of the debt into court, and on payment of costs, leaving the plaintiff to apply to the court to have his extra costs out of the fund in court. Jones v. Bramwell, 3 D. P. C. 481.

—— Owner of Property Charged with Trust Fund.]—If a trustee becomes owner of property charged with a trust fund, and resists a suit by his co-trustee to call in and re-invest it, thus allowing his interest as owner to come into collision with his duty as trustee, on a decree he will not get costs out of the trust fund. Costello v. O'Rorke, 19 W. R. 143—Ir. Ch. App.

—— Obtaining Discharge after applying to Tenant for Life to Appoint New Trustees.]—The trustees of a settlement applied to be discharged from their trust, on the ground of the unexpected responsibility thrown upon them by the repeated charges and annuities to which the tenant for life had subjected his interest, and also stating, which was admitted, that they had applied to the tenant for life to appoint new trustees in their room, which he had failed to do:—Held, that the costs of obtaining the discharge should be paid out of the interest of the tenant for life. Coventry v. Coventry, 1 Keen, 758; 6 L. J., Ch. 275.

—— Acting Bonâ Fide under Invalid Will of Real Estate.]—A trustee, acting bonâ fide, and with the concurrence of the heir-at-law, under a will which was supposed to be valid as to real estate, but which afterwards turns out to be invalid, is entitled to be indemnified out of the personal estate. Edgecumbe v. Carpenter, 1 Beav. 171; 8 L. J., Ch. 17.

If an estate is devised to A. and his heirs on trust to sell, &c., and A. devises it, the costs of getting the legal estate out of his devisee must be borne by A.'s estate. Cooke v. Crawford, 13 Sim. 91; 11 L. J., Ch. 406; 8 Jur. 723.

Direction to Accumulate and Purchase Lands to be Settled to Uses.]—Under a direction by will to accumulate and lay out a certain sum of money in the purchase of land to be settled to uses thereby declared, the costs of the investment are to be paid out of the particular sum directed to be invested. Gwyther v. Allen, 1 Hare, 505.

Sale by Devisees of Lands in Trust for Charitable Purposes.]—Devisees of lands in trust for charitable purposes, having sold part of those lands, under the provisions of the London Bridge Acts, were held not entitled to their costs out of the fund arising from the sale, although the will creating the trust directed that the estate should defray the expenses of defending the trust property. Towgood or Thorowgood, Ex parte, London Bridge Acts, In re, 1 Y. & C. 588; 5 L. J., Ex. Eq. 97.

Action by Married Woman Against Trustee Dismissed but Receiver Appointed.]—By marriage settlement property was vested in trustees for the wife in trust for her sole and separate use, the trustees being authorised to reimburse themselves, out of the moneys which should come to their hands under the trusts, all expenses to be incurred in the execution of the trusts, or by reason of any matter whatsoever relating thereto or connected therewith. The wife filed a bill to make the trustees liable for a breach of trust and to have new trustees appointed. The bill was dismissed as to the breach of trust, but a receiver was appointed:—Held, that the trustees were entitled to receive their costs of the suit out of the income of the trust funds in the hands of the receiver since the decree. Plaintiff's next friend having become insolvent, the proceedings were stayed. D'Occhsner v. Scott, 24 Beav. 239.

Question as to Trust Fund Separated from General Residue.]—Where a question arises on the interest in a trust fund, separated from the general residue, the costs must come out of the particular fund; and having been given by the decree, as specifically prayed by the bill, out of general personal estate, the decree, although affirmed in other respects, was corrected in that particular; being considered as relief prayed; and therefore not within the rule against appealing for costs only. Jenour v. Jenour, 10 Ves. 562.

Action by Trustees against Tenant for Life for Permissive Waste.]—A court of equity will not interfere at the instance of a remainderman in cases of permissive waste, either by injunction or to give satisfaction against an equitable tenant for life in possession. Testator, by his will, directed his trustees, after payment of the expenses of keeping his estates in repair, and all such costs as "my said trustees shall expend or be put unto by means of the trusts hereby reposed in them," to pay out of the overplus rents and profits certain sums, and after payment thereof, to pay the rents to A. and B. successively for life, with remainder to trustee to preserve, with remainder to the first and other sons of B. successively in remainder, and the several heirs male of the bodies of such sons. On a bill filed by the trustees at the instance of one of the remaindermen in tail, against the second tenant for life, for the purpose of making him accountable for permissive waste:—Held, that the costs of the trustees, whose bill was dismissed, ought to be paid out of the corpus, and not out of the rents and profits of the estate. Powys v. Blagrave, 4 De G. M. & G. 448; 24 L. J., Ch. 142.

Annuity given by Will, and Legacy directed to be Accumulated for Infant—All the Rents Applied to Annuity.]—By a will an annuity was given and a legacy was directed to be accumulated by trustees for the benefit of an infant. The trustees, being in possession of the whole of the testator's estate, applied all the rents and profits in payment of the annuity. A suit was instituted for the payment of the legacy and for administration of the estate. The estate proved insufficient to pay all the costs of the plaintiff and of the defendant trustees; therefore only part of the costs of the latter was ordered to be paid out of the estate, and the whole costs of the plaintiff out of the remaining moneys. Beer v. Tapp, 31 L. J., Ch. 513; 6 L. T. 269; 10 W. R. 277.

Assignment of Debt agreed to be Paid by Instalments.]—A man had become indebted to B., and had agreed under a letter of licence to pay the amount by monthly instalments. B. assigned the benefit of this debt to C. on the occasion of a loan to him, C. thereupon gave notice to A. of the assignment. B. was obliged to proceed against C. for the repayment of the loan, and required A. to make the payment of the instalments to him (B.), and he filed a bill against C. and A. for an account. One instalment had been paid by C. to A. after notice:—Held, that A. was entitled to retain his costs of suit out of the next instalments as they became due, the amount to be added to the original debt due from B. to C. Aplin v. Cates, 30 L. J., Ch. 6; 3 L. T. 288; 9 W. R. 92.

Charge of Costs on Capital and Income, when properly Incurred.]—The trustees of a freehold estate of which the plaintiff was equitable tenant for life under a will, brought actions under the advice of counsel against two persons for interfering with the property, and compromised them before trial. The plaintiff had no notice of the proceedings, but had some time previously warned the trustees, on the occasion of an injury done by persons other than the defendants to these actions, that he should hold them liable if they did not take all necessary steps to protect the property. In December, 1881, the plaintiff applied to the trustees for the rents accrued since May, 1880. The trustees' solicitor answered stating the amount of the rents received, and saying that it was less than the costs incurred by the trustees in the action, and that they were out of pocket. A correspondence ensued, in the course of which the trustees expressed their willingness to concur in any arrangement for raising the costs out of the estate, but the plaintiff insisted on having the rents paid to him irrespective of any arrangement for raising the costs, and brought his action to enforce payment. The vice-chancellor of the Lancaster court made an order, declaring that as the actions were brought without the knowledge or consent of the plaintiff, the costs were not chargeable against the income. And the court "being of opinion that the actions were commenced under the advice of counsel," ordered the trustees' costs of them to be raised and paid out of the estate, but ordered the trustees to pay the plaintiff his costs of the present action up to the hearing. The plaintiff appealed against the direction to raise the costs of the former actions out of the estate, and the trustees from the order as to the costs of the present action:—Held, on appeal, that the direction to raise the costs of the trustees of the old actions out of the estate ought to be affirmed, for that the actions appeared to have been brought bonâ fide and to have been beneficial to the estate, but that the reason given in the decree for allowing them ought to be varied, as that result did not necessarily follow from their having been commenced under the advice of counsel. But held, that the order on the trustees to pay costs must be reversed, and directions given for raising their costs of this action out of the estate, for that the costs of trustees properly incurred in the administration of the trust are a first charge on both the capital and income of the trust estate, and that the trustees were not bound to part with the income till their costs had been otherwise provided for, and they therefore had been guilty of no misconduct. Stott v. Milne, 25 Ch. D. 710; 50 L. T. 742—C. A.

Assignee in Insolvency—Parties Necessarily Brought Before Court.]—Assignee in insolvency being obliged to obtain a decree in the execution of his trust, costs of persons necessarily brought before the court were ordered to be paid out of the fund, not personally by the plaintiff. Spunner v. Spunner, 2 Moll. 473.

Establishing Right to Fund.]—P. invested money in consols in the names of herself and her granddaughter B., and subsequently filed a bill for the purpose of making B. a trustee of the fund, and for a transfer. The bill was after the death of P. dismissed. On petition to have the costs of the defence paid out of the fund, an order was made for that purpose; but a difficulty having occurred in the registrar's office, his honour directed the fund to be brought into court, a sufficient sum to be raised for the payment of costs, and the dividends to be accumulated for the benefit of the infant. Pitt, In re, 1 Jur. (N.S.) 1155. See also Hepworth v. Scale, 1 Jur. (N.S.) 698.

Refusal of Cestuis que Trust to Accept Compromise.]—By settlement, dated in 1846, executed on the marriage of S., a debt of 1,200*l.*, due to her from the firm of Q., H. & Co., was assigned to N. and H. (H. being a member of the firm of Q., H. & Co.) as trustees, upon trusts for the benefit of S. and her family. It was provided that the money should be left with Q., H. & Co. until S. gave notice to the trustees to withdraw it, when they were within three months to recover it, and invest elsewhere; but so long as it should remain in the hands of Q., H. & Co., with the permission of S., the trustees, nor either of them, were not to be responsible for the sufficiency of the security. There was no power in the deed to change trustees. The husband died soon after. In November, 1851, Q., H. & Co. stopped payment. In January, 1852, S. gave notice to the trustees to recover the money. N. thereupon demanded the money, but was informed of the stoppage, and offered a compromise. The bill was brought to enable the trustee to act, he having no express power to accept a compromise. The cestuis que trust refused to accept it, and the money being ordered to be paid into court, it was ultimately paid in:—Held that H. was not entitled to receive any costs of the suit out of the fund, but under the circumstances he was not ordered to pay any costs. Norton v. Steinkopf, Kay, 45; 23 L. J., Ch. 35; 18 Jur. 720; 2 W. R. 34.

Trustees resisting Enforcement of Improper Orders.]—The costs of trustees in resisting the enforcement of orders improperly made against them in a suit not warranted by the practice of the court of chancery will be ordered to come out of the trust fund. Muskerry v. Sheffington, L. R. 3 H. L. 144.

Application for Payment of Annuity by Tenant for Life in Possession.]—The time for which a receiver was appointed having expired, and the cestui que trust having, in the absence of the trustee, entered into possession of the estates, subject to the payment of an annuity, and having omitted to pay the same:—Held, that the costs of an application to the court for a direction for payment by the cestui que trust in possession of the annuity were payable out of the estate. Devaynes v. Noble, 8 L. J., Ch. 256.

Priority of Trustees.]—Trustees in an administration action brought by their cestuis que trust, where an order has been made for payment of costs out of the estate, and it appears probable that the estate will not be sufficient to pay all their costs in full, are entitled to an order directing the payment of their costs, charges, and expenses in priority to the costs of all other parties to the action. Dodds v. Tuke, 53 L.J., Ch. 598; 25 Ch. D. 617; 50 L. T. 320; 32 W. R. 424.

Trustees' costs have priority over the claims of a mortgagee claiming under their cestui que trust Rose v. Sharrock, or Sharrod, 1 N. R. 419; 11 W. R. 356.

Where a married woman is entitled to a life interest to her separate use under her marriage settlement, her receipt alone to be a sufficient discharge, that is not a restraint upon anticipation; but where the trustees, upon the clause, as to the separate receipt, consider it so far doubtful that they refuse to pay either to the married woman or her assignee, and a bill is filed, they are still entitled to their costs in priority. Ib.

Sanction of Agreement by Court.]—Part of the property of a testator consisted of a cotton mill which he directed his trustees not to sell, nor to work themselves, but to let. The will also contained a direction to the trustees not to lend any of the personal estate on mortgage, and prescribed certain strict modes of investment. The cotton mill being out of repair could not be let as it then stood; the trustees, therefore, entered into a provisional agreement with a firm of cotton spinners, by which the latter agreed to take a lease of the mill for twenty-one years, and to spend large sums of money in machinery and repairs, provided the trustees advanced to them, on the security of the machinery, rather more than half the sum required for such machinery and repairs, and also spent a considerable sum in the erection of steam boilers and other landlord's fixtures. Under the terms of the will the trustees could not comply with such proposals; but, upon it being clearly proved that such an arrangement would be highly beneficial to the trust estate, and was one which it was not unusual for lessors in similar cases to enter into, the court sanctioned the agreement, and directed the costs of all parties to the application to come out of the testator's residuary personal estate. Lee's Trusts, In re, 32 L. T. 298.

Person made Party to Suit for Protection of Trustees.]—Person made party to suit only for protection of trustees is entitled to his costs out of trust fund. Hicks v. Wrench, 6 Madd. 93.

Immediate Sale to Defray Costs of Cestui que Trust.]—Where a cestui que trust, having a life interest only, is declared entitled to his costs out of the fund property, the court will not give him a mere lien on it to be enforced by subsequent proceedings, but will direct an immediate sale for the purpose of defraying them. Burkett v. Spray, 1 Russ. & M. 113.

13. Taxation of Costs.

a. As between Party and Party.

In General.]—Where the costs of a trustee are directed to be taxed, that means as between party and party; but where a trustee has expended money by reasonably and properly taking opinions, and procuring directions that are necessary for the due execution of his trust, he is entitled, not only to his costs, but also to his charges and expenses, under the head of just allowances. Fearns v. Young, 10 Ves. 184.

Trustee or the next friend of an infant is entitled to fair expenses, beyond taxed costs, under the head of just allowances. Ib.

Trustees, however, in chancery, on application, generally obtained costs as between attorney and client. Ib.

A mere trustee is only allowed an answer of one skin and a guinea for previous expense. Parsons v. Potter, 2 Hog. 281.

A trustee shall be allowed his full and necessary costs, and shall not be confined in his account to the costs taxed of course, in obtaining a decree. Amand v. Bradbourne, 2 Ca. Ch. 138.

Where, on a motion, affidavits of great length were filed by the plaintiff complaining of the conduct of the trustees, and by the trustees vindicating their conduct, the court, in acceding to the application of the plaintiff, ordered that none of the parties be allowed their costs of any of the affidavits used on the motion. Horner v. Wheelwright, 2 Jur. (N.S.) 367.

A. B. was entrapped into becoming a trustee; but it was agreed that he should be discharged. He consulted counsel as to the liability he had incurred, and instructed him to prepare proper deeds for his protection. It was discovered that a breach of trust had been committed previously to his becoming trustee, and counsel prepared a bond and release for A. B.'s protection, but which were never executed, in consequence of a suit having been instituted by A. B to set the matter right:—Held, overruling the decision of the taxing-master, that, under an order to tax A. B.'s costs, charges, and expenses of and incidental to the trust, A. B. was entitled to the costs of the draft bond and release, though they had never been used. Stephens v. Newborough (Lord), 11 Beav. 403; 17 L. J., Ch. 332; 12 Jur. 319.

Costs to defendant, a mere trustee by consignment of goods, as to plaintiff in bill of interpleader, not as between attorney and client, but according to the course of the court as between party and party. Dunlop v. Hubbard, 19 Ves. 205; 12 R. R. 170.

Where a bill is dismissed against a trustee, and there is no estate to be administered, he only has costs as between party and party. Saunders v. Saunders, 3 Jur. (N.S.) 727; 5 W. R. 479.

County Court Scale.]—When a trust fund is reduced to 500*l.* before the filing of the bill, the court will only allow costs according to the county court scale. Ali v. Forrester, 21 L. T. 819.

On Disclaimer.]—A person named a trustee in a deed, who declines to accept the office, is in the situation of any other defendant against whom a bill is dismissed, and can only have his costs as between party and party. Norway v. Norway, 2 Myl. & K. 278; 3 L. J., Ch. 111, 163.

A trustee, who after disclaiming is continued as party to the hearing, is entitled to costs only as between party and party. Bray v. West, 9 Sim. 429.

A trustee disclaiming at the bar has his costs only as between party and party. Bulkeley v. Eglinton (Earl), 1 Jur. (N.S.) 994.

Where the name of a party appears upon documents as a trustee, and he is therefore made a defendant, but asserts by his answer that he never accepted the trust nor acted, he is entitled to costs as between party and party. Heap v. Jones, 5 W. R. 106.

Semble, a disclaiming trustee is entitled only to costs as between party and party. Legg v. Mackrell, 1 Giff. 165; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 1145. But see S. C., 2 De G. F. & J. 551; 4 L. T. 568.

Right of Cestui que Trust to Tax.]—A cestui que trust has no right to question his trustees' retainer of a solicitor as between himself and the solicitor; or to obtain on order for the separate taxation of the solicitor's bill of costs: but he has a right to attend the taxation of the trustees, and raise the question of retainer only as one between himself and his co-trustees. Story. In re, Marwick, Ex parte, 1 L. T. 16; 8 W. R. 15.

b. As between Solicitor and Client.

Administration Action.]—One of two executors and trustees commenced an action against the other for the administration of the estate, and a decree was made. There was no allegation of any misconduct on the part of the defendant. On the action coming on for further consideration, the court gave the plaintiff his costs as between solicitor and client, but gave the defendant costs only as between party and party, holding that two sets of costs as between solicitor and client ought not to be allowed to the trustees:—Held, on appeal, that a trustee is entitled to costs as between solicitor and client in an administration action, unless a case of misconduct is made out against him, and that the defendant must have costs as between solicitor and client. Lore, In re, Hill v. Spurgeon, 54 L. J., Ch. 816; 29 Ch. D. 348; 52 L. T. 398; 33 W. R. 449—C. A.

Testator, by his will, gives the rents of his real property to his wife for life, and bequeaths the bulk of his personal property to her absolutely, constituting her sole executrix, and directs that certain trustees shall, as soon as conveniently may be after his decease, convert all the convertible residue of his personal estate into money, and invest it in government or real securities, and pay the dividends to his wife for life. The ultimate trusts, both of the real and residuary personal property, are in favour of persons who are not in esse or not ascertained. Twenty years elapse, during which the trustees leave the widow in the possession and management of the whole property, and then the surviving trustee files a bill against her for an account. It appears in the suit that she has paid all the testator's debts to an amount exceeding the amount of personalty not specifically bequeathed, but that she had left some of the assets outstanding, and claims to be a purchaser of those assets, in part satisfaction of the moneys which she had overpaid:—Held, that whatever might be her right at law as a purchaser of those assets upon a plea of plene administravit, her right as a purchaser in equity is not absolute, but subject to the rules of equitable administration; and, consequently, that the bill being filed on reasonable grounds, the surviving trustee is entitled to the costs of the suit; but, held, under the circumstances of the case, that he is not entitled to costs as between solicitor and client. Hearn v. Wells, 1 Coll. C. C. 323.

Suit as to the Validity of Election of a Vicar.]—Costs as between solicitor and client allowed to the archbishop and bishop when made parties to a suit respecting the validity of the election of a vicar. In what case trustees are allowed costs only as between party and party.

Edenborough v. Canterbury (Archbishop), 2 Russ. 93.

Trustees—Nominated by Void Instrument.]—Persons nominated trustees by an instrument which, being void, passes no trust fund, not allowed costs as between solicitor and client. Mohun v. Mohun, 1 Swanst. 201; 18 R. R. 58.

—— Person named Trustee without his Knowledge.]—A person named a trustee without his knowledge, and in that character a party to the suit, having never accepted the trust, is entitled to his costs as between solicitor and client. Sherratt v. Bentley, 1 Russ. & M. 655.

—— Declining to Transfer a Fund.] —Trustees who had declined to transfer a fund to an assignee on the ground of an alleged fraud in the assignment were:—Held, entitled to their costs as between solicitor and client, although the assignment was decreed to be carried into execution, there being some circumstances of suspicion attending the assignment, particularly a variance between the consideration expressed in the deed and the actual consideration. Whitmarsh v. Robertson, 1 Y. & C. C. C. 715; 11 L. J., Ch. 404; 6 Jur. 921.

—— Committing Breach of Trust.] — A trustee who had committed a breach of trust was held entitled to the general costs of the suit as between solicitor and client, but was directed to pay as between party and party the costs relating to the inquiry arising out of the breach of trust. Pride v. Fooks, 2 Beav. 430; 9 L. J., Ch. 234; 4 Jur. 213.

Action for Account against Trustee—Subsequent Bankruptcy.]—A suit was instituted against an executor and a trustee under a will for an account. On the hearing, a decree for a reference to take accounts of the real and personal estate was directed. He afterwards became bankrupt, and the suit was continued as against his assignees under the bankruptcy:—Held, that he was entitled to the costs of suit as between solicitor and client from the date of his bankruptcy, and also the costs of his appearance on a petition for a vesting order in new trustees. Turner v. Mullineux, 3 L. T. 687; 9 W. R. 252.

When a defaulting trustee against whom a bill is filed becomes bankrupt, and the suit is prosecuted against him after his bankruptcy, he is entitled to his costs incurred after bankruptcy, and that as between solicitor and client. Bowyer v. Griffin, L. R. 9 Eq. 340; 18 W. R. 227.

Action Dismissed with Costs as against Trustees.]—Where a bill is dismissed with costs as against trustees, the court having no estate under its control, and payment of an alleged claim is asked out of the residue of the testator's estate, there is not such a specialty as to induce the court to give the trustees of such estate their costs as between solicitor and client. Saunders v. Saunders, 5 W. R. 479.

Defendant Trustee Solicitor.]—The costs of a defendant trustee, notwithstanding he was a solicitor, ordered to be taxed as between solicitor and client. York v. Brown, 1 Coll. C. C. 260; 8 Jur. 567

14. PRACTICE ON ALLOWANCE OF COSTS.

Further Consideration.]—If the decree at the hearing make no provision for the costs of a trustee, the court will not entertain any petition in respect of them at the hearing on further directions. Malins v. Greenway, 7 Hare, 391; 18 L. J., Ch. 154.

A trustee not appearing at the hearing, a decree was made against him, with leave to show cause against it. He then set down the cause again, and prayed his costs of the suit, on paying the costs of the day, which were granted, the master of the rolls saying, that his having paid the costs of the day placed him rectum in curia. Norris v. Norris, 1 Cox, 183.

Upon the death of one of three trustees, no provision having been made for his costs, his executors, by consent, without a revivor, appeared for the purpose of claiming his costs. Kampf v. Jones, C. P. Cooper, 13.

Where a bill is dismissed without costs so far as it seeks to charge trustees with wilful default, the court may by its order upon further consideration give the defendants the whole of their costs. Also, a sum advanced by the trustees and disallowed by the chief clerk's certificate may be allowed by the order on further consideration. Massey v. Massey, 17 L. T. 233.

Exercise of Powers without Sanction of Court.]—On the hearing on further consideration of an administration action, an order was made by which all the questions raised were practically disposed of, but liberty to apply was reserved. Subsequently the trustees of the will of the testator in the action, in exercise of the powers under the will, and with the consent of the tenant for life, sold land forming part of the estate, and carried out other transactions, without applying for or obtaining any sanction of the court:—Held, that the trustees were entitled to their proper costs of carrying out such transactions. Mansel, In re, Rhodes v. Jenkin, 54 L. J., Ch. 883; 52 L. T. 806; 33 W. R. 727.

1. ELECTION OF FELLOWS, &C.

Universities Tests Act.]—By the Hertford College Act, 1874 (37 & 38 Vict. c. 55), Magdalen Hall, in the University of Oxford, was dissolved, Hertford College created, and the property of Magdalen Hall transferred to Hertford College. An endowment for a lay fellowship, restricted to members of certain specified churches, was afterwards accepted by Hertford College. T., who was not a member of any of the specified churches, tendered himself for examination as a candidate, and was informed that he might be examined if he desired it, but he must understand that he would not be elected even if he stood at the head of the list. He did not present himself for examination, and M., a duly qualified candidate, was elected, after examination, to the fellowship. After the election T. applied for a mandamus:—Held, first, that there was no refusal to examine T. Reg. v. Hertford College, 47 L. J., Q. B. 649; 3 Q. B. D. 693; 39 L. T. 18; 27 W. R. 347—C. A.

Held, secondly, assuming that T. was refused examination, the office being full, of a candidate properly qualified, a mandamus would not lie commanding the college to examine T. and to proceed to an election; and that his remedy, if any, was by way of appeal to the visitor. Ib.

The operation of the Universities Tests Act, 1871 (34 Vict. c. 26), is confined to colleges subsisting before it was passed; and the act does not prevent the creation in the universities of fresh colleges, the endowments of which are confined to the members of a particular religious community. Ib.

The Universities Tests Act, 1871, is not incorporated with the Hertford College Act, 1874; and s. 13 of the latter act, which provides "that nothing in this act contained shall be construed to repeal any of the provisions of the Universities Tests Act, 1871," does not render Hertford College a subsisting college within the former statute. Ib.

Right to Nominate to Fellowship.]—The right of nomination to a fellowship being in dispute between two parties claiming under the same grant, the court directed an issue to try "whether the plaintiff had a better right than the defendant to nominate." On the trial it appeared that the defendant had nominated for nearly twenty years, and that vacancies occurred about once in five years; that the right of nomination was limited by the grant to the heirs male of E., with limitations over in default of such heirs; that the eldest son of E. had three sons; that the plaintiff was lineally descended from the third; but that in 1634 the two elder sons were living, and one had then living male issue. No further evidence was given:—Held, that, on the issue directed, the plaintiff might recover upon this evidence, without showing that the two elder branches were extinct. Sandys v. Sandys, 1 Q. B. 316, n.

Dispensation Presumed.]—In a college of royal foundation, a practice having for many years prevailed of electing two fellows of a county, for which the statutes allowed only one, a dispensation from the crown authorising that practice is to be presumed. Queen's College Case, Jac. 1.

Assignment of Emoluments.]—An assignment of the emoluments of a fellow of a college is valid in equity and effect will be given to a security thereon, out of the dividends apportioned to such fellow from time to time in respect of his fellowship. Feistel v. King's College, Cambridge, 10 Beav. 491; 16 L. J., Ch. 339; 11 Jur. 506.

Election of Warden.]—James I., by letters-patent, in 1619, granted to A. licence to found a college, which should consist of one master, one warden, four fellows, six poor brethren, six poor sisters and twelve poor scholars, to be maintained, sustained, governed and ruled according to the ordinances, statutes and foundation as should be made and established by A.; and that A. should have power to ordain and make ordinances, rules, constitutions and statutes, for the maintenance, sustenance, education, instruction, government and rule of the master, warden, &c. The letters-patent named the college, and created the master, warden, &c., a body corporate. In 1619, A. founded the college, and endowed it with land in three parishes. By an instrument, in 1626, A., by virtue of the power given to him by the letters-patent, made ordinances and statutes for the maintenance, relief, sustenance, education, government and ordering of the college. The 2nd statute ordained that there should be "six assistants touching the ordering of the college, and the rents, revenues and profits thereof"; and the 8th, that the churchwardens of the three parishes in which the college lands were situate should be "assistants to the master, warden and fellows of the college in the governing thereof." The 10th, 11th and 23rd statutes gave the assistants power to nominate poor persons of the parishes to which they respectively belonged, to be the poor brethren and sisters and scholars.

By the 15th statute, "upon the day of the election of the warden, the master, the assistants and fellows shall go into chapel, and after service and sermon proceed to the election of a new warden; after that, the senior fellow shall read the ordinances expressing of what condition and quality the person elected ought to be; and after that, the electors shall make the election." By the 20th statute, if both the places of master and warden should be void at one time, notice was to be given by the senior fellow to the assistants to repair to the college within three days, "to join with the fellows in the election of a new master, which shall be in all points as is formerly described in the election of warden." A mandamus to admit the prosecutor to the office of warden, alleged that the assistants had always, from the foundation of the college, been accustomed as of right to vote at the election of warden. The return did not negative the usage:—Held, first, that by the 15th statute the assistants had a voice in the election of warden; and that if that statute was doubtful, the usage would so interpret it. Reg. v. Dulwich College, 17 Q. B. 600; 21 L. J., Q. B. 36; 16 Jur. 654.

Held, secondly, that although in 1626, after the foundation and endowment of the college, A. could not alter the constitution of the college, or add to the number of the corporate members, he had power to make ordinances for the government of the college, and to give the right of voting in the election of warden to the assistants who were not members of the corporation. Ib.

Election of President.]—The statutes of a college, directing that the president on his election should be admitted, and prescribing an oath to be taken by him, and some other ceremonies to be performed:—Held, upon evidence of a particular form of admission, besides the oath and ceremonies mentioned in the statutes having been used, and upon the ground that in such offices the admission is generally a distinct act, that the admission did not consist in taking the oath, and going through the ceremonies mentioned in the statutes, but in the observance of that particular form. The president elect did not, therefore, forfeit his office by taking the oath, and going through these ceremonies, without having previously subscribed the declaration required by the act of uniformity. Queen's College Case, Jac. 1.

Member of Council of Medical Education.]—By 21 & 22 Vict. c. 90, s. 4, the general council of medical education and registration is to consist of one person chosen from time to time by each of the several bodies therein named, and by the university of London:—Held, that the authority to choose such member is vested in the senate, consisting of the chancellor, vice-chancellor and fellows for the time being, and not in the whole body of the graduates of the university. Reg. v. Storrar, 2 El. & El. 133; 28 L. J., Q. B. 326; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 1304; 7 W. R. 612.

Remedies.]—Disputes as to elections in lay foundations are to be tried in the king's courts. Marriott v. Gregory, Lofft, 21.

In the case of a private eleemosynary lay foundation, if no special visitor is appointed by the founder, the right of visitation, in default of his heirs, devolves upon the king, to be exercised by the great seal; on this ground the court refused to interfere by mandamus to compel the master and fellows to declare one of the fellowships vacant, and to proceed to a new election. Rex v. St. Catherine's Hall, Cambridge, 4 Term Rep. 233; 2 R. R. 369.

The court thought that a mandamus was the proper mode of trying the validity of an election to a vacant fellowship made by the fellows of Trinity Hall, Cambridge, which was disputed by the master. Rex v. Gregory, 4 Term Rep. 244; 2 R. R. 371, n.

2. Visitation.

Appointment of Visitor.]—The appointment of a visitor may be collected from the general tenure of the statutes. St. John's College, Cambridge v. Todington, 1 Burr. 158; 1 Ld. Ken. 441.

In the case of a private eleemosynary lay foundation, if no special visitor is appointed by the founder, the right of visitation, in default of his heirs, devolves upon the king, to be exercised by the great seal. Rex v. St. Catherine's Hall, Cambridge, 4 Term Rep. 233; 2 R. R. 369.

Jurisdiction of.]—The visitors of colleges are not tied up to any particular forms, nor are they liable to prohibition for irregularity in their proceedings, or informality in their acts, but only for want of jurisdiction. Ely (Bishop) v. Bentley, 2 Bro. P. C. 220.

A visitor's power may be limited by the founder. St. John's College, Cambridge v. Todington, supra.

Visitors, though restrained to certain times, may visit whenever called in. Ib.

The power to interpret statutes constitutes a visitor. Rex v. Ely (Bishop), 1 W. Bl. 85.

Visitatorial power may be delegated generally or specially. Ib.

It is incidental to the office of visitors to hear complaints. Ib.

Where a university is incorporated by charter under a visitor, all matters relating to the internal management of the domus, as to passing resolutions, holding examinations, conferring degrees, &c., are under the exclusive control of the visitor, a court of law or equity having only jurisdiction with respect to matters out of the house, as between the university and third persons. Thomson v. London University, 33 L. J., Ch. 625; 10 Jur. (N.S.) 669; 10 L. T. 403; 12 W. R. 733.

Appeal.]—If the visitor of a college in one of the universities refuses to exercise his visitatorial power by receiving and hearing an appeal, the court will grant a mandamus to compel him. Rex. v. Ely (Bishop), 5 Term Rep. 475; 2 R. R. 644. And see Rex v. Worcester (Bishop), 4 M. & S. 415; 16 R. R. 512.

But cannot afterwards review his decision. Buller, Ex parte, 1 Jur. (N.S.) 709.

And where it is doubtful who is the visitor of a college, the court will not grant a mandamus. Rex v. Ely (Bishop), 1 Wils. 266; 1 W. Bl. 52. See also Reg. v. Hertford College, ante, col. 1063.

The visitor need not hear parol evidence on an appeal to him; it is sufficient if he receives the grounds of the appeal, and the answer to it, in writing. Rex v. Ely (Bishop), 2 Term Rep. 475; 1 R. R. 484.

3. Conusance.

Claiming.]—Conusance must be claimed either in the first instance, or at the first day. Rex v. Agar, 5 Burr. 2820.

But need not be before appearance in the action. Parsons v. Willoughby de Broke (Lord), 11 L. T. 628; 13 W. R. 315, 402.

How the claim of conusance by the chancellor of Oxford is made. Kendrick v. Kynaston, 1 W. Bl. 454. And see Leasingby v. Smith, 2 Wils. 406.

When Allowed.]—A claim of conusance was refused to the university of Oxford, because the party, although a member, was not resident at Oxford. Hayes v. Long, 2 Wils. 310.

But a claim of conusance was allowed in an action against a proctor, a pro-proctor, and the marshal of the university, though the affidavit of the latter, describing him as of a parish in the suburbs of Oxford, only verified that he then was and had been for the last fourteen years a common servant of the university, called marshal of the university; and that he was sued for an act done by him in discharge of his duty, and in obedience to the orders of the other two defendants, without stating that he resided within the university, or was matriculated. Thornton v. Ford, 15 East, 634; 13 R. R. 542.

Conusance of a plea of trespass sued against a resident member of the university of Cambridge, for a cause of action verified by affidavit to have arisen within the town and suburbs of Cambridge, over which the university court had jurisdiction, was allowed upon the claim of the vice-chancellor on behalf of the chancellor, masters and scholars of the university, entered on the roll in due form. Browne v. Renouard, 12 East, 12; 11 R. R. 319. And see the objections to the claim fully stated.

A claim of conusance by the vice-chancellor of the university of Oxford, in the vacancy of the office of chancellor by death, on behalf of the university, allowed. Williams v. Brickenden, 11 East, 543; 11 R. R. 264.

Where the university of Cambridge claimed conusance in the case of A., B. and C., alleged in the claim to have been summoned in an action of trespass, at the suit of D., against the form of the privilege of the university; and the affidavit stated that B. and C. were servants of the university, called proctor's men; and that the trespass was an act done by them in discharge of their duty, in obedience to the order of a pro-proctor of the university:—Held, that an affidavit might be received in answer, showing that B. and C. were constables appointed under 6 Geo. 4, c. 97; and therefore liable to be sued at common law, notwithstanding any privilege of the university. Turner v. Bates, 10 Q. B. 292.

Held, also, that the affidavit, alleging that B. and C. were constables in and for the university, appointed and acting under and by virtue of the above statute, and that the action was brought against them for and in respect of acts done by them in execution of their office, without further detail, was an answer to the claim as to B. and C. Ib.

In an action by an indorsee against a maker of two promissory notes, with a count for interest, he pleaded to the jurisdiction of the court, that he was a member of the university of Oxford, and resident within the suburbs of the borough and city of Oxford and university of Oxford, and a student and scholar thereof; and that the causes of action arose in respect of the promissory notes, which were made and given by him within the borough and city of Oxford, and within the university of Oxford, as securities for money lent to the defendant within the borough and university; and that the cause of action in the third count arose in respect of interest which had become due in respect of the notes:—Held, a bad plea. Dormor v. Howard, 9 Jur. 737.

4. Vice-Chancellor's Court.

Jurisdiction of.]—The chancellor's court in Oxford hath not jurisdiction of matters of freehold. Stephens v. Berry, 1 Vern. 212.

In an action for libels alleged to have been published in London, the defendant was a resident undergraduate member of Oxford University; the plaintiff resided in London and had no connection with the university. The chancellor of the university having claimed conusance of the action in his court under the Oxford charter of 14 Hen. 8, confirmed by statute 13 Eliz.:—Held, that the privilege of the charter extended to cases in which the plaintiff resided outside the limits of the city of Oxford, and therefore that the claim must be allowed. Ginnett v. Whittingham, 55 L. J., Q. B. 409; 16 Q. B. D. 761; 34 W. R. 565.

The publication of a pamphlet against the established religion in the university of Cambridge is an offence within one of the statutes of the university, and punishable by banishment by the vice-chancellor, assisted by the heads of colleges in the vice-chancellor's court. Rex v. Cambridge University, 6 Term Rep. 89.

The governing body of a university may lawfully issue a decree, that every tradesman with whom a person in statu pupillari within the university contracts a debt exceeding 5*l.* shall make the same known to the tutor of such person's college, on pain of being discommoned if he omits doing so; and, in case of disobedience, they may enforce such decree by ordering that no person in statu pupillari shall deal with the tradesman for a given period. Heath, Ex parte, 18 Q. B. 647; 21 L. J., Q. B. 337; 17 Jur. 112.

If the vice-chancellor, attended, on summons, by the heads of colleges, makes an order to discommon, in pursuance of such decree, this is not a judicial proceeding which the superior courts can restrain by prohibition. Ib.

A milliner residing in Cambridge was apprehended by the proctors while proceeding to a party given by a bachelor of arts of the university and his friends, and conveyed by them to the spinning-house, a gaol used by the university for confining women suspected of evil found within its precincts. Upon arriving at the gaol the vice-chancellor was sent for, and he heard the statements of the proctors and examined the woman, but not on oath, and finally committed her for imprisonment, but no warrant in writing was made out. An action was brought by her against the vice-chancellor:—Held, first, that as the charter, in express terms, invested the vice-chancellor with authority to punish by imprisonment or otherwise, as he should think fit, he thereby became invested with judicial authority as a judge of record, and entitled to all the protection attached by law to the judicial office. Kemp v. Neville, 10 C. B. (N.S.) 523; 31 L. J.,

C. P. 158; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 913: 4 L. T. 640; 10 W. R. 6.

Held, secondly, that as judges of a court of record have power to commit to the custody of their officer, sedente curiâ, by oral command without any warrant made at the time, and that as the vice-chancellor was a judge of a court of record, therefore a warrant was not necessary, and a committal in the exercise of this peculiar jurisdiction, where no special method was directed by the charter, although it was not shown to be made under a warrant, gave no cause of action. Ib.

Held, thirdly, that the hearing was legal, as there was no express provision in the charter which enabled him to administer an oath, and that it was not essential for the purpose that he should do so. Ib.

Held, fourthly, that the place of confinement appeared to be the accustomed place used for that purpose by the university, and therefore that the usage must be presumed to be lawful till the contrary was shown. Ib.

Rule nisi for a writ of habeas corpus and also for a writ of certiorari on behalf of one H., who had been arrested at Cambridge by the university constables, and charged before the vice-chancellor of the university with "walking with a member of the university." This charge was read over to her, and she pleaded "not guilty." Evidence was given as to her being seen walking with a member of the university, and also as to her being a woman of bad character. The vice-chancellor committed her for fourteen days to the spinning-house, and the warrant of commitment stated that she had been charged with, and convicted of, "walking with a member of the university." It appeared that the above was a common form adopted in the vice-chancellor's court when it was intended to charge a woman with walking with such a member "for immoral purposes," and that for a long time it had been taken to mean such a charge, and that it was intended in this case so to charge and convict the said H., and so to enter the conviction on the warrant of commitment:—Held, that the rule should be made absolute; that the proceedings in the vice-chancellor's court were irregular; that the appellant had not been charged within the words of the charter as "suspected of evil"; that she had been charged with an offence not within the jurisdiction of the vice-chancellor; that she had not been charged with any other offence, nor had the charge been altered or amended, and that consequently the conviction was bad. Hopkins, Ex parte, 61 L. J., Q. B. 240; 66 L. T. 53; 17 Cox, C. C. 444; 56 J. P. 262.

The Church Discipline Act does not debar a university judge from trying a resident clergyman for a breach of university law, notwithstanding such breach may also constitute an ecclesiastical offence. Pusey v. Jowett, 1 N. R. 488.

Where the chancellor's court of the university of Oxford had proceeded against a party, not a member of the university, for contumacy in suing a resident undergraduate in one of the superior courts of Westminster, and had issued a warrant to arrest him for not paying the costs of the proceedings, the court made a rule absolute for a prohibition without requiring the applicant to declare in prohibition. Reg. v. Oxford University, 1 G. & D. 537; 1 Q. B. 952; 11 L. J., Q. B. 37; 6 Jur. 319.

5. OTHER MATTERS.

Congregation—"Residents."]—By 17 & 18 Vict. c. 81, s. 16, the congregation of the university of Oxford shall be composed of the chancellor and certain other persons, and also of all residents. By s. 48 the word "residents" means and includes all members of convocation who shall have resided twenty weeks within one mile and a half of Carfax during the year that shall expire on the 1st of September next preceding the making of the register. A fellow of a college held a living which was distant nine miles from Oxford, and he resided at the vicarage house; but he rented a set of rooms within St. John's College (of which he was a resident), which he had furnished, and for which he paid rent, and which were not occupied by any one else. When he visited Oxford, he sometimes slept there, but he generally returned to the vicarage the same day:—Held, that there must be an actual as distinguished from a constructive residence, and that he was not a resident. Reg. v. Oxford (Vice-Chancellor), L. R. 7 Q. B. 471; 26 L. T. 506.

Erection of New College Buildings—Application of Purchase Money of Land paid into Court.]—The effect of ss. 2 and 4 of the Universities and Colleges Estates (Amendment) Act, 1880, in conjunction with ss. 27 and 28 of the Universities and Colleges Estates Act, 1858, is that the purchase money of land, belonging to a college, which has been compulsorily taken under the provisions of the Lands Clauses Consolidation Act, 1845, may be applied, with the consent of the board of agriculture, in the erection of new buildings upon land belonging to such college and repaid into court by thirty equal annual instalments. King's College, Cambridge, Ex parte, 60 L. J., Ch. 508; [1891] 1 Ch. 333, 677; 64 L. T. 623; 39 W. R. 331.

College Bursar—Office of Profit—Official not Member of Corporation.]—The statutes of St. John's College, Oxford, provide for the office of bursar, the remuneration to be such as the president and fellows shall decide. The respondent, who was not on the foundation of the college, was appointed bursar at a fixed salary:—Held, that the respondent was an officer of the college at a salary, and that such salary was therefore assessable to income tax under section 146, schedule E, rule 3, of the Income Tax Act, 1842. Langston v. Glasson, 60 L. J., Q. B. 356; [1891] 1 Q. B. 567; 65 L. T. 159; 39 W. R. 476; 55 J. P. 567.

Benefaction—Founder's Design—Condition of Eligibility—"Designed for Holy Orders"—Alteration of Conditions of Eligibility.]—Edward Pauncefort, who died in 1726, by will made in 1723 gave property to a corporation upon trust to divide the income thereof equally between ten of the servitors of Christ Church College, Oxford, such as certain members of the college should recommend "for their sobriety, diligence at their studies, and of parts fit for a minister of the gospel and designed for holy orders." By the Universities of Oxford and Cambridge Act, 1877, commissioners were empowered to make statutes for any college altering the conditions of eligibility for any emolument or office connected with the college, but in so doing they were to have regard to the main design of the founder, except where the conditions had been altered in substance under any other act; by the same act, a mode of and time for appeal against such statutes before approval by order in council was provided, and it was enacted that after such approval such statutes should be binding on every college, and should be effectual notwithstanding any instrument of foundation. By statutes made for Christ Church under this act, and duly approved, the commissioners in effect provided that the exhibition of the foundation of Mr. Pauncefort should be applied to the support of certain college exhibitioners without the attachment of any condition as to such exhibitioners being designed for holy orders. Upon a summons taken out by the corporation under Ord. LV. r. 3:—Held, that the statutes having been duly approved were binding upon the corporation notwithstanding the instrument of foundation, and that the condition that the recipients of the benefaction should be designed for holy orders could no longer be enforced. Pauncefort, In re, Sons of the Clergy Corporation v. Christ Church, Oxford, 58 L. J., Ch. 578; 42 Ch. D. 624; 61 L. T. 109; 38 W. R. 172.

Right of Undergraduates to Vote.]—The undergraduates of Oxford and Cambridge are not permitted to reside in their rooms during the vacations, which comprise nearly six months of the year, without special leave from the college authorities, who are accustomed to let and otherwise make use of their rooms during their absence:—Held, that such compulsory absence amounted to a break of residence disqualifying them for the exercise of the franchise. Tanner v. Carter, 55 L. J., Q. B. 27; 16 Q. B. D. 231; 53 L. T. 663; 34 W. R. 41; 1 Colt. 435.

Privileges.]—Statutes conferring privileges on the members of the universities, mean only the members of the universities of Oxford and Cambridge, unless otherwise expressed. Jones v. Smart, 1 Term Rep. 49.

A college barber at Oxford, though he resides in the city out of college, is entitled to the privileges of the university. Rex v. Routledge, 2 Dougl. 531.

Independent members of a college are mere boarders, and have no corporate rights; nor can they appeal to the visitor. Rex v. Grundon, Cowp. 319.

If a college does not exceed its jurisdiction, the king's courts have no cognizance; and expulsion of a member is a matter entirely within its jurisdiction. Ib.

The head of a college has the whole seisin in his office. Phillips v. Bury, 2 Term Rep. 355.

Person having privilege of Oxford loses it when joined defendant with another. White v. Lowgher, Cary, 55.

Heretical Teaching.]—The provisions in the statutes of the university of Oxford prohibiting a professor from directly or indirectly teaching, or dogmatically asserting, anything repugnant to the Catholic faith, are to be read by the context, and do not extend to any book published by such professor in his private capacity, and not used by him in his official teaching. Pusey v. Jowett, 1 N. R. 488.

A power conferred by an university statute, of banishing heretics in general, is not to be abridged by the institution, in a later part of the same statute, of a test for heresy—that test being applicable only to a particular class of persons. Ib.

University Degrees.]—A member of a corporation cannot institute a suit against the governing body of the corporation, unless there is also an infringement of a personal or a proprietary right, or an injury to him as an individual. It must be by the corporation itself, or by information by the attorney-general, if it is for an injury to the public. The loss of a monopoly of university degrees is not a personal injury. McCormac v. Queen's University, 15 W. R. 733. And see Prestney v. Colchester Corporation, 51 L. J., Ch. 805; 21 Ch. D. 111.

Seal.]—A mandamus lies to compel the warden of a college to affix the common seal of the college to an answer of the fellows, in chancery, contrary to his own separate answer put in. Rex v. Windham, Cowp. 377.

Also to the keeper of the common seal of the university of Cambridge, commanding him to put it to the instrument of appointment of their high steward, pursuant to a grace passing in senate. Rex v. Cambridge University, 3 Burr. 1647; 1 W. Bl. 547.

Affiliation.]—The Universities (Scotland) Act, 1889, appointed a temporary commission charged with the duty of making provision for improving the administration of the Scottish universities and extending their usefulness. By s. 15 the commissioners might, if they thought fit, make ordinances to extend any of the universities by affiliating new colleges to them subject to certain prescribed conditions. By s. 16, "without prejudice to any of the powers hereinbefore conferred, the commissioners shall with respect to the university of St. Andrews and the university college of Dundee have power (1) to affiliate the said university college to, and make it form part of, the said university with the consent of the university court of St. Andrews and also of the said college with the object, inter alia, of establishing a fully equipped conjoint university school of medicine. . . . ." Section 19 contained provisions as to the preparation and publication by the commissioners of ordinances relating to any university. By s. 20, all ordinances made by the commissioners are to be published in the "Edinburgh Gazette," laid before parliament, and submitted to the queen in council for approval, and "no such ordinance shall be effectual until it shall have been so published, laid before parliament, and approved by her majesty in council." The commissioners, assuming to act under the powers of s. 16, executed an instrument in writing by which they declared that they had affiliated and did thereby affiliate the university college of Dundee to, and make it form part of, the university of St. Andrews. This instrument was not published or laid before parliament or submitted to her majesty for approval, as required by s. 20 in the case of all ordinances made by the commissioners:—Held, that the order of the commissioners contained all the elements of an "ordinance" properly so termed, and that although s. 16 gave the power of affiliation to the commissioners in direct terms without requiring them to make an ordinance for that purpose, yet, having regard to the language of ss. 19 and 20, taken in connection with other clauses, it appeared to be the general policy of the legislature that all acts of the commissioners altering the constitution of a university, and necessarily affecting interests public or private or both, should be attended with the precautions and safeguards provided by the statute; that the instrument executed by the commissioners must, therefore, be taken to be an "ordinance," subject to the procedure enacted by s. 20 with regard to "ordinances," and that for want of due compliance with this procedure it was invalid. Metcalfe v. Cox, 64 L. J., P. C. 148; [1895] A. C. 328; 72 L. T. 511—H. L. (Sc.)

The Universities (Scotland) Act, 1889, s. 16, provides: "Without prejudice to any of the powers hereinbefore conferred, the commissioners" charged with the administration of the Scottish universities "shall with respect to the university of St. Andrews and the university college of Dundee have power to affiliate the said university college to, and make it form part of, the said university with the consent of the university court of St. Andrews, and also of the said college, with the object, inter alia, of establishing a fully equipped conjoint university school of medicine. . . . ." By s. 15, sub-s. 3, "The university court, or any college which under this act shall have been affiliated to the university, may respectively at any time thereafter resolve that such college shall cease to be affiliated to such university. . . . ." By s. 21, "After the expiration of the powers of the commissioners, the university court of each university shall have power to make such ordinances as they think fit with the approval of Her Majesty in council . . . ." (2) with respect to "altering or revoking any of the ordinances affecting such university which have been or may be framed and passed under the Universities (Scotland) Act, 1858, or this Act, and making new ordinances." An agreement purporting to be the consent under s. 16 of the Act of 1889 contained, inter alia, a stipulation that the said union shall as regards duration be dissoluble only by act of parliament:—Held, that the stipulation was not ultra vires, for ss. 15 and 16 did not apply to an affiliation of the nature of an incorporation which had the effect of merging the college into the university with a joint object:—Held, also, that the court had jurisdiction to decide the legal question notwithstanding the fact that the consent sought to be set aside was before the privy council in respect to a pending ordinance. Metcalfe v. Cox, [1896] A. USURY.

1. Generally, 1074.
2. Usurious Transactions, 1076.

1. GENERALLY.

Effect of Repeal of Usury Laws.]—The repeal of the usury laws does not affect the power of a court of equity to review and set aside usurious transactions where they are founded on fraud. Howley v. Cook, Ir. R. 8 Eq. 571.

Accordingly, a series of deeds, charging sums advanced by a money-lender with exorbitant interest, on the borrower's estates, which were ample security, was set aside, save to the extent of securing the actual advances, with moderate interest; the deeds containing unprecedented clauses, such as authorising a sale without notice, and empowering the lender to pay off existing charges (which bore interest at 6*l.* per cent. only), and to charge 20*l.* per cent. thereon, and other clauses of a similar character; the court being of opinion that the clauses were introduced by the fraud and device of the money-lender without the knowledge of the borrower, who was unprotected by proper professional advice. Ib.

The repeal of the usury laws, and the alteration of the law as to reversionary interests (effected by 31 Vict. c. 4), have not affected the jurisdiction of equity to relieve expectant heirs from unconscionable bargains. Aylesford (Earl) v. Morris, 42 L. J., Ch. 546; L. R. 8 Ch. 484; 28 L. T. 541; 21 W. R. 424. S. P., O'Rorke v. Bolingbroke, 2 App. Cas. 814; 26 W. R. 239. Tyler v. Yates, 40 L. J., Ch. 768; L. R. 6 Ch. 665; 25 L. T. 284; 19 W. R. 909. Miller v. Cook, 40 L. J., Ch. 11; L. R. 10 Eq. 641; 22 L. T. 740; 18 W. R. 1061.

Deduction from Legatee's Share.]—A testator directed that one of his residuary legatees should be answerable for all debts due to him from the father of the legatee. A debt, though usurious, must be deducted from the legatee's share. Stanton v. Knight, 1 Sim. 482.

What is.]—Usury is taking more than the law allows upon a loan or for forbearance of a debt. Spurrier v. Mayoss, 1 Ves. J. 527; 4 Bro. C. C. 28.

To make a contract usurious, intention of forbearance for exorbitant interest must appear. Ib.

Usury is a conclusion of law, resulting from the facts and circumstances attending each transaction. There must be forbearance. Usury is taking more than the law allows upon a loan, or for forbearance of a debt. To make a contract usurious, it must be apparent upon the face of it, or by evidence, that the intent of the parties in the creation of it was, by means of shift or device, to take more than legal interest for the loan or forbearance of money. Where there was no obligation to pay money advanced, there could be no forbearance; consequently the profit derived from the use of the money was not usurious. Moore v. M'Kay, Beat. 287; 2 Moll. 137.

There is no usury where there is a risk. Wilson, Ex parte, Bates, In re, 2 Jur. 98.

An agreement may be perfectly equitable, although it is usurious, but if it is usurious, the law determines it, and its bona fides cannot avail it. Brophy v. Holmes, 2 Moll. 1.

If usurious interest is not contracted for, the security is not invalidated by subsequently taking usurious interest. Jennings, Ex parte, 1 Madd. 331.

If a bargain was really for an annuity, though bought at ever so low a price, it is no usury; if on the foot of borrowing and lending money, otherwise. Chesterfield (Earl) v. Janssen, 1 Atk. 340.

Where there is a borrowing of money, a device to have more than the legal rate of interest is within the Statutes of Usury. Ib.

If there be a loan of money with more than legal interest, and a casualty goes to the interest only, it is usury; secus, if it goes to the principal and interest. Ib.

The receipt of interest at a rate of more than 5 per cent. under a bargain, which, in substance, though not in form is corrupt, is usury within 12 Anne, stat. 2, c. 16. But the question whether such bargain and the mode of receipt was colourable only and contrived for the purpose of evading the statute is a question for the jury. Solarte v. Melville, 7 B. & C. 430; 1 M. & Ry. 19; 6 L. J., K. B. (o.s.) 68.

The use of the word "interest" in an instrument will not of itself make a transaction usurious with reference to the rate of percentage: the court will look to the substance of the dealing. Beete v. Bidgood, 7 B. & C. 453; 1 M. & Ry. 143; 6 L. J., K. B. (o.s.) 35.

A fair and bonâ fide sale is not usurious, though the principal money should carry a rate of interest exceeding 5 per cent., if the principal sum and the rate and mode of payment formed part of the contract of sale. Ib.

Loan of 200*l.*; 300*l.* to be repaid by three instalments extending over eighteen months, if both parties should be living as the instalments fell due:—Held, valid, there being no proof that the transaction was a mere contrivance to cover usury. Flight v. Chaplin, 2 B. & Ad. 114; 9 L. J., K. B. (o.s.) 137.

Usurious Bargains — Setting aside.] — See FRAUD.

Who entitled to take Advantage of.]—Usury could be set up as the foundation of a jus tertii, where the third person had settled with the plaintiff, and abandoned all further claim. Betteley v. Reed, 4 Q. B. 511; 3 G. & D. 561; 12 L. J., Q. B. 172.

If A. mortgage stock to B. by a conveyance, which is apparently absolute, and B. assigns it to C. as a security for an usurious loan, A.'s right of redemption is not affected by the transaction between B. and C., but is as extensive against C. as against B. Johnson v. Williamshurst, 1 L. J., Ch. (o.s.) 112.

Payment not in this Country.]—A revolted colony of Spain, not recognised as an independent state of Great Britain, executed bonds, at six per cent. interest, as security for a loan:—Held, that the bonds were not usurious, as it did not appear that the contract for the loan was made, or the amount of it to be paid, in this country. Thompson v. Powles, 2 Sim. 194. See Harrey v. Archbold, 3 B. & C. 626; 5 D. & R. 500; 1 R. & M. 184.

Relief against.]—The court does not relieve against an usurious contract, so as to make the principal lost, as well as interest. Pitt v. Cholmondeley, 2 Ves. 567.

Demurrer to a cross bill to have an usurious security delivered up, not offering to pay the sum really due, allowed. Mason v. Gardiner, 4 Bro. C. C. 436.

If it be necessary to have the assistance of a court of equity to set aside an usurious contract, it must be on the terms of paying what is fairly due, with legal interest. Scott v. Nesbitt, 2 Cox, 183; 2 Bro. C. C. 641.

Bill to stay proceedings at law and discover usury, charging an agreement to take, but not the taking, usurious interest, and not offering to pay the amount, which the plaintiff by bill admitted legally due, is demurrable. Whitmore v. Francis, 8 Price, 616.

2. Usurious Transactions.

Annuities.]—2,000*l.* lent on condition to pay in a year 200*l.* and the principal, or 250*l.* per annum during borrower's life, not an usurious contract. Wortley v. Pitt, 1 Ves. 164.

The owner of a leasehold for fifty years unexpired, in consideration of 300*l.*, granted an annuity of 45*l.* charged on the leasehold, and assigned the latter to secure the annuity, and the annuitant covenanted at any time, on payment of 300*l.*, and on getting six months' notice, to re-convey:—Held, on a re-hearing, that this was an usurious transaction. Kenny v. Lynch, 9 Ir. Eq. R. 530; 2 Jo. & Lat. 319; 8 Ir. Eq. R. 207.

If A., his necessities requiring an advance of 1,000*l.*, obtain it from B., upon a bargain that, in consideration of it, A., his executors and administrators, shall pay B., &c., an annuity of 80*l.* per annum for a term of seventy years, commencing immediately, the annuity to be secured by the covenant of A., binding himself personally, and after his death his assets generally, the transaction is usurious, and bad on that ground, unless upheld by those provisions of the legislature which have recently, as to certain cases, repealed or relaxed the usury laws. Belcher v. Vardon, 2 Coll. 162; 14 L. J., Ch. 427; 9 Jur. 546.

Where an annuity is granted for a term of years to be paid half-yearly, and at the same time promissory notes are given by the grantee for the payment of each half-year's annuity when it becomes due, and it appears that the several half-yearly payments will repay the purchase-money with interest exceeding the rate of 5 per cent., the transaction is usurious. Fereday v. Wightwick, 1 Russ. & M. 45; Taml. 250; 31 R. R. 93.

A. applied to B. to lend him 400*l.* on mortgage of certain leasehold houses, but B. refused. It was then agreed that A., in consideration of the 400*l.*, should grant to B. two annuities of 21*l.* each for forty years, to be issuing out of the houses:—Held, that the transaction was usurious. Chillingworth v. Chillingworth, 8 Sim. 404; 6 L. J., Ch. 223; 1 Jur. 304.

Annuities with Insurance.]—The circumstances of the re-payment of the purchase money of an annuity being secured by an insurance on the life of the grantor, and the grantor having covenanted to pay the premiums, does not bring the case within the statute of usury. Manly v. Hawkins, 1 Dr. & Wal. 363.

The payment of annual sums, exceeding 5*l.* per cent. per annum on the sum advanced, was secured, by an annuity deed, upon land, and the principal by a policy on the life of one of the grantors, with a covenant for payment of the premium:—Held, that as the principal was in some risk, the transaction was not void on the ground of usury. Hawkins v. Bennett, 7 C. B. (N.S.) 507; 30 L. J., C. P. 193; 1 L. T. 297; 8 W. R. 237.

Covenant from the grantor in an annuity deed that, at his own expense, he would effect an insurance upon the lives for which the annuity was granted, to the amount of the purchase money, for the grantee's benefit, is not usurious nor a shift to avoid the statute. French v. Morgan, 2 Moll. 493.

The grant of an annuity for the grantor's life is not void, though it appears that, by the agreement between the parties, a portion of the annuity was to be employed in maintaining an insurance for the grantor's life. Semble. Byrne v. Kennefeck, 1 Hog. 184.

Bills—Collateral Security.]—A loan on bills of three months, on which more than 5 per cent. interest is allowed, is not taken out of 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 98, s. 7, by taking collateral security. Knight, Ex parte, Pownall, In re, 2 Mont. & Ayr. 568; 1 Deac. 459; 5 L. J., Bk. 20.

Where two bills of exchange, upon which, were it not for the provisions of the 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 98, s. 7, an usurious interest was taken, had become due, and the holder declared, that unless a security was handed to him, he would sue the acceptor upon the bills, whereupon a deposit of an annuity deed, issuing out of lands, was made by the acceptor:—Held, that such deposit was not invalid on the ground of usury. Bell v. Coleman, 9 Jur. 974.

Held, also, that this transaction having taken place prior to the passing of the 2 & 3 Vict. c. 37, it could not be affected by the provisions of that statute. Ib.

Where the bankrupt had borrowed 1,600*l.* upon a bill for three months, renewable, at his option, for three other months, till the expiration of eighteen months, the original proposal having been for a loan for that time, and the bankrupt agreed verbally to pay interest at the rate of 10½ per cent. per annum upon each of such bills:—Held, upon proof tendered on one of such bills, that it was a transaction protected by 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 98, s. 7. Terrewest, Ex parte, Poynter, In re, Mont. & C. 351; 4 Deac. 144; 9 L. J., Ch. 6; 3 Jur. 994.

Advances made upon promissory notes not having more than twelve months to run, although further secured upon leaseholds by a contemporaneous agreement:—Held, to be within the protection of the 2 & 3 Vict. c. 27, s. 1. Warrington, Ex parte, 3 De G. M. & G. 159; 22 L. J., Bk. 33; 17 Jur. 430; 1 W. R. 261. S. P., Thomas v. Cooper. 2 Eq. R. 1185; 18 Jur. 688; 2 W. R. 619.

Held, also, that even if this were not so, such of the promissory notes as had not more than three months to run were within the 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 98, which does not mention land, and that this enactment was not repealed or affected by the 2 & 3 Vict. c. 27. Ib.

In 1853 money was borrowed at usurious interest, and secured by a bill of exchange at six months, and by a judgment entered up and registered. The bill was continually renewed till 1856, when the lender filed a bill against the subsequent assignee of leaseholds belonging to the borrower, claiming a judgment lien on the leaseholds:—Held, that the judgment was void as against the land under the 2 & 3 Vict. c. 37, but is not void in toto. Bond v. Bell, 4 Drew. 157; 27 L. J., Ch. 233; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 1290; 6 W. R. 163.

The 2 & 3 Vict. c. 37, before its repeal, did not, in cases of loans on security of lands, merely invalidate the security on lands, and leave the contract valid, but it left in such cases the statute of Anne untouched, and consequently, the contract being invalid, not only were the securities on land avoided, but also any personal securities, whether bonds or bills of exchange, were likewise avoided. Langton v. Haynes, 1 H. & N. 366; 25 L. J., Ex. 319. S. P., Hodgkinson v. Wyatt, 4 Q. B. 749; 13 L. J., Q. B. 54. Fussell v. Daniel, 10 Ex. 581; 24 L. J., Ex. 130. Overruling Warrington, Ex parte, Leake, In re, 3 De G. M. & G. 159; 1 Kay, 231; 22 L. J., Bk. 33; 17 Jur. 430; 1 W. R. 261.

Where money was advanced at usurious interest on the security of bills of exchange, having only three months to run, such advance was protected, and the bills themselves were valid under 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 98, s. 7, and though a warrant of attorney to confess judgment might be taken at the same moment on which judgment was the next day entered up and registered, so as to become a charge on the lands of the debtor, the transaction was not thereby rendered invalid under the proviso of s. 1 of the 2 & 3 Vict. c. 37. Lane v. Harlock, 5 H. L. Cas. 580; 25 L. J., Ch. 253; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 289; 4 W. R. 408.

The 2 & 3 Vict. c. 37, did not repeal 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 98, s. 7. Ib. See Boyle v. Bull, 3 C. L. R. 1054.

A mortgage on land, or other charge given as a collateral security for the payment of a bill or a note bonâ fide discounted, was valid, independently of the statutes relaxing the operation of the usury laws. Doe d. Haughton v. King, 11 M. & W. 333; 12 L. J., Ex. 320; 7 Jur. 517. S. P., Downes v. Garbutt, 2 D. & L. 944; 12 L. J., Q. B. 269.

—— Renewed Securities.]—Bills of exchange given after the repeal of the usury laws, in renewal of bills given while those laws were in force, to secure payment of money lent with usurious interest, are valid, the receipt of the money being a sufficient consideration to support a new promise to pay it. Flight v. Reed, 1 H. & C. 703 ; 32 L. J., Ex. 265 ; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 1016 ; 8 L. T. 638 ; 12 W. R. 53.

—— Discounting.]—Where on the discount of a bill, part of the amount was given in cash and the remainder in goods, legal interest being charged for the money and an advanced price being charged for the goods for the time the bill had to run, which was the charge usually made in the trade for an extension of credit :—Held, not usurious. Evans v. Whyle, 5 Bing. 485 ; 3 M. & P. 130 ; 7 L. J., C. P. (o.s.) 205.

Bonds.]—Where an action was brought on bonds, and a cognovit was given in the action, and judgment entered up for the principal and interest then due :—Held, that it was not competent to the representatives of the obligor, at the distance of ten years afterwards, in a suit for the administration of the obligor's assets, to question the validity of the bonds on the ground of usury. Berrington v. Evans, Younge, 276.

A revolted colony of Spain, not recognised as an independent state by Great Britain, executed bonds at 6 per cent. interest as securities for a loan. P., acting in collusion with B., a holder of the bonds in England, by falsely representing that he had purchased some of them, induced the plaintiff to become a purchaser :—Held, on demurrer, that the bonds were not usurious, as it did not appear by the bill that the contract for the loan was made, or the amount of it to be paid, in this country ; that P. and B. would have been answerable to the plaintiff for losses sustained upon his purchase, but that, as the original contract was made with a government not acknowledged by Great Britain, the court could not relieve him. Thompson v. Powles, 2 Sim. 195.

Bottomry not within the statute of usury, because a real risk is run. Chesterfield (Earl) v. Janssen, 2 Ves. 143. And see this case more generally as to usury, 1 Atk. 350.

Bottomry bonds may be so constructed as to be an evasion of the statute against usury, as well as any other contract. Id. 341.

Bonds given for instalments made up of principal and interest, being the consideration of a purchase or assignment of real and personal estate, though they necessarily carry interest, are not usurious. Tarleton v. Backhouse, G. Coop. 231.

On a loan, upon a security of an equitable deposit and bond, which appeared on the face of it to be usurious, an action was brought, and the plaintiff failed at law, but having filed his bill alleging that the bond had been erroneously prepared, the court, being satisfied of the error, decreed the bond to be rectified, and an account of which was due. Hodgkinson v. Wyatt, 9 Beav. 566. And see S. C., at law, 4 Q. B. 749 ; 13 L. J., Q. B. 54.

Commission of Agents.]—Charge by bill broker in the country of ½ per cent. commission in respect of bill payable in London not usurious. Henson, Ex parte, 1 Madd. 114.

A bill broker, in order to get a bill discounted at 4 per cent., takes upon himself the responsibility of indorser, and charges his principal 5 per cent. discount, which is the lowest sum at which he could have done the business, except for his indorsement : — Held, that although he also charged ½ per cent. for his trouble, &c., it was not usury, and that he was entitled to do so for his del credere commission. Goss. Ex parte, Wessen, In re, 2 Deac. & C. 240 ; 2 L. J., Bk. 96.

A reasonable commission beyond legal interest for extra incidental charges, as upon agency in the remittance of bills, not usurious. Baynes v. Fry, 15 Ves. 120.

The charge of 10 per cent. for commission besides the legal interest, on a loan of money, is not usurious, if it is referable to trouble and expense bonâ fide incurred by the lender ; although he may not be a banker or a person engaged in trade, or although the money lent is his own, and not that of other persons. Gwyn, Ex parte, 2 Deac. & C. 12 : 1 L. J., Bk. 73.

A covenant in a mortgage of property in the West Indies on the part of the mortgagor, to consign the produce of the estate of the mortgagee to be sold on commission for the mortgagor ; and to take all such plantation stores as may be wanted for the use of the estate from the mortgagee, is not usurious. A mortgagee is entitled to the benefit of such a covenant, and to charge a commission on the sale of the produce consigned to him. On the assignment by a mortgagee, the cost of supplies and contingencies furnished to the plantation previously to the assignment, but paid for subsequently by the assignee, may be added to the mortgage debt and charged against the estate. Sayers v. Whitfield, 1 Knapp, 133.

A. & Co. were general merchants, bankers, and commission agents at Montreal, and their course of trade consisted principally in procuring and advancing to colonial dealers supplies of goods, cash, and negotiable securities, as required, from time to time, by their customers, to support them in their dealings, returns being made by them, after some interval of time, at their convenience, in the freight of produce, and in the payment of cash and negotiable securities. In the accounts they kept with C. and D. there was kept a column on both sides for interest from the time the payment was made or due ; and, at the periodical close of the account, A. & Co. made a charge for their commission, calculated upon the balance due, and afterwards upon the cash advances :—Held, that it did not appear from the accounts that the charge for commission was a cloak for usury, but was to be treated as a bonâ fide compensation for the labour and inconvenience in conducting such business. Pollok v. Bradbury, 8 Moore, P. C. 227.

Mortgages — Interest.] — Mortgagor gives second mortgage for what is due for the principal and interest on the first mortgage, and also for interest upon interest due on the first mortgage ; quære, if second mortgage void as founded on usury. Sackett v. Bassett, 4 Madd. 58.

Where the interest due upon a mortgage had become in arrear, and in the mortgagee's account of arrears rests were made from time to time, on which interest was calculated, and ultimately a general account of all arrears calculated on the footing of those rests was signed by the mortgagor, and confirmed by a deed executed by him three years afterwards, for securing repayment of the balance to the mortgagee:—Held, that the transactions were not usurious, and that the mortgagee was liable for the balance. Blackburn v. Warwick, 2 Y. & Coll. 92; 6 L. J., Ex. Eq. 17.

An agreement made upon the occasion of the intended transfer of a mortgage, that the interest of the mortgage money at 5 per cent. (to be reduced to 4 per cent. if paid within a limited time) should run from the date of the proposed transfer, being the date of the deed of transfer, although, owing to the mortgagor being then unprepared to procure the execution of that deed, the mortgage money which was then ready to be advanced, was not actually advanced until a subsequent time:—Held, not to be usurious, less than 5 per cent. having in fact been taken, the transaction being bonâ fide, and there having been no absolute reservation of more than 5 per cent., but only a reservation from the burthen of which the mortgagor might at his option have discharged himself. Long v. Storie, 9 Hare, 542; 21 L. J., Ch. 521; 16 Jur. 340.

S. mortgaged certain hereditaments to N. for 7,500*l.*, and his equity of redemption to C. for 5,000*l.* L. afterwards agreed to take a transfer of both mortgages, and to advance a sum of 12,500*l.* for that purpose, at an interest at 5 per cent., reducible on prompt payment to 4 per cent. The transfer of the first mortgage not being ready to be executed, through the default of S., at the time appointed, L. advanced the 5,000*l.* at once, and took a transfer of the second mortgage; and at the same time S. signed a memorandum, acknowledging that the remainder of the money was ready (which was the case), and agreeing that interest on the first mortgage, when transferred to L., should run as from the date of that agreement, and that the deed of transfer of the first mortgage should bear date on that day. The deed of transfer of the first mortgage was not in fact executed, nor the 7,500*l.* paid over to N., until nearly six weeks afterwards:—Held, that the transaction was nevertheless good under the 12 Anne, c. 16. Ib.

Semble, a transaction not void in the first instance, and from which the borrower has the power to free himself by the payment of the principal and legal interest within a limited time, is not afterwards to be avoided because the borrower cannot, after the limited period, free himself without paying more than 5 per cent. Ib.

Covenant, before the Usury Act, reducing the rate of interest, to pay 6 per cent. is not prejudiced by the act, but interest turned into principal by the course of the court, was directed to carry interest at 5 per cent. only from the passing of the act. Interest, by course of court, discretionary. Astley v. Powis, 1 Ves. 483.

If a mortgage be drawn for 5 per cent. and the mortgagee takes 6, it would be void on the word "take" in the 12 Anne, stat. 2, c. 16, s. 1. Adlington v. Cann, 3 Atk. 154.

A customer applied to his banker to lend him 4,000*l.* at 5 per cent., which the bankers agreed to do. He then asked the bankers what balance he was expected to keep with them; they answered that he must not keep less than 1,000*l.*, upon which the customer said, "Very well, they might leave it to him." The customer paid into and drew out from the banking-house in one year various sums amounting to 108,000*l.*:—Held, that under these circumstances, the loan was not usurious. Geddes, Ex parte, Holthouse, In re, 3 Deac. & C. 638; 1 Mont. & Ayr. 385.

Agreement by A. to purchase houses from B. for 431*l.* 10*s.*; possession to be given, and 200*l.* paid immediately, the rest with interest at Michaelmas; but if not then paid, A. to pay, in lieu of interest upon the same, a clear rent of 42*l.* per annum, out of which was to be deducted interest for the 200*l.* paid, not usurious. Spurrier v. Mayoss, 1 Ves. J. 527; 4 Bro. C. C. 28.

Where the title deeds were originally deposited to secure an advance of money at usurious interest, but without any written memorandum, and afterwards a further advance was made upon the promissory note of the depositor, also at usurious interest, and it was subsequently agreed by parol that a mortgage should be executed of the premises comprised in the deeds for both debts, with interest at 5*l.* per cent. per annum:—Held, upon motion ex parte (the defendant not appearing), to take pro confesso a bill praying for a foreclosure or sale of the premises comprised in the deeds, that though the original deposit was void under the usury statutes, and the deeds had thenceforth remained in the possession of the plaintiff, yet the subsequent parol agreement constituted a valid equitable mortgage by deposit to secure both debts, just as if the deeds had been returned to the defendant, and re-delivered by him to the plaintiff upon the occasion of such agreement being entered into. James v. Rice, 5 De G. M. & G. 461; 23 L. J., Ch. 819; 2 Eq. R. 746; 18 Jur. 818; 2 W. R. 542.

—— Redemption.]—W. lends to B. 200*l.* on the bond of B. and W., bearing interest at 5 per cent., and at the same time purchases from B. the rent-charges for lives of 50*l.* per annum for 300*l.* with a covenant that B. should be at liberty to re-purchase the rent-charge on giving three months' notice, and paying 350*l.* and all arrears of interest; W. and B. execute their joint and several bonds to W. in the penal sum of 700*l.* conditional for the payment of 350*l.* and for the regular payment of the rent-charge:—Held, to be a security for the loan of 200*l.* and 300*l.*, on the ground that W. was at all events secured by a bond for 700*l.*; but neither the right of re-purchase, nor the additional sum of 50*l.* to be paid thereupon, would have been sufficient to turn the transaction into a loan. Verner v. Winstanley, 2 Sch. & Lef. 393.

Bill praying re-assignment of lease, and stating a clause in assignment of power of redemption on paying a sum larger than the legal interest, added to original sum given, and in default thereof a foreclosure, is not demurrable on the ground of usury. Metcalf v. Brown, 5 Price, 560.

A., a pawnbroker, sold to B. his trade and business, and stock in trade, and all profits, benefits, advantages, and emoluments resulting therefrom, for 600*l.*, which sum was allowed to remain in the purchaser's hands, and for which he was to pay A. 30*l.* a year, as secured by deed. By a lease of the premises on which the business was carried on, bearing even date with the deed securing the payment of 30*l.* a year, the rent reserved on the premises was 120*l.* B. became bankrupt; and when A. sought to put his debt on the file, the premises were sworn not to have been worth more than 60*l.* It was:—Held, that the additional 60*l*., unaccounted for, did not necessarily make the original transaction between the parties usurious, so as to prevent A. from filing his proof against B.'s estate, but that the 60*l*. a-year above the rent might well be put down to the account of certain "facilities" afforded by A. to B., and which were in the nature of "goodwill," although "goodwill" was not expressed in terms to have been sold. Lynn, Ex parte, Tovey, In re, 5 Jur. 1089.

In such a case as that above stated, there is not any usury, unless the assignee can show that a greater part of the 150*l*. a year than 30*l*. is for the interest of the 600*l*. left in the purchaser's hands; and it lies with the assignee to show this, and not with the creditor seeking to put his debt on the file. But see Campbell, Ex parte, Bromer, In re (2 Rose, 51). Ib.

In a foreclosure suit the master was to state incumbrances and their priorities. A claim was carried in in respect of an usurious bargain which he disallowed altogether. The claimant excepted, and the other incumbrancers, who were co-defendants, then contended that the transaction was void ab initio, though no objection to the security was taken upon the pleadings. The court allowed the amount actually advanced by the claimant with interest as a debt, and would not permit the other incumbrancers as co-defendants to contest the validity of his security. Mansfield (Earl) v. Ogle, 24 L. J. Ch. 450; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 415; 3 W. R. 299. But on appeal:—Held, that the master was right in disallowing the claim, although no objection had been taken to the usurious security on the pleadings. S. C., 3 Eq. R. 907; 24 L. J. Ch. 450; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 603; 3 W. R. 557.

A person lent money to a remainderman upon the security of his reversion, upon condition that, if the tenant for life died within five years, the money repaid should be double that which was lent, and, if the tenant for life lived beyond five years, the money repaid should be treble that which was lent. Although it was not impossible that the tenant for life might live so long that the lender would receive no more than his principal with lawful interest, yet:—Held, that the transaction was a colourable evasion of the usury laws and void. Ib.

Semble, that an agreement between A. and B., that A. should sell a leasehold interest in lands to B., and that B. should advance a certain sum of money to A., who should build a house of greater value upon the lands, and that B. should demise the lands and house to A. at a certain rent, calculated at the rate of 9 per cent. on the money to be advanced, with liberty to A. to fine down the rent at 9 per cent., is not usurious. Dowling v. Legh, 3 Jo. & Lat. 716; 9 Ir. Eq. R. 413.

A., a builder, being lessee of lands for terms of seventy years for building purposes, signed an agreement in writing, whereby in consideration of moneys to be advanced to him by B. for building, he agreed to assign the leases to B., subject to the ground rents and to the several conditions therein contained, and to take the under-leases from B. (when the houses should be completed) for the whole of the terms, wanting ten days, at a rent that should amount to 8 per cent. upon the money to be advanced, such rents to commence from the time of the respective advances. By a subsequent document, signed by A., in which he acknowledged certain advances, and stated that he had built two shops; after repeating the above agreement, he added: "It is also agreed that I am to have the privilege of selling the two shops, provided I repay you the amount advanced on the shops, and all interest due thereon, to the day you assign the lease or leases to me or my nominee":—Held, that these agreements were usurious. Belcher v. Vardon, 2 Coll. 162; 14 L. J., Ch. 427; 9 Jur. 546.

—— Leases to Mortgagee.]—A contract between mortgagor and mortgagee for a lease to be granted by the former, in consideration of forbearance, is usurious. Gubbins v. Creed, 2 Sch. & Lef. 218; 9 R. R. 71.

A lease for 999 years made by mortgagor to mortgagee, set aside; the policy of the law upon which the statutes of usury are founded not permitting such a transaction between persons standing in the relation of the mortgagor and mortgagee. And this, semble, although the lease was made at a fair value. Webb v. Rorke, 2 Sch. & Lef. 661; 9 R. R. 122.

A fee-farm grant or lease of mortgaged premises from mortgagor to mortgagee at a fixed annual rent, is among that description of transaction at which courts of equity look with great jealousy. Hickes v. Cooke, 4 Dow, 24.

Partnership.]—Deed by which A., B., and C., partners in trade, in consideration of 4,000*l*. paid to them by D., in augmentation of their capital, agree to admit him into partnership with them for a term: it was agreed that A. should receive in lieu of profits a clear sum of 550*l*. per annum, and all the property of the concern was charged with the payment of this sum quarterly, and of the 4,000*l*. at the determination of the partnership. A., B., and C. were to pay rent, taxes, wages, and other outgoings out of the trade, which was to be carried on by them and in their names only, and D. was not to be required to attend to it. D. was at liberty to retire on giving twelve months' notice, and on his retiring, or at the end of the term, the 4,000*l*. and the arrears (if any) of the 550*l*. per annum were to be paid to him by A., B., and C. by instalments, to be secured by their bonds, and they were to indemnify him from the debts of the partnership:—Held, that this deed was not usurious. Fereday v. Hordern, Jac. 144; 23 R. R. 11.

Agreement between two traders, that one shall advance the fund and the other superintend the business; the profit to be equally divided, but the entire loss, if any, to be borne by the latter; not usurious but nudum pactum as to the last clause, and such an agreement ought to be construed as constituting a partnership, the loss to be borne as well as the profits shared equally. An agreement may be perfectly equitable, although it is usurious. But if it is usurious, the law determines it, and its bonâ fides cannot avail it. Brophy v. Holmes, 2 Moll. 1.

A. lends B. money to enable him to commence business at 5 per cent. interest. After the loan B. agrees to pay to A. one-eighth of the annual profits by monthly payments, which offer A. accepts, and B. accordingly makes several monthly payments, for which A. gives B. receipts on account:—Held, that the balance of the principal and interest due from B. to A. was a good petitioning creditor's debt, not arising out of a partnership, nor affected by usury. Briggs, Ex parte, 3 Deac. & C. 367 ; 1 Mont. & Ayr. 46.

The Frugal Investment Association was formed in 1845, and was certified under the 4 & 5 Will. 4, c. 40. Its objects were to advance the society's funds to its members, and to accumulate them, and to divide the profits periodically. The advances were made by putting up a share at one of the meetings for competition among the members, and the member offering the highest premium for it was entitled to that share, and as many more, to the number of twenty, as he chose to take at the same premium. For each share so taken he was to pay the premium agreed upon, and also 8*s.* a month for 100 months (during which time only the society was to exist) as redemption money ; and on these conditions he might have an immediate advance of 100*l.*, the full value of his share, on giving security for the repayment of it, together with such premium and redemption money. He was also entitled to participate in the general profits of the society. B. became a member, and obtained an advancement of five shares, at premiums of 71*l.* for three, and 73*l.* for the other two ; and he gave security as required, and received an advance of 500*l.* B. died, and on the society pressing for payment of the moneys so secured to them, B.'s executrix filed a bill against them, alleging that the transaction was usurious, and the society illegal, and claiming to redeem the security on repayment of 500*l.* with legal interest only:—Held, on the authority of Silver v. Barnes (6 Bing. (N.C.) 180), that the transaction, being between partners, was not usurious. Burbidge v. Cotton, 5 De G. & Sm. 17 ; 21 L. J., Ch. 201 ; 15 Jur. 1070.

Where an association raised funds by contributions, portions of which were to be advanced to the members on certain conditions, viz., that the portions were to be put up to auction and advanced to the highest bidder, who in addition to the sum bid was also to pay 5*l.* per cent. interest, the advance is a partnership transaction not a loan of money, and consequently a promissory note given by the defendant as the highest bidder for the sum advanced with interest was not tainted with usury. Silver v. Barnes, 6 Bing (N.C.) 180 ; 8 Scott, 300 ; 9 L. J., C. P. 118.

Stock, Re-transfer of.]—Contract for repayment of a debt with legal interest, or, at the option of the creditor, to transfer so much stock as it would have produced on the day it was payable, void as usurious, the principal and interest being secured, with a chance of a rise of the stock : not therefore like a contract to replace stock absolutely which might fall. Barnard v. Young, 17 Ves. 44.

One agrees to lend 1,000*l.* at 5 per cent., and for that purpose sells 1,000*l.* South Sea annuities, which, being under par, did not produce 1,000*l.* ; he advances the money so produced, and takes mortgage for 1,000*l.* :—Held, a shift within the statute of usury ; and the difference between the price at which the stock was sold ordered to be repaid, on a bill brought after a decree for foreclosure, and the whole money allowed in the account taken under that decree. Moore v. Battie, Ambl. 371.

C. being indebted to G. in 1,000*l.* agreed to transfer within a given time 100*l.* per annum, long annuities, at the then price, and in the meantime pay G. the dividends, and that the debt of 1,000*l.* should constitute part of the purchase money. The stock was not purchased at the time, and there was a rise in the price of stocks. The agreement held not usurious or within the Stock Jobbing Acts. Clark v. Giraud, 1 Madd. 511.

A contract of loan which gives the lender the option of claiming either a sum of money or a certain amount of stock in repayment of the principal is usurious. Johnson v. Williamshurst, 1 L. J. (O.S.) Ch. 112.

A. executed a bond and mortgage to B., to secure 2,000*l.* lent to him by B., with interest at 5 per cent., B. having sold out a sum of stock to enable him to make the loan, the dividends of which exceeded the interest of 2,000*l.* at 5 per cent. A. afterwards agreed, in consideration of her letting the 2,000*l.* continue secured at interest as aforesaid, to transfer to her, when requested so to do, the amount of the stock sold out ; or at her option to pay to her a sum of money sufficient to re-purchase it, in the meantime to pay to her the amount of the dividends of it instead of the interest of the 2,000*l.* :—Held, that the agreement was additional to and not substitutional for the bond and mortgage, and was therefore usurious. Powney v. Blomberg, 14 Sim. 179 ; 13 L. J., Ch. 450 ; 8 Jur. 476.

In 1816 A. transferred 10,000*l.* three per cents. to B., which he sold, and, after retaining 6,000*l.*, repaid the surplus to A. Concurrently, B. gave to A. a bond conditioned for the repayment of 6,000*l.*, and 5 per cent. interest, and he wrote to A. engaging to replace the 6,000*l.* in the three per cents. In 1822, B. admitted his obligation to restore to A. the stock sold out. The court, in 1852, considering that the contract was for restoring the stock, and that A. had not the option of taking stock or money, held that the contract was not usurious. Goddard v. Lethbridge, 16 Beav. 529.

It was questionable whether the law as to usury applied to a bare transfer of stock by a proposed lender (the proposed borrower being under no obligation to sell it and convert it into money), it being of the essence of usury that there should be an advance of money. Att.-Gen. v. Hollingworth, 2 H. & N. 416 ; 27 L. J., Ex. 102 ; 5 W. R. 684.

Trade Custom.]—Under an agreement to take off a discount above 5 per cent., for prompt payment, though according to the custom of the trade, the creditor cannot, upon failure, charge more than 5 per cent. Aynsworth, Ex parte, 4 Ves. 678. See 18 R. R. 204, n.

A custom in Liverpool for the banker to strike a balance every quarter, and send the account to the merchant, and then to make the balance carry interest for the next quarter, is not usury. Caliot v. Walker, 2 Anstr. 425.

Where sums of money advanced, and to be advanced, are secured by deed, and the dealings then contemplated by the parties are tainted with usury, the deed is wholly void as a security, although the legal debt is not impeached. A. employs B. as a calico printer, and before the accounts become due, from time to time advances him various sums of money, charging him, besides interest, with 1½ per cent. as a trade premium, which it was customary for persons in the same trade to take under the like circumstances. A. was also in the habit of paying debts owing by B. to other persons before they became due, when A. deducted the usual discount, but charged B. with the full amount, besides interest and the trade premium above mentioned. Semble, that both these modes of dealing were usurious; they were however at best of so suspicious a nature, that the court declined to make an order for the sale of the property under the deed, but directed an action of ejectment to to be brought by A. against the assignees. A., having succeeded upon the trial, applied for the costs of the petition, which the court under these circumstances declined to grant, the petition being against the judgment of the commissioners. Millington, Ex parte, 3 Deac. & C. 298; 1 Mont. & Ayr. 114.

An agreement between two houses in the habit of dealing with each other, that either party should pay interest to the other on the balance which might be due from it in the course of trade, is an agreement for a loan of money within the usury laws. Guillebert, Ex parte, Trye, In re, 3 Mont. & Ayr. 455; 2 Deac. 509; 7 L. J., Bk. 25.

VACATION.

See PRACTICE.

VACCINATION.

What Children are Affected by Acts.]—Under the Vaccination Acts, 1867 (30 & 31 Vict. c. 84), and 1871 (34 & 35 Vict. c. 98), every child is subject to the legislation thereby provided, whether born within or without the district of the registrar who gives the information, or whether born before or after either act was passed, until the age of fourteen. Knight v. Halliwell, infra.

Summary Proceedings—Authority of Officer.]—A resolution of guardians, appointing a vaccination officer, is sufficient authority for the officer so appointed to take proceedings under 30 & 31 Vict. c. 84, s. 31. Ib.

An order of the local government board, made under the powers conferred by the Vaccination Acts, 1867 and 1871, directed that no general directions of the guardians "shall authorise the vaccination officer to take further proceedings under s. 31 of the Vaccination Act, 1867, in any case in which an order has already been obtained and summary proceedings taken under that section, until he shall have brought the circumstances of the case under the notice of the guardians and received their special directions thereupon." A parent had been fined for neglecting to have his child vaccinated. The child still remaining unvaccinated, the vaccination officer received special instructions from the guardians, and obtained a second order against the parent. Upon his failure to comply with that order, the officer, without further directions from the guardians, took out a summons for penalties against him under the provisions of s. 31 of the Vaccination Act, 1867. The justices refused to hear the summons, on the ground that the officer had no special instructions:—Held, that as special instructions had been given by the guardians for such further proceedings as a whole, no further instructions were necessary for taking out the summons for penalties. Reg. v. Brockhurst, 61 L. J., M. C. 48; [1892] 1 Q. B. 566; 65 L. T. 714; 40 W. R. 64; 17 Cox, C. C. 409; 56 J. P. 182.

Section 31 of the Vaccination Act, 1867, empowers the vaccination officer, appointed by minute of a board of guardians, to institute proceedings to enforce vaccination as cases arise, without further authority or direction of the board, notwithstanding the provisions of article 16 of the general order of the local government board dated October 31, 1874. Bramble v. Lowe, 66 L. J., Q. B. 243; [1897] 1 Q. B. 283; 45 W. R. 366; 61 J. P. 168.

—— Order to Procure Child being Vaccinated—Signature of Justice—Validity of Order.]—The justice who grants a summons upon an information under s. 31 of the Vaccination Act of 1867, that a child has not been successfully vaccinated, need not hear the summons nor sign a vaccination order made upon it. Southcombe v. Yeovil Guardians, 66 L. J., Q. B. 294; [1897] 1 Q. B. 343; 76 L. T. 58; 45 W. R. 318; 18 Cox, C. C. 489; 61 J. P. 230.

An objection to an order, upon the ground that it was not signed by the justice who granted the summons, must be taken to the order itself, and cannot be made in subsequent proceedings for recovery of a penalty for omission to carry the order into effect. Ib.

Limitation as to Time.]—By 34 & 35 Vict. c. 98, s. 11, any complaint may be made and any information laid for an offence under the Vaccination Acts, 1867 and 1871, at any time not exceeding twelve calendar months from the time when the matter of such complaint or information arose, and not subsequently. On the 10th of May, 1872, a father received a notice under 30 & 31 Vict. c. 84, s. 31, requiring him to have his child vaccinated within fourteen days. Having disregarded the notice, on the 24th of June, 1873, he was summoned before justices, who made an order that he should procure the child to be vaccinated:—Held, that the information having been laid at a time exceeding twelve months from the time the matter of such complaint (that is, the giving of the notice) arose, the father could not be convicted without a fresh notice being given. Knight v. Halliwell, 43 L. J., M. C. 113; L. R. 9 Q. B. 412; 30 L. T. 359; 22 W. R. 689.

The Vaccination Act, 1871 (34 & 35 Vict. c. 98), s. 11, which provides that any complaint may be made for an offence under that act, or the Vaccination Act of 1867, at any time not exceeding twelve months from the time when the matter of complaint arose, impliedly repeals s. 44 of the Metropolitan Police Act (2 & 3 Vict. c. 71), so far as regards the limitation of time (six calendar months) for proceedings under the Vaccination Acts, within the metropolis as well as elsewhere. Miller v. Rhind, 29 L. T. 29.

Notice to Procure Child being Vaccinated—Service.]—There is no statutory provision as to the mode of service of a notice given under s. 31 of the Vaccination Act, 1867, to procure a child being vaccinated; and if the justices are satisfied that the notice reached the person intended the service will be sufficient. Holloway v. Coster, 66 L. J., Q. B. 293; [1897] 1 Q. B. 347; 76 L. T. 57; 45 W. R. 319; 18 Cox, C. C. 487; 61 J. P. 218.

—— Power of Justices to State Case.]—A special case may be stated by justices for the opinion of the high court upon an order made by them to procure vaccination of a child. Ib.

Neglect — Reasonable Excuse — Tendency to Injury.]—R. was summoned under 30 & 31 Vict. c. 84, s. 29, for unlawfully neglecting to cause his child to be vaccinated, and stated as reasonable excuse that vaccination would prove injurious to his child, and that his family had a tendency to injury from vaccination. The justices held such an excuse had no special reference to his particular case, and declined to hear any arguments in support of it, and convicted R.:—Held, the justices were wrong and ought to have heard the arguments and evidence, as the excuse was reasonable if proved. Rutter v. Norton, 57 J. P. 8.

Order to Vaccinate — Periodical Visits of Vaccinator.]—A parish was visited twice a year by the public vaccinator. F. had received the usual notices to vaccinate, but his child, aged twenty months, had not been vaccinated. A justice having made an order on F. to vaccinate his child in 14 days, such days not being within the visiting period, afterwards convicted F. under s. 31 of 30 & 31 Vict. c. 84, for disobedience:—Held, that it was no defence that the order had been made at a time when it was impracticable to act on it. Francis v. Smith, 58 J. P. 429.

—— Default of Appearance of Parent.]—By the Vaccination Act of 1867 (30 & 31 Vict. c. 84, s. 31), upon an information that a notice to the parent of a child to procure its being vaccinated has been disregarded, a justice may summon such parent to appear with the child before him, and "upon the appearance" the justice may make an order directing such child to be vaccinated. By s. 33, the 11 & 12 Vict. c. 43 (Jervis's Act), except s. 11 thereof, shall apply to all proceedings to be taken under the act:—Held, that an order for the vaccination of a child may be made under s. 31 of the Vaccination Act, 1867, on a parent duly summoned, even when he has failed to appear upon the summons. Reg. v. Cinque Ports JJ. or Crawford, 55 L. J., M. C. 156; 17 Q. B. D. 191; 34 W. R. 789.

—— Non-Production of Child.]—Under 30 & 31 Vict. c. 84, s. 31 (repealed), a parent having been summoned appeared before the justice, but refused to produce his child; the justice was satisfied upon the evidence given that the child was under two years old, and had not been vaccinated:—Held, that the production of the child was not a condition precedent to the justice's power to make an order for it to be vaccinated. Dutton v. Atkins, 40 L. J., M. C. 157; L. R. 6 Q. B. 373; 24 L. T. 507; 19 W. R. 799.

Certificate.]—A parent who holds a certificate of his child having had small pox, but not one of its insusceptibility of successful vaccination, is not within, and is not required by, the terms of s. 7 of the Vaccination Act, 1871 (34 & 35 Vict. c. 98), to transmit such certificate to the vaccination officer; nor, inasmuch as having had small pox and insusceptibility of successful vaccination are two distinct and different things, is he liable to the penalty imposed by that section upon persons failing to transmit a certificate of such insusceptibility. Broadhead v. Holdsworth, 2 Ex. D. 321; 46 L. J., M. C. 172; 36 L. T. 320.

By 30 & 31 Vict. c. 84, s. 34, in any prosecution for neglect to procure the vaccination of a child, . . . if the defendant produces the certificate in the form B., it shall be a sufficient defence, except when the time specified therein for the postponement of the vaccination shall have expired before the time when the information shall have been laid:—Held, that the certificate was no answer to proceedings under s. 31. Allen v. Worthy, infra.

Previous Conviction.]—T. was ordered by a magistrate, under s. 31 of the Vaccination Act, 1867 (30 & 31 Vict. c. 84), to cause his child to be vaccinated upon a notice from the vaccination officer headed Vaccination Acts, 1867 and 1871, and reciting that he was in default under the above acts in respect of his child; the notice proceeded to require him to have the child vaccinated within fourteen days, and do all other things the law requires touching the vaccination; failing which it would be the vaccination officer's duty to report the case in order that proceedings should be taken as the law directs. He had been twice before fined in reference to the vaccination of the same child, who was two years old:—Held, that there was nothing in the Vaccination Act of 1871 (34 & 35 Vict. c. 98), to prevent a repetition of a conviction for breach of s. 31 of the Act of 1867, and that this notice was well adapted to the requirements of that section. Tebb v. Jones, 37 L. T. 576.

A parent, having been fined under 30 & 31 Vict. c. 84, s. 31, for disobeying an order to have his child vaccinated, may be proceeded against from time to time as long as the child remains unvaccinated. Allen v. Worthy, 39 L. J., M. C. 36; L. R. 5 Q. B. 163; 21 L. T. 665.

Where a parent, or person having the care, nurture, or custody of a child, has incurred and paid the penalty for neglecting to have it vaccinated within the time specified by 16 & 17 Vict. c. 100, and 24 & 25 Vict. c. 59, a continuous neglect to have it vaccinated is not a further breach of the statutes. Pilcher v. Stafford, 4 B. & S. 775; 33 L. J., M. C. 113; 10 Jur. (N.S.) 651; 9 L. T. 759; 12 W. R. 407.

Where, after proper notice to a defendant, an order has been made upon him to have his child vaccinated, and upon his disobedience to such order a conviction has been obtained and a penalty imposed for such disobedience under s. 31 of the Vaccination Act, 1867, a second conviction cannot be sustained upon the same order. Reg. v. Portsmouth JJ., or Pink, 61 L. J., M. C. 126; [1892] 1 Q. B. 491; 66 L. T.

677; 40 W. R. 413; 17 Cox, C. C. 523; 56 J. P. 470.

Costs of Order—Default—Imprisonment.]—Sect. 6 of the Summary Jurisdiction Act, 1879, repeals s. 18 of the Summary Jurisdiction Act, 1848, only so far as the latter gives justices jurisdiction to enforce by distress and imprisonment an order directing the payment of money when such order was made on a complaint that a sum of money was claimed to be due. W. was summoned under s. 31 of the Vaccination Act, 1867, to show cause why he should not have his child vaccinated, and an order was made on the summons directing that he should have the child vaccinated within a given time, and also directing that he should pay the costs of the order, and on his failure to do so that there should be distress, and in default of distress he should be imprisoned. On certiorari to quash this order:—Held, that it was good under s. 18 of the Summary Jurisdiction Act, 1848. Reg. v. Burrows, 77 L. T. 338; 46 W. R. 29; 61 J. P. 724.

Enforcement of Proceedings for—Application by Urban Sanitary Authority—Mandamus.]—A metropolitan district board of works, as the local sanitary authority, have no specific legal interest entitling them to a mandamus directing the local board of guardians to enforce the provisions of the vaccination acts. Reg. v. Lewisham Union, 66 L. J., Q. B. 403; [1897] 1 Q. B. 498; 76 L. T. 324; 45 W. R. 346; 61 J. P. 151.

Not Maintaining Wife and Children.]—See POOR LAW.

Impostures by Palmistry.]—The imposture of exercising, with intent to deceive, a pretended power of holding intercourse with the invisible world, and of obtaining manifestations and communications from supernatural and invisible spirits, is an attempt to deceive by using "subtle craft, means or device by palmistry or otherwise," within s. 4 of the Vagrancy Act, 5 Geo. 4, c. 83. Monck v. Hilton, 46 L. J., M. C. 163; 2 Ex. D. 268; 36 L. T. 66; 25 W. R. 373.

It is not necessary, to constitute a man a rogue and vagabond within this section, that he should lead a wandering and vagabond life. Ib.

The appellant was convicted under 5 Geo. 4, c. 83, s. 4, which makes punishable as a rogue and vagabond "every person pretending or professing to tell fortunes . . . to deceive and impose on any of his majesty's subjects." He had published advertisements in various newspapers offering to cast nativities, give yearly advice, and answer astrological questions. A detective wrote to him and received from him a circular setting forth the appellant's views of astrology as a science, and stating that by the positions of the planets in the nativity, and their aspects to each other, he was able to tell any applicant's fortune in the various events of life in return for certain remuneration. He never actually told anything to the detective, and there was no evidence to show whether or not he believed in the truth of his professions:—Held, that on this evidence the appellant was rightly convicted. Penny v. Hanson, 56 L. J., M. C. 41; 18 Q. B. D. 478; 56 L. T. 235; 35 W. R. 379; 16 Cox, C. C. 173; 51 J. P. 167.

—— Indictment, Form of.]—A conviction under s. 4 of 5 Geo. 4, c. 83, which stated that the defendant "did use a certain subtle craft, means and device" with intent, &c., is bad for uncertainty in not showing a conviction for an offence punishable by the statute. Reg. v. Slade, 35 L. T. 911.

—— Conviction, Validity of.]—By 5 Geo. 3, c. 83, s. 4, every person pretending or professing to tell fortunes, or using any subtle craft, means or device, by palmistry or otherwise, to deceive and impose on any of her majesty's subjects, shall be deemed a rogue and a vagabond, within the true intent and meaning of that act, and may be committed by a justice of the peace to prison for three months. S. having been convicted under this statute, the conviction set out that he had used certain craft, &c., which craft was that he wrote words upon a slate, which he pretended to be written by the spirit of a certain person deceased, to deceive L. and D.; but the conviction omitted the words "by palmistry or otherwise," and was quashed by the quarter sessions on that account:—Held, that it was a question for the sessions to determine whether the omission of the words rendered the conviction bad, and a rule for a mandamus to enter continuances was discharged. Reg. v. Middlesex JJ., Slade, In re, 46 L. J., M. C. 225; 2 Q. B. D. 516; 36 L. T. 402; 25 W. R. 610.

Begging and Gathering Alms.]—Colliers "on strike," who were householders in a colliery district and had wives and families, went from house to house in a street of a town four miles distant, with a waggon inscribed "children's bread waggon," and begged for assistance in money or kind. They were not disorderly. Having been convicted under the Vagrant Act (5 Geo. 4, c. 83), s. 3, which enacts that every person wandering abroad in any public highway to beg or gather alms shall be deemed an idle and disorderly person:—Held, that, as it was not their habit and mode of life to wander abroad and beg, they were not within the meaning of the act, and the conviction was wrong. Pointon v. Hill, 53 L. J., M. C. 62; 12 Q. B. D. 306; 50 L. T. 268; 32 W. R. 478; 15 Cox, C. C. 461; 48 J. P. 341.

If a person is committed to prison as a rogue and vagabond for procuring charitable contributions under a false pretence that he is able to abstain from food for five years and six months, the court will grant a habeas corpus to bring up his body. Cavanah, In re, 1 D. (N.S.) 546; 6 Jur. 220.

—— Encouraging Child to Beg—Age.]—On an information against a person for encouraging a child to beg, the magistrate is justified in disregarding the statement made by the child that he was sixteen years of age, that being the only evidence as to age, if his appearance warrants his belief that he is a child under the age of fourteen, the question of age being one of fact entirely for the magistrate. Reg. v. Viasani, 15 L. T. 240.

Pauper unlawfully returning to Parish.]—A conviction stated that a party having been brought before a justice upon an information charging him with having unlawfully returned to his parish without a certificate, from which he had been legally removed, confessed himself guilty of the offence:—Held, that the conviction was good on the face of it without stating in it an express act of vagrancy, it being necessary for the party convicted to show in his defence that he had a sufficient excuse for returning, and that he did not return in a state of pauperism. Mann v. Danvers, 3 B. & Ald. 103.

Being in Place for Unlawful Purpose.]—An information charged that the appellants were found in the dwelling-house of the respondent "for an unlawful purpose, to wit, for the purpose of feloniously stealing and converting to their own use certain provisions" of the respondent's. The facts were, that the appellants had been admitted into the house of the respondent by night, and without his knowledge, by his servants, and there entertained by them with the provisions in question. The justices convicted the appellants of the offence charged, upon the ground that they were, under the circumstances proved on the hearing, in the house for an unlawful purpose, within the meaning of the act:—Held, that the conviction was bad, as not amounting to a conviction for felony, the offence charged in the information. Kirkin v. Jenkins, 32 L. J., M. C. 140; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 1013; 8 L. T. 243; 11 W. R. 618; 9 Cox, C. C. 311.

Being in a garden for the purpose of fornication is not being there for an unlawful purpose, within 5 Geo. 4, c. 83, s. 4. Hayes v. Stevenson, 3 L. T. 296; 9 W. R. 53.

Gaming in Public Place.]—See GAMING AND WAGERING.

"Frequenting" Public Thoroughfare with Intent to Commit a Felony.]—A man who "frequents" a public street, having in his mind the intent to commit a felony when and wheresoever opportunity arises, is liable to the penalties of the Vagrant Act, 5 Geo. 4, c. 83, s. 4, even though no opportunity should arise, and may be committed as a rogue and vagabond, if the justices are satisfied on sufficient evidence, first, that he frequented the street, and secondly, that he did so with intent to commit a felony. The overt act, or the attempt to carry out the intent, is not an essential part of the offence against the act. The appellant was found and apprehended by two constables at about two o'clock in the morning in a public thoroughfare called Victoria Road, having in his possession a portion of a brass pump which appeared to have been wrenched off from the continuation pipe. Being stopped and questioned as to how he became possessed of it and whither he was taking it, he gave an account which proved to be false, and also a false name and address. Being charged before two justices on suspicion of having stolen the pump, and the proof failing, he was then charged under 5 Geo. 4, c. 83, s. 4, with frequenting the street in question with intent to commit a felony; and on proof that he was an associate of thieves, and had four years before been convicted and sentenced to imprisonment for a felony,—although there was no proof that he had ever before been seen in the street in question, or that the pump had been stolen,—he was convicted as a rogue and vagabond under s. 4 of the Vagrant Act, for "frequenting the public thoroughfare with intent to commit a felony," and sentenced to be imprisoned:—Held, that the evidence did not warrant the conviction, inasmuch as it did not show a frequenting of Victoria Road with intent to commit a felony. Clark v. Reg., or Reg. v. Clark, 54 L. J., M. C. 66; 14 Q. B. D. 92; 52 L. T. 136; 33 W. R. 226; 49 J. P. 246.

—— Place of Public Resort.]—Under 5 Geo. 4, c. 83, s. 4, a person is well convicted of being a rogue and a vagabond if the conviction states that he, "being a reputed thief, did frequent the public highway," at, &c., "with intent to commit felony." It is not essential to the offence that the highway should lead to any river, canal or navigable stream, dock or basin, quay, wharf or warehouse, or that it should be adjacent to any place of public resort, or avenue thereto. Reg. v. Brown, 17 Q. B. 833; 21 L. J., M. C. 113.

A public highway is not necessarily a "place of public resort," within the meaning of 5 Geo. 4, c. 83, s. 4. Tinson, Ex parte, 39 L. J., M. C. 129; L. R. 5 Ex. 257; 22 L. T. 614; 18 W. R. 849.

A man was committed to gaol by justices, under a warrant which stated him to have been convicted, under 5 Geo. 4, c. 83, s. 4, as "a rogue and vagabond, for that he, being a suspected person, did frequent a certain public highway . . . . with intent to commit a felony":—Held, that the commitment was bad, for not showing that the highway led or adjoined to any "river, canal, &c.," or to any "place of public resort," or that it was itself a place of public resort. The case of Jones, In re (7 Ex. 586; 21 L. J., M. C. 116), adhered to, and Reg. v. Brown (17 Q. B. 833) not followed. Ib.

Where a commitment stated that the prisoner being a suspected person "did frequent a certain street, with intent to commit felony":—Held, that the commitment was bad, for not alleging that the street was leading to a river, canal or place of public resort, or was adjacent to a place of public resort. Jones, In re, 7 Ex. 586; 21 L. J., M. C. 116; 16 Jur. 801.

Premises on which a sale, which has been publicly advertised, is going on by public auction, are, for the occasion, a place of public resort, within 5 Geo. 4, c. 83, s. 4. Sewell v. Taylor, 7 C. B. (N.S.) 160; 29 L. J., M. C. 50; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 582; 1 L. T. 37; 8 W. R. 26.

Where a warrant of commitment set out a conviction, which alleged that the prisoner, on a certain day, in the city of London, then being a suspected person and reputed thief, frequenting the public streets and places of and in the city, then and there was found in Railway Place, being a public thoroughfare, and one of the places of public resort of and in the city, with intent feloniously to steal the moneys, goods, and chattels of S. S., from her person therein:—Held, sufficient. Cross, Ex parte, 1 H. & N. 651; 26 L. J., M. C. 28; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 320; 5 W. R. 307. S. P., 1 C. B. (N.S.) 573.

A conviction alleged that the defendant being a suspected person, at the railway station in a parish, the same being at the time a place of public resort, did frequent the platform of the station with intent to commit felony :—Held, that it sufficiently appeared that the platform was a place of public resort, and that the conviction was, therefore, good. Davis, Ex parte, 2 H. & N. 149 ; 26 L. J., M. C. 178 ; 5 W. R. 522.

—— Apprehension.]—The London Police Act (3 Geo. 4, c. 55), s. 16, authorising the apprehension of suspected persons or "reputed thieves," only applied to the apprehension of persons of general bad character, as rogues and vagabonds, and not to apprehension on suspicion of a particular felony. Cowles v. Dunbar, M. & M. 37 ; 2 Car. & P. 565.

Proof of Previous Conviction.]—A previous conviction, under 5 Geo. 4, c. 83, s. 17, can be proved only by proof of the record thereof ; and neither oral testimony nor the minute-book of the convicting justices is sufficient. Giles v. Siney, 11 L. T. 310 ; 13 W. R. 92.

The certificate of a previous conviction required by 5 Geo. 4, c. 84, s. 24, is sufficient, by virtue of 8 & 9 Vict. c. 113, s. 1, if it purports to be signed by an officer having the custody of the records, although that officer is therein described as the deputy clerk of the peace of a borough. Reg. v. Parsons, 35 L. J., M. C. 167 ; L. R. 1 C. C. 24 ; 12 Jur. (N.S.) 436 ; 14 L. T. 450 ; 14 W. R. 662 ; 10 Cox, C. C. 243.

The certificate need not aver that the quarter sessions at which the prisoner was convicted were held by the recorder. Ib.

Enforcing Warrant for Apprehension.]—Where a conviction of one as a rogue and a vagabond had been appealed against and confirmed, and the convicting magistrate issued his warrant for the apprehension of the party convicted :—Held, that the magistrate had not the power, and that it belonged to the quarter sessions. Moore, Ex parte, W. W. & D. 72 ; 1 Jur. 135.

Process of Execution—Subsequent Court.]—Under 5 Geo. 4, c. 83, s. 14, a subsequent court of quarter sessions has power to give effect to a judgment pronounced at a previous sessions of the same court, by issuing process of execution upon a conviction as awarded at such previous sessions. Rex v. Warwickshire JJ., 4 N. & M. 370 ; 2 A. & E. 768 ; 1 H. & W. 18 ; 4 L. J., M. C. 62.

A mandamus to the court of quarter sessions will go, commanding them to issue such process of execution where there has been no delay in making the application, or the delay has been satisfactorily accounted for. Ib.

A. THE CONTRACT AND MATTERS RELATING THERETO.

I. IN GENERAL.

a. Parties.

Limited Owner—Easement.]—An enactment in a special act, incorporating the Lands Clauses Act, 1845, that "the persons empowered by the Lands Clauses Act, 1845, to convey lands shall have full power to convey or grant in perpetuity at an annual or other rent any lands for the purposes of this act, or any easement," has the effect of extending section 10 of the Lands Clauses Act so as to give to a limited owner the same power of selling lands as an absolute owner has under that section, and also of enabling him to sell an easement for a rent-charge on the rates and tolls payable under the special act. Gerard (Lord) and Beecham's Contract, In re, 63 L. J., Ch. 695; [1894] 3 Ch. 295; 7 R. 519; 71 L. T. 272; 42 W. R. 678—C.A.

Trustees—Apportionment.]—It is the duty of trustees who, having a trust or power to sell, join with the owner of another property in selling both together, first, to see that such a sale is beneficial to their cestuis que trustent; secondly, that their share of the purchase-money is apportioned before the completion of the purchase, and thirdly, to apportion the share themselves, Cooper, In re, 46 L. J., Ch. 133; 4 Ch. D. 802; 35 L. T. 890; 25 W. R. 301.

The proper mode of apportioning the prices of a life estate and reversion when sold together for a lump sum, is to value both interests separately, and not to put a value on one and deduct that from the total price. Ib.

——Power to give Receipts.]—The doctrine of Forbes v. Peacock (12 Sim. 528; 15 L. J., Ch. 371) amounts only to this, that where prior to 22 & 23 Vict. c. 85, and 23 & 24 Vict. c. 145, there is a trust to sell real estate, and pay debts and legacies out of the proceeds, there is also an implied power in the trustees to give receipts for the purchase-money. Carlyon v. Truscott, 44 L. J., Ch. 186; L. R. 20 Eq. 348; 32 L. T. 50; 23 W. R. 302.

——Sale by One.]—A trustee, without the authority of his co-trustees, signed an agreement for the sale of trust property. Held, that specific performance could not be ordered either as to the whole or as to the part in which the contracting trustee had a beneficial interest. Naylor v. Goodall, 47 L. J., Ch. 53; 37 L. T. 422; 26 W. R. 162.

——Conversion postponed.]—A testator gave to his wife the personal use of a leasehold messuage for her life, and if she should not think fit to reside therein, then the premises should form part of his residuary estate. He then directed the conversion of his real and the residue of his personal estate, and gave a power to postpone such conversion. A company, having taken the premises under its compulsory powers while the widow was in occupation, made an agreement with her as to her interest, and a separate agreement with the trustees. The latter required the consideration money to be paid into court:—Held, that the trustees could not assign, for it would not be a proper exercise of the trust to sell during the occupation of the widow. Smith v. G. N. R., 23 W. R. 126.

—— Bare Trustee.]—A vendor of freeholds who let the purchaser into possession before payment of the purchase-money and execution of the conveyance, was, by reason of his having a lien on the property for his purchase-money and not being bound to convey until payment, held not to be a "bare trustee." Morgan v. Swansea Urban Sanitary Authority, 9 Ch. D. 582; 27 W. R. 283. And see Docwra, In re, infra, col. 1207.

——Existence of Debts.]—Trustees, as vendors, are not bound to state whether there exist any debts which make a sale necessary. Flux v. Best, 31 L. T. 645; 23 W. R. 228.

—— Breach of Trust.]—Trustees having power to sell under such special conditions as they should think fit, sold with a condition limiting the title to commence in 1858 (fourteen years previously). The next convenient root of title was a deed of 1819, from which a good title could be deduced, but the trustees could not find this deed, and had only recitals of its contents. There was also a condition that all recitals and statements in the deeds and particulars should be accepted as conclusive evidence:—Held, that the sale under such conditions was a breach of trust, and an injunction was granted at the suit of a cestui que trust to restrain completion. Dance v. Goldingham, 42 L. J., Ch. 777; L. R. 8 Ch. 902; 29 L. T. 166; 21 W. R. 761. S. P., Dunn v. Flood, 49 L. T. 678; 32 W. R. 197.

—— Under Lands Clauses Consolidation Act.]—Trustees of lands for femes couverts who were absolutely entitled for their separate use, are not persons competent to contract with a railway company for the sale of land under the 7th section of the Lands Clauses Act, 1845. Peters v. Lewes and East Grinstead Ry. 50 L. J., Ch. 839; 18 Ch. D. 429; 45 L. T. 234; 29 W. R. 875—C. A.

—— Sale by Devisee of surviving Trustee.]—Devise to trustees and their heirs to sell:—Held, that devisees in trust of a surviving trustee could not sell. Cooke v. Crawford, 13 Sim. 91; 11 L. J., Ch. 406; 6 Jur. 723.

Where real estate is devised to trustees and "their heirs" (omitting "assigns") in trust for sale, the trust must be considered as annexed, not to the person, but to the fee simple estate taken by the trustees, so that the trust can be executed by the devisees of trust estates of the surviving trustee. Cooke v. Crawford (supra) overruled. Osborne and Rowlett, In re, 49 L. J., Ch. 310; 13 Ch. D. 774; 42 L. T. 650; 28 W. R. 365. See Morton and Hallett, In re, infra.

Devise to trustees, their heirs, executors, and administrators, that they, or the survivor of them, or the heirs, executors, or administrators of such survivor, should sell. H. S. the survivor devised all his trust estates to A. and B., whom he also appointed his executors, to hold to them, their heirs, executors, administrators, and assigns upon the same trusts as the testator H. S. held them. A. and B. sold to C., who contracted to sell to the plaintiffs:—Held, that the title of the devisees of H. S. to convey to C. was too doubtful for a court of equity to compel specific performance of the contract. Stevens v. Austen 3 El. & El. 685; 30 L. J., Q. B. 212; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 873; 3 L. T. 810.

—— Devise to Trustees for A. for Life, and after her Decease to stand seised thereof for such Purposes as she should appoint—Devise by A. to Executors and Trustees upon Trust to sell.]—Where a testator devised his copyholds to trustees upon trust for A. for life, and after her decease to stand seised thereof for such purposes as she should appoint, and such trustees were duly admitted as tenants, and A. subsequently by her will devised the same to her executors and trustees upon trust to sell and assure to the purchaser, it was held that the legal estate remained in the trustees of the will of the testator, and that the executors and trustees of A. could not give a good title. Doe d. Woodcock v. Barthrop (5 Taunt. 382) distinguished. Townsend's Contract, In re, 64 L. J., Ch. 334; [1895] 1 Ch. 716; 13 R. 328; 72 L. T. 321; 43 W. R. 392.

—— Sale by Customary Heir.]—A testator devised his freehold and copyhold estates to trustees and their heirs "upon trust that they his said trustees or the trustees or trustee for the time being of that his will," should sell the estates. The trustees having died, the customary heir of the survivor contracted to sell part of the copyholds:—Held, that the customary heir was competent to execute the trust for sale. Morton and Hallett, In re, 49 L. J., Ch. 559; 15 Ch. D. 143; 42 L. T. 602; 28 W. R. 895—C. A.

Whether Cooke v. Crawford (supra) is to be treated as overruled, quære. Osborne and Rowlett, In re (supra), doubted. Ib.

Trustees when Beneficiaries.]—On the sale by the court of real estate vested in trustees having a power of sale, and being themselves beneficiaries:—Held, that a good title could not be made by the exercise of the power of sale without the concurrence of the assignee in insolvency of one of the trustees. Young v. Tregear, 21 W. R. 215.

Purchase by Trustees from Trustee.]—H. was surviving trustee for sale of freeholds, part of the proceeds of which were to be held on the trusts of his marriage settlement, his wife being the testator's daughter. H. put up the property for sale, and instructed his trustees to purchase five of the lots, and he instructed the auctioneer to put reserved prices on the lots. The lots were fairly valued. H., acting as solicitor for the purchasers, instructed an agent to bid for the lots. The agent bought the five lots above the reserved prices, and H. then conveyed them to the trustees of his settlement:—Held, that the sale was unimpeachable. Hickley v. Hickley, 45 L. J., Ch. 401; 2 Ch. D. 190; 34 L. T. 441; 24 W. R. 604.

Sale to Tenant for Life.]—As a tenant for life stands in no fiduciary position towards the remainderman, and is as free as anyone else to buy from the trustees, a sale to him cannot be impeached, his motives being immaterial to the trustees, provided they sell on terms advantageous to the estate. Dicconson v. Talbot, L. R. 6 Ch. 32 ; 24 L. T. 49 ; 19 W. R. 138.

Tenant for Life only Surviving Trustee.]—The circumstances of the tenant for life of real estate being the sole surviving trustee in whom the power of sale is vested is no objection to a sale under the power. Forster v. Abraham, 43 L. J., Ch. 199 ; L. R. 17 Eq. 351 ; 22 W. R. 386.

Consent of Tenant for Life.]—The trustees of a settlement having power to sell the fee at the request of the tenant for life, can, upon his request, after he has alienated his particular estate and with the consent of his alienee, made a good title in fee to a purchaser. Alexander v. Mills, 40 L. J., Ch. 73 ; L. R. 6 Ch. 124 ; 24 L. T. 206 ; 19 W. R. 310.

N. devised estates in trust for A. for life, then for B. for life, and then for C. in tail, with a power of sale with consent of person for the time being entitled as beneficial tenant for life ; and directed that no repurchase or reinvestment should be made while there should be any person entitled as beneficial tenant for life or tenant in tail in possession, and of the age of twenty-one years, without the previous consent of such person. A. and B. were both dead, and C. was an infant :—Held, that the trustees could during the minority of C. exercise the power of sale without consent, and make a good title. Neave and Chapman, In re, 49 L. J., Ch. 642 ; 43 L. T. 152 ; 28 W. R. 976.

Service of Petition for Sale.]—A petition under 25 & 26 Vict. c. 108, s. 2, by trustees having power to sell settled lands with the consent of the tenant for life, for leave to sell the land and minerals separately, need not be served on the remaindermen. Nagle, In re, 6 Ch. D. 104.

Concurrence of Beneficiaries.]—A trustee having a discretionary trust for sale with power to postpone the sale, leased the property with the concurrence of the beneficiaries. Before the lease expired the property was put up for sale by the lessee and the trustees conjointly, the facts being disclosed by the particulars of sale ; and the purchase-money was apportioned between the two interests according to the valuation of a skilled valuer :—Held, that the purchaser was not entitled to insist on the concurrence of the beneficiaries on account of the valuation not having been made before the sale. Morris v. Debenham, 2 Ch. D. 540 ; 34 L. T. 205 ; 24 W. R. 636.

A testator who had entered into a contract with the plaintiff for the sale of lands, died before completion, and devised the legal estate in the hands of the defendant. The testator gave several annuities, and devised the residue of his estate to the defendant, after payment of the annuities. After the death of the testator, the plaintiff entered into an agreement with the defendant to take a conveyance of the lands from the defendant and the annuitants, or such of them as were entitled to annuities charged upon the lands. In an action for breach of the last-mentioned agreement :—Held, that the plaintiff was entitled to require the concurrence of the annuitants in the conveyance. Cumming v. Reid, Ir. R. 8 C. L. 166.

—— Will—Legacies charged on Realty—Beneficial Owners.]—Where residuary realty charged with the payment of debts and legacies is given to trustees with an unlimited power of sale, and is subsequently devised absolutely to beneficiaries, the trustees can exercise the power of sale and confer a good title upon a purchaser without the concurrence of the beneficiaries, so long as the exercise of the power is necessary in order to perform the trusts of the will. Dyson and Fowke's Contract, In re, 65 L. J., Ch. 791 ; [1896] 2 Ch. 720 ; 74 L. T. 759 ; 45 W. R. 28.

Conveyance by trustee under deed of assignment. See Poppleton and Jones's Contract, In re, 74 L. T. 528, infra, col. 1467.

Infants bound by Sale.]—A mortgagee contracted to sell two properties, leasehold and freehold, to the equity of redemption in which the mortgagors were entitled. The vendor filed a bill for specific performance. At the date of the bill the mortgagors were willing to concur ; but before decree, some of them died, leaving infants interested in the equity of redemption : —Held, that the 23 & 24 Vict. c. 145, s. 15, empowered the vendor to sell the whole of the term of the leaseholds, though they were only demised to him for the residue of the term less one day. Hiatt v. Hillman, 25 L. T. 55 ; 19 W. R. 694.

Held, also, that the infants interested in the equity of redemption must be bound by the sale, as it was for their advantage that the two properties should be sold together ; and that the vendor could make a good title. Ib.

—— Infant Customary Heir.]—A widow was entitled to dower out of gavelkind land of which her three sons (two being infants) were co-heirs. The widow and adult son conveyed by deed to A., and this conveyance was confirmed by charters of feoffment by the infants on the youngest attaining fifteen years, the age at which by the law of gavelkind they could convey. It appeared that on such conveyance and feoffment the infants had not received their full share of the purchase-money. The property being subsequently put up for sale, the purchaser declined on this ground to accept the title, the two sons being still infants, so that they could not release their rights :—Held, that the vendor had not made out such a title as the purchaser could be compelled to accept. Maskell and Goldfinch's Contract, In re, 64 L. J., Ch. 678 ; [1895] 2 Ch. 525 ; 13 R. 685 ; 72 L. T. 836 ; 43 W. R. 620.

Vendor Purchasing from Trustees.]—Defence to an action for specific performance stated that since the contract the defendant had notice that the purchasers were trustees of a marriage settlement, and that the property, which was an underlease, might be an improper investment of the trust funds. Interrogatories by the defendant, directed to establish the case that the investment was a breach of trust, were ordered to be struck out as irrelevant. Mansfield v. Childerhouse, 46 L. J., Ch. 30; 4 Ch. D. 82; 35 L. T. 590; 25 W. R. 68.

Semble, that an innocent vendor of lands, discovering before completion that the purchasers are trustees, is not concerned to see that the investment is authorised by the trust. Ib.

Conviction for Felony.]—Section 8 of the Felony Act, 1870, which renders a convict during the time he is subject to the operation of the act incapable of alienating any property, does not apply to property vested in such convict as trustee or mortgagee. He could consequently alienate such property before the Trustee Act, 1893. Levy and the Debenture Corporation, In re, 8 R. 820; 42 W. R. 533.

Sale by Mortgagees.]—Under a will A. was tenant for life, with remainder to B., his son, in fee, of lands in which the legal estate was outstanding. A. mortgaged his equitable life estate, and B. mortgaged his remainder in fee to the same persons, with powers of sale. Default was made, and the mortgagees in exercise of the powers of sale conveyed a portion of the lands to C. C. devised the purchased lands to D. A portion of the purchased lands was afterwards sold:—Held, that the mortgagees' powers of sale were properly exercised. Cooper, In re, 46 L. J., Ch. 133; 4 Ch. D. 802; 35 L. T. 890; 25 W. R. 301.

Legal Personal Representatives of Mortgagee.]—The 4th section of the Vendor and Purchaser Act, 1874, does not apply to a transfer of a mortgage, and therefore the legal personal representative of a mortgagee of a freehold estate cannot, on receiving payment of the mortgage debt, convey the estate to a transferee. Spradbery's Mortgage, In re, 49 L. J., Ch. 623; 14 Ch. D. 514; 43 L. T. 82; 28 W. R. 822.

Sale by Administratrix.]—Where executors with power to sell for the payment of debts have renounced probate, an administratrix with the will annexed has no power to sell under the statute 22 & 23 Vict. c. 35, s. 16. Clay and Tetley, In re, 16 Ch. D. 3; 43 L. T. 402; 29 W. R. 5—C. A.

Sale to Husband of Administratrix.]—The husband of an administratrix is in a fiduciary position, and cannot purchase from a co-administratrix without the consent of all the cestuis que trustent. Pepperell, In re, Pepperell v. Chamberlain, 27 W. R. 410.

Sale by Administrator durante minore ætate.]—A vendor deduced title as administrator durante minore ætate. It did not appear that the sale was necessary for payment of debts:—Held, that the vendor had not under the circumstances power to sell. Robinson and Sords, In re, 3 L. R., Ir. 429.

Sale by Executor—Lis pendens.]—An executor has power to make valid sale of any part of the assets pending a general administration action in which no decree has been made. Neeves v. Burrage, 14 Q. B. 504; 19 L. J., Q. B. 68; 14 Jur. 177.

Held, also, that the rule of equity by which a party is entitled to sell, pending the suit, is not a mere rule of practice, but one of which the court takes judicial cognisance, and that evidence of the invalidity of the sale on that account was not admissible. Ib.

—— Presumption as to Payment of Debts.]—The rule laid down by Jessel, M.R., in Tanqueray-Willaume and Landau, In re (infra, col. 1352), that where an executor is selling real estate, after twenty years have elapsed from the testator's decease, a presumption arises that the debts have been paid, and the purchaser is therefore put upon enquiry, is not applicable to the case of an executor selling leaseholds. Whistler, In re (35 Ch. D. 561) followed. Venn and Furze's Contract, In re, 63 L. J., Ch. 303; [1894] 2 Ch. 101; 8 R. 220; 70 L. T. 312; 42 W. R. 440.

Charge of Debts.]—Where an estate has been devised to trustees to sell for payment of debts, and, subject thereto, for the younger children of the testator, semble, that a purchaser from them will, in all cases, buy subject to the debts. Garnett v. Armstrong, 2 Con. & L. 458; 4 Dr. & War. 182; 5 Ir. Eq. R. 533.

—— Sale of Advowson.]—A testator, after charging his real estate with the payment of his debts, devised an advowson, upon trust to present his youngest son to the living when vacant, and subject thereto in trust to sell and apply the produce of the sale for the special purposes therein mentioned, and he appointed three executors, one of whom was his youngest son, and another one of the trustees of the advowson. The personal estate being insufficient for the payment of his debts, the trustees of the advowson contracted to sell the advowson, before any vacancy had occurred in the living. Held that, the charge being in effect a devise of real estate, in trust to pay debts, a good title could be made by plaintiffs without institution of a trust to ascertain deficiency of personal estate, and that purchaser was not bound either to inquire whether other sufficient property ought not to be applied in payment of debts, or to see to the application of purchase money. Shaw v. Borrer, 1 Keen, 559; 5 L. J., Ch. 364.

b. Construction.

Title to Freeholds of Bankrupt when Trustee Disclaims.]—An owner of property subject to an equitable mortgage became bankrupt. The trustee in bankruptcy disclaimed. Subsequently he and the bankrupt purported to convey the property to the equitable mortgagee, whose assigns contracted to sell the same to a purchaser. Held, that after the disclaimer by the trustee the subsequent conveyance was inoperative; and that the legal estate was outstanding and could not be got in under the Trustee Act, 1850. Mercer and Moore, In re, 49 L. J., Ch. 201; 14 Ch. D. 287; 42 L. T. 311; 28 W. R. 485.

Assignee of Bankrupt.]—It is no answer to an action for nonpayment of the remainder of the purchase-money agreed to be paid to the vendor that the vendor purchased at a sale of the property of a bankrupt, whose assignee he was. Willett v. Clarke, 10 Price, 207.

Appurtenances—Right of Way.]—A contract to sell land with the appurtenances does not pass a right to a way to the land sold which the vendor has used over adjoining land of his own. Where a grantee is entitled to a way of necessity over another tenement belonging to the grantor, and there are to the tenement granted more ways than one, the grantee is entitled to one way only, which the grantor may select. Bolton v. Bolton, 48 L. J., Ch. 467; 11 Ch. D. 968; 40 L. T. 582. See also 2 Wms. Saunders, 400 (a).

Joint Authority to Sell.]—A. and B. advertised an estate for sale. The advertisement stated that "to treat and view the property applications are to be made to A. or B." :—Held, that this did not give A. authority to sell the estate, so as to bind B. without his concurrence. Godwin v. Brind, 39 L. J., C. P. 122, n.; L. R. 5 C. P. 299, n.; 17 W. R. 29.

Varying Contract.]—Conditions of sale cannot avail to modify the contract, so far as to vary the very subject-matter of the contract. Evans v. Robins, 2 H. & C. 410; 33 L. J., Ex. 68; 10 Jur. (N.S.) 473; 11 L. T. 211; 12 W. R. 604—Ex. Ch.

What included in "Outgoings."]—By contract for sale the defendant vendor agreed to discharge "all rates, taxes, and outgoings" up to the time of completion. Moneys paid after completion for improving the street before the defendant became owner. Held, an outgoing for which the defendant was liable Midgley v. Coppock, 48 L. J., Ex. 674; 4 Ex. D. 309; 40 L. T. 870—C. A.; and see Lawes v. Gibson, infra, col. 1265.

Possession.]—Conditions of sale provide that the purchaser shall be entitled "to the possession or the receipt of the rents and profits" of the land from a specified date:—Held, that the vendor was bound to give possession to the purchaser on the date specified, and that evidence was not admissible to prove an alleged contemporary parol agreement varying the condition as to possession. Anker v. Franklin, 43 L. T. 317; 44 J. P. 830.

Occupation.]—"Occupation under a lease" means occupation of all that passed under the lease, whether in actual enjoyment and use or not, and whether known to exist at the time of the lease or not; and therefore a cellar under certain demised premises was held to be in the "occupation of the lessee under the lease," although the tenant of the neighbouring tenement was in the actual use of such cellar. Whittington v. Corder, 16 Jur. 1034

Title to be Approved.]—Quære, whether the addition, in a written document, of the words "subject to the title being approved by our solicitor" could affect a contract for the sale of land, otherwise complete in itself. Hussey v. Horner-Payne, 48 L. J., Ch. 846; 4 App. Cas. 311; 41 L. T. 1; 27 W. R. 585—H. L. (E.)

Quære, whether the proper meaning of such words is more than that the title offered is not to be accepted without investigation, and that objections made on such investigation would be subject to the decision of a legal tribunal. Ib.

Evidence.]—An allegation in a plea that "A. by his writing sold the aftermath of land to B." is not proved by evidence that at an auction held for the purpose of settling it B. was the purchaser; that B. gave a promissory note for the sum, and that B.'s name was written (by A.'s agent) in the printed catalogue as the buyer. Symonds v. Ball, 8 Term Rep. 151.

—— Of Agency.]—When an agent contracts it may be proved by parol evidence who is his principal. Morris v. Wilson, 5 Jur. (N.S.) 168.

Parol evidence cannot be admitted to shew that a party having agreed for the purchase of an estate in his own name had in fact purchased it on behalf of another person. Bartlett v. Pickersgill, 1 Cox, 5; 4 East, 577, n.; 1 R. R. 1.

Recognition.]—The subsequent recognition of an unsigned contract in writing for the sale of lands, by the signature of his lawfully-authorised agent to a notice specifying and adopting the contract, is sufficient to bind the party contracting to be charged therewith. Norris v. Cooke, 7 Ir. C. L. R. 37.

Death of Party.]—By a settlement real estate was limited to such uses as A. and B. (husband and wife) should appoint, and in default of appointment to the use of trustees during the life of B., in trust for her separate use, with remainder to A. in fee. A. contracts to sell to C., and purchase money is paid to the trustees. Before completion A. died, and B. then refused to convey her life interest:—Held, that C. was entitled to specific performance to the extent of A.'s reversion in fee, with compensation in respect of B.'s life interest, and a lien on the purchase-money in the hands of the trustees. Barker v. Cox, 46 L. J., Ch. 62; 4 Ch. D. 464; 35 L. T. 662; 25 W. R. 138.

A. verbally agreed with B., his solicitor, for the sale of land to B. This agreement, which was never reduced to writing, provided that B. should bear all expenses of making out the title and that possession should be at once given. B. entered into possession, but took no steps in completion, and, before the purchase-money became due, died. In a suit by A. against the executor of B.:—Held, that B., as A.'s solicitor, ought to have had an agreement in writing prepared, and that the executor was bound to complete the purchase and pay the costs of the suit. Bradfield v. Scriven, 22 W. R. 202.

Where a vendor has died before completion of the contract the court will on a petition under the Trustee Act, 1850, make an order vesting the property in the purchaser and thereby in effect decree specific performance. Per Fry, L.J., a decree for sale or specific performance is a condition precedent to such a vesting order under the trustee act. Colling, In re, 55 L. J., Ch. 486; 32 Ch. D. 333; 54 L. T. 809; 34 W. R. 464—C. A.

—— Defective Title.]—Testator (who married after 1838), gave all his real estate to trustees, on trust to convert and invest 1,000*l.* out of the proceeds of sale, and then gave certain legacies, but did not dispose of the residuary proceeds of sale. The testator at the date of his death had contracted to sell certain lands for 3,000*l.* After his death his trustees found that no title could be made to part of the lands, and rescinded the contract. They then put up the lands to which they had a title for sale by auction, and sold them for 2,500*l.* to the same purchaser :—Held, that there was no conversion of the testator's real estate beyond the purposes declared by the will, and that the undisposed-of proceeds of sale resulted to the heir. Thomas, In re, Thomas v. Howell, 56 L. J., Ch. 9 ; 34 Ch. D. 166 ; 55 L. T. 629.

Family Arrangement—Purchase by Trustees from Cestuis que Trustent.]—By deed of family arrangement the children of an intestate mortgaged to trustees their shares in the intestate's property considerably under the real value of such shares. The trustees were to hold the property subject to the mortgage in trust for the three eldest brothers, two of whom had taken out administration. By a subsequent marriage settlement one daughter settled on certain trusts her share under the deed of arrangement. In an action, commenced more than nine years after the deed of arrangement, by the daughter, her husband and infant children, against her brothers and the trustees of the deed of settlement, to have the deed set aside, except so far as it was a security on account of her share, and to have the settlement rectified :—Held, the plaintiffs were entitled, immediately after the execution of the deed, to have it set aside, and that the mere lapse of time was no fatal bar ; but held, also, that the subsequent marriage settlement constituted a fatal bar to the deed being set aside, since it was not established that the effect of setting aside the deed would be to benefit the parties interested under the settlement, and the settlement therefore could not be allowed to be varied ; and held, further, that an inquiry could not be granted in the present action whether it would be for the benefit of the parties entitled under the settlement for the deed to be set aside, and the settlement varied. Worssam, In re, Hemery v. Worssam, 51 L. J., Ch. 669 ; 46 L. T. 584.

Contract not carried out.]—A. articles to buy land, and pays part of the purchase money ; afterwards he enters into several orders of court to pay the residue by such a day, or, in default thereof, to give up the articles, and lose what he had before paid. Court will relieve, though these articles have not been complied with. Vernon v. Stephens, 2 P. Wms. 66.

Conveyance set aside.]—A. conveyance of one moiety of an estate being set aside, a contract for the sale of the other moiety, to the same party, based on the previous conveyance of the first moiety, cannot be supported. Reynell v. Sprye, 8 Hare, 222. Affirmed, 21 L. J., Ch. 633.

Sale by Son to Father—Fair Contract.]—The father, vendor, claimed the estate by purchase from his son ; the purchaser is entitled to evidence of the fairness of the transaction. Boswell v. Mendham, 6 Madd. 373 ; 1 L. J. (O.S.) Ch. 160 ; 23 R. R. 250.

Suppression of Facts.]—Sale held bad from suppression of articles of marriage. Beatniff v. Smith, 1 Eq. Ca. Abr. 357.

Several or Separate Lots.]—Where several lots are knocked down to a bidder at an auction, and his name marked against them in the catalogue, a distinct contract arises for each lot. Roots v. Dormer (Lord), 4 B. & Ad. 77 ; 1 N. & M. 667.

i. In General.

Contract in Correspondence.]—Where a court has to find a contract in a correspondence, and not in one particular note or memorandum formally signed, the whole of that which has passed between the parties must be taken into consideration. Hussey v. Horne-Payne, 48 L. J., Ch. 846 ; 4 App. Cas. 311 ; 41 L. T. 1 ; 27 W. R. 585—H. L. (E.)

When no Consensus.]—An agreement is the result of the mutual assent of two parties to certain terms : and if it is clear that there is no consensus, what may have been written or said becomes immaterial. Chinnock v. Ely (Marchioness), 4 De G. J. & S. 638 ; 6 N. R. 1 ; 11 Jur. (N.S.) 329 ; 12 L. T. 251 ; 13 W. R. 597.

As soon as the fact is established of the final mutual assent of the parties to certain terms, and those terms are evidenced by any writing signed by the party to be charged or his agent lawfully authorised, there exist all the materials which a court of equity requires to make a legally binding contract. Ib.

But where to a proposal or an offer an assent was given subject to a provision as to a contract : —Held, that the stipulation as to the contract was a term of the assent, and there was no agreement independent of that stipulation. Ib.

M., by letter to G., proposed to sell to him premises for 5,000*l.* M. had no legal title to the premises, and, at an interview at the office of F., M.'s solicitor, G. refused to give more than 4,800*l.* M. said he would not give any title but that which he would himself get under a family arrangement, and said he would not take less than 5,000*l.*, and that there was an end to the matter. Subsequently, at the same interview, G. said he would give 5,000*l.* F., in answer to G., said he could not allow M. to enter into a contract at that moment, nor advise G., in the absence of his solicitor, to agree to the conditions which he, F., would think necessary :—Held, that G. could not sustain a bill for specific performance. Gradwell v. Maguire, Ir. R. 6 Eq. 477.

A plaintiff filed a bill for a specific performance of an agreement with the defendant. The defendant swore that his intention at the time of executing the agreement was not according to the construction contended for by the plaintiff. The court being satisfied that there had been no concord between the parties, dismissed the bill. Griffin v. Coleman, 28 L. T. 493.

Where Construction Doubtful.]—Evidence on which the court might decree the specific performance of an agreement, according to one construction of a writing, which was of doubtful meaning, where a conveyance, according to a different construction, had been executed by the vendor, and accepted by the purchaser. Humphries v. Horne, 3 Hare, 277.

Compromise—Fraud Charged.]—A bill was filed by a principal against an agent to enforce specific performance of an agreement entered into for the purpose of settling certain matters in dispute between them, including alleged frauds by the agent. In the bill these charges of fraud were repeated as substantive allegations, and the defendant went into evidence to rebut the charges:—Held, that the evidence did not show that any concluded agreement had been come to between the parties. Forester v. Read, L. R. 6 Ch. 40; 24 L. T. 79; 19 W. R. 114.

Contract Executed by one Party.]—A., being entitled to certain lands in fee, granted annuities out of them to B. A. subsequently agreed to sell the lands to C., representing to him that B. would join in the conveyance. A. executed the conveyance to C., but C. refused to allow A. to get the purchase money until B. would discharge the lands of the annuities, which B. refused to do unless he were paid off. A. subsequently sold the lands to B., who had notice of the prior deed. —Held, that by C.'s conduct the contract was incomplete, notwithstanding that the deed was executed, and that A. had a right to sell. Leader v. Ahearne, 5 Con. & L. 534; 4 Dr. & War. 495.

Agreement with Third Party.]—It is no objection to a mutual contract between A. and B., for the one to buy or sell from or to the other of them his interest in certain property, that at the time of that contract there existed a conditional agreement by one of them with a third party to sell the whole property to him. Cartwright v. Insole, 16 L. T. 445.

Vendor Subsequently acquiring Property.]—Effect of an agreement to sell land not then the property of the vendor, but which afterwards became his. Morse v. Faulkner, 3 Swanst. 429.

No Acceptance—Request for Draft Contract.]—An offer for the sale of land was sent by the vendors to the purchaser upon certain terms. No acceptance of such offer came, but only a request to be furnished with draft contract. A draft was sent, and nothing further was done for two months, when the vendors wrote to say that they treated the proposed sale as entirely off:—Held, the vendors had a right to refuse to proceed with the sale. Rummens v. Robbins, 3 De G. J. & S. 88; 11 Jur. (N.S.) 631; 14 L. T. 717; 13 W. R. 979.

Purchaser Referring to "Engagement."]—Where the proposed vendor wrote: "I have let this house to you (the proposed purchaser) on the following terms, &c." (stating the terms at length), to which he replied: "I have to ask you if you will for a pecuniary consideration allow me to withdraw from my obligation to take your house and farm," &c. and in the subsequent correspondence the purchaser referred to his "engagement," &c.:—Held, that the contract could be inferred from the tenor of this correspondence with certain telegrams taken together, and specific performance decreed. Coupland v. Arrowsmith, 18 L. T. 755.

Offer by Tenant in Common—Uncertainty.]—A tenant in common of leaseholds in a negotiation for their purchase offered by letter to send an abstract of title, but the terms of the contract were too uncertain to bind his co-tenant; neither such offer, nor his refusal to disclose the lessor's title will entitle the purchaser to specific performance. Mason v. Tyler, 27 L. T. 371.

Agreement by Tenant for Life.]—Bill against a remainderman for the specific performance of an agreement by the tenant for life, dismissed, the agreement not having been so finally concluded that either party might have had it specifically executed. Low v. Swift, 2 Ball & B. 529.

Contract concluded by Conduct of Parties.]—Circumstances in the conduct of two parties may establish a binding contract between them, although the agreement, reduced into writing as a draft, has not been formally executed by either. Brogden v. Metropolitan Ry., 2 App. Cas. 666.

In such a case the word "approved," written by one of the parties at the end of the draft agreement, must be taken as an approval of the substance of the draft, and not, as in the case of a conveyancer's or solicitor's draft, an approval of the mere form. Ib.

The onus of showing that both parties had acted on the terms of an agreement which had not been, in due form, executed by either, lies upon the party who rests his case on that circumstance. Ib.

Acceptance by Leaseholders of Rent—Action by Reversioner.]—Two of the plaintiffs were the legal owners of a leasehold interest in a house, and claimed 36*l.* from the defendant for the use and occupation of it. They authorised him to pay this amount to another plaintiff, owner of the reversion. She refused to receive it, and demanded more. The plaintiffs then sued the defendant for the use and occupation, and claimed 23*8l.*:—Held, that as soon as the defendant expressed his readiness to pay the 37*l.* there was a concluded agreement between him and the plaintiffs for that amount, and the plaintiffs could not recover more. Gretton v. Mees, 7 Ch. D. 839; 38 L. T. 506; 26 W. R. 607.

Abandonment of Contract.]—Specific performance of an agreement, whereby a company agreed to construct and maintain a siding on land, was decreed, although the owner of the land had previously entered into negotiations with the company, for compensation in respect of the breach of the agreement. Greene v. West Cheshire Ry., 41 L. J., Ch. 17; L. R. 13 Eq. 44; 25 L. T. 409; 20 W. R. 54.

Suggestions made by a vendor or purchaser as to the course which might be adopted for the purpose of obviating difficulties in the completion of a contract, are not to be taken as an abandonment of the original contract, and the substitution of a new one. Munro v. Taylor, 8 Hare, 51. Affirmed, 3 Mac. & G. 713; 21 L. J., Ch. 525.

ii. Withdrawal of Proposal.

Addition of New Terms to Contract.]—When an offer in writing is made by the owner to sell an estate on specified terms, and this is unconditionally accepted, there is a binding contract, which neither party can vary, but the owner is entitled at any time before his offer has been definitively accepted to add any new terms to his proposal. If these be refused, the treaty is at an end. Honeyman v. Marryat, 6 H. L. Cas. 112; 26 L. J., Ch. 619; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 17. Affirming 21 Beav. 14; 3 W. R. 502.

Notice to Purchaser—Sale to Third Party.]—An offer to sell property may be withdrawn before acceptance without any formal notice to the person to whom the offer is made. It is sufficient if that person has actual knowledge that the person who made the offer has done some act inconsistent with the continuance of the offer, such as selling the property to a third person. Dickinson v. Dodds, 45 L. J., Ch. 777; 2 Ch. D. 463; 34 L. T. 607; 24 W. R. 594.

Semble, that the sale of the property to a third person would of itself amount to a withdrawal of the offer, even although the person to whom the offer was first made had no knowledge of the sale. Ib.

Semble, that the acceptance of an offer to sell constitutes a contract for sale only as from the time of the acceptance. The contract does not relate back to the time when the offer was made. Ib.

A. signed a memorandum of agreement, by which he agreed to sell to B. all his interest in a partnership business on a certain valuation, "this purchase being contingent upon B. being able to agree on the purchase with the rest of the retiring partners." The memorandum was not then signed by B., who proceeded to negotiate with the other partners for the purchase of their interests. A fortnight after signing the memorandum A. wrote to B., withdrawing from his offer, on the ground that he had not complied with the condition alleged to have been verbally made by him that B. should accept within a week:—Held, that there had been no such acceptance by B. before A. had withdrawn from his offer, as to constitute a binding agreement against him of which specific performance could be enforced. Horsfall v. Garnett, 6 W. R. 387.

And see, TIME, WHEN OF THE ESSENCE, infra, col. 1145.

iii. Acceptance.

a. In General.

Within reasonable Time.]—Unless a valid acceptance be given, within a reasonable time, to a written offer to sell an estate, it will be treated as abandoned. Williams v. Williams, 17 Beav. 213.

An offer to sell land, to be binding upon the person making it, must be accepted within a reasonable time. Meynell v. Surtees, 25 L. J., Ch. 257; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 737; 3 W. R. 535. Affirming 3 Sm. & G. 101.

If the person making the offer die, become bankrupt, or sell, before acceptance of the offer, the land is not bound. Ib.

When not notified to Principal by Agent.]—A. was authorised by the defendant to make a proposal of sale of some land to the plaintiff, but to be accepted within a week. The plaintiff wrote to A. within that time, accepting the offer, but A. did not communicate the acceptance to the defendant until long after:—Held, that there was a valid contract, which was not destroyed by the neglect of A. to communicate the acceptance to the defendant. Wright v. Bigg, 15 Beav. 592.

Unconditional Acceptance.]—The court will not enforce the specific performance of a contract constituted by a proposal on one side, and an acceptance on the other, unless the acceptance is unqualified and unconditional. Oriental Inland Steam Navigation Co. v. Briggs, 5 L. T., 477; 10 W. R. 125.

—— Where Term to be supplied in Contract.]—Where a letter contains the entire terms of an agreement for purchase of lands, it is not necessary for the plaintiff to prove that he accepted the terms; if it require the plaintiff to supply a term in the agreement, there must be a special acceptance in writing, supplying that term, in order to take the case out of the statute of frauds. Boys v. Ayerst, 6 Madd, 316.

Letters will constitute an agreement which the court will specifically perform, unless the answer is a simple acceptance, without the introduction of a new term. Wright v. St. George, 12 Ir. Ch. R. 226. S. P., Ford v. Compton, 2 Bro. C. C. 32.

In order to constitute an agreement by letter, the answer to the written proposals must be a simple acceptance of the terms proposed without the introduction of any new or different terms. Holland v. Ayre, 2 Sim. & S. 194.

A proposal by a purchaser to take the remainder of a lease, was answered by letter, which, after acceding to the proposal, added, "We hope to give you possession at half-quarter day":—Held, that the addition did not introduce a new term, but that the acceptance was unconditional. Clive v. Beaumont, 1 De G. & Sm. 397; 13 Jur. 226.

Letter and Postscript.]—A wrote to B. offering to sell him an estate for 37,500*l.*, or a part of the estate for a less sum, and added a postscript reserving the right to remove the materials of a house. B. replied: "I beg to acknowledge the receipt of your letter stating that you are willing to accept 37,500*l.* for the whole of your freehold land at N. I hereby accept your terms as above, and agree to pay you the said sum of 37,500*l.* for your land":—Held, that this was an acceptance of the terms in A.'s letter, including the postscript. Hussey v. Horne-Payne, 48 L. J., Ch. 846; 4 App. Cas. 311; 41 L. T. 1; 27 W. R. 585—H. L. (E.)

Conditions of Sale to be signed.]—The owners of land, in answer to a written offer to buy it, wrote saying they had received the offer, and added, "which offer we accept," and now hand you two copies of conditions of sale which we have signed; we will thank you to sign same, and return one of the copies to us":—Held, that this was not an unqualified acceptance, and did not make a contract. Crossley v. Maycock, 43 L. J., Ch. 379; L. R. 18 Eq. 180; 22 W. R. 387.

Day for Completion specified.]—A letter, accepting an offer to purchase an estate on the terms stated in an advertisement, added a sum for deposit, and a day for completing the purchase. No reply was given to this letter:—Held, that there was no complete contract on which to sustain a bill for specific performance. Honeyman v. Marryat, 6 H. L. Cas. 112; 26 L. J., Ch. 619; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 17. Affirming 21 Beav. 14; 3 W. R. 502.

Shares—Interest on Allotment Money.]—A letter allotting shares stated that the allotment money must be paid on the 21st March, and punctual payment was requisite, and that the bankers were instructed not to receive payment after that day without interest at 10 per cent.:—Held, that this addition relative to interest was not an introduction of a new term. Imperial Land Co. of Marseilles, In re, Harris's case, 41 L. J., Ch. 621; L. R. 7 Ch. 587; 26 L. T. 781; 20 W. R. 690.

Alteration in Price.]—The defendant offered in writing to sell his farm for 1,000*l.*: but the plaintiff offered 950*l.*, which the defendant refused to accept. Subsequently the plaintiff, by letter, agreed to give 1,000*l.*, but there appeared to be no assent on the part of the defendant:—Held, that there was no binding contract within the statute of frauds. Hyde v. Wrench, 3 Beav. 334; 4 Jur. 1106.

Contract by letter thus:—I will give 16,000*l.*; answer, I will not take less than 17,000*l.*; answer returned, I will give 17,000*l.*:—Held, not agreement within statute. Popham v. Eyre, Lofft, 786.

Extension of Time for Acceptance.]—A., the agent of an intending purchaser of leaseholds, wrote to B., the vendor's agent, that he "could give him 50*l.* for the lease, plant, &c., if accepted at once." B., in reply, asked A. to allow the offer to remain open for twenty-four hours, in order that he might submit it to his employer. On the following day he wrote to A., "I am directed to accept your offer of 50*l.* for the lease, &c. . . . I shall be here at 11 to 11.30 to-morrow morning to sign contract." A. did not reach B.'s office until 12 o'clock. B. had waited for him until 11.45, and then sold the property to a third party:—Held, that the letters contained a binding contract, and specific performance was enforced against the vendor. Branson v. Stammers, 28 W. R. 180.

Assent to Contract by filing Bill.]—Filing a bill, held to be sufficient evidence of plaintiff's assent to an agreement of which the bill seeks to enforce specific performance. Agar v. Biden, 2 L. J., Ch. 3.

And see ADMISSION BY ANSWER, infra, col. 1144.

b. Subject to Approval of Title.

Whether a new Term.]—A. made a written offer to B. to sell him property at a certain price, and B. wrote in reply, and accepted the offer, "subject to the title being approved by our solicitors":—Held, that the words "subject to the title being approved by our solicitors" was a new term introduced by B., which, not having been acceded to by A., there was no concluded contract. Hussey v. Horne-Payne, 48 L. J., Ch. 846; 5 App. Cas. 311; 47 L. T. 1; 27 W. R. 585—H. L. (E.)

Per the Lord Chancellor:—Quære, whether the addition, in a written document, of the words "subject to the title being approved by our solicitor," could affect a contract for the sale of land, otherwise complete in itself. Ib.

When Title not Approved of.]—A contract for the purchase of a lease stated that it was made "subject to the approval of the title by the purchaser's solicitor":—Held, that, in the absence of mala fides or unreasonableness, on the part of the purchaser or his solicitor, the vendor could not enforce specific performance if the purchaser's solicitor disapproved of the title. Hudson v. Buck, 47 L. J., Ch. 247; 7 Ch. D. 683; 38 L. T. 56; 26 W. R. 190.

—— Claim for Commission.]—Where under a similar contract the title was never submitted to the solicitor:—Held, that the plaintiff (who sued for commission on the sale) must prove that the solicitor approved the title, or else that such a title was submitted to him as it was unreasonable for him to disapprove. Clack v. Wood, 9 Q. B. D. 276; 47 L. T. 144; 30 W. R. 931—C. A.

c. Subject to Consent of Third Parties.

Consent to Building.]—A contract for the sale of land provided that one party was to be consulted on any houses proposed to be built thereon by the other, and in case of difference, that A. and B., or their nominees, should have power to decide any such question. There having been no decision:—Held, that the court could not specifically perform the contract. Tillett v. Charing Cross Bridge Co., 26 Beav. 419; 28 L. J., Ch. 863; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 994.

Consent given within reasonable Time.]—Where a contract is made which both parties to it know at the time cannot be carried out without the act or consent of a third party, and that act or consent is done or given by the third party within a reasonable time, and he does nothing inconsistent with such act or consent, want of mutuality at the time of contract is no bar to its performance. Blackburn Union v. Brooks, 26 W. R. 57.

iv. Reference to a Further or Formal Agreement.

Where only Preliminary Agreement.]—Specific performance of an agreement that appeared to be only a preliminary foundation for a future agreement refused. Robertson v. Londonderry (Marquis), 2 L. J., Ch. 137.

Intention of Parties.]—If contracting parties agree on terms of which there is sufficient evidence, but contemplate in addition a more formal document, it becomes a question of intention merely whether they intend it as a memorial of the terms already agreed on, or as the instrument by which alone they meant to be bound. If there is a paper signed by an agent duly authorised thereto, which, though agreeing to do something, leaves the subject-matter of the agreement unexplained, but refers to another paper which contains the full particulars of the explanation, the two may be connected together, so as to constitute a contract valid under the statute of frauds. Ridgway v. Wharton, 6 H. L. Cas. 238; 27 L. J., Ch. 46; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 173; 5 W. R. 804. Affirming 2 Eq. R. 839; 3 De G. M. & G. 677.

The contract so constituted by A.'s authorised agent will be binding on A., though the second paper may have been sent by the agent to A.'s solicitor to put it into form, provided that the agent and the person with whom he was dealing agreed that it should be sent for that purpose but not otherwise. The act of sending such a paper to a solicitor to have the matter reduced into form affords cogent evidence that the parties do not intend to bind themselves till it is reduced into form. Ib.

A builder sent in the plaintiff's agent a tender to execute works for a certain sum. The agent replied by letter accepting the tender, and adding, "The contract will be prepared by," etc.:—Held, that there was a contract binding upon the builder; the additional words merely suggesting a convenient mode of carrying out their intention. Lewis v. Brass, 26 W. R. 152.

Final Agreement arrived at.]—Where the parties have come to a final agreement, and one of the terms is that such agreement shall be embodied in a formal contract, the agreement may be enforced, even though such formal contract has not been executed. Rossiter v. Miller, 48 L. J., Ch. 10 ; 3 App. Cas. 1124 ; 39 L. T. 173 ; 26 W. R. 865—H. L. (E.)

When the cardinal points of a proposed contract are definitely agreed upon by letters, the mere fact that in the course of the correspondence reference has been made to a more formal agreement, or subsidiary non-essential stipulations, will not deter the court from considering the agreement arrived at by the letters as concluded. Cayley v. Walpole, 22 L. T. 900 ; 18 W. R. 782.

Appointment to draw Agreement.]—A party directed his agent to buy a lease of a house for 3,200*l.*, and sign an agreement. This agent wrote to the agent of the owner, offering 3,200*l.* The owner wrote across the last-mentioned letter, "I agree to sell my house upon these terms" ; and the agent of the owner wrote to the agent of the other party, "My employer will take your offer" ; and added, "Make an appointment to meet to draw the agreement" :—Held, that the letters constituted a contract to buy, and specific performance was decreed. Cowley v. Watts, 22 L. J., Ch. 591 ; 17 Jur. 172 ; 1 W. R. 218, 484.

Reference to Future Contract.]—The defendant placed a leasehold property in the hands of an agent for sale. The plaintiff wrote to the agent. "In reference to J.'s property, I think 800*l.* for the lease, fixtures, &c. is about what I should be willing to give. Possession to be given me within fourteen days from date. This offer is made subject to the conditions of the lease being modified to my solicitor's satisfaction." The agent wrote back, "We are instructed to accept your offer of 800*l.* for these premises, and have asked J.'s solicitor to prepare contract" :—Held, that, notwithstanding the reference to a future contract, the two letters constituted a complete contract. Bonnewell v. Jenkins, 47 L. J., Ch. 758 ; 8 Ch. D. 70 ; 38 L. T. 81 ; 26 W. R. 294.

When an offer in writing is accepted in writing, the mere reference in the document accepting the offer to the preparation of a more formal contract does not amount to the introduction of a new term. Ib.

Letters may be sufficient to constitute a binding contract, though they refer to the intended execution of a more formal instrument. Thomas v. Dering, 1 Keen. 729 ; 6 L. J., Ch. 267 ; 1 Jur. 427.

M. offered by letter to give C. 15,000*l.* for the next presentation afterwards to the living of B. C. replied by letter, saying that he accepted the proposal : "An article, as is usual in such cases, to be drawn up between us to the above effect, in which I will undertake to make out a good title to the satisfaction of any counsel you may appoint ; this preliminary matter, however, cannot be arranged till A., my solicitor, returns to town" :—Held, that the contract, was final and complete, the thing to be bought and the sum to be given, being distinctly stated in the proposal, and explicitly accepted in the answer thereto. Dowling v. Maguire, Ll. & G. Plunk. 1.

Solicitor to Prepare Contract.]—Agreement in writing for sale of estate, binding, though signed only by vendor, and followed by direction to attorney to prepare proper agreement for both parties to sign. Fowle v. Freeman, 9 Ves. 351.

Solicitor to Approve Formal Contract.]—No action lies upon an agreement to buy a lease, and sign a "formal contract" when approved by the purchaser's solicitor, in the event of such solicitor not approving of it, unless the approval is withheld malâ fide or unreasonably. Bartlett v. Greene, 30 L. T. 553.

And see Hudson v. Buck, supra, col. 1115.

Condition as to Corrected Agreement.]—The plaintiff wishing to sell a medical practice, with the lease of the house where it was carried on, placed it on the books of a medical agent. The premiums asked for the practice and for the lease were stated in a letter from the agent to the defendant, but no time for completing was mentioned. The defendant replied to the agent accepting the terms offered, and adding that he should be ready to pay the deposit money "on receipt of corrected agreement." A formal agreement was drawn up, but never signed :—Held, that inasmuch as the time for the commencement of the purchase was left uncertain, and the stipulation as to the three months' introduction was not agreed to, and as the parties contemplated a formal agreement, there was no binding contract between the parties. May v. Thomson, 51 L. J., Ch. 917 ; 20 Ch. D. 705 ; 47 L. T. 295.

Terms to be Settled by a Formal Contract.]—Plaintiff was the lessee of vaults under a lease. The defendant company entered into a negotiation for the purchase of the lease. The secretary of the company wrote to the agents for the plaintiff a letter in which he said that the directors thereby offered to purchase the vaults for 2,500*l.* cash, and to take over a mortgage for 3,500*l.* on the lease, these terms to include the lease, goodwill, fixtures, &c. The house agents answered as follows : "In reply to your letter of the 7th inst. we are now instructed to accept the offer therein contained, and will forward contract as soon as we obtain it from the solicitor" :—Held, that no binding contract had been entered into, because the letters mentioned only what was the property to be purchased and the price to be given for it, but left the other necessary terms of the agreement, such as the time when possession was to be given, to be settled by a formal contract to be prepared by a solicitor in the ordinary way. Donnison v. People's Cafe Co., 45 L. T. 187.

A memorandum that A. had paid to B. 50*l.* as a deposit, in part payment, of 1,000*l.* for the purchase of a house, the terms to be expressed in an agreement to be signed as soon as prepared :—Held, not a sufficient agreement in writing. Wood v. Midgley, 5 De G. M. & G. 41 ; 2 Eq. R. 729 ; 23 L. J., Ch. 553 ; 2 W. R. 301.

Special Conditions of Sale.]—Where the vendors of land, in a letter acknowledging the receipt of an offer by intending purchasers, wrote as follows :—"Which offer we accept, and now hand you two copies of conditions of sale," and therewith inclosed a formal agreement with conditions of a special character :—Held, that the acceptance was only conditional, and that there was no final agreement of which specific performance could be enforced as against the purchasers. Crossley

v. Maycock, 43 L. J., Ch. 379; L. R. 18 Eq. 180; 22 W. R. 387.

Draft Contract to be Prepared.]—A. wrote "to confirm" a previous verbal offer of 6,000*l.* for property. B. accepted the offer in writing, coupled with the words, "I will send draft contract in due course":—Held, there was no contract contained in the writings. Vale of Neath Colliery Co. v. Furness, 45 L. J., Ch. 276; 34 L. T. 231; 24 W. R. 631.

A. instructed her solicitors to sell a house, subject to stipulations, for a fixed sum; and an intending purchaser agreed to give the sum. The solicitors of the vendor wrote to the purchaser to say that they had "been instructed to proceed with the sale to you of these premises. The draft contract is being prepared, and will be forwarded to you for approval in a few days":—Held, that this acceptance was conditional upon the terms of the draft contract being agreed to. Chinnock v. Ely (Marchioness), 4 De G. J. & S. 638; 6 N. R. 1; 11 Jur. (N.S.) 329; 12 L. T. 251; 13 W. R. 597.

Acceptance Subsequently Qualified.]—A vendor and purchaser had agreed by parol upon the sale of a house at a specified price. The purchaser, by arrangement, wrote a letter to the vendor confirming his offer, repeating the terms, and requesting a reply. The vendor's solicitor replied, stating that he was instructed to carry out the sale of the house according to the purchaser's letter, but adding, "There are some details to be embodied in a contract of sale which I will prepare and forward for your approval and signature":—Held, that the latter words as to details to be embodied qualified the otherwise unconditional acceptance of the offer in the purchaser's letter. Ball v. Bridges, 30 L. T. 430; 22 W. R. 552.

Acceptance subject to further Contract.]—In reply to a telegram offering 1,200*l.* for lands, with respect to which negotiations for a sale had been pending, the vendor telegraphed: "Accept your offer of 1,200*l.*, subject to letter, and agreement to be sent to your solicitor." A draft contract of sale was subsequently furnished to the purchaser's solicitor:—Held, that the vendor's acceptance being expressly made subject to a further agreement, did not amount to a concluded contract. Brien v. Swainson, 1 L. R., Ir. 135.

Where a person proposing to sell an estate receives an offer, and his agent answers, "he has authorised us to accept the offer, subject to the terms of a contract being arranged between his solicitor and yourself," the answer does not constitute a complete contract, and the vendor is at liberty to add other terms, and on their non-acceptance, to break off the treaty. Honeyman v. Marryat, 6 H. L. Cas. 112; 26 L. J., Ch. 619; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 17. Affirming 21 Beav. 14; 3 W. R. 502.

Specific performance of an agreement "subject to a contract to be settled," or "subject to a proper contract," will not be enforced. Harvey v. Barnard's Inn (Principal), 50 L. J., Ch. 750; 45 L. T. 280; 29 W. R. 922.

Option to purchase.]—A testator gave to each of his sons an option to purchase an estate, and required a formal agreement to be executed within two months from receiving the offer to purchase. A. accepted by letter within the two months, and offered to execute a formal agreement:—Held, that the letter was such a contract as would be enforced in equity even if the formal agreement was not executed in time. Austin v. Tunney, 15 W. R. 1.

And see Cases in next Section.

b. Interconnected Documents.

Contract in Correspondence.]—Where court has to find a contract in a correspondence, and not in one particular note or memorandum formally signed, the whole of that which has passed between the parties must be taken into consideration. Hussey v. Horne-Payne, 48 L. J., Ch. 846; 4 App. Cas. 311; 45 L. T. 1; 27 W. R. 585—H. L. (E.)

Previous Parol Contract.]—A note or memorandum in writing, made subsequently to, but evidencing a previous parol contract, is sufficient, within s. 4 of the Statute of Frauds (29 Car. 2, c. 3). Bradford v. Boulston, 8 Ir. Ch. R. 468.

Acceptance long after Offer.]—A written notice, signed, referring to a written proposal not signed, and made several years before, may be so connected with it as to render the two documents a contract within the statute of frauds sufficiently signed. Lowry v. Dufferin, 1 Ir. Eq. R. 218.

Reference to Agreement.]—An agreement having been made and reduced into writing, but not signed, and letters having passed between the parties referring to the agreement in which the defendant had said, "his word should be as good as any security he could give," this takes it out of the statute of frauds, and he shall be compelled to perform the agreement. Tawney v. Crowther, 3 Bro. C. C. 318. See this case, Id. 161.

What evidence admissible.]—When a memorandum in writing, signed by the parties to be charged, refers to another document in writing it may be proved by parol evidence that a certain document is the one referred to. Morris v. Wilson, 6 Jur. (N.S.) 168.

A paper was signed by a duly authorised agent; it contained an agreement to do a certain thing, but not any explanation of the necessary details; but it referred to another paper, which did contain them:—Held, that the two might be connected together, by parol evidence, so as to constitute an agreement sufficient within the statute of frauds. Ridgway v. Wharton, 6 H. L. Cas. 238; 27 L. J., Ch. 46; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 173; 5 W. R. 804. Affirming 3 De G. M. & G. 677; 2 Eq. R. 839.

A., by advertisement, offers land to be let for three lives, or thirty-one years; and an agreement is executed between B. and the agent of A., authorised to contract for him, for a lease of the lands, in which agreement the term for which the lease is to be made is not mentioned. There being no reference in the agreement to the advertisement, parol evidence cannot be received to connect the one with the other, so as to ascertain the term. Clinan v. Cooke, 1 Sch. & Lef. 22.

If one written instrument refers to another written instrument, parol evidence may be admitted to show what was the thing so referred to. Id. 33.

Plaintiff and defendant being in treaty for the sale of lands of the defendant, the latter made an offer in writing that plaintiff should pay off an incumbrance on the lands, and that thereupon the deeds should be lodged with the plaintiff, who should be let into possession on paying balance of purchase-money to defendant. This offer was declined. Soon after the parties met and for the first time agreed on the amount of the purchase-money. Defendant then handed to plaintiff a writing signed by defendant specifying the denominations and quantities of the premises, the price and deposit, but with no mention of the plaintiff's name, or of an expression of intention to sell. No deposit was paid. Defendant afterwards consulted plaintiff by letter as to letting the land :—Held, that the writing of the defendant did not alone, or in connection with the previous and subsequent correspondence, constitute a sufficient memorandum in writing within the statute. Skelton v. Cole, 1 De G. & J. 587.

E. P. W. made a parol agreement to sell her share in certain leasehold property to J., at 200*l*. The only evidence in writing of the terms of the contract consisted of a receipt as follows, "September 22nd, 1882.—Received of J., one pound of my share in the B. property, the sum of 200*l*.—(Signed) E P. W.," and a letter dated the 19th March, 1893, the material part being :—"Mr. J. Sir, If the balance of 199*l*. on account of the purchase of my share of the property be not paid on or before the 22nd inst., I shall consider the agreement (made September 22nd, 1882) not any longer binding" :—Held, first, that the documents being connected constituted a sufficient note or memorandum in writing; and, secondly, assuming that there was no reference in one document to connect it with the other, the terms contained in the parol contract being the same as the terms contained in the two documents, there was a sufficient note or memorandum in writing to satisfy the statute of frauds. Studds v. Watson, 33 W. R. 118.

Letter Referring to Draft Conveyance.]—The memorandum or note of an agreement required by the 4th section of the statute of frauds must be a memorandum complete at the time it is made. Mundy v. Asprey, 49 L. J., Ch. 216; 13 Ch. D., 855; 28 W. R. 347.

A letter from an alleged purchaser inclosing and referring to a draft conveyance in which it was recited that he had agreed to purchase land :—Held, not to be a memorandum of a completed agreement. Ib.

Letter Referring to Memorandum.]—A letter signed by the purchaser, not containing the terms of the contract, but, on a fair view of the evidence, referring (though not in terms) to a memorandum containing them :—Held, sufficient within the statute of frauds. Morgan v. Holford, 1 Sm. & G. 101; 17 Jur. 225; 1 W. R. 101.

Receipt Referring to Conditions of Sale.]—The plaintiff claimed specific performance of a contract to purchase a house and premises sold by auction. After the sale the auctioneer signed the following memorandum at the foot of the conditions : "The property duly sold to A. S., butcher, Pinxton, and deposit paid at close of sale," and he also signed this receipt : "Pinxton, March 29th, 1880. Received of A. S., the sum of 21*l*. as deposit on property purchased at 420*l*. at Sun Inn, Pinxton, on the above date. Mr. G. C., owner" :—Held, that the word "purchased" was enough to connect the receipt with the conditions of sale, and that the description in the receipt and conditions was sufficient to satisfy the statute of frauds. Shardlow v. Cotterell, 51 L. J., Ch. 353; 20 Ch. D. 99; 45 L. T. 572; 30 W. R. 143.

Letter to Solicitor to Prepare Conveyance.]—A letter to a solicitor, with directions for preparing the conveyance of a purchase described generally as the land bought of A., not specifying the term, is not sufficient evidence of a contract within the statute of frauds. Rose v. Cunningham, 11 Ves. 550.

Where Documents Suppressed.]—Whether letters referring to other letters which have been suppressed, but not containing in themselves certain terms of agreement, can be made the foundation of a specific performance, quære. Collett v. Butler, 3 Swanst. 402.

A.'s agent wrote to B., "I am directed to offer you for the premises 3,000*l*." B. replied, "We accept your offer. If you approve of the enclosed, sign the same, and we will, on the receipt of the deposit, sign you a copy." B. filed a bill for specific performance, and A. did not produce the enclosure :—Held, that the two letters constituted a valid contract, intended to be carried into effect by the enclosure; and that, though it did not appear that the inclosure had been approved of, still that this did not affect the prior valid contract. Gibbins v. North Eastern Metropolitan Asylum District Board, 11 Beav. 1; 17 L. J., Ch. 5; 12 Jur. 22.

And see Cases under preceding section.

c. Vagueness and Uncertainty.

Rule in Equity.]—Specific performance decreed of an agreement, though an uncertain one. Allen v. Harding, 2 Eq. Ca. Abr. 17.

Equity will not decree a specific execution upon a contract, the terms of which are uncertain as to its extent. Harnett v. Yielding, 2 Sch. & Lef. 549.

If there be uncertainty as to the terms of an agreement, it cannot be carried into execution, even though reduced to writing. Lindsey v. Lynch, 2 Sch. & Lef. 7.

When part of an agreement is to do certain acts upon certain contingencies, equity will not decree a specific performance. Gervais v. Edwards, 2 Dr. & War. 80; 1 Con. & L. 242; 4 Ir. Eq. R. 555.

Ambiguous Contract.]—Specific performance refused from ambiguity of contract. Purchaser having insisted on one construction of contract, not permitted to compel vendor to convey upon the terms that vendor originally offered. Clowes v. Higginson, 1 V. & B. 524.

A. contracts with B. to sell a manor described as "The Manor of S., an extensive parish with the right of free warren, &c., sporting over about 3,000 acres, embracing nearly the whole parish of S. At the date of the contract it was supposed that the manor was co-extensive with the parish of S. A. subsequently discovered that the manor extended beyond the limits of the parish and included valuable land without the parish. Upon a bill filed by B. for specific performance of the contract, as including the whole manor:—Held, that the terms of the contract were ambiguous; and both parties at the date of the contract being in error as to what was included therein, the court would not compel the performance of it so as to include property not intended to be sold by the vendor. Baxendale v. Seale, 24 L. J., Ch. 385; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 581.

Where Purpose Specified—Making Road.]—An agreement to give so much of a thing as may be necessary for a specified purpose confers a right of a nature known to the law, and is not open to the objection of uncertainty. Upon an agreement to give so much of a specified piece of land as may be necessary for a specified purpose, when the quantity has been determined the right of selecting the position of the piece to be given belongs to the promisee. If the promisor, however, had any objection to the promisee's selection, and made a reasonable offer in lieu thereof, the court might listen to it. But it is not reasonable to wish to interpose a road between a burial ground and the church to which it is to belong. Rumble v. Heygate, 18 W. R. 749.

—— Making Railway.]—Contract for the sale of an estate, vendor reserving "the necessary land for making a railway" through the estate to P.:—Held, that the reservation was void for uncertainty and that the contract could not be enforced. Pearce v. Watts, 44 L. J., Ch., 492; L. R. 20 Eq. 492; 23 W. R. 771.

—— Making Footpath.]—Land was sold to B., consisting of a circular plot, surrounded by a ring called the Drive. It was stipulated (inter alia) that a footpath of the width of fifteen feet should be laid out round the whole of the northern, southern, and western boundaries of the said land. The Drive belonged to B.; the part outside had originally been his, but had been sold by him:—Held, that the condition about the footpath was too vague to be enforced. Taylor v. Gilbertson, 2 Drew. 391.

Freeholds and Leaseholds—Boundaries not Defined.]—In a contract for sale, lands were described as partly freehold and partly leasehold. The title-deeds did not clearly define the boundaries and extent of the two properties:—Held, that such an uncertainty was not an objection to a decree for specific performance. Monro v. Taylor, 8 Hare, 51. Affirmed, 3 Mac. & G. 713; 21 L. J., Ch. 525.

Commencement of Title.]—An agreement for the sale of lands, which shows on the face of it that the parties are not agreed as to the terms of the contract between them, and as to the commencement of the title, does not express the intention of the parties with such certainty that a court of equity will enforce performance of it. Rummens v. Robins, 3 De G. J. & S. 88; 11 Jur. (N.S.) 631; 14 L. T. 717; 13 W. R. 979.

Date not Specified.]—Semble, that where a date has not been specified in the agreement, although intended to be so, as that at which an important obligation is to arise, this would of itself be, on the ground of uncertainty, an adequate reason for not enforcing the contract. Fitzpatrick v. Nolan, 1 Ir. Ch. R. 671.

Information as to Title Required.]—After negotiations for the purchase of tithes, in which the terms were discussed, but not finally settled, the vendor wrote to his solicitor a letter, which contained the following passage:—"Previously to paying the amount" (then followed the illegible word) "for tithes, glebe, &c., it would be advisable to have information as to title," &c.:—Held, that this letter did not amount to a note or memorandum in writing within the statute of frauds. Savile v. Kinnaird, 11 Jur. (N.S.) 195.

Royalty on Minerals if found.]—A. agreed to sell to B. a house and land, with a clause that in the event of there being any coals or iron stone under the land, a royalty of so much per ton was to be paid thereon; and that any mines required to be left by a certain railway company were to be paid for the same as if gotten, out of the money received for them from the railway company. The court refused to enforce specific performance of this agreement. Williamson v. Wootton, 3 Drew. 210.

Covenant for Pre-emption—Subsequent Devise.]—A., on the marriage of his daughter to B., covenants that B. shall have his land called C. for 1,500*l.* less than any other, and afterwards devises the premises over, and dies. The court refused specific performance by reason of uncertainty and want of mutuality of it. Bromley v. Jefferies, 2 Vern. 415; Pre. Ch. 138.

Price not fixed.]—A. agreed to sell an estate to B. for 3,000*l.*, "and the further sum of 20*l.* per cent. on any sum the property might realise above that sum at the sale by auction advertised to take place" the next day:—Held, that the contract was sufficiently certain to be enforced. Langstaff v. Nicholson, 25 Beav. 160.

Whether Purchase or Lease.]—Where an agreement is in its terms so uncertain as to raise a doubt as to its true effect, whether to be considered as a purchase of premises or a lease, a demurrer will lie to a bill for a specific performance of it. Dolling v. Evans, 36 L. J., Ch. 474; 15 L. T. 604; 15 W. R. 394.

Lease—Term not Fixed.]—An agreement for the purchase of a lease which does not mention the length of the term granted by the lease is void for uncertainty. Southern v. Harriman, 14 W. R. 487.

—— No Time fixed for Completion.]—The plaintiff wishing to sell a medical practice, with the lease of the house where it was carried on, placed it on the books of an agent. The premiums asked for the practice and for the lease were stated in a letter from the agent to the defendant, but no time for completing was mentioned. The defendant replied in a letter to the agent accepting the terms, and adding that he should be ready to pay the deposit money on receipt of corrected agreement. A formal agreement was drawn up, but never signed:—Held, that inasmuch as the time for the commencement of the purchase was left uncertain, and as the parties contemplated a formal agreement, there was no binding contract between the parties. May v. Thomson, 51 L. J., Ch. 917; 20 Ch. D. 705; 47 L. T. 295.

Pass over Railway.]—S., carrying on business in the vicinity of the defendants' railway, signed an agreement, whereby, in consideration of receiving from the defendants yearly, so long as he should carry on business, a free pass over their line, he promised, so long as the scale of charges of the defendants and of a canal company bore the same proportion to each other which they then did, to have his corn carried by the defendants in preference to the said canal company. Subsequently he made a money payment, by way of nominal consideration, for the said pass, which the defendants ultimately refused to renew:—Held, that the agreement was unilateral in its nature and uncertain in its terms, and could not be specifically enforced. Sturge v. Midland Ry., 4 Jur. (N.S.) 273; 6 W. R. 233.

Agreements as to Future Inventions.]—Specific performance of an agreement between four persons, regulating the right to all their future inventions, refused on the ground (inter alia) that it was too vague and uncertain as to its duration. Firth v. Ridley, 33 Beav. 516.

Concession to make Telegraphs.]—The plaintiffs alleged that a concession to take telegraph wires across the A. Islands, which was granted to W. by the P. government in 1857, was sold by him to them; but that no time for the completion of the agreement was fixed. They also alleged that, in 1860, an intending company obtained a concession from the F. government to carry telegraph wires across territory between Spain, Portugal, and France and America; and that, in 1864, it was agreed between the plaintiff and the company, "that the plaintiff should sell to the intending company all his right and title to the P. concession for 80,000*l.* Demurrer allowed, on the ground of vagueness in the terms of the agreements of 1857 and 1864. European and American Submarine Telegraph Co. v. Elliot, 12 L. T. 416.

Compromise of Litigation.]—Litigation was carried on between the plaintiff and his two sons and the defendant in this country and in Peru. An agreement was afterwards signed in England between the plaintiff and the defendant, whereby it was agreed that a patent standing in the name of the plaintiff should be held for their mutual benefit, the defendant to pay 100*l.* towards the expenses of taking out the patent. The plaintiff agreed to "raise" all proceedings here and in Peru by the plaintiff and his sons, each party paying his own costs, "it being agreed that all claims between the defendant and the plaintiff and his sons are settled up to this date:—Held, that the agreement was such an one as the court would decree the performance of; and that it was not bad for uncertainty, nor for want of mutuality. Marsh v. Milligan, 3 Jur. (N.S.) 979.

And see COMPLETENESS OF TERMS OF CONTRACT. Infra, col. 1141.

d. Statute of Frauds.

And see CONTRACT, A. 2.

i.—Interests in Land.

Rents—Abatement.]—Agreement for an abatement of rent of lands is within the statute of frauds. O'Connor v. Spaight, 1 Sch. & Lef. 306.

—— Loan to be Paid Out of.]—A. in July borrowed 200*l.* from his bankers upon a verbal agreement that the loan should be repaid out of the rent of a farm which would become due at Michaelmas. The money was advanced and the customer gave a letter addressed to the tenant of the farm, by which he authorised and requested the tenant, when his Michaelmas rent became due, to pay 200*l.* to the bankers. The bankers sent the letter to the tenant. The customer was adjudicated a bankrupt in August:—Held, that as the rent was an interest in land, the agreement was one which, by virtue of s. 4 of the statute of frauds, could not be proved by parol evidence, and that therefore the letter could alone be looked at. Hall, Ex parte, Whitting, In re, 48 L. J., Bk. 79; 10 Ch. D. 615; 40 L. T. 179; 27 W. R. 385—C. A.

—— Advowsons.]—Advowsons are rents within the statute of frauds, but an annuity in fee not a personal inheritance. Stafford (Earl) v. Buckley, 2 Ves. Sen. 177.

Where Contract Executed.]—An agreement between the plaintiff and the defendant, that if the plaintiff would surrender her tenancy, and prevail on her landlord to accept the defendant as tenant in her place, the defendant would pay the plaintiff 100*l.* as soon as he should become tenant, is a contract relating to an interest in land, and cannot be enforced unless in writing, even where the contract is executed. Cocking v. Ward, 1 C. B. 858; 15 L. J., C. P. 245.

But after the contract has been executed, a parol admission by the defendant that he owes the 100*l.* to the plaintiff is evidence of money due on an account stated. Ib.

A tenant having agreed with his landlady that if she would accept another for her tenant in his place, he would pay her 40*l.* out of 100*l.*, which he was to receive for the goodwill, if her consent was obtained:—Held, that having received the 100*l.*, he was liable to the landlady for money had and received for her use, the consideration being executed, and therefore the case was taken out of the statute, as a contract for an interest land. Griffith v. Young, 12 East, 513.

The plaintiff and the defendant agreed by word of mouth that the plaintiff should pay 37*l.* for the interest of the defendant in a slaughter-house, and for the fixtures; the defendant to return 10*l.* if the plaintiff was refused a licence to use the premises as a slaughter-house. The premises and fixtures were transferred to the plaintiff and the defendant received the 37*l.* Subsequently an action was brought to recover 10*l.* on an allegation that the licence to use the premises had been refused:—Held, that the contract being executed as far as regarded the land, and the promise sued on relating wholly to money, the plaintiff might recover, though the contract was not in writing. Green v. Saddington, 7 El. & Bl. 503; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 717; 5 W.R. 593.

A verbal agreement was made between the plaintiff and defendant, that, in consideration of the plaintiff giving up to the defendant immediate possession of a house which the plaintiff held under a seven years' lease, the defendant would pay the plaintiff 100*l.* The plaintiff gave up possession to the defendant, who came in, and paid to the plaintiff a portion of the 100*l.* The plaintiff brought an action to recover the balance:—Held, that this was a contract concerning an interest in land, and that, as it was not in writing, the statute of frauds prevented any action being maintainable upon it, though it been so far performed. Kelly v. Webster, 12 C. B. 283; 21 L. J., C. P. 163; 16 Jur. 838.

Agreement as to Improvements.]—An agreement whereby the landlord lays out money in repairs and the tenant agrees to pay an increased rent is not a contract for an interest in land. Donnellan v. Read, 3 B. & Ad. 899; 1 L. J., K. B. 269.

Vendor's Lien.]—The benefit of the vendor's lien for purchase money unpaid may be assigned by parol to a third party, semble. Dryden v. Frost, 3 Myl. & Cr. 670; 8 L. J., Ch. 235; 2 Jur. 1030.

—— Premium on Lease.]—A premium on a lease is in the nature of purchase money, for which, when unpaid, there is a lien on the land, and consequently unpaid premium is an interest on land within 9 Geo. 2, c. 36, s. 3. Shepheard v. Beetham, 46 L. J., Ch. 763; 6 Ch. D. 597; 36 L. T. 909; 25 W. R. 764.

Agreement for Foreclosure and Sale.]— Bill to carry into execution a parol agreement between solicitors, that there should be a decree of foreclosure, that the estate should be sold, the mortgagee paid her principal and interest, and the remainder to the mortgagor, dismissed as within the statute of frauds. Cox v. Peele, 2 Bro. C. C. 334.

Award—Lease.]—In the course of the proceeding before an arbitrator, the parties agreed by parol that the arbitrator shall determine as to a lease to be granted. Such an agreement is within the statute of frauds, and the award cannot be enforced. Walters v. Morgan, 2 Cox, 369.

Agreement to share Purchase.]—If two neighbours agree that one should take a lease of houses for the benefit of both, the other shall have the benefit, though the agreement is not in writing. Atkins v Rowe, Moseley, 39.

A. and B. being severally in treaty for a purchase of a house and land, agreed by parol that A. shall desist, and that B. shall purchase, and let A. have part of the ground at a reasonable price. B. purchases, and refuses to perform the agreement. This being a parol agreement, is within the statute of frauds. Lamas v. Bayly, 2 Vern. 627.

Declaration of Trust.]—A. verbably agreed to bid for B. at an auction of a house; the house was bought and a deposit paid by A. In an action by B. against A. to have it declared that A. was his agent and trustee:—Held, that although under s. 4 of the statute of frauds an agency might be established by parol, s. 7 applied, by which all declarations of trusts of lands, tenements, &c., must be proved by some writing. James v. Smith, [1891] 1 Ch. 384; 63 L. T. 524; 39 W. R. 396. Affirmed, on other grounds, 65 L. T. 544—C.A.

Agreement to charge Lands—Deposit of Title-deeds.]—An agreement to charge hereditaments with the value of property which has been lost through the wrongful act of a third person must be in writing, as being within the 4th section of the statute of frauds; but it may be taken out of the statute by a deposit of title-deeds. Whitmore v. Farley, 45 L. T. 99; 29 W. R. 825; 14 Cox, C. C. 617.

And see Mounsey v. Rawkin, infra.

Growing Crops.]—A contract for the sale of a growing crop of lands is within s. 4. Carrington v. Roots, 2 M. & W. 248; 1 M. & H. 14; 6 L. J., Ex. 95.

The keep, viz. growing grass of fields, is an interest to land. Shelton v. Livius, 2 Tyrw. 420; 2 C. & J. 411; 1 L. J., Ex. 139.

A contract with the owner of a close for the purchase of a growing crop of grass there, for the purpose of being mown and made into hay by the vendee, is a contract of an interest in or concerning land, and void if not reduced to writing. Crosby v. Wadsworth, 6 East, 602; 2 Smith, 559.

A verbal agreement for the sale of the then-growing crop of potatoes, is not an interest in or concerning them, within s. 4, but a sale of goods within s. 17. Evans v. Roberts, 5 B. & C. 829; 8 D. & R. 611; 4 L. J. (o.s.) K. B. 313.

A contract to sell to the defendant the potatoes at so much per sack, the defendant to get them out of the ground immediately, is not a contract for any interest in land, but the same as if the potatoes, which had done growing and were to be taken up immediately, had been sold in a warehouse. Parker v. Staniland, 11 East, 362. S. P. Warwick v. Bruce, 2 M. & S. 205. Sainsbury v. Matthews, 4 M. & W. 343; 7 D. P. C. 23; 8 L. J., Ex. 1.

A contract, by which the defendant was to give 25*l.* for crops of growing corn and potatoes, and the stubble afterwards, and whatever lay grass was in the fields; the defendant to harvest the corn and dig the potatoes, and the plaintiff to have the liberty of turning his own cattle on, and to pay the tithes—is not a contract for the sale of an interest in land; for the growing crops are mere chattels; and, with regard to the grass, as the plaintiff did not part with his possession of the soil, the contract was to be construed as an agistment of the defendant's cattle by the plaintiff. Jones v. Flint, 2 P. & D. 594; 10 A. & E. 753; 9 L. J., Q. B. 252.

A sale of growing turnips, no time being stipulated for the removal, and the degree of their maturity not being positively found, is a sale of an interest in land, and must be in writing. Emmerson v. Heelis, 2 Taunt. 38. And see Mayfield v. Wadsley, 3 B. & C. 357; 5 D. & R. 224; 3 L. J. (o.s.) K. B. 31.

An agreement for the sale of growing fruit and vegetables is an agreement for the sale of an interest in land. Rodwell v. Phillips, 9 M. & W. 501; 1 D. (N.S.) 885; 11 L. J., Ex. 217.

—— Paid as Rent.]—A. agreed with B. to let him land rent-free, on condition that A. should have the moiety of the crops; such an agreement need not be in writing. Poulter v. Killingbreck, 1 Bos. & P. 397. See Waddington v. Bristow, 2 Bos. & P. 452.

Agreement for Sale of Crops and Work and Labour.]—In an action upon an account stated, the defendant pleaded a verbal agreement for the sale of the crops growing upon the plaintiff's land, and for work, labour, and materials done and used in preparing the land for tillage; and that there was a treaty for the plaintiff's letting and the defendant's taking the land for fourteen years, to which the defendant assented, and that the money to be paid for the crops, and the work, labour, and materials, was the money concerning which the account was stated; and that there was no agreement in writing or any note thereof:—Held, that the contract, as appearing on the pleadings, was within the statute of frauds, and that the plaintiff could not recover. Falmouth (Earl) v. Thomas, 1 C. & M. 89; 3 Tyrw. 26; 2 L. J., Ex. 57.

Growing Wood.]—The sale of growing underwood, to be cut by the purchaser, confers an interest in land under the statute. Scorell v. Boxall, 1 Y. & J. 396.

A., being owner of trees growing upon his land, verbally agreed with B., while they were standing, to sell him the timber at so much per foot:—Held, that the contract was not a contract for the sale of an interest in land. Smith v. Surman, 4 Man. & Ry. 455; 9 B. & C. 561; 7 L. J. (o.s.) K. B. 296.

A sale of growing timber, to be taken away as soon as possible by the purchaser, is not a contract for sale of land, or any interest therein, within s. 4 of the statute of frauds. Marshall v. Green, 45 L. J., C. P. 153; 1 C. P. D. 35; 33 L. T. 404; 24 W. R. 175.

Right of Shooting—Taking away Game.]—A grant of a right to shoot and take away a part of the game killed is a grant of an interest in land and within the statute of frauds. Webber v. Lee, 51 L. J., Q. B. 485; 9 Q. B. D. 315; 47 L. T. 215; 30 W. R. 866; 47 J. P. 4—C. A.

Fixtures.]—Before the expiration of a lease the landlord agreed with the tenant to purchase his fixtures at a valuation. The lease expired, and the tenant having quitted, the broker appointed by the landlord appraised the fixtures at more than 10*l.*, and signed the valuation:—Held, that the plaintiff having, at the defendant's request, waived his right to remove the fixtures, the matter bargained for was not an interest in land, and that the amount ascertained by the broker might be recovered in an action for fixtures and effects bargained and sold. Hallen v. Runder, 3 Tyrw. 959; 1 C. M. & R. 266.

Tenant's fixtures of over 10*l.* in value having been sold by the tenant's trustee in bankruptcy to the plaintiff, and resold by him to the defendant, who was the landlord of the premises:—Held, that no memorandum of this latter sale was necessary under the statute of frauds, it being neither a sale of an interest in land, under s. 4 of the statute of frauds, nor of goods and chattels, under s. 17. Lee v. Gaskell, 45 L. J., Q. B. 540; 1 Q. B. D. 700; 34 L. T. 759; 24 W. R. 824.

House and Furniture.]—The plaintiff agreed to let a house to the defendant, and to sell him the furniture and fixtures therein, and to make alterations; and the defendant agreed to take the house, and to pay for the furniture and fixtures and alterations:—Held, an agreement relating to an interest in land. Vaughan v. Hancock, 3 C. B. 766; 16 L. J., C. P. 1; 10 Jur. 926.

And where such an agreement was by parol:—Held, that it could not be severed so as to make the defendant liable to pay the plaintiff the amount expended in repairs. Ib.

In August D. became tenant to the plaintiff of a house and furniture, for six months from July preceding, under a written agreement. In September, it was, by a memorandum, agreed that the plaintiff had sold the house to D. the purchase money to be paid on the completion of a good title. In January the furniture was seized by the sheriff under a fi. fa. issued by the defendant against D. In February, D. sent to the plaintiff both agreements, and shortly after consented to rescind the contract of sale. The title to the premises was never completed, nor the purchase money paid:—Held, that the contract for the sale of the house and furniture was entire, and that the purchase of the former not having been completed, no property in the furniture passed to D. Lanyon v. Toogood, 13 M. & W. 27; 13 L. J., Ex. 273.

Machinery affixed.]—Machinery affixed to a building is land within the meaning of the statute of frauds. Jarvis v. Jarvis, 63 L. J., Ch. 10; 8 R. 361; 69 L. T. 412; 1 Manson, 199.

Sale of Greenhouse and Assignment of Lease.]—A., lessee for years of premises, under a lease bargained with B. to assign the lease to him, and to sell him a greenhouse which he had erected, and which was affixed to the freehold, together with the furniture, crops of fruit, and plants therein. B. was let into possession of the greenhouse and its contents, but no assignment was made to him:—Held, that the contract was an entire one for the assignment of the lease and the sale of the greenhouse, and that, until the lease was assigned, B. could not be sued by A. for the price of the greenhouse. Sleddon v. Cruikshank, 16 M. & W. 71; 16 L. J., Ex. 61.

Furnished Lodgings.]—A contract to let furnished lodgings is a contract for an interest in land. Edge v. Strafford, 1 C. & J. 391; 1 Tyrw. 293; 9 L. J. (o.s.) Ex. 101. S. P., Inman v. Stamp, 1 Stark. 12.

Board and Lodging.]—By a parol agreement between the plaintiff and the defendant, the defendant agreed to pay the plaintiff for the board and lodging of himself and man, and accommodation for his horse, the agreement to be terminable by a quarter's notice on either side:—Held, that the contract was not one for any interest in or concerning land. Wright v. Stavert, 2 El. & El. 721; 29 L. J., Q. B. 161; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 867; 2 L. T. 175; 8 W. R. 413.

Lessor to Furnish.]—A contract by which A. in consideration of B. hiring a house of him, agrees to send in proper and necessary furniture, is not divisible, and since it relates to an interest in land, must be in writing. Michelen v. Wallace, 2 N. & P. 224; 7 A. & E. 49; 6 L. J., K. B. 217.

Brickyard and Plant.]—By an agreement, not in writing, it was agreed that the plaintiff should take possession of a brickyard, which the defendant was occupying as tenant, and take the plant and bricks there at a valuation; and that the defendant should pay up all rent due, and endeavour to induce the landlord to accept the plaintiff as tenant. The plaintiff took possession but a distress was put in, and the plant and bricks sold for rent due from the defendant before the agreement; and the plaintiff was turned out of possession:—Held, that the contract and consideration were each single and entire; that the contract, taken in its entirety, was a contract for the sale of an interest in lands, and, not being in writing, was voidable, and that the plaintiff, therefore, could not sue upon that part which related to the payment of the rent. Hodgson v. Johnson, El. Bl. & El. 685; 28 L. J., Q. B. 88; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 290.

Materials of Building—Consideration for Surrender.]—A tenant from year to year of a plot of ground and a cottage agreed to surrender the premises in consideration of being permitted to pull down the cottage and hold the materials for his own use, or of being paid the value of the materials:—Held, that the agreement required to be in writing under the statute of frauds, although the interest in land moved, not to, but from, the tenant. Ronayne v. Sherrard, Ir. R. 11 C. L. 146.

Sale of Building Materials.]—A contract for the sale of building materials to be taken down and removed by the purchaser is a contract for the sale of an interest in land within s. 4 of the statute of frauds. Marshall v. Green, supra, discussed and distinguished on this point. Lavery v. Purssell, 57 L. J., Ch. 570; 39 Ch. D. 508; 58 L. T. 846; 37 W. R. 163.

To procure Assignment of Lease.]—A contract to procure for a person the assignment of a lease of a house is a contract of an interest in or concerning land within the statute of frauds, s. 4, and must therefore be in writing, although it is made by one who has not the lease himself, or any interest under it. Horsey v. Graham, 39 L. J., C. P. 58; L. R. 5 C. P. 9; 21 L. T. 530; 18 W. R. 141.

Sale of Oral Bargain.]—The plaintiff having orally bargained with E. for the sale of some houses, sold the bargain to the defendant for 40*l.*; and E., at the request of the defendant, conveyed the premises to P., who was not a trustee for the defendant; the court refused to enter a nonsuit, which was moved for on the ground that the oral bargain for the interest in the houses could never have been enforced, and therefore could not form the consideration of an assumpsit. Seaman v. Price, 2 Bing. 437; 1 Car. & P. 586; 10 Moore, 34.

To give up Possession.]—Where A., being possessed of a messuage and premises for the residue of a term of years, agreed with B. to relinquish possession to him, and to suffer him to become tenant for the residue of the term, in consideration of B.'s paying a sum of money towards completing certain repairs:—Held, an agreement relating to the sale of an interest in land. Buttermere v. Hayes, 5 M. & W. 456; 7 D. P. C. 489; 9 L. J., Ex. 44. And see Kelly v. Webster, supra, col. 1126.

Profits of Living.]—A clergyman entered into an agreement to permit the profits of his living to be received by a third person, for the surplus (after paying a stipend to a curate) being applied in liquidation of his debts:—Held, that such an agreement, signed by the creditors only, and not by the debtor, was a contract for an interest in or concerning lands, tenements, or hereditaments, within the statute. Alchin v. Hopkins, 4 M. & Sc., 615; 1 Bing. (N.C.) 99; 3 L. J., C. P. 272.

Partnership—Purchase of Lands.]—A partnership agreement between A. and B. that they shall be jointly interested in a speculation for buying, improving for sale, and selling lands, may be proved without being evidenced by any writing signed by, or by the authority of, the party to be charged therewith, within the statute of frauds. Dale v. Hamilton, 5 Hare, 369. On appeal, 2 Ph. 266; 16 L. J., Ch. 397; 11 Jur. 574.

Where a partner agrees to retire from a partnership, the assets of which include an interest in land, and it is an essential term of the agreement that the retiring partner shall assign his share in the assets, the contract is within s. 4 of the statute of frauds, and must be in writing. Gray v. Smith, 59 L. J., Ch. 145; 43 Ch. D. 208; 62 L. T. 335; 38 W. R. 310—C. A.

Contract for Purchase of Debentures—"Floating Security."]—The sale of debentures in a company that create a "floating charge" on its property consisting in part of leaseholds is a contract for the sale of an interest in land within s. 4 of the statute of frauds. Driver v. Broad, 63 L. J., Q. B. 12; [1893] 1 Q. B. 744; 4 R. 411; 69 L. T. 169; 41 W. R. 483—C. A.

Milk Business.]—A., a yearly tenant of premises, on which he carried on the business of a milkman, agreed with B. to sell such business, and to give up possession of the premises to B., who was to be allowed by A. to occupy the same:—Held, that the agreement related to an interest in land, and was therefore required to be in writing. Smart v. Harding, 15 C. B. 652; 3 C. L. R. 351; 24 L. J., C. P. 76; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 311; 3 W. R. 245.

Shares in Mine.]—A contract for the sale of shares in a mining company, conducted on the cost-book principle, is not a contract for the sale of land or an interest in land. Watson v. Spratley, 10 Ex. 222; 2 C. L. R., 1434; 24 L. J., Ex. 53; 2 W. R. 627. S. P., Powell v. Jessop, 18 C. B. 336; 25 L. J., C. P. 199; 4 W. R. 465; and Walker v. Bartlett, 18 C. B. 845; 25 L. J., C. P. 263; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 643; 4 W. R. 681—Ex. Ch.

An agreement to become partners in a colliery which was to be demised upon royalties, and the royalties to be divided in certain proportions, is an interest in land, and must be in writing, signed by the parties. Caddick v. Skidmore, 27 L. J., Ch. 153; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 1185; 6 W. R. 119—L. C.

C. and W. and M. were partners in working a colliery, of which they were the lessees under an agreement for a lease from the freeholder, and of which P. was the manager, at a weekly salary. Being in want of money, W., M. and P. borrowed of a bank, on their joint note, money to pay the colliers' wages, on which note P. was afterwards sued, and judgment obtained against him, and he was also summoned by the colliers for wages, which he was adjudged by the magistrates to pay. At a meeting subsequently held at which C., P., W. and M. were present, C. refused to join the company unless P. retired from all connection with it, when it was agreed, by all present, that 60*l.* should be paid to P. "for any interest he might have, and for his services rendered in working the colliery":—Held, that the interest of P. in the colliery was not an interest in or concerning land, and that therefore the agreement for a breach of which the claim was brought need not be in writing. Cheadle v. Proctor, 19 L. T. 289.

Railway Shares.]—By a railway act, it was declared that the shares in the undertaking, or the joint stock or funds of the company, should to all intents and purposes be deemed personal estate, and be transmissible as such, and should not be of the nature of real property:—Held, that the shares of individual proprietors were not an interest in land, and, therefore, might be sold by verbal contract. Beadley v. Holdsworth, 3 M. & W. 422.

Advance of Money on Security.]—An agreement to advance money on the security of land is an agreement which requires to be in writing by s. 4 of the statute of frauds. Mounsey v. Rankin, 1 Cab. & E. 496.

Use of Docks.]—A corporation, the owner of a graving-dock, issued regulations for its use, viz. that the dock would "be let to parties requiring the same for the repair of vessels," at certain rates; that a book would be kept for the entering of the names of vessels intended for repair, and that as far as practicable priority would be given to vessels in the order of entry. A sum of three guineas was to be paid on entering each vessel:—Held, that the contract for the use of the dock did not amount to an interest in land within the 4th section of the statute of frauds, and that it did not require to be under seal. Wells v. Kingston-upon-Hull Corporation, 44 L. J., C. P. 257; L. R. 10 C. P. 402; 32 L. T. 615; 23 W. R. 562.

Alteration by Parol Agreement.]—The plaintiffs agreed in writing with the defendant to let him a public-house from year to year, with an option for him to call on them to grant him a lease for twenty-eight years, and a stipulation that if he sold such lease for more than 1,200*l.* he should give the plaintiffs half the difference. The plaintiffs subsequently granted him a lease differing from that agreed to be granted in the following particulars.—It was for thirty-two years instead of twenty-eight. The rent was 105*l.* instead of 100*l.* The premium was 800*l.* instead of 1,200*l.* Some covenants burthensome on the defendant which had been agreed for were omitted. These alterations were arranged by parol only:—Held, that the effect of the alteration of the original terms agreed upon was that the old agreement was dissolved, and a new one made incorporating such parts of the old agreement as the parties did not choose to alter; and that as such new agreement related to land, and was not in writing it could not be enforced. Sanderson v. Graves, 44 L. J., Ex. 210; L. R. 10 Ex. 234; 33 L. T. 269; 23 W. R. 797.

Waiver.]—A. agreed to assign a lease to B., and to deliver possession by the 3rd May; and undertook that he had lawful right to assign. This contract was in writing. Neither party was ready to carry the agreement into effect on the 3rd May, and thereupon it was agreed by parol that another day should be substituted in its place:—Held, that this parol waiver was void, being in contravention of the statute of frauds. Stowell v. Robinson, 3 Bing. (N.C.) 928; 5 Scott, 196; 3 Hodges, 197; 6 L. J., C. P. 326.

An agreement to grant a lease of lands, that all straw, &c., on the lands on taking possession should be valued; that on execution of the lease a counterpart should be executed; and that either of the contracting parties making default in performance should forfeit 300*l.*, is an entire agreement relating to an interest in lands, and necessarily in writing, and a part of it cannot be verbally waived. Harvey v. Grabham, 5 A. & E. 61; 6 N. & M. 154; 2 H. & W. 146; 5 L. J., K. B. 235.

—— Title to Lots.]—A. contracted in writing to sell B. several lots of land, and to make a good title to them, and a deposit was paid. It was afterwards discovered that a good title could not be made to one of the lots, and it was then verbally agreed between the parties that the vendee should waive the title as to that lot:—Held, that oral testimony was not admissible to show the waiver of the vendee's right to a good title as to that lot, inasmuch as the effect of such waiver was to substitute a different contract for the one in writing. Goss v. Nugent (Lord), 5 B. & Ad. 58; 2 N. & M. 28; 2 L. J., K. B. 127.

Recited Agreement.]—In an action by vendee against vendor, he produced an agreement, made as follows: "H. having agreed to purchase of B. two leasehold houses, B. hereby agrees to paper, &c., H. to pay, &c., at the time of the conveyance," &c.:—Held, that the agreement to purchase though recited as an existing agreement, was to be considered as forming part of the agreement produced. Hall v. Betty, 4 Man. & G. 410; 5 Scott (N.R.) 508; 11 L. J., C. P. 256.

Breach—Promise to Pay Expenses.]—Where a plaintiff sued for breach of an agreement, which was void, being for an interest in land, and not being in writing:—Held, that he might recover on the count for an account stated, having proved a distinct promise of the defendant's to pay plaintiff the expenses he had been put to in consequence of the breach. Seago v. Deane, 4 Bing. 459; 1 M. & P. 227; 3 Car. & P. 170.

In an action to recover the expenses incurred by the plaintiff in investigating the defendant's title to mortgage lands, upon the ground that his title had turned out to be defective, the declaration stated that, in consideration that the plaintiff would advance 2,000*l.* upon the security of a mortgage of the land, upon the defendant's making out a good title to mortgage the lands to the plaintiff, the defendant promised the plaintiff to pay him the expenses to which he might be subjected in case the loan should go off by reason of the defectiveness of the defendant's title:—Held, that this agreement was not within s. 4 of the statute of frauds. Jeakes v. White, 6 Ex. 873; 21 L. J., Ex. 265.

ii. Signature.

See CONTRACT, vol. iv. col. 51.

iii. Parties, Sufficiency of Description.

What Words sufficient.—"Vendor."]—In order to satisfy the requirements of the statute of frauds, the note or memorandum must contain either the names of the contracting parties or such a description of them that there cannot be any fair dispute as to their identity. Potter v. Duffield, 43 L. J. Ch. 472; L. R. 18 Eq. 4; 22 W. R. 585.

The term "vendor" is not of itself a sufficient description of one of the contracting parties. Ib.

And see Thomas v. Brown, 45 L. J., Q. B. 811; 1 Q. B. D. 714; 35 L. T. 327; 24 W. R. 821; Hodgens v. Keon, [1894] 2 Ir. R. 657—C. A

If, in a contract for sale, the vendor is described simply as "proprietor," "owner," "mortgagee," or the like, the description is sufficient to satisfy the requirements of the statute of frauds, but not so if he is described as "vendor," or "client," or "friend" of a named agent, or as "solicitor to the vendor," even where the solicitor is himself the vendor and is described in the contract as "A. B., solicitor to the vendor." Jarrett v. Hunter, 56 L. J., Ch. 141; 34 Ch. D. 182; 55 L. T. 727; 35 W. R. 132; 51 J. P. 165.

The particulars of sale of a leasehold house stated that it was the property of Admiral F., deceased, and that the sale was by direction of his executors, not naming them. A memorandum of the sale, endorsed on the particulars, was signed by the auctioneers as agents "for the vendors":—Held, that the contract was valid, and specific performance decreed. Hood v. Barrington, (Lord), L. R. 6 Eq. 218.

—— "Proprietor."]—On the sale of real estate the particulars stated that the property was put up for sale by "the proprietor." The auctioneer signed a memorandum by which he agreed that "the vendor on his part should in all respects fulfil the conditions of sale mentioned in the particulars":—Held, that on the particulars and memorandum there was a sufficient description of the vendor. Sale v. Lambert, 43 L. J., Ch. 470; L. R. 18 Eq. 1; 22 W. R. 478.

An estate was offered for sale in lots shown upon a plan on which various conditions were printed. M. made a verbal offer to W., the agent of the owners, to purchase certain lots for 1,000*l*. W. informed him that he must purchase subject to the conditions, and promised to lay his offer before the proprietors. Shortly afterwards W. wrote to M. saying that the "proprietors" accepted his offer to purchase the specified lots for 1,000*l*., subject to the conditions on the plan:—Held, that the word "proprietors" was sufficient to identify the vendors within the statute of frauds. Rossiter v. Miller, 48 L. J., Ch. 10; 3 App. Cas. 1124; 39 L. T. 173; 26 W. R. 865—H. L. (E.)

—— "The Property of Mr. A."]—A receipt given by the auctioneer's clerk to D. three days after the auction, and signed by the clerk, acknowledging payment of part of the purchase-money for "Lot 4, Mr. John Stafford's property," is not such a memorandum in writing as would bind the vendor within s. 4 of the statute. Dyas v. Stafford, 7 L. R., Ir. 590.

—— "Owner."]—The memorandum which was at the foot of the particulars and conditions stated that V. & Son were agents for the "vendor," who was described as "vendor" throughout the conditions. The particulars stated that the sale was by direction of the "owner." The eighth condition, by mistake, stated that the vendor was a trustee for sale:—Held, that although the word "owner" was by itself a sufficient description of the vendor, the subsequent mistake was fatal, and the vendor was not sufficiently designated. Butcher v. Nash, 61 L. T. 72.

—— Legal Personal Representative.]—In conditions of sale the vendor was described as "legal personal representative of L." At the date of the contract there was no person filling that character. But the vendor was the only person in a position to become "legal personal representative," and he subsequently took out letters of administration to L.'s estate:—Held, that there was a valid contract. Towle v. Topham, 37 L. T. 308.

—— Trustee.]—A contract for the sale of land in which the vendor is not named, but is stated to be "a trustee selling under a trust for sale," is sufficient within the statute of frauds. Catling v. King, 46 L. J., Ch. 384; 5 Ch. D. 660; 36 L. T. 526; 25 W. R. 550.

Sale by Party in Possession.]—An agreement for the sale of real estate did not disclose the name of the vendors, but it appeared therefrom that the vendors were a company in possession of the property:—Held, that the vendors were sufficiently described to satisfy the statute of frauds. Commins v. Scott, 44 L. J., Ch. 563; L. R. 20 Eq. 11; 32 L. T. 420; 23 W. R. 498.

Name not Disclosed.]—Plaintiff was the lessee of vaults. The defendant company entered into a negotiation for the purchase of the lease. The secretary of the company wrote to the agents acting for the plaintiff a letter in which he said that the directors thereby offered to purchase for 2,500*l*. cash, and to take over a mortgage for 3,500*l*. on the lease. The agents answered: "In reply to your letter, we are instructed to accept the offer therein contained":—Held, that no binding contract had been entered into, because (inter alia) the name of the vendor had not been disclosed or a sufficient description given so as to satisfy the statute of frauds. Donnison v. People's Café Co., 45 L. T. 187.

An offer in writing to take a lease, signed by the intending lessees and attested by the lessor's agent, but not naming the lessor and only addressed to him as "Sir," followed by an acceptance in writing by the agent, addressed to the intending lessees, but not naming the lessor, which letter was not signed by them nor referred to in any other writing, is not an agreement in writing within the statute of frauds so as to entitle the lessor to have the same specifically performed. Williams v. Jordan, 46 L. J., Ch. 681; 6 Ch. D. 517; 26 W. R. 230.

Acceptance by Agent in name of Principal.]—Where an offer is made to an agent, who accepts it in the name of his principal, this is a sufficient description of the principal. Filby v. Hounsell, 65 L. J., Ch. 852; [1896] 2 Ch. 737; 75 L. T. 270; 45 W. R. 232.

Vendor's Name mentioned by Purchaser.]—Where a memorandum of agreement did not contain the name of the vendor, but his name was referred to in a subsequent letter written by the purchaser:—Held, that this was a sufficient reference within the statute of frauds. Warner v. Willington, 3 Drew. 523; 25 L. J., Ch. 662; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 423; 4 W. R. 531. And see Coombs v. Wilkes, 61 L. J., Ch. 42; [1891] 3 Ch. 77; 65 L. T. 56; 40 W. R. 77.

Purchaser's Name mentioned by Vendor.]—During parol negotiations for the purchase of an estate, the vendor wrote to the purchaser's solicitor, proposing that the solicitor's "client" should advance a sum to pay off a mortgage on the property. After further negotiations, the vendor signed and handed to the purchaser a written statement of the particulars of the property and of the price. Subsequently he signed and addressed to the purchaser a letter containing the following passages: "I am about to relet the land at P. for another year, concluding you will agree to it. . . . The Ladyday rents will be mine, and the Michaelmas yours":—Held, that the signed statement of particulars was not a sufficient memorandum in writing, the purchaser's name not being mentioned in it, and that the defect was not supplied by the correspondence. Skelton v. Cole, 1 De G. & J. 587.

Name mentioned in Abstract of Title.]—Conditions of sale stated that the vendors were trustees, but did not name or otherwise describe them. The contract of sale was signed by the purchaser's agent, the auctioneers, as agents for the vendors. An abstract was delivered to the purchaser, entitled with the names of the vendors, and the purchaser's requisitions were headed with the vendor's name:—Held, that the abstract might be referred to for the purpose of curing the defect in the contract. Bourdillon v. Collins, 24 L. T. 344; 19 W. R. 556.

Letters by Vendor.]—Where it does not appear upon the face of a contract or by reference of whom property is purchased, letters written by persons in the character of vendors may be connected with the contract for the purpose of supplying this defect. Dobell v. Hutchinson, 5 N. & M. 251; 3 A. & E. 355; 1 H. & W. 394; 4 L. J., K. B. 201.

iv. Subject-Matter. Sufficiency of Identification.

In General.]—An agreement in writing for sale of a house, did not by description ascertain the particular house, but it referred to the deeds as being in the possession of a person named in the agreement. The court held the agreement sufficiently certain; it could be ascertained by an inquiry before the master that the deeds in the possession of the person named referred to the house in question. Owen v. Thomas, 3 Myl. & K. 353; 3 L. J., Ch. 205.

Freehold and Leaseholds—Boundaries.]—Held, that a party having agreed to purchase premises stated to be partly freehold and partly leasehold could not, in the absence of fraud, concealment, or misrepresentation, resist a specific performance on the ground that the exact position of the boundary line between the freehold and leasehold portions could not be ascertained. Monro v. Taylor, 8 Hare, 51. Affirmed, 3 Mac. & G. 713; 21 L. J., Ch. 525.

Company—Purchase under powers of Act.]—A decree for specific performance of a contract to purchase land made against a company, the contract being made out by reference to proceedings taken under the compulsory powers of the company's act. Inge v. Birmingham, Wolverhampton, and Stour Valley Ry., 3 De G. M. & G. 658; 2 Eq. R. 80; 2 W. R. 22.

What words sufficient—"Property."]—Sale by auction under conditions which did not contain any description of what was sold, but it could be inferred from them that the subject of sale was real estate. A. became the purchaser. After the sale the auctioneer signed and gave to him the following memorandum at the foot of the conditions: "The property duly sold to A. and deposit paid at close of sale," and at the same time signed and gave to him the following receipt: "Pinxton, March 29th, 1880. Received of A. the sum of 21*l.* as deposit on property purchased at 420*l.*, at 'Sun Inn,' Pinxton, on the above date. Mr. G., owner":—Held, that the receipt, memorandum, and conditions contained a sufficiently definite description of the property sold to enable the court to receive parol evidence of what the property consisted, and that the statute of frauds was no defence. Shardlow v. Cotterill, 51 L. J., Ch. 353; 20 Ch. D. 90; 45 L. T. 572; 30 W. R. 143.

The receipt alone without the memorandum and conditions was a memorandum sufficient to satisfy the requirements of the statute. Ib.

The words "the property," in reference to a colliery, are not sufficient description of the colliery plant and stock on which to found an action for specific performance. Vale of Neath Colliery Co. v. Furness, 45 L. J., Ch. 276; 34 L. T. 231; 24 W. R. 631.

The words "the mill property, including two cottages in E. village," are a sufficient description of the subject-matter of a contract to take the case out of the statute of frauds, though part of the property is not in the parish of E. M'Murray v. Spicer, 37 L. J., Ch. 505; L. R. 5 Eq. 527; 15 W. R. 332.

—— The "F. Estate."]—A receipt for a deposit "on account of the purchase money of the F. estate":—Held, sufficient when connected by parol evidence with a signed memorandum which contained all the terms except the description of the property. Oliver v. Hunting, 59 L. J., Ch. 255; 44 Ch. D. 205; 62 L. T. 108; 38 W. R. 618.

—— "This place."]—A vendor of leasehold premises wrote a letter to her solicitor stating: "I have closed with W. for this place":—Held, a sufficient memorandum in writing within the statute of frauds, and that parol evidence was admissible to show what "this place" was. Waldron v. Jacob, Ir. R. 5 Eq. 131.

—— Public-House Name.]—Contract to sell freehold property described as "'The Jolly Sailor,' offices, &c.":—Held, that the subject-matter of the contract was sufficiently defined, as the vagueness (if any) about the meaning of the words "'Jolly Sailor,' offices, &c." might be removed by an inquiry at chambers. Naylor v. Goodall, 47 L. J., Ch. 53; 37 L. T. 422; 26 W. R. 162.

Parcels—Extrinsic Evidence.]—A written agreement to sell and purchase "twenty-four acres of land at T." must be taken to refer to land belonging to the vendor, and is a sufficient description within the statute of frauds to make extrinsic evidence admissible for the purpose of identifying the land. Plant v. Bourne, 66 L. J., Ch. 643; [1897] 2 Ch. 281; 76 L. T. 820; 46 W. R. 59—C. A.

By Reference to Plan.]—Where an agreement expressly refers to a plan, as an existing document forming a term in the contract, evidence is admissible for the purpose of identifying the plan; but unless the evidence of identity is clear and satisfactory, specific performance of such an agreement will be refused. Hodges v. Horsfall, 1 Russ. & M. 116.

On a purchase by reference to a ground plan an infringement of the rule cujus est solum ejus est usque ad cœlum is sufficient to avoid the contract between vendor and purchaser. Pope v. Garland, 4 Y. & C. 394; 10 L. J., Ex. Eq. 13.

—— Plan to be Settled.]—A. agrees by letter and verbally to take land on a building lease, and a rough draft is prepared, and fair copy and plan made, after which a new clause is inserted at A.'s request, and agreed to by the defendant's (the landowner's) solicitor:—Held, that as no copy of the agreement was signed, and as it clearly appeared that the plans had still to be settled, and therefore the premises were not defined, demurrer must be allowed. Adams v. Wheatley, 3 W. R. 96.

—— Plan Lost.]—A. by will, in 1832, devised estates, including M. In 1835 he entered into a written agreement (unstamped) with A. and B. for the sale of M. The purchasers paid a deposit, entered into possession, and received the rents and profits until 1838, when the survivor became bankrupt. The assignees abandoned all interest under the agreement, and the testator became the purchaser of M., being treated as having an equitable lien for the purchase-money. The agreement referred for the parcels to an accompanying map or plan, and to a schedule which showed their extent. The testator died, and this was a suit to establish the will. The master found that the map or plan was lost:—Held, that the agreement for sale was a valid contract, notwithstanding the loss of the map or plan, and that it was never stamped. Held, also, that it was a revocation of the will: but the heir-at-law must exhaust all means of information as to the lost map or plan before the court will deal with the contract without reference to the plan of which it forms a part. Andrew v. Andrew, 3 W. R. 337.

—— Different Plans.]—A memorandum of an agreement for sale signed by the vendor referred to the property as "The 'Jolly Sailor,' offices, &c., with all the rights and privileges as per plan," and on the back was indorsed "Mr. M." (the vendor's solicitor)—"Please put on the number in the plan." There were two plans, and the lot comprising the "Jolly Sailor" in one plan was not identical in number or contents with that containing the "Jolly Sailor" in the other plan:—Held, that the memorandum was sufficient within the statute of frauds, the plan intended having been identified by the vendor in cross-examination. Naylor v. Goodall, supra.

—— Part Coloured on Plan.]—By a contract B. agreed to sell, and C. to purchase, 200 acres of land or thereabouts, more or less, parts of the lands, delineated in a plan thereunto annexed, and thereon coloured brown. It turned out that the marked land contained much less than the 200 acres, and the measurement was extended beyond the lands delineated:—Held, that the additional lands were not comprised in the agreement. Bellaney v. Knight, 5 L. T. 785; 10 W. R. 289.

Drainage commissioners agreed to sell a property to D. The contract did not refer to any plan, but the agents who signed it for the parties signed at the same time the following memorandum written upon a plan of the property:—"Plan of Property sold to and purchased by D. 23rd Oct. 1874. N.B.—The property included in the purchase is edged with red colour":—Held, that the plan was sufficiently incorporated, and that the description in the contract was controlled by it. Nene Valley Drainage Commissioners v. Dunkley, 4 Ch. D. 1.

And see Lindsay & Forder's Contract, In re, infra, col. 1169.

Part not belonging to Lessor.]—A. entered into an agreement for the transfer of his tenancy in a public-house, and the sale of the goodwill to B. The subject-matter of the agreement, which was in writing, was therein described as "the house and premises he now occupies, known by the sign of the White Hart." There was a coach-house which belonged to the White Hart, and which, at the time of the agreement, was not in A.'s occupation, but of S., who held it as tenant to A. for a period which had not expired at the time fixed for the completion of the transfer by the agreement:—Held, that the words, "he now occupies" formed an essential part of the description of the subject-matter of the agreement, and could not be rejected as falsa demonstratio, and consequently that the agreement did not include the coach-house. Magee v. Lavell, 43 L. J., C. P. 131; L. R. 9 C. P. 107; 30 L. T. 169; 22 W. R. 334.

v. Description of Interest Contracted to be Sold.

Where Interest not expressed.]—An agreement to sell land, not expressing what interest in it, construed to mean the whole of the interest of the vendor. Bower v. Cooper, 2 Hare, 408; 11 L. J., Ch. 287; 6 Jur. 681.

The court will not assume that a purchaser has agreed to purchase the vendor's interest, whatever it may be, unless the language of the agreement is clear. Southern v. Harriman, 14 W. R. 487.

An agreement for the purchase of a lease, which does not mention the length of the term granted by the lease, is void for uncertainty, and cannot be enforced. Ib.

"All his Estate and Interest."]—An agreement by a vendor to sell "all his estate and interest" in certain premises, is primâ facie good; and does not necessarily mean an agreement to sell an estate in fee simple, but may mean an equity of redemption only. Priddle v. Wood, 4 N. R. 320.

Leasehold.]—Construction of contract for sale of leasehold, whether for vendor's interest therein, or a good title to the leasehold. Anderson v. Higgins, 1 Jo. & Lat. 718.

The lessee of a house put it up for auction subject to certain conditions of sale, one of which was that the purchaser should not require the lessor's title, but the property was bought in. Afterwards the defendant authorised his agent to offer a price for the lease. The agent wrote to the agent of the vendor, offering the price fixed; the vendor's agent replied, accepting the price for the house. In neither of these letters was the nature of the vendor's interest mentioned:—Held, that the letters formed a valid contract for the purchase of the lease. Cowley v. Watts, 22 L. J., Ch. 591 ; 17 Jur. 172 ; 1 W. R. 484.

An agreement was in the following words : "A. agrees to pay 625*l.* for the cottage and stable, B. paying the expenses of the lease held by Mr. C.—signed, A." :—Held, that such an agreement was not sufficient within the statute of frauds. Cox v. Middleton, 2 Drew. 209 ; 2 Eq. R. 631 ; 23 L. J., Ch. 618 ; 2 W. R. 284.

—— Sub-Contract.]—A., to whom the owner of a quarry had agreed to grant a lease, agreed on behalf of himself and all persons interested to sell the quarry to B., and "that the lease agreed to be granted by the lessor should be granted as B. might direct" :—Held, that the memorandum was sufficient within the statute of frauds. Morgan v. Worthington, 38 L. T. 443.

vi. Completeness of Terms of Contract.

General Rule.]—Specific performance may be decreed of agreement founded on letters and notes, if fully and completely settled in all points. Popham v. Eyre, Lofft, 801.

Where from letters a contract can be specifically and explicitly defined, court will decree performance, but not otherwise. Gordon v. Trevlyan, 1 Price, 64.

Agreement not enforced on a letter unless it contain the full terms of the agreement. Clerk v. Wright, 1 Atk. 12.

Before Filing Bill.]—The contract on which specific performance is sought, must have been complete in all its essential parts before the filing of the bill. Adams v. Broke, 1 Y. & C. C. C. 627.

Whether Contract or Treaty.]—No specific performance of an agreement by letters unless, upon a fair interpretation, concluded ; if doubtful whether more than treaty, to be left to law. Huddlestone v. Briscoe, 11 Ves. 591.

Contract for land by letters, sufficient within the statute of frauds ; not specifically executed, unless upon a fair interpretation importing a concluded agreement, and not doubtful whether only treaty. Stratford v. Bosworth, 2 V. & B. 341.

Term of Contract not Supplied.]—Equity has jurisdiction to compel the specific performance of a complete contract, but cannot supply any term not agreed on. Ormond v. Anderson, 2 Ball & B. 369.

The court cannot, when called on to decree specific performance of an agreement, direct any act to be done whereby the agreement itself, if not already legally binding, can be made so. Leominster Canal Co. v. Shrewsbury & Hereford Ry., 3 Jur. (N.S.) 930 ; 5 W. R. 868.

An offer by letter to sell or buy cannot be carried into effect unless from the whole letter taken together an inference can be drawn from which the material terms of the contract can be ascertained. In the absence of that it amounts but to an offer to treat, as nothing can be supplied by conjecture. Cooper v. Hood, 28 L. J., Ch. 212.

What Terms Required.]—In order to form a contract by letter, of which the court will decree a specific performance, nothing more is necessary than that the amount and nature of the consideration to be paid on one side and received on the other should be ascertained, together with a reasonable description of the subject-matter of the contract. It is the clearly established doctrine that the court will carry into execution an agreement so constituted. Kennedy v. Lee, 3 Mer. 441.

Memorandum Referring to Draft Conveyance.]—The memorandum of an agreement required by the statute of frauds must be a memorandum complete at the time the memorandum is made. Mundy v. Osprey, 49 L. J., Ch. 216 ; 13 Ch. D. 855 ; 28 W. R. 347.

A letter from an alleged purchaser inclosing and referring to a draft conveyance in which it was recited that he had agreed to purchase land :—Held, not to be a memorandum of a completed agreement. Ib.

Whole Correspondence to be Considered.]—Where a court has to find a contract in a correspondence, and not in one particular note or memorandum formally signed, the whole of that which has passed between the parties must be taken into consideration. Hussey v. Horne-Payne, 48 L. J., Ch. 846 ; 4 App. Cas. 311 ; 41 L. T. 1 ; 27 W. R. 585—H. L. (E.)

Per Lord Selborne :—The observation stated in Jervis v. Berridge (L. R. 8 Ch. 360), that "The statute of frauds is a weapon of defence, not offence, and does not make any signed instrument a valid contract by reason of the signature, if it is not such according to the good faith and real intention of the parties," affirmed. Ib.

Purchase Subject to Vendors Approval.]—D. at a sale by auction signed a memorandum that he had "this day purchased from Mr. Stafford, the vendor, by public auction, subject to his approval, the premises mentioned in the annexed particulars, for the sum of 250*l.*, subject to the conditions of sale also annexed hereto." This was not agreed to by the vendor, nor was there any subsequent adoption of the contract under his hand :—Held, that there was no agreement enforceable against the vendor, as the contract having been made expressly "subject to his approval," the memorandum of that date only amounted to a proposal, and did not constitute a note in writing, within the statute of frauds. Dyas v. Stafford, 9 L. R., Ir. 520.

Verbal Agreement Followed by Letter.]—W. entered into a verbal agreement with S. to sell him an inn called the L. Inn for 950*l.* On the following day W.'s solicitor wrote to S.'s solicitor :—"W. has been with us to-day, and stated that he had arranged with your client S. for the sale to the latter of the L. Inn for 950*l.* We therefore send herewith draft contract for your perusal and approval" :—Held, that this letter was not such a note or memorandum of an agreement as is required by the statute of frauds. Smith v. Webster, 45 L. J., Ch. 528 ; 3 Ch. D. 49 ; 35 L. T. 44 ; 24 W. R. 894. And see Cases, supra, cols. 1120—1125.

vii. Communications Addressed to Third Parties.

General Rule.]—Agreement by letter to third person to sell sufficient to take case out of the statute of frauds. Seagood v. Meale, Pre. Ch.

561; 1 Str. 426. And see Child v. Comber, 3 Swanst. 423, n.

Party bound by Letter to his Agent.]—There have been cases where a letter written to a man's own agent, and setting forth the terms of an agreement as concluded by him, has been deemed to be a signing within the statute of frauds, and agreeable to the provisions of it. Welford v. Beazley, 3 Atk. 503.

After negotiations between the agents of the vendor and purchaser, a letter was written to the vendor by his agent, stating that the purchaser had agreed by his agent to purchase the property (which was sufficiently identified) at a certain price. The vendor frequently wrote to his agent in reference to the transaction, such letters being communicated to the purchaser's agent:—Held, that there was a binding contract within the statute of frauds. Carpenter v. Churchill, 2 W. R. 364.

—— Agency, how Constituted.]—A. and B. having entered into a verbal treaty for the purchase of premises belonging to A., and not being able to agree as to the amount of the purchase-money, A. addressed a letter to C., stating that he would take a certain sum from B. for the premises, reserving a small portion of the same for his sister, if C. approved of it. B. subsequently lodged the sum named by A. with C., of which lodgment C. made a memorandum on A.'s letter, with a remark that it was "a great price":—Held, that C. must be considered the agent of A., and that as he had signed the contract acknowledging the receipt of the purchase-money, A. was bound to perform the agreement. Field v. Boland, 1 Dr. & Wal. 37.

—— Solicitor Agent for both Parties.]—A., being entitled to certain lands, proposed to his solicitors, who were also the solicitors of certain trustees, to sell to such trustees the lands. The proposal was made by a series of letters written by A. to his solicitors, and such letters were replied to by the solicitors. The proposal having been agreed to on behalf of the trustees:—Held, that there was no binding contract. Shrewsbury (Earl) v. Shrewsbury (Countess), 18 Jur. 397.

Letter to Solicitor—Sub-sale.]—The executrix of a lessee agreed to sell to A. the residue of her term (except a day) for 400*l*. This agreement was entered into by the executrix without a written memorandum except a letter written by the executrix to her own solicitor. Subsequently the landlord agreed with the executrix for the purchase of the residue of the term for 550*l*. A., on hearing of this, offered the executrix, if she would complete her contract with him, 1,000*l*. as purchase-money, and indemnity against any proceedings on the part of the landlord. She accepted the offer, and demised the premises to A. for the whole term, wanting a day:—Held, that the landlord was entitled to a specific performance of his agreement, not only against the executrix, but against A., quære, whether the letter to the solicitor was a sufficient memorandum in writing within the meaning of the statute of frauds, &c. Goodwin v. Fielding, 4 De G. M. & G. 90; 1 W. R. 343.

Lease—Letter to Stranger.]—On bill for specific performance of parol agreement to let lands, evidence that defendant had suffered his wife to receive money from the plaintiff in consideration of fines (he being incapable of receiving them), and had written a letter to a third person acknowledging the demise, and stating that he was ready to make leases:—Held, sufficient to take case out of statute. Hartley v. Wilkinson, 1 Ridgw. L. & S. 357.

Promise to leave Property at Death—Repetition of Promise in Affidavit.]—B. files a bill stating that on his marriage with his late wife no portion was given to her, but that her father Y. had promised and contracted with B. that he would, at his death, leave to his daughter an equal share of his property with his other children; that B.'s wife died leaving two children, who had lived with and been brought up by their aunt at Y.'s house; that B., wishing to take his children under his own protection, Y. applied for a commission of lunacy against him, and filed an affidavit stating the words he used upon B.'s marriage to be, that his daughter should, at his death, share with the rest of his children; and that Y. died, leaving considerable personal property. B., under the circumstances, claimed to have the promise made on his marriage specifically performed. Demurrer for want of equity overruled. Barkworth v. Young, 4 Drew. 1; 26 L. J., Ch. 153; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 34; 5 W. R. 156.

viii. Admission of Contract by Answer.

Parol Agreement Admitted.]—A court of equity will decree a specific execution of a parol agreement, if it be set forth in the bill, and confessed by answer. Symondson v. Tweed, Pre. Ch. 374.

Whether an agreement by parol, but confessed in the answer, shall be executed though not in writing. Hosier v. Read, 9 Mod. 86.

Equity will decree performance of parol agreement, if it is admitted in the answer. Gunter v. Halsey, Amb. 586.

Plea of Statute of Frauds.]—If on a bill brought to have execution of a parol agreement, the defendant, by answer, confesses the agreement without insisting on the statute of frauds, &c., the court will decree an execution. Croyston v. Banes, Pre. Ch. 208.

Defendant, by answer, admitting agreement, may, if he insist on the statute of frauds, have benefit of it at hearing. Cooth v. Jackson, 6 Ves. 17, 37.

Amended Bill.]—In a bill for the specific execution of an agreement, the plaintiff may abandon the agreement, and may, by amended bill, seek to have the benefit of an agreement admitted in the answer. Willis v. Evans, 2 Ball & B. 228.

Form of Decree.]—Decree upon the answer, admitting a contract, and a letter, offering to sell at a valuation, for a conveyance on payment of the purchase-money into the bank by the plaintiff, on a certain day; in default of payment the bill to be dismissed with costs. No binding contract until payment. The estate, therefore, did not pass by a previous devise, but descended to the heir. Gaskarth v. Lowther (Lord), 12 Ves. 107; 8 R. R. 310.

ix. Part Performance. See LANDLORD AND TENANT. SPECIFIC PERFORMANCE.

x. Parol Variation. See LANDLORD AND TENANT. SPECIFIC PERFORMANCE.

3. TIME WHEN OF THE ESSENCE OF THE CONTRACT.

a. By Original Stipulation.

Rule in Equity.]—Time is not generally regarded as the essence of contract in equity. Seton v. Slade, 7 Ves. 273; 6 R. R. 124; where several instances of this doctrine are mentioned.

Time held not essence of contract. Gibson v. Patterson, 1 Atk. 12.

The time at which a contract is to be performed, is not essential in equity as at law. The relief against the lapse of time is in the discretion of the court upon the circumstances, as if the contract is abandoned. Radcliffe v. Warrington, 12 Ves. 326.

A contract of which time is the essence, and a chief term in which is the punctual payment of interest, not enforced, where interest was left in arrear two or three days. Hicks v. Gardner, 1 Jur. 541.

On a bill for specific performance, the questions whether the time was originally of the essence of the contract, and whether being so, the defendant has done any act whereby he has waived it, as a ground of objection to the performance, are questions depending on evidence, and not to be decided except upon the hearing. Levy v. Lindo, 3 Mer. 81.

If time is to be considered as of the essence of a contract, that point must be made promptly. Monro v. Taylor, 8 Hare, 51. Affirmed 3 Mac. & G. 713; 21 L. J., Ch. 525. And see Madeley v. Booth, 2 De G. & Sm. 718; Price v. Griffith, 1 De G. M. & G. 80; 21 L. J., Ch. 78; 15 Jur. 1093.

Time will, in equity, be deemed of the essence of the contract, in all cases where it can be collected, from the terms of the contract, that the parties intended that the time for its completion should be strictly adhered to. Hipwell v. Knight, 1 Y. & C. 401; 4 L. J., Ex. Eq. 52.

Delivery of Abstract.]—Merely undertaking to deliver an abstract and possession at a particular time does not make it the essence of the contract. Boehm v. Wood, 1 J. & W. 419; 21 R. R. 213.

When a contract for sale is entered into by which it is stipulated that the abstract is to be delivered on a particular day, and it is not delivered within a reasonable time after that day, the purchaser is at liberty to repudiate the contract. Venn v. Cattell, 27 L. T. 469.

Conditions of sale stated that an abstract of title would be furnished within seven days from the day of sale. The purchaser's solicitor called for the abstract two days after the sale, but the abstract was not delivered till thirteen days after the sale:—Held, that the time of the delivery of the abstract was not of the essence of the contract, the importance of stipulations as to time being differently regarded in courts of law and equity. Roberts v. Berry, 3 De G. M. & G. 284; 22 L. J., Ch. 398.

Payment of Purchase Money.]—Upon sale of a reversion, part of the terms was that the money be paid by a certain time; not being so by default of vendee, vendor discharged from his contract. Newman v. Rogers, 4 Bro. C. C. 391.

Deposit.]—The time for paying the deposit may be made an essential term for entering into a contract for sale of an estate. Honeyman v. Marryat, 6 H. L. Cas. 112; 26 L. J., Ch. 619; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 17. Affirming 21 Beav. 14; 3 W. R. 502.

Completion of Purchase.]—Conditions of sale stated that the purchaser should pay a deposit as part of the purchase-money and sign agreements for payment of the remainder on or before August 17th, when the purchases were to be completed; should the completion be delayed from any cause whatever beyond that period the purchasers were to pay interest on the balance from that date until completion:—Held, that as by the conditions a possible postponement of the purchase was contemplated, time was not of the essence of the contract. Patrick v. Milner, 46 L. J., C. P. 537; 2 C. P. D. 342; 36 L. T. 738; 25 W. R. 790.

Title not Shown.]—Bill for specific performance of articles for purchase, dismissed with costs, because title was not laid before counsel within time limited. Lewis v. Lechmere (Lord), 10 Mod. 502.

If the vendor does not show a clear title by the day specified, the purchaser may recover back his deposit and rescind the contract, without waiting to see whether the vendor may ultimately be able to establish a good title or not. Wilde v. Fort, 4 Taunt. 334; 13 R. R. 616.

And if the vendor contracts to make out a good title by a certain day, the vendee is not bound to apply to the vendor respecting it before that day. Berry v. Young, 2 Esp. 640, n.

A purchase was to be completed on the 25th October. Before that day arrived the purchaser, at the vendor's request, extended the time to the 5th November. The title, however, was not completed on that day:—Held, that the purchaser was at liberty to abandon the contract. Parkin v. Thorold, 2 Sim. (N.S.) 1. Affirmed 16 Beav. 59; 22 L. J., Ch. 170; 16 Jur. 959.

In equity the time appointed for the completion of a contract is not, as at law, of the essence of the contract, but it may be made so by direct stipulation or necessary implication. Ib.

By a contract in writing, E. agreed to purchase freeholds from N., subject to the title being accepted by his solicitor. The purchase-money was to be paid on the 29th September, on which day it was presumed that the contract would be completed and possession given; but in the event of the purchase not being completed on that day, the purchaser was to pay interest up to such reasonable time as might be agreed upon by his solicitor. When the title was produced it appeared that E. was not the legal owner of the land, but had agreed to purchase the same by a contract which was not completed till after the 29th September, 1873. Held, that, on the construction of the agreement, it was to be completed on the 29th September, and that, the action having been commenced before the Judicature Act came into operation, time was of the essence of the contract; and that, the vendor not being on that day in a position to make a good title and execute a conveyance, he could not sustain an action for damages. Noble v. Edwardes, 5 Ch. D. 378; 37 L. T. 7—C. A.

Special Condition.]—Time held to be of the essence of the contract upon construction of conditions of sale. Seaton v. Mapp, 2 Coll. C. C. 556.

Time made of the essence of a contract by a special condition. Hudson v. Temple, 29 Beav. 536; 30 L. J., Ch. 251; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 248; 3 L. T. 495; 9 W. R. 243.

If a vendor of leaseholds makes time the essence of a contract, and on the day specified for the completion of the purchase insists upon the money being paid, he may, in the event of the purchaser's neglect, omission, or refusal to comply with such request, avail himself of a power in the contract to annul the sale. Ib.

By an agreement between the plaintiff and a company, the company was to take portions of the plaintiff's lands, and make and maintain, for the convenience of the plaintiff, so many crossings and of such kinds as the plaintiff's surveyor should direct and notify in writing within one month after the company's obtaining possession of the land. In December the company entered into possession, but no award or notification of the works required was made until March following:—Held, that the stipulation as to time must be regarded as of the essence of the contract; and specific performance of the works mentioned in the award or notification was refused. Darnley (Earl) v. L. C. & D. Ry., 33 L. J., Ch. 9; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 452; 8 L. T. 94; 11 W. R. 388.

Delivery of Objections.]—The conditions of sale provided that all objections to the title not taken within a certain time after delivery of the abstract, should be deemed to be waived:—Held, that the time for objecting was not to be computed from the time of the delivery of an imperfect abstract; and that the purchaser was not precluded from taking an objection after the time fixed on, which arose out of evidence called for before the expiration of that time. Blacklow v. Laws, 2 Hare, 40.

Where it was stipulated that all objections to the title should be taken within twenty-one days of the delivery of the abstract, or be deemed waived, and time as to this was to be considered the essence of the contract:—Held, that the twenty-one days did not begin to run till a perfect abstract had been delivered. Hobson v. Bell, 2 Beav. 17; 8 L. J., Ch. 241; 3 Jur. 196.

In a condition of sale, that objections to the vendor's title are to be sent in within a given time, time is of the essence of the contract. Oakden v. Pike, 34 L. J., Ch. 620; 11 Jur. (N.S.) 666; 12 L. T. 527; 13 W. R. 673.

If a vendor does not deliver the abstract of title within the time specified in the conditions, he cannot hold the purchaser bound to send in his objections within the time limited for that purpose, even though it was stipulated in the condition for sending in the objections that time in that respect should be of the essence of the contract. In such a case, the time within which objections will be considered as waived will depend upon the general principles of the court and the conduct of the parties. Upperton v. Nickolson, 40 L. J., Ch. 401; L. R. 6 Ch. 436; 25 L. T. 4; 19 W. R. 733.

Delay in Taking Objections.]—The contract provided that all objections to and requisitions in support of the title not delivered in writing in a month after delivery of the abstract should be deemed to be waived. The vendor delivered an abstract showing title to be in a trustee. No objection was made within the month. On an action by the purchaser, B., for breach of contract:—Held, that no objection having been made within the month, the issue was satisfied by the abstract delivered. Blackburn v. Smith, 2 Ex. 783; 18 L. J., Ex. 187.

Held, also, that B. could not rescind the contract and recover the deposit, inasmuch as, having taken possession of the land, the parties could not be placed in statu quo. Ib. See also Rosenberg v. Cook, 51 L. J., Q. B. 176; 8 Q. B. D. 162; 30 W. R. 344—C. A.

—— No Title.]—A condition that all objections not delivered within fourteen days to be considered waived, and in this respect time to be of the essence of the contract, does not apply where the vendor has no title at all. Want v. Stallibrass, 42 L. J., Ex. 108; L. R. 8 Ex. 175; 29 L. T. 293; 21 W. R. 685.

Where conditions of sale make time for delivery of objections of the essence of the contract, a purchaser can, after the time has expired, object that vendors have no title at all. Want v. Stallibrass (supra) followed. Tanqueray-Willaume and Landau, In re, 51 L. J., Ch. 434; 20 Ch. D. 465; 46 L. T. 542; 30 W. R. 801.

And see Cases infra, col. 1453.

Construction of Objections.]—Where all objections not taken by a certain day were to be considered as waived, and, before the day named, the purchaser's solicitor wrote to the vendor's solicitor objecting to the title on one ground, but inclosing an opinion upon the title in which a further objection was disclosed:—Held, that the letter and the opinion must be read together and sufficiently stated the latter ground of objection. Mosley v. Hyde, 17 Q. B. 183; 20 L. J., Q. B. 539; 15 Jur. 809.

Possession.]—If the contract stipulated that the possession should be given at a specified day, it is competent for the purchaser to insist that both time and a vacant possession are of the essence of the contract, and the court will receive, as evidence that such was the purchaser's intention, statements made by the agent of the purchaser at the time of signing the contract. Where a purchaser has consented to enlarge the time for completion, and where a vacant possession was of the essence of the contract, it is competent for him to object to complete at the expiration of such enlarged time, if the possession is not then vacant, and if he has done no act towards completion of the contract after he had notice that vacant possession could not be given at the day. Nokes v. Kilmurey, 1 De G. & Sm. 444.

On the 14th December C. signed an agreement for the purchase from T. of a leasehold house and premises. The agreement contained these words; "Possession to be given on the 14th January next." Possession without proof of T.'s title was tendered on the 14th January, but C. refused to accept it. On bill for specific performance:—Held, that possession meant possession with a good title shown. Tilley v. Thomas, L. R. 3 Ch. 61; 17 L. T. 422; 16 W. R. 166. And see Boehm v. Wood, supra, col. 1145.

—— Occupation.]—A. agreed to sell to B. an orchard, described as being in the occupation of

P., and that the purchaser should have possession on the day appointed for completion :—Held, that possession did not mean personal occupation, and a decree for specific performance was made against B., although A. was unable, by reason of P.'s tenancy, to put him in actual occupation of the premises. Lake v. Dean, 28 Beav. 607.

Wager Contract.]—On a wager contract as to price of opium at a sale on 30th November :—Held, time not of the essence, and therefore the contract binding, though the sale took place on 7th December. Chotayloll v. Manickchund, Chotayloll v. Uggerchund, 6 Moore, Ind App. 251 ; 4 W. R. 317.

b. By Notice.

General Rule.]—Time may by the terms of the contract be made the essence thereof. But it is not decided, that where there is no special stipulation to that effect, it can be made so by a subsequent notice that it will be so considered. Reynolds v. Nelson, 6 Madd. 26.

Though time be not of the essence of a contract, it may be made so by notice, where there has been great and improper delay on one side in completing. King v. Wilson, 6 Beav. 124. And see Stewart v. Smith, 6 Hare, 223, n.

Where time is not the essence of the contract, by its original terms, it may be made so on reasonable notice by either party ; but where an objection, founded on such a notice, is set up and fails, the defendant will have to pay the costs up to the hearing. Taylor v. Brown, 2 Beav. 180 ; 9 L. J., Ch. 14. S. P., Parkin v. Thorold, 16 Beav. 59 ; 2 Sim. (N.S.) 1 ; 22 L. J., Ch. 170 ; 16 Jur. 959.

Reasonable Time.]—When, after a contract for the sale of land has been entered into, a notice is given to make time of the essence of the contract, the question whether the notice is reasonable or not must be judged of as at the date when it is given. After considerable negotiations a notice was given on 24th September for completion on or before the 31st October :—Held, that the notice of the 24th September fixed an unreasonably short time for the completion of the purchase, and was therefore invalid. Crawford v. Toogood, 49 L. J., Ch. 108 ; 13 Ch. D. 153 ; 41 L. T. 549 ; 28 W. R. 248.

Where a contract for sale fixes a day for completion, and provides that if the purchase is not completed on that day the purchaser shall pay interest from that day until completion, time is not of the essence of the contract so as to entitle the purchaser immediately to repudiate if, in consequence of a defect of conveyance merely and not of title, the vendor is unable to complete on the day fixed. Where the defect is one of conveyance and time is not of the essence of the contract, the purchaser is not entitled to repudiate after the day fixed for completion until he has given the vendor notice to remove the defect within a reasonable time, and the vendor has failed to do so. Hatten v. Russell, 57 L. J., Ch. 425 ; 38 Ch. D. 334 ; 58 L. T. 271 ; 36 W. R. 317.

Consideration of the questions, whether time was of the essence of the contract, whether reasonable notice to complete was given, and whether that notice was complied with. Macbryde v. Weekes, 22 Beav. 533 ; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 918.

When time is not originally of the essence of a contract, one of the parties is not entitled afterwards by notice to make it of the essence, unless there has been some default or unreasonable delay by the other party. After a delay of two years the vendor gave notice to the purchaser to complete within three weeks :—Held, that the time was unreasonably short, and the notice therefore of no effect. Green v. Sevin, 49 L. J., Ch. 166 ; 13 Ch. D. 589 ; 41 L. T. 724; 44 J. P. 282.

Contract to be completed on 1st August ; on 4th August two requisitions remaining uncomplied with the vendor gave notice to rescind unless completed within a month :—Held, that the notice was not reasonable. Wells v. Maxwell, 32 Beav. 408. Affirmed, 33 L. J., Ch. 44 ; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 1021 ; 8 L. T. 713 ; 11 W. R. 842.

—— Limited Title.]—In November, 1861, S. agreed to purchase property, and verbally agreed to take a limited title. Negotiations were carried on as to the title till December, 1864, when the purchaser gave notice that unless within one week the vendor would agree to comply with the requisitions, he should require a good marketable title to the whole property, and if that were not shown within five weeks the contract would be treated as rescinded :—Held, that the purchaser having agreed to accept a limited title, and the negotiations having gone on upon that footing, a complete title could not be demanded ; and that the time limited by the notice to rescind was not reasonable. M'Murray v. Spicer, 37 L. J., Ch. 505 ; L. R. 5 Eq. 527 ; 16 W. R. 332.

—— No Title.]—The rule that where time is not made of the essence of the contract for the purchase of land, the purchaser cannot, in the absence of unreasonable delay on the part of the vendor, arbitrarily fix a short day after which he will not be bound, does not apply to a case where, at the date of the contract, the vendor had not power to sell the estate. Lee v. Soames, 59 L. T. 366 ; 36 W. R. 884.

Option to Purchase.]—An option to purchase became effective on 14th August. On 2nd November vendor gave notice to complete within six weeks :—Held, that six weeks was not a reasonable time. Pegg v. Wisden, 16 Beav. 239 ; 16 Jur. 1105 ; 1 W. R. 43.

Notice to Rescind.]—A. purchased a mine from an agent of the owners, and contracted to sell it to a company. The company discovered that the original owners had sold the mine to other parties, and then gave A. three months' notice to rescind the contract unless completed. A bill by A. for specific performance dismissed with costs. Reed v. Don Pedro North Del Rey Gold Mining Co., 10 L. T. 836 ; 12 W. R. 1049.

c. From Nature of Subject-Matter of Contract.

Value Fluctuating.]—Time is of the essence, where subject of contract is of nature liable to daily fluctuation in value. Doloret v. Rothschild, 1 Sim. & S. 590 ; 2 L. J. (O.S.) Ch. 125 ; 24 R. R. 243.

Public-house.]—Time held to be of the essence of the contract by reason of the nature of the trade, viz. that of a publican. Seaton v. Mapp, 2 Coll. C. C. 556. S. P., Coslake v. Till, 1 Russ. 376; 25 R. R. 75. Day v. Luhke, 37 L. J., Ch. 330; L. R. 5 Eq. 336; 16 W. R. 717. Cowles v. Gale, 41 L. J., Ch. 14; L. R. 7 Ch. 12; 25 L. T. 524; 20 W. R. 70.

Where on the sale of a public-house as a going concern negotiations continued after the date fixed for completion, and ultimately the vendor gave ten days' notice to complete:—Held, that the notice was reasonable under the circumstances. Smith v. Batsford, 76 L. T. 179.

Sale of Reversion.]—Specific performance refused, the contract being for a sale of a reversionary interest for life, which in the interval fell into possession. Spurrier v. Hancock, 4 Ves. 667.

Leasehold Sold for Freehold.]—Specific performance of agreement to buy fee-simple of lands and right, &c., refused, where part proves only leasehold, and the right is qualified; object being to work commercial speculation, which could only be done by enjoyment of unqualified right. Wright v. Howard, 1 Sim. & S. 190; 1 L. J. (o.s.) Ch. 94; 24 R. R. 169.

d. Waiver.

General Rule.]—Time may be made the essence of a contract, but may be waived by conduct. Hudson v. Bartram, 3 Madd. 440.

Payment by Instalments.] — Contract by plaintiff, a subsequent mortgagee, with the prior mortgagees, to purchase their interests and pay the purchase-money by a certain date, and time was to be of the essence of the contract. The plaintiff did not pay the instalments until a considerable time after the stipulated period, but such later payments were accepted by the vendors. On a bill for specific performance by the subsequent mortgagee:—Held, that every default by the plaintiff in payment of the instalments at the stipulated time is a new breach of the contract, but that in this case the breach had been waived. Hunter v. Daniell, 4 Hare, 420; 14 L. J., Ch. 194; 9 Jur. 520.

Delivery of Abstract.]—Where the parties entered into a stipulation that an abstract of title should be delivered immediately, and that, in case the contract was not completed by a given day, the purchaser should be released from his contract, and the abstract was not immediately delivered, but communications on the subject of the title were continued between the parties until the time limited by the contract had expired:—Held, that under these circumstances, the benefit of the stipulation as to time was waived by the purchaser. Hipwell v. Knight, 1 Y. & C. 401; 4 L. J., Ex. Eq. 52.

Ejectment.]—Where it was stipulated in the agreement of purchase, that it should be void if the money was not paid on a day stated:—Held, that the purchaser continuing in possession, and giving a warrant to confess judgment in ejectment, was a waiver of the forfeiture. Gardiner, Ex parte, 4 Y. & C. 503; 10 L. J., Ex. Eq. 46.

Delivery of Objections.]—Conditions of sale stipulated that objections to the title, not made within twenty-one days from the delivery of the abstract, should be considered as waived. The purchaser delivered objections some weeks after the twenty-one days, and the vendor's solicitors received them and corresponded with the purchaser about them:—Held, a waiver by the vendor's solicitors. Where objections to title are to be considered as waived, unless made within a certain time after the delivery of the abstract, quære, whether that condition can be insisted on, if the abstract is very defective. Cutts v. Thodey, 13 Sim. 206; 6 Jur. 1027. Affirmed, 1 Coll. C. C. 223, n.

—— Special Condition.]—A special condition of sale stipulated, that by a fixed day the purchaser should either reject or accept the title, and if not rejected it was to be good. Within the time fixed the purchaser took an objection, but stated at the same time he did not reject the title upon that ground, but wished to hear how the vendor met the difficulty. The vendor insisted at first on the condition, by which the purchaser, not having rejected the title, was to be held to have accepted it, but subsequently entered upon a long correspondence:—Semble, that the vendor had by his conduct waived the condition. Lane v. Debenham, 17 Jur. 1005.

What delay Sufficient.]—Circumstances of delay held not to amount to a waiver of requisitions of title. Cooch v. Warden, 46 L. J., Ch. 639.

Specific performance decreed, the abstract having been delayed and kept without objection, and the vendee, upon the construction and the circumstances, not being entitled to insist on the same as the essence of the contract. Seton v. Slade, 7 Ves. 265; 6 R. R. 124.

Specific performance of an agreement to purchase may be decreed after considerable delay, if the vendee has not demanded his deposit or shown a determination not to proceed in the purchase. Pincke v. Curteis, 4 Bro. C. C. 329.

By the terms of an auction the title deeds were to be produced by a certain day; they were not, but the purchaser received them afterwards without objection; he cannot afterwards object to the delay. Smith v. Burnam, 2 Anstr. 527; 3 R. R. 620.

Where, by the terms of an auction, the sale is to be completed by a certain day; yet, if neither party take any step to quicken the other, till it becomes impossible to execute the agreement by the day fixed, the time is waived, and equity will interfere to prevent the purchaser taking advantage of it at law. Jones v. Price, 3 Anstr. 924; 1 East, 81; 4 R. R. 874.

Time is of the essence of the contract; waived by a protracted treaty. Wood v. Bernal, 19 Ves. 220; 12 R. R. 173.

Negotiations after Time to Complete.]—Agreement for sale, and if through default of the vendor sale is not completed by 20th May, agreement to be void. On 24th May negotiations were going on, and the purchaser then discovered on searches a deed not disclosed in abstract, which affected the title. The land was pasture land, and possession was necessary before the end of May, so that lands could be stocked. On the 29th May, purchaser refused to complete:—Held, that although negotiations continued after the time fixed for completion of the contract, that this did not amount to a waiver of the condition; that, under the circumstances, time was of the essence of the contract, and that the purchaser ought not to be compelled to complete. Dyas v. Rooney, 27 L. R., Ir. 4—C. A.

Though time be not of the essence of the contract, it may be made so by notice, where there has been great and improper delay on one side in completing. It may, however, be waived by proceeding in the purchase after the expiration of time fixed by notice. King v. Wilson, 6 Beav. 124.

Where upon a sale on the terms of the deposit forfeited if the purchase, through default of the purchaser, is not completed on a certain day, the vendor's agent is informed on that day that the purchase will not be completed until the following day, and no objection is made—the vendor cannot insist that there was a forfeiture on the second day. Carpenter v. Blandford, 3 Man. & Ry. 93; 8 B. & C. 575; 7 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 58.

Where a purchaser had by his acts waived the time of completion in the first instance, and had gone on for some time inducing the vendor to incur expenses to perfect his title, and suddenly, upon the discovery that vacant possession could not be given according to stipulation, declined to complete, the court, though it dismissed a bill filed against such a purchaser for specific performance, dismissed it without costs. Nokes v. Kilmorey, 1 De G. & Sm. 444.

New Date Substituted.]—If it is of the essence of the contract that an act should be completed by a fixed date, an extension of the time does not operate as an absolute waiver of that condition, but only substitutes the extended time for the original time. Barclay v. Messenger, 43 L. J., Ch. 449; 30 L. T. 350; 22 W. R. 522.

Purchase-money payable by instalments. Instalment due on 31st July, and time for payment extended to 26th August:—Held, not absolute waiver, but merely substituted the latter date for the original one. Ib.

Agreement that part of purchase-money was payable at once, and the remainder on 1st January, 1839, on a good title being made out. Before January, 1839, purchaser requested vendor not to press the contract, as he (the purchaser) could not pay the balance, and this the vendor agreed to:—Held, that though time was originally of the essence of the contract, it was waived by the conduct of the parties. Gordon v. Mahony, 13 Ir. Eq. R. 383.

Time of Valuation.]—The time of valuation is of the essence of the contract; but the defendant cannot take advantage of it if he has improperly occasioned the delay. Morse v. Merest, 6 Madd. 26; 22 R. R. 226.

4. Options and Pre-emptions.

a. Who may Exercise.

Mortgagee.]—Equity will not, after a sale, enforce a covenant for pre-emption against mortgagor in favour of mortgagee. Orby v. Trigg, 9 Mod. 2.

Assignee.]—Certain lands were demised for three lives, renewable for ever, subject to a condition for pre-emption, by the lessor, his heirs, or assigns, in case the tenant, his heirs, or assigns, should dispose thereof; and if such preference should not be given, then the lease to cease. The lessor assigned his interest, and the assignee purchased a portion of the tenant's interest:—Held, that the condition could not be taken advantage of by the assignee of the reversion. Sparrow v. Cooper, Hay. & J. 404.

Administrator.]—A lease contained a covenant by the lessor with the lessee, his executors, administrators, and assigns, giving a right of option on certain conditions. The lessee died intestate, and nearly twenty years after his death, his heir, who was also administrator of his personal estate, exercised the option. The heir afterwards contracted to sell part of the property:—Held, that the option to purchase was attached to the lease and passed as part of the lessee's personal estate, and that the administrator could not make a good title unless the next of kin of the lessee would concur. Adams and Kensington Vestry, In re, 54 L. J., Ch. 87; 27 Ch. D. 394; 51 L. T. 382; 32 W. R. 883.

Company to take Land when required for Railway.]—In 1883 an agreement was entered into between the plaintiff and the predecessors of the defendant company, which, after reciting that the company had power to take certain lands of the plaintiff, provided that the company should pay for the purchase of such lands, "or for such portions or portion thereof as the company may require," at the rates therein mentioned; that the purchase should be completed on or before the 1st January, 1885, and that, if not completed by that date, the company should thenceforth pay to the vendor interest on the purchase-money. The plaintiff brought an action claiming specific performance of the agreement. The defendant company who had succeeded the old company insisted that they were not under any obligation to purchase any of the lands except as and when they required them for the construction of their railway which they were not at present in a position to make:—Held, that, unless the company had stated that they required certain of the plaintiff's lands, the agreement could not now be enforced against them, the company having an option to say what lands they required; and that the time within which such option was to be exercised was the 1st January, 1885:—Held, therefore, that the action failed. Wentworth v. Hull and N. W. Junction Ry., 64 L. T. 190.

Voidable Agreement.]—A person who contracts to sell an agreement for a lease must, in the absence of anything to show a contrary intention at the time of the contract, show that the agreement is valid. A contract was entered into for the sale of an agreement for a lease. The agreement was at that time voidable at the will of a third person, and on discovering this the purchaser repudiated the contract. The third person had not avoided the agreement, but offered to renew it conditionally on the vendor's doing a certain thing:—Held, that the purchaser was entitled to repudiate the contract, and was not obliged to wait and see whether the condition would be performed. Brewer v. Broadwood, 52 L. J., Ch. 136; 22 Ch. D. 105; 47 L. T. 508; 31 W. R. 115.

Invalid Lease.]—Trustees with power to grant building leases for 99 years and ordinary leases for 21 years with an option to purchase, granted an ordinary lease for 35 years with an option to C. In exercise of this option, C. purchased the leasehold portion of the land.

Doubts having afterwards arisen as to the validity of the lease, a notice was endorsed upon it, pursuant to 12 & 13 Vict. c. 26, and signed by C. and the trustees, declaring that the lease should be considered in equity as a contract to grant a valid lease under the power to grant ordinary leases. Upon the sale by C. of the leasehold land :—Held, that the lease was invalid; that the defect could not be remedied under 12 & 13 Vict. c. 26, by turning that which was a lease of one kind into a contract for the lease of another kind. Hallett and Martin, In re, 52 L. J., Ch. 804; 48 L. T. 894.

Held, also, that the lease being bad, the option of purchase was ineffectual and could not be exercised. Ib.

Right to Good Title.]—An agreement for a lease contained an option on the part of the plaintiff to purchase the premises within three years. The plaintiff having elected to purchase, the defendant refused to produce his title to the premises :—Held, that the right of the plaintiff was that of an ordinary purchaser, who was entitled to have a good title produced, in the absence of any condition to the contrary, and that the onus was upon the defendant to show that that right had been waived. Welshman v. Spinks, 5 L. T. 385—L. C.

Time when of the Essence.]—See Pegg v. Wisden, infra, col. 1156.

b. Time for and Delay.

Life of Owner.]—A right of pre-emption held limited to the life of the owner of the property. Stocker v. Dean, 16 Beav. 161.

Semble, that a right of pre-emption "at all times thereafter" cannot be enforced after the death of the owner of the property. Ib.

Condition as to Purchase Money.]—A lessor covenanted with the lessee that he should have an option of purchasing the fee by giving notice and paying 2,000*l.*, and also all arrears of rent. The expense of preparing an abstract was to be borne by the lessee :—Held, that the payment of purchase-money was a precedent condition to the delivery of the abstract of title, and that as the lessee had not performed the condition, the contract was not binding on the lessor. Weston v. Collins, 5 N. R. 345; 34 L. J., Ch. 353; 11 Jur. (N.S.) 190; 13 W. R. 510.

Articles of agreement for a lease contained an option to purchase by giving three months' notice, and at the expiration of such notice paying unto the lessor 210*l.* Notice to purchase was given, but the three months elapsed without payment of the money :—Held, that "at the expiration" meant the precise day on which the notice expired, and that the money not being paid at the fixed time, the lessee lost his right to purchase. Ranelagh (Lord) v. Melton, 2 Dr. & Sm. 278; 5 N. R. 101; 34 L. J., Ch. 227; 10 Jur. (N.S.) 1141; 11 L. T. 409; 13 W. R. 150.

And see Wentworth v. Hull and N. W. Junction Ry., supra, col. 1154.

Property Destroyed.]—By a clause the lessee had the option of purchasing the fee simple of the premises comprised in the lease. The term was under the lease determined absolutely by a fire which occurred before the exercise of the option :—Held, that the option to purchase was independent of the duration of the term. Edwards v. West, 47 L. J., Ch. 463; 7 Ch. D. 858; 38 L. T. 481; 26 W. R. 507.

Sub-lessee—Bankruptcy.]—A person entitled to leasehold premises for a long term of years agreed to underlet them to a tenant for three years, and, whenever called upon to do so by the tenant, to grant him a lease, such lease to contain all the usual covenants for protecting the interests of the grantor. The tenant after the three years continued in possession until he became bankrupt, and his interest in the premises was sold by his assignee to a purchaser, who entered into possession :—Held, first, that the option might be exercised at any time during the tenancy. Buckland v. Papillon, 36 L. J., Ch. 81; L. R. 2 Ch. 67; 12 Jur. (N.S.) 992; 15 L. T. 378; 15 W. R. 92.

Held, secondly, that the bankrupt had such an interest in lands as passed to his assignee either under 12 & 13 Vict. c. 106, s. 142, or under s. 145. Ib.

Held, thirdly, that such interest was not prevented from so passing by the absence of the word "assigns" in the agreement. Ib.

Delay.]—An option to purchase in these terms : "M. to have the option at any time during the term to purchase the premises for 3,500*l.*" M. entered into possession, and gave written notice to A. that he elected to purchase. No purchase money was paid as G., a mortgagee, claimed it, and a correspondence went on till March, 1868. In November, 1872, A. became bankrupt. On the 13th May, 1873, M.'s solicitor wrote insisting on M.'s right :—Held, that the option in the agreement of 1861 and the notice of July, 1867, made a binding contract, although the purchase-money was not paid within the term. Mills v. Haywood, 6 Ch. D. 196.

Held, that M.'s right to specific performance was lost by the delay from March, 1868, to May, 1873, which was not excused by his having been in possession. Ib.

A tenant was to have a purchasing clause, at any time within nine years, by giving three months' notice. He gave the notice, and delays occurring, the three months elapsed. Afterwards the landlord gave notice that unless the purchase should be completed within six weeks, he should treat the notice as void, and the right of purchasing as forfeited. The purchase was not completed within the six weeks :—Held, first, time was not of the essence of the contract; secondly, that if it had been, it was waived by the landlord; thirdly, that time was not made of the essence by the notice; and, fourthly, that six weeks was not a reasonable time. Pegg v. Wisden, 16 Beav. 239; 16 Jur. 1105; 1 W. R. 43.

—— Accounts.]—Where a vendor is entitled to repurchase on payment by a given day, and such sum can only be ascertained by accounts to be rendered by the purchaser in possession, such purchaser cannot by rendering such account so late as to preclude the possibility of a settlement within the time, deprive the vendor of his right to repurchase. Ponsford v. Hackney, 2 Giff. 604; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 929; 5 L. T. 226; 9 W. R. 510.

Death of Lessor—Infant Heir.]—Option to purchase by giving notice to the lessor, his heirs or assigns. The lessor died, having devised all his real estate to trustees, who disclaimed, and leaving an infant heir. The lessees having served on the infant and his guardian notice of their election to purchase:—Held, that such notice was effectually served, and constituted a valid and binding contract. Woods v. Hyde, 31 L. J., Ch. 295; 6 L. T. 317; 10 W. R. 339.

—— Costs.]—B. leased lands to H., giving him an option to purchase the fee, having previously devised the land so leased. After B.'s decease, H. desired to exercise the option, for which purpose a suit was necessary:—Held, that the decree must be without costs. Hall v. Bushill, 14 L. T. 246; 14 W. R. 495.

Breach of Covenant—Agreement to Insure.]—The defendant agreed, in consideration of the plaintiff erecting a house, to grant a lease of the same when completed; and the plaintiff agreed to insure in a named office in the joint names of the plaintiff and the defendant; and the defendant further agreed that the plaintiff should, within two years from the date of the agreement, have the option to purchase for a stipulated sum. The plaintiff erected the house, but insured in another office, and in his own name only. The plaintiff within the time limited signified his intention to purchase. The defendant refused to sell on the ground of the breach of covenant, and commenced an ejectment against the plaintiff:—Held, that the contract to sell was a distinct and separate part of the agreement; and a decree was made restraining the ejectment, and for the specific performance of the agreement. Green v. Low, 2 Jur. (N.S.) 848; 4 W. R. 669.

Non-compliance with Condition.]—By deed, dated January, 1857, it was agreed that if Company A. should "on or before any 25th December, after having given to Company B. six months' previous notice of their desire to avail themselves of the option thereby given, pay unto Company B." the amount of their share capital, the party so paying should become absolutely entitled to the works. In June, 1870, the corporation, who had acquired the interest of Company A., gave notice to Company B. of their intention to pay this sum on the 25th December following, but they were unable from want of funds to carry out the purchase. In June, 1871, they again gave notice that they would pay the money on the 25th December, 1871:—Held, that the corporation, by giving the first notice and failing to act upon it, had not lost the right given to them by the deed. Ward v. Wolverhampton Waterworks Co., 41 L. J., Ch. 308; L. R. 13 Eq. 243.

Ejectment—Injunction.]—A yearly tenant with the option of purchasing, having filed his bill for a specific performance against the landlord, the latter, after notice to quit, brought an action of ejectment against him, whereupon the tenant applied for an injunction to restrain the action, which the court only granted upon the terms of the tenant continuing to pay the rent without prejudice. Pyke v. Northwood, 1 Beav. 152.

5. Sale at a Valuation.

General Rule.]—Where on a sale of property the parties have stipulated that the price shall be ascertained in a particular way, and it is not so ascertained, the court cannot, in the absence of special circumstances, interfere to aid the carrying out of the contract by having the price ascertained in some different mode. Morgan v. Milman, 3 De G. M. & G. 24; 22 L. J., Ch. 897; 17 Jur. 193; 1 W. R. 143.

A purchaser having agreed to buy land and works for 7,700*l.*, and to take the plant and machinery at a valuation:—Held, that the necessity of a valuation was no reason for refusing specific performance at the suit of the vendor. Jackson v. Jackson, 1 Sm. & G. 184; 22 L. J. Ch. 873; 17 Jur. 293; 1 W. R. 264.

Goodwill.]—An agreement for the sale of leasehold premises and the goodwill of a trade and fixtures, to be taken at a valuation to be made by two gaugers, to be named, or their umpire:—Held, that a court of equity could not decree a specific performance of an agreement, one part of which was left to be determined by arbitration. Darbey v. Whitaker, 4 Drew. 134; 5 W. R. 772.

Semble, the court will not decree payment of a valuation to be made, but will enforce a contract for purchase of a goodwill where it is annexed to the premises. Ib.

Arbitration or Valuation.]—Difference between a contract to sell at a price, to be determined by arbitration, and a contract which is only to be valid provided the price fixed be not less than the value determined by arbitration. Baker v. Metropolitan Ry., 31 Beav. 504; 1 N. R. 8; 32 L. J., Ch. 7; 9 Jur. (N.S.), 61; 7 L. T. 494; 11 W. R. 18.

Where Valuation not made.]—The price is of the essence of a contract of sale; if therefore to be fixed by arbitrators, and they do not fix it, there is no contract, but the court determining that an agreement ought to be executed, does not require foreign aid to carry the details into execution. Gourlay v. Somerset, 19 Ves. 431.

A specific performance cannot be decreed of an agreement to sell at a price to be settled by arbitrators named by the parties, if no award has been made; but if the parties agree to pay the amount of a valuation, but have not appointed any persons to make it, the court will interfere so as to ascertain the value, and direct a specific performance of the agreement. Daly v. Duggan, 1 Ir. Eq. R. 312.

By the terms of the agreement the land was to be valued, and the purchase money was not to be less than 400*l.* Quære, whether this agreement could be enforced, no valuation having been made. Potts v. Thames Haven Dock and Ry., 15 Jur. 1004.

A contract for the sale of land provided that one party was to be consulted on any houses proposed to be built thereon by the other, and in case of difference, that A. and B., or their nominees, should have power to decide any such question. There having been no decision:—Held, that the court could not specifically perform the contract. Tillett v. Charing Cross Bridge Co., 26 Beav. 419; 28 L. J., Ch. 863; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 994.

Party not permitting Valuation.]—Where there is a contract to sell at a valuation by A., B. and C., the court will compel the vendor to permit the valuation. Morse v. Merest, 6 Madd. 26; 22 R. R. 226.

When an agreement has been entered into for the sale of a house at a fixed price, and of the fixtures and furniture therein, at a valuation by a person named by both parties, and he is refused permission by the vendor to enter the premises for that purpose, the court will compel the vendor to allow the valuation to proceed. Smith v. Peters, 44 L. J., Ch. 613; L. R. 20 Eq. 511; 23 W. R. 783.

By the contract for the sale of an estate it was agreed that the price should be 24,000*l.*, and that certain furniture and other articles on the estate should be valued by valuers mutually agreed upon. The vendor refused to appoint a valuer, and refused to complete. A decree made at the suit of the purchaser for specific performance of the contract, except so far as it related to the furniture and articles. Richardson v. Smith, 39 L. J., Ch. 877; L. R. 5 Ch. 648; 19 W. R. 81.

Specific performance cannot be decreed of an agreement to sell at a price to be fixed by arbitrators (already appointed), where the vendor had refused to execute the arbitration bond, and it was therefore uncertain that any award would ever be made. Wilks v. Davis, 3 Mer. 507.

—— Contract when Completed.]—Agreement for sale, according to the valuation of two persons, one chosen by each party, or of an umpire, to be appointed by those two, in case of disagreement. Bill for a specific performance that the court will appoint a person to make the valuation, or otherwise ascertain it, dismissed. Milnes v. Gery, 14 Ves. 400.

A contract that does not settle the price is valid and complete only when and if the party to whom it is referred shall fix it, and is otherwise totally inoperative. Ib., 408.

A. and B., being in partnership, came to an agreement whereby B. was to buy out A., and it was agreed that if B. should, during A.'s life, be desirous of retiring, he should give notice, and A. should then have an option of repurchase, on the terms that within six months after notice by A. the premises, goodwill, and stock-in-trade, should be valued in the "usual way" by two valuers, one to be named by A., the other by B., or by the umpire of the two valuers. B. gave notice of his intention to retire, whereupon A. gave notice of his intention to repurchase, and two valuers were appointed; but after the appointment B. refused to allow his valuer to proceed with the valuation:—Held, on the authority of Milnes v. Gery (supra) and Wilks v. Davis (supra) that there was no contract between the parties which the court could specifically enforce. Vickers v. Vickers, 36 L. J., Ch. 946; L. R. 4 Eq. 529.

When two partners made an agreement, containing a provision that on the determination of the partnership, one partner should purchase the share of the other at a valuation to be made by two persons, one to be appointed by each partner, and the partnership was carried on for some time under the agreement:—Held, that though the valuation could not be so made, because no umpire was provided, a court of equity would carry the partnership agreement into effect by ascertaining the value of the share. Dinham v. Bradford, L. R. 5 Ch. 519.

Where the fixing a value by arbitrators is not of the essence of an agreement, the court will carry the agreement into effect, and will itself, if necessary, ascertain the value. Ib.

Death of Party.]—Under a contract for sale at a price to be fixed by an award within a limited time during the lives of the parties, the death of one is not an accident against which the court will relieve. Blundell v. Brettarch, 17 Ves. 241. And see Pulteney v. Warren, 6 Ves. 88.

Agreement between vendor and purchaser of a copyhold estate, in which they covenant for themselves and their representatives to fulfil the cnotract, and to refer the question of value. One of the parties dying, the representatives cannot annul the decision of the referee, by showing an error in his estimate. Belchier v. Reynolds, 2 Ken. 87.

A landowner and a railway company who took part of his land agreed that an estimate should be made by the company's engineer of the costs of completing a certain road, and submitted to A., the landowner's agent, "for approval: in case of difference the amount to be determined by B.," the amount, when agreed or determined, to be paid to the landowner, in discharge of all obligations as to the road; and the purchase to be completed forthwith. A. died; and afterwards the company sent in an estimate for the cost of completing the road. B. was living:—Held, that the submission of the estimate to A. for approval was of the essence of the agreement; and that, inasmuch as by his death the agreement was incapable of being performed in the manner and form therein specified, the court could not enforce performance of it. Firth v. Midland Ry., 44 L. J., Ch. 313; L. R. 20 Eq. 100; 32 L. T. 219; 23 W. R. 509.

Contract with Party under Disability.]—Though a person may agree to sell at a price to be fixed by arbitration, and the award can be impeached only upon the grounds affecting all awards, as fraud or gross mistake: yet upon such an agreement, where some of the persons to be bound were married women, of whom also one had not executed, the court refused a specific performance. Emery v. Wase, 5 Ves. 846.

Where a railway company agreed for the purchase of lands from persons under disability, and the certificate of two surveyors, as to the adequacy of price, had not been obtained, the court refused to decree specific performance at the instance of the company. Wycombe Ry. v. Donnington Hospital, L. R. 1 Ch. 268; 12 Jur. (N.S.) 347; 14 L. T. 179; 14 W. R. 359.

Upon a bill for specific performance, an issue was directed whether the defendant was lunatic at the time of executing the contract, which was for the sale of lands at a price to be fixed by persons to be nominated. Hall v. Warren, 9 Ves. 608.

Valuation how made.]—Option to purchase at a valuation; valuation must be fair and adequate. Option must be declared before valuation. Edwards v. Edwards, 1 Jur. 654.

—— Price.]—The defendant agreed to purchase a property at a valuation to be made by A. The court, though it considered A.'s valuation very high, "and perhaps exorbitant," decreed specific performance, there appearing neither "fraud, mistake, nor miscarriage." Collier v. Mason, 25 Beav. 200.

A. entered into a contract with B. for the sale of property to him at a price to be fixed by two valuers, named in the contract, who afterwards valued the property at an inadequate price:—Held, nevertheless, that B. was entitled to a decree for specific performance, there being no proof of fraud or collusion. Weekes v. Gallard, 21 L. T., 655; 18 W. R. 331.

Specific performance will not be decreed of an agreement to sell certain property at a price to be settled by two persons who are named, if the court sees reason to believe that the price subsequently fixed by these persons is considerably below the real value of the property. Parken v. Whitby, Turn. & R. 366.

—— Evidence.]—Upon a reference to surveyors or other persons of skill, to fix the value of property, they are not necessarily to examine witnesses, but may judge from their own experience and observation; their not having examined witnesses is, therefore, not an objection to their award, provided they bonâ fide mean to say that they know enough of the subject to decide properly without doing so. Semble, it would not be a good ground of objection to an award, that the referees consulted with the umpire simply. But where a referee consulted with the umpire, and then concurred in an award fixing the value of the matter in question at the amount mentioned to him by the umpire, although he himself did not think it worth half of that amount, but because he thought it of no use differing:—Held, that the award was bad. Eads v. Williams, 4 De G. M. & G. 674; 3 Eq. R. 244; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 193; 3 W. R. 98.

6. Sale by Agent.

a. Authority.

i. In General.

Of Estate Agent.]—Upon a written request by an owner of freehold property to an estate agent to procure a purchaser for it and to advertise it at a certain price:—Held, that the estate agent had no authority to enter into an open contract for sale; and, semble, that he had no authority to enter into any contract for sale. Hamer v. Sharp, 44 L. J., Ch. 53; L. R. 19 Eq. 108; 31 L. T. 643; 23 W. R. 158.

When an owner of property employs an estate agent to procure a purchaser or tenant at a specified price, the agent has no implied authority to conclude a contract for sale; his duty is simply to find a purchaser or tenant, and to communicate his offer to the owner. Wilde v. Watson, 1 L. R. Ir. 402.

Evidence of.]—Where an agent contracts it may be proved by parol evidence who is his principal. Morris v. Wilson, 5 Jur. (N.S.) 168.

How Pleaded.—The former practice, which, in a suit for specific performance, required the authority of an agent to enter into a binding contract on behalf of his principal to be specially pleaded, still prevails. Vale of Neath Colliery Co. v. Furness, 45 L. J., Ch. 276; 34 L. T. 231; 24 W. R. 631.

—— Insanity.]—In an action for specific performance of an agreement made by an agent, the statement of defence, after alleging unsoundness of mind of the principal, denied that any agreement had been entered into by a person lawfully authorised, and claimed the benefit of the statute of frauds:—Held, that the defendant had not put in issue the question of authority of the agent, and was only entitled to adduce evidence with respect to the unsoundness of mind. Byrd v. Nunn, 47 L. J., Ch. 1; 7 Ch. D. 284; 37 L. T. 585; 26 W. R. 101.

—— Breach of Trust.]—To a claim for specific performance of an agreement to sell lands, the defendant pleaded, first, that the agreement was entered into by a house agent, who was not authorised by the defendant to sell: secondly, that since the contract the defendant had notice that the purchasers were trustees of a marriage settlement, and that the property might be an improper investment of the trust funds. Interrogatories by the defendant, directed to establish that the investment was a breach of trust, were struck out as irrelevant. Mansfield v. Childerhouse, 46 L. J., Ch. 30; 2 Ch. D. 82.

Action for Specific Performance by Agent.]—The owner of a colliery placed it in the hands of an agent to sell at a minimum price of 12,000*l.*, on the understanding that he should be entitled to the difference between 12,000*l.* and any greater sum which the colliery might fetch. The agent treated with R., who agreed to purchase the colliery for 12,000*l.*, and pay the agent 2,000*l.* for his expenses and commission. R. afterwards declined to purchase the colliery, and the agent filed a bill against him and the owner for specific performance of the agreement:—Held, that the bill was not maintainable. Glashrook v. Richardson, 23 W. R. 51.

ii. Sufficiency and Proof of.

General Rule.]—If an agent for a purchaser, having general authority, contracts to purchase such title as the vendor has, the court will compel specific performance of the contract. St. John v. Stirling, 1 Tam. 23; 7 L. J. (O.S.) Ch. 189.

Where the authority of the agent of the vendor was not sufficiently shown, a specific performance at the suit of the purchaser was refused, but, under the circumstances, without costs. Wilkinson v. Stringer, 9 Hare (App.) xxiii.; 16 Jur. 1033; 1 W. R. 30.

Acceptance within Fixed Time.]—A. was authorised by the defendant to make a proposal of sale of land to the plaintiff, but to be accepted within a week. The plaintiff wrote to A. within that time accepting the offer, but A. did not communicate the acceptance to the defendant until long after:—Held, that there was a valid contract, which was not destroyed by the neglect of A. to communicate the acceptance to the defendant. Wright v. Bigg, 15 Beav. 592.

Misleading Particulars.]—Purchaser, under particulars giving a false description, not bound at law or in equity, or by any act of his agent, without a fresh authority. Deverell v. Bolton (Lord), 18 Ves. 509.

Misstatements by Agent.]—Where an agent, commissioned by a vendor to find a purchaser, makes a false statement as to the description or value (though not instructed so to do), which the purchaser is led to believe, and upon which he relies, the vendor cannot recover in an action for specific performance. A surveyor was employed by the owner of a leasehold house to find a purchaser. He represented to the defendant that H. was ready to buy the property for 700*l.*, and that if the defendant were to give 50*l.* more he would make a clear profit of 7 per cent.; that H. had further offered to rent the property at 300*l.*, or the ground floor only at 200*l.* The defendant, relying on the above representations, contracted to purchase for 750*l.*, but refused to complete. The vendor himself also made a misleading statement to the purchaser:—Held, that the false statements made by the agent, being within his authority, were sufficient to vitiate the contract; and specific performance refused. Mullens v. Miller, 52 L. J., Ch. 380; 22 Ch. D. 194; 48 L. T. 103; 31 W. R. 559.

Receipt of Deposit by Agent.]—A. and B. having entered into a verbal treaty for the purchase of certain premises belonging to A., and not being able to agree as to the amount of the purchase money, A. addressed a letter to C., a third person, stating that he would take a certain sum from B. for the premises. B. subsequently lodged the sum named by A. with C., of which lodgment C. made a memorandum on A.'s letter, with the remark that it was "a great price":—Held, that C. must be considered the agent of A., and that, as he had signed the contract acknowledging the receipt of the purchase money, A. was bound to perform the agreement. Field v. Boland, 1 Dr. & Wal. 37.

Extent of Authority.]—The owner of an estate, in answer to an inquiry from an intending lessee, said, "A. manages all my affairs, and you are to treat with him." This does not imply that A. had authority to enter into a binding agreement. Semble. Ridgway v. Wharton, 3 De G. M. & G. 677. Affirmed, 6 H. L. Cas. 238: 2 Eq. R. 839; 27 L. J., Ch. 46; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 173; 5 W. R. 804.

Solicitor Agent to both Parties.]—Where the same solicitor acting for both parties in a sale and purchase, submitted conditions which he represented to be "usual conditions," and the purchaser afterwards refused to complete, on the ground that some of them were unusual:—Held, that the purchaser must be considered to have acted under the advice of his own solicitor, and that specific performance must be decreed. Minton v. Kirwood, 35 L. J., Ch. 393; L. R. 1 Eq. 449; 13 L. T. 743. Affirmed 12 Jur. (N.S.) 970; 15 W. R. 116.

B., in writing, authorised his solicitor, M., to sell all the property mentioned, and to sign an agreement for such sale on his behalf. M. offered the property to H., another client of his, and he entered into a contract for the purchase. The contract was signed by M. for B., and by H. as acting on his own behalf:—Held, that the authority given to M. was sufficient to enable him to enter into the contract; that it was properly used, and that the contract must be specifically performed by B. Hesse v. Briant, 2 Jur. (N.S.) 922.

Held, also, that the rule which will not permit a person in a confidential relation to act on behalf of both vendor and purchaser did not apply. Ib.

Agent or Puffer.]—A purchaser alleged, by his answer to a suit for specific performance, that he acted as a puffer in bidding for one lot, and also as puffer in bidding for another lot, which was knocked down to him; and that he therefore purchased the lot, and signed the agreement for the purchase, as the agent of the vendor; but the statement in his depositions of the circumstances attending the signature was somewhat different from that in his answer, and he had signed an order on his attorney for payment of the deposit money:—Held, that there was not sufficient evidence of agency, and the defendant was held to have purchased on his own account. Bennett v. Smith, 16 Jur. 421.

Signature of Agent.]—B. became the purchaser of premises at an auction, declaring himself the agent of C. in C.'s presence; but the vendor's solicitor required B. to sign the agreement, and declined to substitute the name of C. Communications afterwards took place between the vendor's solicitor and C., with reference to the title:—Held, that, supposing B. to be the agent of C., yet the signature of B. to the contract made him personally liable to perform it. That the communication between the vendor's solicitors and the solicitor of C. with reference to the title was not an adoption of C. as the purchaser in the place of B., but should be assumed to be made in furtherance of the original contract, in which, according to B.'s representation, he was (as between himself and C.) only a formal party. That the acceptance of the title by C. in such communications would not be binding upon B., for such acceptance would be regarded as having been made in C.'s own right, as claiming through B., and not as agent for B. Chadwick v. Maden, 9 Hare, 188; 21 L. J., Ch. 876.

Secretary of Company.]—An agreement to sell property was signed for a company by the secretary, who was alleged to be its authorised agent. The agreement was made subject to conditions of sale, and it was alleged that the vendors therein described referred to the company:—Held, that the allegations in the bill were sufficient to show that the secretary was the authorised agent. Beer v. London & Paris Hotel Co., L. R. 20 Eq. 412; 32 L. T. 715.

Several Principals.]—Baron and feme having joint power to sell an estate of the wife's, give authority to an agent to sell by auction; he sells by private contract for more than the price they required; the buyer cannot compel specific performance. Husband delivering his wife's compliments in a letter to the agent, is no proof of her joining in giving authority to agent. Daniel v. Adams, Amb. 495.

E. entered into an agreement, for himself and brothers and sisters, to sell to the plaintiff fields, forming part of an estate, for 1,000*l.*, and the plaintiff was to have possession on the 25th March. The agreement was signed by A. and B. only; but the bill alleged that E., and his four brothers and sisters, who were tenants in common of the equity of redemption, agreed to sell the property to the plaintiff, and that A. and B., or at least one of them, signed the agreement as agents or agent of their brothers and sister. The plaintiff, with the privity of the five tenants in common, paid the purchase money to the mortgagee in part satisfaction of the mortgage, and he was let into possession. An abstract of the title was furnished, and accepted. E. and A. and B. admitted that they agreed to sell to the plaintiff, and that they believed their brothers and sister would concur in the agreement, but that they had no authority from them to sell, of which the plaintiff was aware. A. and B. denied that they signed on behalf of anyone. C. and D. denied that they had ratified the agreement, and submitted that they were not bound; but, in fact, D. was with E. and A. and B. present when the purchase money was paid to the mortgagee:—Held, that there was not enough to show that C. was bound by the agreement; but that D., the other tenant in common, was bound, having been present when the money was paid to the mortgagee. Davies v. Davies, 6 Jur. (N.S.), 1320; 3 L. T. 233.

——Proprietors.]—Several persons interested in a piece of land, authorised, by agreement, one of their number, W., to dispose of it. The land was divided into lots, and a plan of the lots made, and conditions, on which the land might be let or sold, were printed on the plan. M., an intending purchaser, made inquiries of W. as to certain lots. W. expressly informed him that he must purchase subject to the conditions stated on the plan. One of these conditions required that a purchaser should execute a contract embodying the conditions. M. offered to purchase these lots at a price which he named. W. promised to lay his offer before "the proprietors" (without naming or describing them), and wrote to M. that he had done so, and that the proprietors had accepted his offer; adding, that in reducing the price they had taken into consideration his intention of soon building on the land, an intention which of course they wished to encourage. There was nothing in the conditions which bound a purchaser to build, though there were provisions which assumed that he might do so, and which, in such a case, regulated the mode of proceeding. M. wrote, in answer, that he could not be bound to build at any given time, or at all. W. replied that the acceptance of the offer was without condition, and that M. was free to do what he might think best:—Held, that the dealings between the parties sufficiently showed the authority of W. to enter into the contract; and, farther, that the description of "the proprietors" for whom he acted was sufficient. Rossiter v. Miller, 48 L. J., Ch. 10; 3 App. Cas. 1124; 39 L. T. 173; 26 W. R. 865—H. L. (E.)

Parol Authority.]—Authority of agent may be by parol; the agreement must be by writing. Mortlock v. Buller, 10 Ves. 311.

A contract for the purchase of land made by an agent will be enforced, although the agent was appointed merely by parol. Heard v. Pilley, 38 L. J., Ch. 718; L. R. 4 Ch. 548; 21 L. T. 68; 17 W. R. 750.

——In Ireland.]—An agent to contract for the sale, &c., of land, under the second section of the statute of frauds (Irish statute), need not to be authorised by writing. Clinan v. Cooke, 1 Sch. & Lef. 22.

——Vesting of Estate in Equity.]—A contract for the purchase of land made by an agent in his own name vests the equitable estate in the principal, and may be established by him against the agent and persons claiming under him, although the agent is appointed merely by parol. Cave v. Mackenzie, 46 L. J., Ch. 564; 37 L. T. 218.

b. Personal Liability of Agent.

Verbal Contract.]—When a person assumes, without authority, to act as agent for the sale of real estate, and the contract is merely verbal, the person injured by relying on his representations has no remedy in equity against him for damages; and there is nothing in the judicature acts to alter this rule. Warr v. Jones, 24 W. R. 695.

Where Remedy at Law.]—B., an attorney, representing himself to be authorised by the owners, entered into an agreement on their behalf to sell a house to the plaintiff, and he received a deposit. The plaintiff filed a bill against the owners and B. praying a specific performance. It appeared at the hearing that B. had not authority to sell:—Held, that the remedy of the plaintiff against B. being altogether at law, could not be had in this suit. Sainsbury v. Jones, 5 Myl. & Cr. 1; 4 Jur. 499. Affirming 2 Beav. 462.

Signature when Personally Binding.]—B became the purchaser of premises at an auction declaring himself the agent of C. in C.'s presence, but the vendor's solicitor required B. to sign the agreement, and declined to substitute the name of C. Communications afterwards took place between the vendors' solicitor and C. with reference to the title:—Held, that supposing B. to be the agent of C., yet the signature of B. to the contract made him personally liable to perform it; that the acceptance of the title by C. would not be binding upon B., for such acceptance would be regarded as having been made in C.'s own right as claiming through B., and not as agent for B. Chadwick v. Maden, 9 Hare, 188; 21 L. J., Ch. 876. And see Bennett v. Smith, 16 Jur. 421; supra, col. 1164.

Extent of Liability.]—If a party executes a deed as principal, he at once takes the property and makes himself liable for the purchase money, and he will not be heard to say that no contract existed with the vendor, or that his execution was obtained upon the representation of a third party that the purchase-money was paid, and that he took the property in the character of trustee only. Wilson v. Keating, 28 L. J., Ch. 895; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 815. Affirmed, 7 W. R. 635—L.JJ.

For Concealment of Incumbrance.]—Attorney, as agent, on sale of an estate, not disclosing to the buyer an incumbrance, and leading him to suppose the title good:—Held, liable to make satisfaction in default of the vendor. Arnot v. Biscoe, 1 Ves. sen. 95.

7. SALE BY AUCTION.

See AUCTION AND AUCTIONEER.

8. PARTICULARS AND CONDITIONS OF SALE.

a. Particulars in General.

Misdescription.]—Purchaser under particular giving a false description, not bound at law or in equity, nor by any act of his agent without a fresh authority. Deverell v. Bolton (Lord), 18 Ves. 509.

Vagueness.]—Specific performance decreed against a purchaser at a public auction, where representation in the particulars of sale was so vague and indefinite that it ought to have put the purchaser on making previous inquiry. Trower v Newcome, 3 Mer. 704; 17 R. R. 171.

Small Error.]—Agreements for sale of an estate, especially if by auction, depend on the bona fides of the transaction; therefore trifling errors in the description are not material. Calcraft v. Roebuck, 1 Ves. J. 221; 1 R. R. 126.

Preparing Particulars.]—Observations upon the duty of a vendor in preparing particulars of the estate to be sold. Martin v. Cotter, 3 Jo. & Lat. 496; 9 Ir. Eq. R. 351.

Property put up for sale at public auctions should be most accurately described; and not merely so described as that a purchaser may, by drawing the proper deductions from the particulars and conditions of sale, ascertain what is intended to be sold. Swaisland v. Dearsley, 29 Beav. 430; 30 L. J., Ch. 652; 4 L. T. 432; 9 W. R. 526.

When the property is sold by auction it is the office of particulars to give an accurate description of the property. Torrance v. Bolton, 42 L. J., Ch. 177; L. R. 8 Ch. 118; 27 L. T. 738; 21 W. R. 134.

Suppression of Fact.]—A fund of 500*l.* which was indemnity for costs in a pending suit was put up for sale by the owner, the defendant, under a particular, which stated the above fact, and further, that there was a considerable sum applicable for payment of costs, and that such costs would be paid thereout; also, that the fund of 500*l.* might be looked upon as a secure and sound investment. The plaintiff purchased, and then alleged that the owner knew all the fund would be required for the indemnity. The court, being of opinion that the defendant had knowledge of this fact:—Held, that he could not be heard to say it was not present to his mind when he put the property up for sale. Mathias v. Yetts, 46 L. T. 497.

Conveyance of Less than in Particular.]—Where a particular, the only written evidence of the contract, contains more than the words of the conveyance will in strictness carry, the purchaser cannot compel specific execution of the residue on the particular. Cass v. Waterhouse, Pre. Ch. 29.

Occupation.]—Particulars stated cottages to be in the occupation of the owners of an adjoining colliery. It turned out that the cottages paid no rent:—Held, that the vendor must state all the truth on the particulars, and inform himself of it when he sells, and the purchaser must be held to have notice of all contained in the particulars and conditions. But these particulars did not lead to the fact of the existence of the deed under which the cottages were held, and therefore there must be inquiries as to the tenure of the cottages. Brandling v. Plummer, 2 Drew. 427; 2 Eq. R. 1260; 23 L. J., Ch. 960; 2 W. R. 662.

Sale in Lots.]—Where the vendor of lands in lots for the purpose of buildings, accompanies his description, particulars, and conditions of sale with a map delineating the intended divisions of the property by new roads, he must be understood to hold out expectations that the lots will be so divided, and it would not be competent to him to divide the land in a different manner, so as to attract an occupancy and population entirely different from that which would have been produced by acting on the plan proposed and held out at the sale. Peacock v. Penson, 11 Beav. 355; 18 L. J., Ch. 57; 14 Jur. 518.

The actual designation in the particulars of the property offered for sale of the number of acres contained in a lot:—Held, to negative the presumption of any intention, on the part of the vendor, to sell the estate in a lump. Leslie v. Tompson, 9 Hare, 273; 20 L. J., Ch. 561; 15 Jur. 717.

When property is sold in lots, described in particulars of sale, a vendee is only affected with notice of what concerns the lots which he purchases, and is not to be taken as having read all the particulars of all the lots. Curtis v. Thomas, 33 L. T. 664.

—— One Lease.]—Where leasehold property which is sold in separate lots is held under one lease, it is incumbent on the vendor to state that fact in plain and distinct terms. Sheard v. Venables, 36 L. J., Ch. 922; 17 L. T. 10; 15 W. R. 1166.

Purchase after Attempted Sale.]—A. and his agent attended an auction for the sale of a house, at which certain conditions of sale were exhibited, and with which they became acquainted. A. afterwards, through his agent and the agent of the vendor, purchased the same house:—Held, that the particulars of sale were not incorporated with the purchase. Cowley v. Watts, 22 L. J., Ch. 591; 17 Jur. 172; 1 W. R. 218, 484.

Lease, "such as it is."]—When a purchaser buys a house and has it conveyed to him without any reservation, he takes the lease, not "such as it is," but such as it is described in the particulars of sale, and conveyed by the deed. Suffield v. Brown, 4 De G. J. & S. 185; 3 N. R. 340; 33 L. J., Ch. 249; 10 Jur. (N.S.) 111; 9 L. T. 827; 12 W. R. 356.

Alteration of Particulars.]—Printed particulars were varied in writing by the reservation of a right of way, and this alteration was read out by the auctioneer. The contract was signed by the auctioneer by mistake on a copy not containing the reservation. Bill by purchaser for specific performance without the reservation, dismissed without costs. Manser v. Back, 6 Hare, 443.

Mistake in Lots.]—Particulars stated that lot 5 contained a yard and stable, whereas this was comprised in the lease of lot 6. H. bought lot 5 and took an assignment of the property in lot 5. L. purchased lot 6 and took an assignment of all the property comprised in the lease of lot 6:—Held, that H. was entitled to an assignment from L. of the yard and stable, for according to the true construction of the particulars, H. had contracted to buy them and L. had not. Leuty v. Hillas, 2 De G. & J. 110; 27 L. J., Ch. 534; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 1166; 6 W. R. 217. And see Ellis v. Hills, 67 L. T. 287.

Warranty.]—Where there is a warranty in the particulars relating to a matter not immediately in question, in an action by a vendor for not completing, it must be shown to have been complied with. Thompson v. Miles, 1 Esp. 184.

Plan annexed to Particulars—No Reference to Plan in Particulars or Conditions.]—To particulars of sale a plan was annexed entitled, "Plan of four plots of land to be submitted by auction," and upon the plan was printed a note, "This plan is simply prepared as a guide to intending purchasers, and its accuracy in regard to area, measurement, abuttals, or otherwise, is in no way guaranteed." The particulars stated, "A right of way will be granted to each purchaser over the path at the back." The plan showed four lots extending from N. road to a line representing the boundary wall of the vendor's property, with figures showing depth of frontage as stated in the particulars. A cross line was drawn across the lots 4 ft. from the wall, but the space between this line and the wall was coloured with the rest of the lots, and the division lines of the lots were carried through this space to the wall. There was no express reference to the plan in the particulars or conditions. There was no actual path in existence, and nothing to show what the references to a path in the particulars and conditions meant, except the cross line on the plan:—Held, that the plan formed part of the contract by which the vendor was bound. Lindsay and Forder's Contract, In re, 72 L. T. 832.

b. Conditions in General.

General Rule.]—When property is sold by auction it is the office of the conditions to state the terms on which the sale is made. Torrance v. Bolton, 42 L. J., Ch. 177; L. R. 8 Ch. 118; 27 L. T. 73; 21 W. R. 134.

Condition Objected to before Sale.]—A condition of sale was objected to by the solicitor of B., a likely purchaser, and also by another person at the sale. The property was not sold, and on the following day the owner persuaded B. to buy at an exorbitant price, with a reference to the objected condition:—Held, that specific performance could not be enforced. Lee v. Dawson, 4 L. T. 464.

Constructive Notice of Covenants.]—Conditions of sale referred to certain letters patent:—Held, that the purchaser had constructive notice of the covenants in the letters patent, under which the property was held. Stewart v. Conyngham (Marquis), 1 Ir. Ch. R. 534.

Auctioneer, Power of.]—Quære, whether on a sale by auction the auctioneer has authority to frame conditions of sale and to do all things necessary to carry the sale into effect. Pike v. Wilson, 1 Jur. (N.S.) 59.

Catching Conditions.]—Facts stated in the conditions of sale as the grounds of such conditions, must be proved, though it appeared to be the object of the conditions to exclude inquiry into those facts. Symons v. James, 1 Y. & C. C. C. 487; 6 Jur. 452.

Purchaser discharged from purchase against catching conditions of sale. Adams v. Lambert, 2 Jur. 1078.

Where conditions of sale are not drawn bonâ fide, but are intended to cover difficulties arising from facts uncommunicated, they will not preclude the purchaser from taking the objection. Jackson v. Whitehead, 28 Beav. 154.

—— How Construed.]—Conditions of sale must be construed strictly against the person who forms them. Greaves v. Wilson, 25 Beav. 290; 27 L. J., Ch. 546; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 271; 5 W. R. 482.

The conditions of sale, were (inter alia) (8) that the purchaser shall not object to the title in connection with the sale of the premises to R., to whom the assignment of them, dated the 29th January, 1870, was made, but should assume that R. acquired under and by virtue of the deed a valid title to the premises by the deed expressed to be assigned to him; (9) that the purchaser should not object to the title because L., in 1858, as a trustee for B., purchased from the trustees of the then owners, B. being one of the last-mentioned trustees. The title was bad on the ground that R., the assignee of the deed of 1870, had purchased the premises sold for X. and others, X. being one of the trustees for sale of the property so bought, and also on the ground that L., the assignee in the deed of 1858, had purchased for B., who was also a trustee for sale:—Held, in a suit for specific performance by the vendor, that whatever opinion might be entertained as to the ninth condition, the eighth condition was so framed as to deceive the purchaser, and entirely throw him off his guard by unwarrantably suppressing and masking a fatal defect in the title. Boyd v. Dickson, Ir. R. 10 Eq. 239.

—— Annuity.]—On sale of reversion to freehold estate subject to a term for an annuity, one of the conditions of sale was, that certain evidence that "a life annuity granted to" A. B. had not been paid or claimed for twenty years, should be conclusive evidence that the annuity and term had determined:—Held, that the condition was not binding, as it was so worded as to lead a purchaser to a definite conclusion contrary to the real facts of the case. Drysdale v. Mace, 5 De G. M. & G. 103; 2 Eq. R. 386; 23 L. J., Ch. 518; 2 W. R. 341.

Ambiguous Conditions.]—Vendors, having put forth ambiguous conditions of sale:—Held, to be bound strictly by those conditions. Seaton v. Mapp, 2 Coll. C. C. 556.

Where conditions of sale are so obscurely worded, that, taken in connection with the particulars of sale, they are likely to mislead an ordinary purchaser as to the nature of the property offered for sale, semble, that the court will discharge the purchaser from his bargain. Taylor v. Martindale, 1 Y. & C. C. C. 658; 10 L. J., Ch. 339; 5 Jur. 648.

Depreciatory Conditions.]—Observations on the effect of stringent conditions of sale on the value of property. Hoy v. Smythies, 2 Jur. (N.S.) 1011.

—— Sale by Trustees.]—Trustees with discretionary trust for sale sold by auction in Nov. 1882, subject to conditions of sale which provided that the abstract should commence with the conveyance to the testator, dated the 2nd of Oct., 1872, and that every recital or statement in any abstracted document should be deemed conclusive evidence of the fact or matter recited or stated therein, or to be assumed or implied therefrom:—Held, that the conditions of sale were depreciatory, and rendered the sale liable to be impeached by the cestui que trust. Dunn v. Flood, 49 L. T. 670; 32 W. R. 197. S. P., Dance v. Goldingham, 42 L. J., Ch. 777; L. R. 8 Ch. 902; 29 L. T. 166; 21 W. R. 761.

Unreasonable Conditions.]—On a sale of a public house the contract tendered contained stipulations that the purchaser should pay the expenses of the investigation of the vendor's title, and that, if the purchaser should insist on any objection or requisition as to title which the vendor should be unable or unwilling to remove or comply with, the vendor might annul the sale and return the deposit, but without any interest or costs of investigating the title; and that if the purchaser shall fail to comply with the conditions, his deposit should thereupon be forfeited to the vendor, who should be at liberty to resell the property:—Held, these conditions were unreasonable. Moeser v. Wisker, 40 L. J., C. P. 94; L. R. 6 C. P. 120; 24 L. T. 134; 19 W. R. 351.

c. When Misleading.

i. Description of Property.

What are Misleading Conditions.]—A condition of sale is bad as misleading—(1) if it requires the purchaser to assume what the vendor knows to be false; (2) if it states that the state of the title is not accurately known when in fact it is known to the vendor. Banister, In re, Broad v. Munton, 48 L. J., Ch. 837; 13 Ch. D. 131; 40 L. T. 828; 27 W. R. 826.

One of the conditions of sale was, that the title to the beneficial ownership to the property should commence with the will of C., dated in 1829, and the purchaser should assume that C. was at his death beneficially entitled to the property in fee simple, free from incumbrances. On an investigation it appeared that C. had in 1824 contracted for the purchase of the estate, but the vendor not at that time being able to make a good title, C. took possession and invested the purchase money, and it was not till long after the death of C. that the title was made out and the purchase money paid:—Held, that the statement in the conditions of sale was erroneous and misleading, and was consequently not binding on the purchaser. Harnett v. Baker, 45 L. J., Ch. 64; L. R. 20 Eq. 50; 32 L. T. 382; 23 W. R. 559.

—— Wilful Misdescription.]—A provision in conditions of sale, that any misstatement in the particulars shall not vitiate the sale, does not extend to a misdescription of the situation, wilfully introduced to increase its apparent value. Norfolk (Duke) v. Worthy, 1 Camp. 340; 10 R. R. 749.

—— Nondisclosure of Property in Wall.]—The vendor contracted to sell a freehold villa and garden, between which and a certain road there was a wall. The wall, as the vendor knew, did not belong to him, but he did not disclose that fact to the purchaser. There was in the wall a tablet bearing the name of the villa, as well as a tradesmen's side entrance. The vendor knew that the purchaser intended to build cottages upon the property with access to the road:—Held, that the vendor could not avail himself of the condition providing for compensation, and that the purchaser was entitled to rescind the contract. Brewer v. Brown, 54 L. J., Ch. 605; 28 Ch. D. 309.

—— Commencement of Title.]—Real property was put up for sale under conditions which stated that the title was to commence with an indenture of settlement dated in 1848, and required the purchaser to assume the death of J. B. intestate and without an heir before 1870. The vendor believed the assumption to be true. The title was derived from R. B., who, as trustee under the deed of 1848 of J. B., the owner in fee, claimed to be absolutely entitled on the principle of Burgess v. Wheate (1 Eden, 177). The purchaser required the vendor to furnish evidence of the death of J. B. intestate and without an heir:—Held, that the conditions were binding on the purchaser. Sandbach and Edmondson, In re, 60 L. J., Ch. 60; [1891] 1 Ch. 99; 63 L. T. 797; 39 W. R. 193—C. A.

Knowledge of Purchaser of Defective Title.]—A railway company agreed to demise to E. for building purposes certain lands which they had acquired under their compulsory powers. E. was restrained from assigning without licence. The property had formerly belonged to a building society, which had sold it in lots, each purchaser entering into restrictive covenants for the benefit of the owners of the other lots, and the conveyance to the company was expressly made subject to these covenants. E. agreed to sell his interest under the contract to R. R. at the time of the contract knew of the restrictive covenants, but believed that the compulsory purchase by the railway company had extinguished them. E. did not know of their existence. R.'s solicitors having discovered the existence of the covenants, objected to the title:—Held, that R. was entitled to object to the title on the ground of the restrictive covenants, for that in order to take a case out of the general rule that a purchaser is entitled to require a good title, it must be shown that at the time of the contract he knew that a good title could not be made, and that here such knowledge was not shown, as R. believed that the covenants had been extinguished. Ellis v. Rogers, 29 Ch. D. 661; 53 L. T. 377—C. A.

Where the particulars of sale of certain leasehold property contained a misstatement, of which misstatement the vendors asserted that the purchaser had knowledge at the time of the sale, and the conditions of sale provided that any error or misstatement in the particulars should not annul the sale, but compensation should be made to or by the purchaser, as the case might be:—Held, that, even if the purchaser were aware of the misstatement in the particulars, the vendors were not thereby relieved from the liability to make him compensation. Lett v. Randall, 49 L. T. 71.

Compensation.]—M. & Co. bought the benefit of a contract for purchase of certain property which was sold in an administration action, and, in investigating the title, discovered a misdescription in the particulars, in respect of which they claimed compensation in accordance with the terms of the contract. After an order had been made (but not drawn up) on a summons taken out by M. & Co. for liberty to pay the whole of the purchase-money into court, a correspondence took place with the vendors' solicitors, in which the latter, in reply to inquiry as to whether they intended to take advantage of the order in meeting the question of compensation, stated that personally they intended to take no advantage, but that, since they were acting for an infant, the matter must proceed strictly. The purchase-money was paid into court, and the conveyance executed, the property being therein correctly described:—Held, that the vendees were not estopped from prosecuting their claim for compensation. Perriam, In re, Perriam v. Perriam, 49 L. T. 710; 32 W. R. 369.

Land was sold under a condition that in case of misdescription compensation should be paid. A road over the land was described in the particulars as "made up." There was a misdescription as to the extent to which the road was made up:—Held, that the measure of compensation was not the sum it would cost to make up the road to the extent represented; but the difference between the value of the property as it existed at the time of purchase and the value it would have had if the road had been "made up." Chifferiel, In re, Chifferiel v. Watson, 58 L. J., Ch. 263; 40 Ch. D. 45; 60 L. T. 99; 37 W. R. 120.

Where it is provided by the conditions of sale by auction that, "if any mistake be made in the description of the premises, or any other material error shall appear in the particulars of sale, such mistake or error shall not annul the sale, but a compensation shall be made," the vendee is not released from his contract by reason of a misdescription in the particulars of sale obvious on inspection of the premises, unless such misdescription was wilful and designed. Wright v. Wilson, 1 M. & Rob. 207.

Condition as to Receipt for Rent.]—A leasehold public-house was sold subject to a condition that the production of the last receipt for rent paid should be taken as conclusive evidence of the due performance of the lessee's covenants or the waiver of any breaches up to the time of completion, whether the lessor should be cognizant of such breaches or not. The lease contained a covenant to use the premises for the business of a public-house only, and not to permit any other trade to be carried on on any part of the premises without the lessor's written consent. The particulars on which the contract of purchase was indorsed showed that parts of the premises were underlet to persons who carried on other trades there. From the answers to objections to title, it appeared that the lessors had received rent with knowledge of the underlettings, and the last receipt for rent was produced. Specific performance of the contract having been decreed, and a reference as to title directed by an order which was not appealed from:—Held, that whether the breach of covenant was or was not a continuing breach such as to render the purchaser liable to be ejected after the completion of the purchase, the vendor had made a good title in accordance with the contract which the purchaser was bound to accept. Lawrie v. Lees, 51 L. J., Ch. 209; 7 App. Cas. 19; 46 L. T. 210; 30 W. R. 185—H. L. (E.)

State of Repair.]—Upon an open contract for the sale of a lease of a house, the vendor, in answer to a requisition by the purchaser as to the performance of repairing covenants in the lease, produced a receipt for rent down to a year previously, but could not produce the last receipt, the lessor having refused to receive his rent on the ground of alleged breaches of covenant:—Held, that, notwithstanding the failure to produce the receipt for rent, there was such primâ facie evidence of the performance of the covenants as to constitute a sufficient answer to the requisition in that behalf. Ringer to Thompson, 51 L. J., Ch. 42; 45 L. T. 580.

An auctioneer selling a lease, must state the notice given by the landlord of his intention to enter unless the premises are put in repair within three months, or the vendee may recover his deposit from the auctioneer, although he knew of the ruinous state of the buildings. Stevens v. Adamson, 2 Stark. 422; 20 R. R. 707.

Where leasehold premises are sold by auction, and the lease containing the usual covenant to repair is produced and read to the bidders, if any of the buildings demised and described in the lease have been pulled down before the sale, the purchaser is not bound to complete the purchase, and may recover back his deposit, although the building pulled down is not described in the particulars of sale. Granger v. Worms, 4 Camp. 83.

Restrictive Covenants—Silence equivalent to Representation.]—The vendor of a leasehold interest is bound to know what covenants are in his lease; and if an intending purchaser state the object which he has in purchasing, the vendor is bound to communicate such knowledge to him, provided such covenants can be reasonably interpreted as affecting the object which the purchaser has in view; and if the vendor is silent as to a covenant interfering with that object, his silence is equivalent to a representation that there is no such covenant, even though he is not aware of its extent or operation. Flight v. Barton (3 Myl. & K. 282) followed and applied. Power v. Barrett, 19 L. R. Ir. 450.

——Constructive Notice.]—When an agreement has been entered into for the purchase of a lease, the purchaser is not affected with constructive notice of the covenants contained in the lease, and is not bound to complete the contract if the lease is subject to onerous covenants of an unusual character, unless before the agreement was made he had a fair opportunity of ascertaining for himself the terms of such covenants.—The principle of the decision in Hyde v. Warden, (3 Ex. D. 72) applies to an agreement to purchase an existing lease, as well as to an agreement to take an underlease. Reeve v. Berridge, 57 L. J., Q. B. 265; 20 Q. B. D. 523; 58 L. T. 836; 36 W. R. 517; 52 J. P. 549—C. A.

—— Non-disclosure.]—On the sale of a bankrupt's life interest in property, non-disclosure by trustee in bankruptcy of a restrictive covenant as to building held a fatal objection to the title. Ebsworth and Tidy, In re, 58 L. J., Ch. 665; 42 Ch. D. 23; 60 L. T. 841; 37 W. R. 657; 54 J. P. 199—C. A.

——Return of Deposit.—The owner of land sold it in lots each subject to restrictive covenants. The defendant purchased a lot, but his conveyance did not contain the restrictive covenants. He agreed to sell to the plaintiffs, and the contract did not mention the restrictive covenants:—Held, that the plaintiffs, if their contract with the defendant were carried out, would be bound by the restrictive covenants, and that the owners of the other lots purchased from the original vendor would be entitled to enforce those covenants, and that the plaintiffs were therefore entitled to recover the amount of the deposit. Nottingham Patent Brick and Tile Co. v. Butler, 55 L. J., Q. B. 280; 16 Q. B. D. 778; 54 L. T. 444; 34 W. R. 405—C. A.

And see cases infra, col. 1228.

—— Open Contract.]—Upon delivery of the abstract by a vendor who had contracted to deduce a good title in fee simple, it appeared that one of his predecessors had covenanted in his purchase deed not to use the property for the purpose of gasworks or a public-house:—Held, that this was such a restriction upon the user and enjoyment of the property as to constitute a fatal objection to the title. Higgins and Hitchman's Contract, In re, 51 L. J., Ch. 772; 21 Ch. D. 95; 30 W. R. 700; 46 J. P. 805.

—— Business Premises.]—Property described in the particulars as "leasehold business premises" was put up for sale under conditions providing that no objection should be made in respect of anything contained in the lease. Nothing was said in the particulars or conditions as to the contents of the lease; no opportunity was given to intending purchasers to inspect the lease, and the property was bought by a purchaser who had not in fact inspected it. After the sale the purchaser discovered that the lease contained covenants restricting him from carrying on upon the premises any trade or business:—Held, that as the covenant imposed serious restrictions upon the use of the premises as business premises, the purchaser was entitled to a declaration that the title was not such as he could be compelled to accept. Davis and Covey, In re, 58 L. J., Ch. 143; 40 Ch. D. 601; 60 L. T. 100; 37 W. R. 217; 53 J. P. 407.

—— Shop, not including "Tavern."]—The defendant was the owner of land, subject to a covenant not to use any house to be erected on the land for any other purpose than that of a private dwelling-house, "with the exception of shops which might be built fronting the L. road." The defendant sold to the plaintiff a lot described in the particulars as "a valuable tavern lot":—Held, that the word "shop" did not include "tavern," and that the plaintiff was entitled to recover his deposit with interest and costs. Coombs v. Cook, 1 Cab. & E. 75.

—— "Free Public-House."]—In the conditions of sale of a lease it was described as "a free public-house," the lease containing a covenant that the lessee and his assigns should take their beer from a particular brewer; this lease was all read over by the auctioneer at the time of the sale, who said mistakenly that it was a free public-house, and the covenant about the beer had been decided to be bad:—Held, that a purchaser who heard the lease read over was not bound under these circumstances to complete the purchase, but was entitled to recover back the deposit. Jones v. Edney, 3 Camp. 285; 13 R. R. 803.

Offensive Trade.]—The particulars of sale of leasehold premises stated that, under the original lease, "no offensive trade was to be carried on, and that the premises could not be let to a coffee-house keeper or working hatter." The original lease, when produced, appeared to prohibit the businesses of brewer, baker, sugar-baker, vintner, victualler, butcher, tripe seller, poulterer, fishmonger, cheese seller, fruiterer, herb seller, coffee-house keeper, working hatter, and many others, and the sale of potatoes, or any provisions:—Held, that there was such a discrepancy between the particulars and the lease, as to entitle a purchaser to rescind his contract. Flight v. Booth, 1 Scott, 190; 1 Bing. (N.C.) 370; 4 L. J., C. P. 66.

Where an original lessee of land, subject to a covenant against certain obnoxious trades, with a proviso for re-entry for a breach of such covenant, granted underleases of houses erected on the land, not containing a similar covenant and proviso:—Held, that a purchaser by auction of houses erected on part of this land, and of the improved ground rents of the houses so underlet, might recover back his deposit money from the auctioneer, the omission of the proviso in the underleases not having been specified in the conditions or mentioned at the time of the sale. Waring v. Hoggart, Ry. & M. 39; 27 R. R. 728.

Sufficiency of Notice.]—Two adjacent houses were held on lease by M. The leases prohibited the trade of a publican, but one of the houses had been so used since 1860 without the owner objecting. M. put the entire premises up for sale in 1880, and the plaintiff, accompanied by K. (a local agent for the sale of public houses) was shown by the vendor's solicitors a condition referring to the restrictive covenant, but requiring a purchaser to be satisfied by the fact of the long-continued user of the premises. The plaintiff then purchased:—Held, that the condition was designedly misleading and had misled the plaintiff. Stanley v. McGauran, 11 L. R. Ir. 314—C.A.

ii. Value.

"Annual Rental"—Rates and Taxes Payable by Vendor.]—The particulars of sale of certain leasehold property described the same as being occupied at an "annual rental," but omitted to state that the vendor as landlord paid the rates and taxes on the property, the tenancy being a monthly one:—Held, that evidence was admissible to prove that in the auction-room a question was raised by a person present at the sale on the words "annual rental," and that in reply it was stated by the auctioneer that the landlord paid the rates and taxes, and that the tenancy was a monthly tenancy, and that accordingly the purchasers must be taken to have had knowledge of the facts, and, therefore, were not entitled to compensation. Edwards and Sykes, In re, 62 L. T. 445.

Value of Rental.]—The particulars of sale erroneously stated the value of the rental, in consequence of which the plantiff gave more for the property than he otherwise would have done. The conditions of sale contained a provision that if any error should be discovered in the particulars the purchaser should be entitled to compensation. The plaintiff did not find out the error until after he accepted the conveyance:—Held, that the acceptance of the conveyance did not bar the right of the plaintiff to recover compensation. Palmer v. Johnson, 53 L. J., Q. B. 348; 13 Q. B. D. 351; 51 L. T. 211; 33 W. R. 36—C. A. Affirming 48 J. P. 87.

"Estimated Annual Value."]—Property was described in the particulars of sale as "of the estimated annual value of 400*l.*" There was a condition entitling the purchaser to compensation, if any error or misstatement should appear to have been made in the particulars. The purchaser adduced evidence to show that the property was only worth 200*l.* a year:—Held, that, as the property was of the "estimated" value stated, and the estimate was admitted not to be a dishonest one, the condition did not apply. Hurlbalt and Chaytor, In re, 57 L. J., Ch. 421.

Profits of Manor.]—Trustees for sale of a manor described it in particulars and conditions of sale as a manor in which the fines were arbitrary; adding that the clear profits, on an average of the last eight years, had been 150*l.* a year; and there was a condition as to compensation. After the sale, it was found that, by the custom of the manor, arbitrary fines were payable only on alienation, and that, on the death of a tenant, his customary heir paid upon admittance a small fixed sum, and the widow was admitted to her freebench without any payment. The clear profits exceeded 200*l.* a year:—Held, that there was no such misdirection of the property as would entitle the purchaser to compensation. White v. Cuddon, 8 Cl. & F. 766; 6 Jur. 471.

Amount of Rent.]—The particulars of sale described a farm as late in the occupation of A. at the rent of 290*l.* A. had occupied the farm as yearly tenant at 290*l.*, but went in at Midsummer, paying only 1*l.* for the first quarter, and quitted at Michaelmas in the next year, thus paying 291*l.* for a year and a quarter. Since this the plaintiff had agreed to let the farm at 225*l.*; but the agreement had been rescinded before taking possession, and the farm would not let for nearly so much as 290*l.*:—Held, that there was such substantial misrepresentation as entitled the purchaser to be discharged. Dimmock v. Hallett, 36 L. J., Ch. 146; L. R. 2 Ch. 21; 12 Jur. (N.S.) 953; 15 L. T. 374; 15 W. R. 93.

iii. Quantity and Acreage.

Substantial Part Non-existent.]—A condition, "that if any mistake shall be made in the description of the premises, or any other error whatsoever shall appear in the particulars of the property, such mistake or error shall not annul the sale, but a compensation shall be given," does not apply when any substantial part of the property turns out to have no existence, or cannot be found; or where a vendor has malâ fide given a very exaggerated description of the property. Robinson v. Musgrove, 2 M. & Rob. 92; 8 Car. & P. 469.

Particulars of sale by auction of a public-house, described the premises as comprising, amongst other things, a yard. By the conditions any error or mistake in the description of the property was to be matter of compensation, to be fixed by arbitration. In fact, the yard was not held under the lease, but under a tenancy from year to year, at a further rent of 10*l.* The vendors, however, procured a lease for the same term of the yard, at an additional rent of 8*l.* The yard was essential to the enjoyment of the premises:—Held, that this defect was not matter of compensation under the condition, but such a defect in the title as justified the vendee in vacating the contract. Dobell v. Hutchinson, 5 N. & M. 251; 3 A. & E. 355; 1 H. & W. 394; 4 L. J., K. B. 201.

Customary or Statute Acres.]—Misdescription of the quantity of land in regard to the acres being statute acres or customary, is not matter of compensation, but a ground for setting aside the sale. Price v. North, 2 Y. & C. 620; 7 L. J., Ex. Eq. 9.

A contract for the purchase of a farm described it as containing "349 acres, or thereabout, be the same more or less." In fact, the farm consisted of only 349 customary acres, which was less than the same number of statute acres by about 100 acres. On a bill being filed for specific performance, the purchaser, admitting that he had been for several months in possession of the property, and had exercised acts of ownership over it, on the faith that a good title to 349 acres would be shown, insisted that in the contract "acres" meant "statute acres," and that he was not bound to perform the contract, unless 349 statute acres were conveyed to him:—Held, that in such case a reference of title would not be directed on motion. Portman v. Mill, 2 Russ. 570; 26 R. R. 175.

Material Part Wanting.]—On a sale by the court a parcel was described as "490a, Bottlesey Green, containing 7a. 1r. 27p." The conditions provided that any error, misstatement, or omission in the particulars should not annul the sale, nor should any compensation be allowed except such (if any) as the judge in chambers should direct. G. bought the property in his own name, and was certified as purchaser. He in fact bought as agent for B., who was the owner of immediately adjoining property. The vendors were only entitled to four undivided sevenths of 490a, but arranged with the owners of the other three sevenths to exchange them for another part of the property. B. alleged that it was of great importance to the enjoyment of his property that he should have the whole of 490a, and G., by his directions, refused to complete:—Held, that G., having only purchased as agent for B., could take any objection which B., had he been the nominal as well as the real purchaser, could have taken; that the purchaser was entitled to say that he bought the farm as shown on the plan; that, as the possession of 490a was important to the enjoyment of B.'s property, completion could not be compelled unless he could get the whole of it, and that he was not bound to accept the arrangement by which he would obtain the whole of it by giving up another part of the purchased property. Arnold, In re, Arnold v. Arnold, 14 Ch. D. 270; 42 L. T. 705; 28 W. R. 635—C.A.

A purchaser who has contracted for the entirety of an estate will not be compelled to take six undivided seventh parts of it. Dalby v. Pullen, 3 Sim. 29.

Owner of estate represented to contain 1,530 acres, agreed to sell it. The purchaser agreed to sell it to a company, who paid a deposit to him. The purchaser found that there were only 1,100 acres, and refused to complete, the vendor then rescinded the contract:—Held, that the company were entitled to rescind, as the purchaser was unable to complete with them. Aberaman

One of the articles of the contract provided that the estate as to extent of acreage should be taken to be conclusively shown by certain deeds:—Held, that this was merely a conveyancing condition as to identity, and that, coupled with the representation as to the acreage, it did not estop the company from rescinding on the ground of deficiency in acreage. Ib.

A person agreed to purchase an estate which, on the written contract, was, by mistake, stated to contain 21,750 acres; it turned out that it contained only 11,814 acres:—Held, that the purchaser was not entitled to specific performance, with a proportionate abatement for the deficiency of acreage, but that he could only enforce the contract on payment of the full price, or rescind the contract. Durham (Earl) v. Legard, 34 Beav. 611; 34 L. J., Ch. 589; 11 Jur. (N.S.) 706; 13 W. R. 959.

When Matter of Compensation.]—Property was put up for sale as containing 1,372 square yards. There was a condition that errors of description should not annul the sale, but that if they were pointed out before completion compensation should be allowed for them. The property contained only 1,033 square yards:—Held, that the purchaser had got substantially what he had contracted to buy, that the deficiency of quantity, though considerable, did not so affect the substance of what he had bargained for as to take the case out of the condition, and that he must complete with compensation. The rule laid down by Tindal, C. J., in Flight v. Booth (supra. col. 1176), as to the nature of the misdescription which will entitle a purchaser to rescind notwithstanding a condition for compensation, approved and applied. Fawcett and Holmes, In re, 58 L. J., Ch. 763; 42 Ch. D. 150; 61 L. T. 105—C. A.

Valuation by vendor described the property as containing about 1,244 square yards, and valued at 1,200*l.* The particulars stated that the premises contained about 1,200 square yards, and provided that in case of error or mistake in the description compensation should be given or allowed. The premises contained only 935 square yards:—Held, that the purchasers were entitled to a reference as to what deduction should be made from the contract price. Aspinalls and Powell, In re, 60 L. T. 595.

—— After Conveyance.]—After the purchaser has taken a conveyance, and the purchase-money has been paid, no action can be maintained for damages or compensation on account of errors as to the quantity or quality of the subject-matter of the sale, unless such errors amount to breach of some contract or warranty contained in the conveyance itself, or unless some fraud or deceit has been practised upon the purchaser. Jolliffe v. Baker, 52 L. J., Q. B., 609; 11 Q. B. D. 255; 48 L. T. 966; 32 W. R. 59; 47 J. P. 678.

Conveyance described two parcels as each "containing by estimation one and a half acres or thereabouts." The two parcels together amounted to only 2a. 1r. 12p.:—Held, that this did not amount to a breach of any warranty, so as to entitle a purchaser to maintain an action for damages against the vendor. Ib.

Particulars stated a lot to contain 348 square yards with a road frontage of 39 feet 3 inches. The purchaser bought to build. There was a condition to the effect that "any error, misstatement, or omission should not annul the sale, but compensation should be allowed, the amount of such compensation to be settled by the auctioneer." Subsequent to the conveyance the lot was found to contain only 135 square yards, and a frontage of 18 feet:—Held, that the purchaser was entitled to compensation at the rate of 22*s.* 6*d.* per square yard for every square yard of the deficiency (that being the rate per yard at which the land was purchased by him), and to damages for the actual loss sustained by him in the preparation of plans and specifications for building, on the footing that he was getting the larger area. Flewitt v. Walker, 53 L. T. 287; 33 W. R. 894.

Condition against Compensation.]—Upon the sale of real estate one of the conditions was as follows:—"The admeasurements are presumed to be correct, but if any error be discovered therein, no allowance shall be made or required either way." The property stated to contain 7,683 square yards only contained 4,350:—Held, that the purchaser was not entitled to compensation. Cordingley v. Cheesebrough, 3 Giff. 496; 31 L. J., Ch. 617; 8 Jur. (N.S.), 755; 6 L. T. 642.

Right to Rescind.]—The following conditions of sale were material:—3. Each lot is believed and shall be taken to be correctly described as to quantity and otherwise . . . . and the respective purchasers . . . . shall be deemed to buy with full knowledge of the state and condition of the property as to repairs and otherwise, and no error, misstatement, or misdescription shall annul the sale, nor shall any compensation be allowed in respect thereof. 7. If any purchaser shall insist on any objection or requisition which the respective vendors shall be unable, or on the ground of expense or otherwise unwilling to answer, comply with, or remove, the respective vendors may . . . . at any time, and notwithstanding any intermediate or pending negotiations, proceedings or litigation, annul the sale. Lot 3 was stated to contain 4a. 3r. 37p., and to be let at annual rents amounting to 27*l.* The rental was rightly stated but the real acreage was only 3a. 1r. 37p. The purchaser claimed that the contract should be carried out with compensation; the vendor refused any compensation, but offered to annul the sale:—Held, that the vendor might lawfully annul the sale by virtue of the seventh condition. By Lord Esher, M.R., and Lindley, L.J. (Lopes, L.J., dissentiente):—That the purchaser would have been prevented by the third condition from obtaining specific performance with compensation. Whittemore v. Whittemore, (L. R. 8 Eq. 603), and Cordingley v. Cheesebrough (supra) commented on. Terry to White, In re, 55 L. J., Ch. 345; 32 Ch. D. 14; 54 L. T. 353; 34 W. R. 379—C. A.

Notice in Conditions.]—A contract of sale by auction described the property as "the freehold cottage and copyhold paddock, comprising 1a. 2r. 8p. situate, &c., described in the particulars attached hereto as lot 1." In the annexed particulars, lot 1 was thus described: "The property comprises 1a. 2r. 8p., situate, &c." The sixth condition was as follows:—The several properties comprised in the foregoing particulars are presumed to be correctly described, and the quantities of the land shall be taken as stated, whether more or less (although the title-deeds and court-rolls state such quantities to be less), without any equivalent or compensation on either side. The abstract of title delivered showed a title only to 3r. 24p. in the whole :—Held, that the purchaser, having distinct notice by the condition that the deeds would show a less quantity than that mentioned in the particulars and contract of sale, was bound to take the title as offered. Nicholl v. Chambers, 11 C. B. 996 ; 21 L. J., C. P. 54.

Excessive Quantity.]—Vendors agreed to sell a parcel of land "containing forty acres or thereabouts, be the same more or less." The agreement provided that "if any mistake or omission be made in the description of the property the same shall not vitiate or annul the sale, but a compensation or an allowance shall be made." The purchaser had taken conveyances of part of the land ; but the vendors having discovered that the acreage was 41 acres, 1 rood, 10 perches, instead of 40 acres, refused to convey the residue without compensation :—Held, that the vendors were not entitled to any compensation. Orange to Wright, 54 L. J., Ch. 590 ; 52 L. T. 606.

Condition of sale that any mistake or error in the description, or any other error in the particulars should not annul the sale, but compensation should be given or taken. One lot contained 20 acres more and another 10 acres less than described :—Held, that the excess in one lot, and the deficiency in the other, were both subjects of compensation within the condition. Equity would not in a case like this enforce the contract against the vendor unless the purchaser should submit to compensation to the vendor. Leslie v. Thompson, 9 Hare 268 ; 20 L. J., Ch. 561 ; 15 Jur. 717.

iv. Matters Material to Enjoyment of the Property.

Position.]—It is a misdescription in particulars of sale to describe a house as No. 58, Pall Mall, opposite Marlborough House ; where the house was, in fact, not in Pall Mall, but was situate behind No. 57, Pall Mall having an entrance with a door, which for many years bore the designation of No. 58, and a separate passage, about sixty-five feet long and three feet eight inches wide, across the ground floor of No. 57, between the basement and upper stories of No. 57. Stanton v. Tattersall, 1 Sm. & G. 529 ; 17 Jur. 967 ; 1 W. R. 502.

At the auction mart in London, B. purchased a house at Brighton, simply described as "Lot 1, No. 39, Regency-square." He afterwards discovered that the house was not actually in the square, but in a side street communicating with the square, but it was always named 39, Regency-square :—Held, that there was no misdescription. White v. Bradshaw, 16 Jur. 738.

Condition and Occupation.]—The particulars of sale described two houses as Nos. 3 and 4, and stated that the taxes of No. 3 were paid by the tenant. The houses ought to have been described as Nos. 2 and 3, but the names of the occupiers were correct, and it should have been stated that the taxes of No. 3 were farmed by the landlord. The houses Nos. 2 and 4 were of the same rate, but No. 4 was in the best state of repair :—Held, that these misdescriptions were not cured by a condition which provided that if any error or mis-statement should be found in the particulars, it should not vitiate the sale, but an allowance should be made on account of it. Leach v. Mullett, 3 Car. & P. 115.

Boundaries.]—Specific performance of a contract for the sale of property, partly freehold and partly leasehold, will not be refused on the ground that the boundaries of the two portions are not distinctly defined, semble. Monro v. Taylor, 3 Mac. & G. 713 ; 8 Hare, 51 ; 21 L. J., Ch. 525.

Water-Meadow.]—If land, generally reputed to be water-meadow, is sold as uncommonly rich water-meadow, whereas it is very imperfectly watered ; this is not such a misrepresentation as will avoid the sale. Scott v. Hanson, 1 Russ. & M. 128 ; 27 R. R. 141. Affirming 1 Sim. 13 ; 5 L. J. (O.S.) Ch. 67.

Easement.]—A dwelling-house and offices were put up for sale by auction, under a condition that the lot was sold subject to any existing rights and easements of whatever nature—and the printed particulars made no mention of any easement, or of any claim to an easement. The house was subject to easement by owner of neighbouring house, and the vendor's solicitor knew of the rumoured existence of this easement but made no enquiries, and the auctioneer, on being questioned, told the audience that they might dismiss the subject of the rumoured claims from their minds, as nobody would probably ever hear of them again :—Held, that the conditions were misleading, and the statements in the auction-room insufficient. Heywood v. Mallalieu, 53 L. J., Ch. 492 ; 25 Ch. D. 357 ; 49 L. T. 658 ; 32 W. R. 538.

Right of Way.]—A contract was entered into for the sale of a piece of land described as arable land, not stating anything as to the existence of a right of way to it. It turned out that it was extremely doubtful whether there was any right of cartway to it :—Held, that specific performance ought not to be decreed at the suit of the vendor. Denne v. Light, 26 L. J., Ch. 459 ; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 627 ; 5 W. R. 430—L.JJ.

An agreement for the sale of the fee-simple in possession of a house and land contained a clause that the description of the property in the schedule was believed to be correct, but if any error should be found therein, the same should not annul the sale, but compensation should be allowed in respect thereof ; and also a clause that if the purchaser should insist on any objection or requisition in respect of the title which the vendor should be unable or unwilling to remedy or comply with, the vendor should be at liberty to rescind the agreement. Upon investigating the title it appeared that there was a right of way across the property, of which, at the date of the agreement, both vendor and purchaser were ignorant :—Held, that the objection was an objection to title, and that the vendor was entitled to rescind. Ashburner v. Sewell, 60 L. J., Ch. 784 ; [1891] 3 Ch. 405 ; 65 L. T. 524 ; 40 W. R. 169.

On the sale by auction, the auctioneer bonâ fide stated there was a right of way. This was not the fact, and neither the conditions nor the draft lease produced at the sale, had any reference to a right of way:—Held, that the evidence of what passed at the time of the sale was admissible as against the vendor; but that no action could, after the completion of the purchase, be maintained against him to recover compensation for this innocent misrepresentation by the auctioneer. Brett v. Clowser, 5 C. P. D. 376.

The particulars of a lot stated a reservation of a carriage way contained in a lease, but did not state that the lease also reserved a different footway over the lot. It was stated that the lease might be inspected at the vendor's office. A. purchased the lot in question and an adjoining lot:—Held, that the misdescription was such as to entitle him to rescind the contract. Dykes v. Blake, 4 Bing. (N.C.) 463; 6 Scott, 320; 1 Arn. 209.

Upon a sale by auction in lots, the particulars and conditions of sale referred to a plan on which several roads were marked out, so as to provide frontages for all the lots; but there was no indication that any lot was to have rights of way beyond the road adjoining it and directly leading into the public highway:—Held, that the court could only act on the footing of the contract, and that the purchaser could only claim a right of way over the road adjoining the lots, and directly thence into the public highway. Randall v. Hall, 4 De G & Sm. 343. And see Bolton v. Bolton, supra, col. 1106.

Objections by a purchaser by auction, that a way round and across a meadow was not specified; a specific performance was decreed with costs. Bowles v. Round, 5 Ves. 508; 5 R. R. 107.

Water Supply.]—A property situate in a town, and comprising a warehouse, was described in particulars of sale under a decree as "well supplied with water." The property was well supplied with water, but only from the waterworks, there being no natural supply. The manufactories in the town were generally supplied with water from wells upon the properties themselves:—Held, that there was a misdescription. Leyland v. Illingworth, 2 De G. F. & J. 248; 2 L. T. 587; 8 W. R. 695.

A certain lot was described in the particulars as being sold with a certain reservoir and waterworks, yielding a yearly rental of 60*l.*, exclusively of the land and buildings. This rent arose from supplying with water certain houses separated from the reservoir by the property of strangers, over which the vendor had no right to carry it, beyond a permissive right from year to year by payment of a rent:—Held, that the description contained such a misrepresentation as to preclude the vendor from enforcing a specific performance. Price v. Macaulay, 2 De G. M. & G. 339.

A. purchased by auction a house, which was described in the particulars as "Lot 1 in the sale plan." Upon one of the lots not purchased by A. was a well; upon another a reservoir; and, on the sale plan annexed to the particulars, a line, denoting a stone drain, was drawn from the well to the reservoir; and from the reservoir to the kitchen of the house another line was drawn representing a leaden pipe. The vendor conveyed the other lots to the respective purchasers, without reserving to A. any right of water:—Held, that the vendor merely undertook to sell part of the property to A., as it stood at the time of the sale, with notice that the rest of it would no longer remain in his hands. Fewster v. Turner, 11 L. J., Ch. 161; 6 Jur. 144.

"Substantial Dwelling-house."]—Particulars of a sale of a messuage described it as "a substantial and convenient dwelling-house," and as having "five bedrooms." The purchaser alleged that the house was neither conveniently nor substantially built, and also that two of the so-called bedrooms were too small to be fit for that purpose:—Held, that the two rooms were not improperly described as bedrooms; that there had been no misrepresentation in stating that the house was substantial and convenient. Johnson v. Smart, 2 Giff. 151; 6 Jur. (N.S.), 815; 2 L. T. 307.

Liability to Compulsory Alienation.]—A vendee of land, on discovering that at the time of the contract of sale it was and continued liable to be taken, under a private act of parliament, for the use of a company, is entitled to rescind the contract and to recover back the deposit. Ballard v. Way, 1 M. & W. 529; 2 Gale, 61; 1 Tyrw. & G. 851; 5 L. J., Ex. 207.

Ground Rent.]—Leaseholds in Liverpool were put up for sale in lots, under a condition that the purchasers should enter into the usual covenant for paying and observing the rents and covenants of the leases, and indemnifying the vendors therefrom. As to one of the lots, the particulars stated the amount of a mortgage on it; but, owing to a slip, did not mention that it was subject to any ground-rent. It was, in fact, subject to a ground-rent of 43*l.* The other lots were leaseholds held under the corporation of Liverpool, which usually reserves only a nominal rent on its leases:—Held, that the purchaser of this lot was entitled to be discharged. Jones v. Rimmer, 49 L. J., Ch. 775; 14 Ch. D. 588; 43 L. T. 111; 29 W. R. 165.

Rent-Charge.]—Devise of freehold estates subject to the payment of 20*l.* yearly and every year for ever to A., her executors, administrators, and assigns, and the testator made chargeable his said freehold estates with the payment of the said sum. A. died, and her devisees contracted to sell the rent-charge, which was stated to have been given to A., her executors, administrators, and assigns:—Held, that the rent-charge might be legally distrained for, and that the thing contracted to be sold was within the words of the contract. Ramsay v. Thorngate, 16 Sim. 575; 18 L. J., Ch. 238.

Sum charged on several Properties—Notice.]—A vendor put up for sale by auction a certain sum or redeemed land tax, which he described in the particulars as charged on three houses. The particulars referred to the contract with the commissioners for the redemption of the tax as part of the vendor's title, but did not further state, as appeared from the schedule to the contract, that the gross sum was charged in separate sums upon each of the houses:—Held, that 42 Geo. 3, c. 116, did not operate to consolidate the several charges into one assessment, and to make the whole amount leviable on each part of the property redeemed. Cox v. Coventon, 8 Jur. (N. S.), 1142; 7 L. T. 78; 10 W. R. 829.

Held, also, that the reference to the contract for redemption did not give the purchaser notice of the contents of the schedule, so as to affect him with the consequences. Ib.

Held, also, that there was a material misdescription of the property sold; and that specific performance of the contract could not be enforced against the purchaser. Ib.

Interest of no Value.]—Particulars of sale described the subject of the sale as the interest, if any, of F. The vendor knew at the time that the interest sold was of no value, and he made no representation as to the value. A purchaser bought, with notice that the subject of sale might be of no value, but without any means of ascertaining whether it was of any or no value. The court ordered the sale to be set aside, and the purchase-money refunded, with interest and costs. Smith v. Harrison, 26 L. J., Ch. 412; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 287; 5 W. R. 408.

Trusts Incorrectly Stated.]—Where conditions of sale incorrectly state the effect of the trusts of a reversionary interest, the purchaser of that interest is not bound to accept the title. Hadley v. Robins, 14 L. T. 100; 14 W. R. 387.

Lease—Covenants not Enforceable.]—The court may not decree specific performance of a contract for the sale of a reversion if the vendor had misled the purchaser by stating that it was subject to a lease containing all the usual covenants, the vendor knowing that there was no person against whom the covenant could be enforced; but where property is sold subject to a lease so described, and the vendor is not aware of any difficulty in enforcing the covenants, the court will not refuse to decree specific performance on the ground that the vendor cannot show upon whom the liability of the covenants in the lease has devolved, and the vendor is not bound to find out and acquaint the purchaser with the name of the party who may be liable to such covenants. Flint v. Woodin, 9 Hare, 618; 22 L. J., Ch. 92; 16 Jur. 719.

Plan—Common Ground.]—W., by agreement endorsed on printed particulars of sale, sold to B. a house, in front of which a piece of common ground was railed in, but divided from the house by a road, to which common W. had a possessory title only. A., alleging that on the plan he considered the common land part of the purchase, refused to complete:—Held, that inasmuch as the plan might have misled B., no decree for specific performance could be made. Weston v. Bird, 2 W. R. 145.

v. Tenure and Interest of Vendor.

Equitable or Legal Term.]—The plaintiff advertised to be sold by auction lands and houses, stated as "held for the remainder of a term of fifty-four years if C. T. should so long live," and the conditions of sale were similar. The plaintiff had only an equitable title:—Held, in an action for not completing the purchase, that the advertisement and conditions of sale were calculated to mislead the defendant into believing that what was to be sold was the residue of a legal term created by lease; that the defendant therefore bid for that which the plaintiff had not to sell, and that, consequently there was no contract. Gardiner v. Tate, Ir R. 10 C. L. 460.

A person contracted to sell property, and showed only an equitable title, and the purchaser required the vendor to get in the legal estate:—Held, that such requisition was as to a matter of conveyance only, and the vendor could not rescind the contract under a condition empowering him to rescind if any objection to the title were made which he was unable or unwilling to remove. Kitchen v. Palmer, 46 L. J., Ch. 611.

Agreement for Lease.]—A purchaser was discharged from his purchase on the ground of misrepresentation, lands having been sold as held under written agreements for leases, which appeared upon inquiry to be mere parol agreements. Bessonet v. Robins, Sau. & Sc. 142.

New Lease Described as Residue of Old Term.]—Under a contract for the purchase of the residue of an old term, a purchaser is not bound to accept a similar new lease; for the former differs in value from the latter, the residue of an old term being in several respects more advantageous. Mason v. Corder, 7 Taunt. 9; 2 Marshall, 332; 17 R. R. 427.

Notice to Quit.]—Particular describing a lease as subject to notice to quit, not inconsistent with a covenant that the tenant shall hold over for a certain time "after the end of the term," that being upon the context distinguished from the "other sooner determination," and time generally not being of the essence of the contract. Hall v. Smith, 14 Ves. 426; 9 R. R. 313.

Length of Term.]—A purchaser cannot refuse to perform an agreement for the sale of "the unexpired term of eight years' lease and goodwill," on the ground that only seven years and seven months of the term remained. Belworth v. Hassell, 4 Camp. 140; 16 R. R. 761.

A slight and immaterial misdescription of the term in the agreement for the sale of a lease will not relieve a purchaser from the obligation of completing his purchase. Jennings v. Brunt, 19 L. T. 705.

—— Term of Fifty Years.]—Agreement for sale of houses contained a statement that the property was held on a term of fifty years, less ten days, and also a condition that the title should commence with two underleases by which the vendor held, and that the purchaser should make no requisition or objection in respect of the prior title or the right to grant the said underleases. Four years after completion, the underleases being invalid, the purchaser brought an action to set aside the conveyance:—Held, that the purchaser had a right to rely on the statement that the property was held for a term of fifty years, and that the condition could not prevail against it and that the purchaser was entitled to have the conveyance set aside. Method of determining the right damages in such a case. Nash v. Woodcrson, 52 L. T. 49; 33 W. R. 301.

—— Term of Seventeen Years.]—The particulars described the public-house as let to a responsible tenant for a term of which seventeen years were unexpired. It appeared that only fifteen years of the term were unexpired, and it was determinable in 1881 or 1888, at the option of the tenant:—Held, that neither of these statements was such misrepresentation as to entitle the purchaser to resist specific performance of his contract. Goddard v. Jeffreys, 51 L. J., Ch. 57; 45 L. T. 674; 30 W. R. 269.

—— Lease for Lives.]—The rental described lands as held by lease for three lives and thirty-one years, the lease being for three lives and the survivor, and, in case all the lives should die before the expiration of thirty-one years, for so much of such term of thirty-one years from that period as should be to come upon the decease of the survivor :—Held, that the rental was substantially correct. Vignolles v. Bowen, 12 Ir. Eq. R. 184.

A purchaser of lands, sold under the decree, and described in the rental as held under a lease that would expire on the 1st June then next, discharged from his purchase, it subsequently appearing that the tenant of part of the lands was entitled, under an equitable article, to a reversionary lease for four lives. Linehan v. Cotter, 7 Ir. Eq. R. 176.

Leaseholds Renewable by Custom.]—Premises sold at auction were described in the particulars as being customary leaseholds, renewable every twenty-one years, at the customary rent of 10*s.*, on payment of the customary fine. The sixth condition stipulated that errors of description, or any errors inserted in the particulars, should not vacate the sale, but should be subject of abatement or compensation. It turned out that there was no custom to renew, but that the premises were held for an absolute term of twenty-one years :—Held, first, that the fact of the property being sold as leaseholds renewable by custom, when there was no such custom, was an error of description, not a defect of title. Newby v. Paynter, 22 L. J., Ch. 871 ; 17 Jur. 483.

Held, secondly, that under the sixth condition the purchaser was entitled to specific performance, with a deduction from the price. Ib.

Ground Rent—Sum in Gross.]—The defendant put up for sale by public auction property described in the particulars as follows : "Four freehold ground rents of 19*l.* 4*s.* each ; viz., 15*l.* ground rent, and 4*l.* 4*s.* garden rent." The vendors, in making out their title, produced four counterparts of leases from B. to Reynolds. By each of these leases, B., in consideration of the yearly rents thereinafter reserved, demised to Reynolds land with a messuage thereon for the term of ninety-five years (wanting ten days) at the yearly rent of 15*l.* ; and for the considerations aforesaid, and also in consideration of the further rent thereinafter reserved, and of the covenants of Reynolds, B. covenanted with Reynolds that it should be lawful for him and the tenants of the messuage, at all times during the continuance of the term, to enter upon, and use and enjoy as a garden, a piece of land particularly described, jointly with B., and B. covenanted that he would at his own expense keep in order the garden. There was also a covenant by Reynolds to pay B. the yearly rent of 15*l.*, and also the further yearly rent of 4*l.* 4*s.* in respect of the right of user of the garden or pleasure ground, such rent to be payable in the same manner as the rent of 15*l.* :—Held, that the rent of 4*l.* 4*s.* was a sum in gross, payable under a covenant, and not a rent issuing out of the land ; and therefore the purchaser was entitled to rescind. Evans v. Robins, 2 H. & C. 410 ; 33 L. J., Ex. 68 ; 10 Jur. (N.S.) 473 ; 11 L. T. 211 ; 12 W. R. 604—Ex. Ch.

—— Underlease.]—In 1805 two pieces of land in W. were demised to A. for seventy-nine years. A. built several houses, and in 1811 demised the premises for seventy years to R., reserving a rent of 43*l.* In 1815 A., reciting the indentures of 1805 and 1811, and that C. had contracted for the purchase of the ground rent issuing out of the two pieces of land, houses, &c., conveyed "the two pieces of land and houses, and also the yearly rent of 43*l.*, and all powers and remedies for receiving the same, and all the estate," &c., to C., to hold the same "for all the residue then to come of the term of seventy years granted by the indenture of 1811." In 1855 the representatives of C. contracted to sell "a leasehold ground rent of 43*l.*, payable during the remainder of a term of years created by way of underlease, which will expire in 1881, issuing out of two pieces of land in W., with the reversion" :—Held, as between a purchaser and the vendors seeking to enforce the contract, that this was no misdescription and that the puchaser was bound to complete. Lecoy v. Mogford, 2 Jur. (N.S.) 1084 ; 4 W. R. 805.

Trustees without Impeachment of Waste.]—A. devised lands to trustees for a term of ninety-nine years, without impeachment of waste, and subject thereto, to his son, W., for life, without impeachment of waste, remainder to his granddaughter, C., for life, without impeachment of waste, remainders over. The will provided that no part of the timber growing upon the premises should, upon any pretence whatever, except for necessary repairs, be cut until his granddaughter, C., should attain the age of twenty-one years, at which time it should be lawful for his said trustees to cut down such of the timber as they should think fit, and to sell the same, and to pay the money to arise therefrom to his granddaughter, C., to whom he gave and bequeathed the same. W. died in 1835, and C. attained twenty-one in 1836, but none of the timber was cut by the trustees. In 1843 the term of years was sold ; and one of the conditions of sale, after reciting the above clause as to cutting timber, stated that the property was put up for sale "subject to any rights under such provision" :—Held, that the purchaser was entitled to the timber. Watlington v. Waldron, 23 L. J., Ch. 713 ; 18 Jur. 317 ; 2 W. R. 120.

Fee Farm Rent.]—A party become the purchaser at a public auction of a lot comprehending a freehold messuage and a fee farm rent of 21*s.* By the conditions of sale, no evidence was to be required of the receipt or payment or existence of the fee farm rent other than that disclosed by a certain conveyance ; "nor should any objection be taken to the title in consequence of the nonpayment or nonreceipt" of the fee farm rent. The rent had not been paid or received for twenty years before the sale ; and the purchaser contended that it was therefore extinguished under 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, s. 34, and had ceased to exist at the time of the sale :—Held, that he was not entitle to repudiate the contract on this ground, but must be considered to have purchased, under the conditions of sale, the chance of the rent being obtainable. Hanks v. Palling, 6 El. & Bl. 659 ; 25 L. J., Q. B. 375 ; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 688 ; 4 W. R. 607.

Freehold Ground Rent.]—L., having a term of ninety-nine years, with a covenant that he might, within twenty years, purchase the fee, demised to F. for ninety-nine years and a half, at a ground rent, and then acquired the fee. The ground rent was put up for sale described as "a freehold ground rent issuing out of lands on lease, which will expire in December, 1922," being the expiration of the ninety-nine years and a half term :—Held, that the title was too doubtful, in reference to the remedies which the purchaser would have for enforcing the rent, to be forced on an unwilling purchaser. Langford v. Selmes, 3 K. & J. 220 ; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 859.

Under such a description the purchaser has a right to expect a power of entry and distress in case of nonpayment. Ib.

Mortgage — Freehold Property.]—A person contracted to purchase a house described as a freehold residence, being lot 2 referred to in the particulars, subject to conditions of sale, of which this was one : "The abstract of title to lots 1, 2 and 3 (being the freehold portion of the property), will commence with a conveyance of the 17th April, 1860, and no purchaser shall investigate, or take any objection in respect of the title prior to the commencement of the abstract. If any error or misstatement shall appear to have been made in the particulars of sale, it is not to annul the sale, but shall entitle the purchaser to compensation." The abstract of the deed of April, 1860, recited an indenture of March, 1850, whereby E. assigned to R. in fee, and another deed whereby R. assigned to trustees in fee, and the trustees conveyed to the vendor's testator in fee, subject to the covenants and conditions on the part of the grantee, his heirs and assigns, in the indenture of March, 1850 :—Held, that the property having been sold as freehold, the purchaser was entitled to have an unincumbered freehold title under the deed of April, 1860, and the conditions of sale did not protect the vendor, and the purchaser was entitled to rescind. Phillips v. Caldcleugh, 38 L. J., Q. B. 68 ; L. R. 4 Q. B. 159 ; 20 L. T. 80 ; 17 W. R. 575.

——Sale under Order of Court—Conveyancing Act, 1881, s. 70.]—Land was directed by an order of the court to be sold. The conditions of sale gave notice that it was subject to mortgages to a large amount, that the first mortgagees would join in the conveyance with the purchaser and release their mortgage, but that no subsequent incumbrances would be released. The conveyance tendered on behalf of the vendors to the purchaser was to him in fee discharged from the first mortgage, but (with these words added by the first mortgagees) "subject to such equity of redemption as is not by these presents released." The first mortgagees were not before the court :—Held, that, under the conditions, the purchaser had contracted for an estate in fee simple free from incumbrances ; that the subsequent incumbrancers were, by virtue of section 70 of the Conveyancing Act, 1881, bound by the order for sale ; and that the purchaser was entitled to a conveyance free from incumbrances, or, in default, to refuse to complete. Hall Dare's Contract, In re (infra, col. 1376) followed. Mostyn v. Mostyn, 62 L. J., Ch. 959 ; [1893] 3 Ch. 376 ; 2 R. 587 ; 69 L. T. 741 ; 42 W. R. 17—C. A.

——"Immediate Reversion."]—A person purchased at a sale by auction for 2,500*l.* property which was described in the particulars of sale as "an immediate reversion in fee simple." By the conditions of sale the purchaser was to take the property subject to the obligation of paying off mortgages for 2,500*l.*, the gross value of the reversion being under 5,000*l.* :—Held, that the description in the particulars of sale was an improper description, and the reading of the conditions of sale in the auction room was not sufficient to convey to the purchaser a knowledge of the real facts ; and that he was therefore entitled to have the contract rescinded. Torrance v. Bolton, 42 L. J., Ch. 177 ; L. R. 8 Ch. 118 ; 27 L. T. 738 ; 21 W. R. 134.

Good Marketable Title.]—T. agreed to sell to C. certain freehold houses, and to make a good marketable title. The jury found that C. knew of restrictive covenants when he purchased :—Held, that this evidence could not be admitted to modify the terms of the express contract, and that the plaintiff was entitled to recover his deposit. Farebrother v. Gibson (infra) and Leyland v. Illingworth (2 De G. F. & J. 248) distinguished. Cato v. Thompson, 9 Q. B. D., 616 ; 47 L. T. 491—C. A.

Outstanding Leases.]—A tenant for life contracted to sell parts of a settled estate to a railway company, and to give immediate possession. It appeared that the land was subject to a mining lease, to a surface lease, and to tenancies from year to year, which had been overlooked by the vendor, and for which the company had to pay compensation :—Held, that "possession" meant actual occupation ; but the leases having expired before the death of the first tenant for life, and the remaindermen not being bound by the tenancies from year to year, the company had no equity after the death of the first tenant for life, as against a tenant for life in remainder, to deduct the compensation paid by them from the purchase-money of the land. North Staffordshire Ry. v. Lawton, 3 N. R. 31.

A statement in the rental that the tenants had taken renewals from the receiver, and the landlord would have a power of distress for renewal fines :—Held, not to amount to a misrepresentation importing that the legal estate in reversion would be assigned to the purchaser. Vaughan v. Magill, 12 Ir. Eq. R. 207.

Where particulars and conditions of sale purport to offer an estate in fee simple or possession, the existence of leases for lives over a part of the estate will entitle a purchaser either to rescind the contract or to compensation. Hughes v. Jones, 5 L. T. 408 ; 10 W. R. 139.

It is the duty of a vendor to qualify, upon the face of particulars, the interest which he intends to sell, if he does not intend to sell an unqualified estate in fee. Ib.

And see cases supra, col. 1140.

Occupation.]—A house was stated in particulars of sale "in the occupation of the C. Co. under a lease." The company was in occupation by virtue of a lease, which, however, had been granted to A. B. and C., their trustees. The vendor's solicitor, before the sale, told the purchaser that he did not remember the names of the lessees, but believed that A. and B. were two of them :—Held, that, the purchaser having bought with the above information, must be held to his bargain. Farebrother v. Gibson, 1 De G. & J. 602.

The particulars of sale stated that a certain farm was lately in the occupation of A., at the yearly rent of 290*l.* 15*s.* The facts were, that

A. had held a farm for three months previously for a rent of 11*l.*, and the evidence showed that the farm would not let for nearly so much as 290*l.* :—Held, that this was a misrepresentation of fact, amounting to fraud, and did not come within the ordinary condition providing for compensation in the event of a mistake or an error. Dimmock v. Hallett, 36 L. J., Ch. 146; L. R. 2 Ch. 21; 12 Jur. (N.S.) 953; 15 L. T. 374; 15 W. R. 92.

In a sale by the direction of the court, the particulars of sale stated that lot 12 comprised a house "at present in the occupation of C., at a rental of per annum 42*l.*" The purchaser afterwards discovered that C. was not tenant to the vendors, but to some person who claimed by an adverse title :—Held, that the description in the particulars of sale must mean that C. was tenant to the vendors, and the purchaser was entitled to be discharged. Lachlan v. Reynolds, 1 Kay, 52; 23 L. J., Ch. 8; 2 W. R. 49.

A vendor, in his particulars of sale, described certain cottages as in the occupation of the owners of a colliery. It turned out that the owners of the colliery had obtained a right to build and use the cottages without paying rent :—Held, that the particulars did not, on the face of them, convey such information as the vendor ought to have given; but inquiries were directed as to the circumstances under which the cottages were occupied. Brandling v. Plummer, 2 Drew. 427; 2 Eq. R. 1260; 23 L. J., Ch. 960; 2 W. R. 662.

—— "Most desirable Tenant."]—The plaintiffs put up an hotel for sale on the 4th of August, 1882, stating in the particulars that it was let to "F. (a most desirable tenant), at a rental of 400*l.* for an unexpired term of 27½ years." It was proved that on the 1st of May, 1882, the Lady Day quarter's rent wholly unpaid; that a distress was then threatened, and that F. paid 30*l.* on the 6th of May, 40*l.* on the 13th of June, and the remaining 30*l.* shortly before the auction, and that no part of the quarter's rent due at Midsummer had been paid: —Held, that the description of F. as a most desirable tenant was not a mere expression of opinion, but contained an implied assertion that the vendors knew of no facts leading to the conclusion that he was not; that the circumstances relating to the Lady Day rent showed that he was not a desirable tenant; and that there was a misrepresentation. Smith v. Land and House Property Corporation, 28 Ch. D. 7; 51 L. T. 718; 49 J. P. 182—C. A.

—— Subject to Existing Tenancies.]—A public-house and premises were described in the particulars as in the occupation of certain persons at certain rents. The conditions stated that the property was sold "subject to existing tenancies." Certain brewers became the purchasers. Shortly afterwards they discovered that the property was in lease to another brewer for a term of years, of which about nine remained unexpired :—Held, that there was a misdescription of the property, which precluded the vendor from enforcing the agreement, and that the purchasers had not constructive notice of the lease. Caballero v. Henty, 43 L. J., Ch. 635; L. R. 9 Ch. 447; 30 L. T. 314; 22 W. R. 446.

—— Notice to Quit by Tenant.]—An agreement was entered into for the purchase of a freehold estate upon the terms of certain particulars and conditions of sale. In the particulars it was stated that the Y. farm on the estate was in the occupation of H. on a yearly tenancy. H. had before the sale written to the vendor informing him that he intended to give up the farm at the end of the current year, but this was written before the proper time for giving notice to determine the tenancy. No mention of this was made in the particulars, or at the time of sale. After the sale H. gave formal notice to quit :—Held, that the nondisclosure of the intimation of the tenant that he intended to leave at the end of the year did not make the statement in the particulars false or misleading. Davenport v. Charsley, 54 L. T. 372; 34 W. R. 391.

Warranty on Sale.]—Articles of roup of certain lands expressly stipulated that the purchaser was to take the property with all risks of error in the particulars. A. agreed by missives attached to the articles of roup to buy the estate, and a conveyance was executed containing a clause of warrandice in the usual general terms. Neither the disposition nor the articles of roup contained any information as to the tenure of the lands. The particulars of sale contained this statement: "The lands hold of the Crown," and in answer to an inquiry made before the sale on behalf of A. as to the nature of the holding, the seller's agents referred A. to the note of particulars, adding: "The proprietors are not entered with the Crown, but you are aware the Crown never asks for an entry." A claim was subsequently set up by the disponee of the last superior, and a decree of forfeiture against A. was reduced. In an action raised by A. against the proprietors :—Held, that there had been no breach of warrandice; and that the representation was perfectly true according to the knowledge and belief of those who made it, and, that being so, any error therein was covered by the express contract of the purchaser to take the property with the risks of errors in the particulars. Brownlie v. Campbell, 5 App. Cas. 925—H. L. (Sc.)

Copyhold Sold for Freehold.]—A. articles with B. for the purchase of an estate of 180*l.* per annum, but, discovering that 30*l.* per annum of the lands were copyhold, refused to go on. Equity will not decree a specific execution of this agreement. Hick v. Phillips, Pre. Ch. 575.

The mere fact that land for a lease of which an agreement has been made is copyhold is not a bar to specific performance. Paxton v. Newton, 2 Sm. & Gif. 437.

Conditions of sale had described the property to be sold as freehold. Subsequently, before completion, it turned out to be copyhold :—Held, that the purchaser was entitled to have his contract for purchase rescinded, and money repaid with interest. Turner v. West Bromwich Union, 3 L. T. 662; 9 W. R. 155.

When a vendor, having reason to believe that part at least of his property was copyhold, sold and conveyed the same to a purchaser as freehold, there being nothing on the abstract to show that any part was copyhold, and the property turned out to be all copyhold:—Held, that the purchaser was entitled to have the sale set aside and the purchase-money repaid, with interest after the rate of 4*l.* per cent. per annum, with the costs attending his purchase. Hart v. Swaine, 47 L. J., Ch. 5; 7 Ch. D. 42; 37 L. T. 376; 26 W. R. 30.

And see Hopcraft v. Hopcraft, infra, col. 1339.

Land was advertised to be sold as freehold, subject to conditions, one of which provided that any misstatement of the quality, tenure, outgoings, or other particulars, should be the subject of compensation. An objection to the title of one lot was taken that it was of copyhold tenure. It, however, appeared that, under a composition with the lord, the rights of the copyhold were such as to render the tenure hardly different from that of freehold:—Held, that the misdescription did not form a ground for resisting a specific performance. Price v. Macaulay, 2 De G. M. & G. 339.

An estate was described in particulars of sale as containing 227 acres, and as being freehold with the exception of fifty acres copyhold of a forest. The tenure being doubtful, a clause was inserted in the contract for sale to the effect that the estate was sold as being about fifty acres copyhold, but no abatement or compensation was to be made in favour of the purchaser in case the quantity of pure copyhold should exceed fifty acres, and the rest of the estate was sold as being partly of freehold and partly of copyhold tenure. The purchaser afterwards discovered that the 227 acres consisted of about 178 acres of copyhold and forty-nine of freehold, and that all minerals except stone were reserved to the crown:—Held, that there had been a misdescription of the property. Turquand v. Rhodes, 37 L. J., Ch. 830; 18 L. T. 844; 16 W. R. 1074.

Freehold Sold for Copyhold.]—Property sold as copyhold, turned out to be partly freehold:—Held, that the vendor could not compel a specific performance, and that special conditions, providing that errors in the description should not invalidate the sale, and for a compensation, did not alter the case. Ayles v. Cox, 16 Beav. 23.

Covenant to Surrender Freeholds—"Assurance."]—An indenture dated in 1892 deduced by recitals the title to freehold property comprised therein, from which recitals it appeared that on payment off in 1868 of a mortgage on the property no reconveyance had been executed, and that by a voluntary settlement of the latter date the settlor covenanted to surrender the property to the lord of the manor of which it formed part to the use of the trustees of the settlement, and it was declared that the trustees should stand possessed thereof on trust for sale. The person entitled to the property under the indenture, who had purchased it in 1892 from the surviving trustee of the settlement, put it up for sale by auction. The conditions of sale provided that the abstract of title should commence with the said indenture, and after mentioning the absence of the reconveyance, and that the property "was assured to the vendor at the sale in 1892 by a form of assurance applicable only to copyholds," provided that the purchaser should raise no objection in respect of these matters:—Held, that the purchaser was informed by the conditions of sale that he would not get the legal estate; that on the subsequent sale of the property in 1892 value attached to the settlement; that though the settlement did not pass the legal estate, such estate could not be asserted against the purchaser, by reason of the covenant to surrender and declaration of trust contained in the settlement; that in any action in ejectment to recover the legal estate the equitable title of the purchaser would be a sufficient defence; and, consequently, that the purchaser got a good title according to the contract. Williams and Parry's Contract, In re, 13 R. 574; 72 L. T. 869.

Leasehold Sold for Freehold.]—If a person possessed of a term, contracts to sell the fee, he cannot compel the purchaser to take, but the purchaser can compel him to convey the term, and this court will arrange the equities between the parties. Wood v. Griffith, 1 Swanst. 54; 1 Wils. Ch. 34; 18 R. R. 18. See also Mortlock v. Buller, 10 Ves. 316; 7 R. R. 417. And see infra, col. 1320.

Purchaser will not be compelled to take, under contract for freehold, a long leasehold, though for a very long term, upon principle of compensation. Drewe v. Corp, 9 Ves. 368.

A party purchasing an estate under the impression that it is an estate in fee-simple, said to be subject to a perpetual rent-charge, without requiring the production of the last receipt of the rent, from which the nature of the tenure would appear, must take the consequences, if it turn out that the estate is not a fee-simple, but only a tenancy from year to year. Att.-Gen. v. Stephens, 1 K. & J. 724; 3 Eq. R. 1072: 24 L. J., Ch. 694; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 1039; 6 W. R. 649.

Effect of an indefinite representation by a vendor; as that a leasehold estate was nearly equal to freehold, being renewable upon a small fine; putting the purchaser upon inquiry; though, connected with certain circumstances, such representation may be fraudulent, and form a ground for rescinding the contract. Fenton v. Browne, 14 Ves. 144; 9 R. R. 255.

A vendor, being a lessee of a house with a right of purchase, agreed to sell the fee-simple and inheritance for 2,500*l.*, and assigned his lease and contract to purchase to the purchaser, who by mistake covenanted to perform the covenants in the lease. One-fourth of the property was leasehold, and the court set aside the contract. Price v. Ley, 4 Giff. 235; 32 L. J., Ch. 530; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 295; 7 L. T. 845; 11 W. R. 475.

Specific performance of agreement to buy fee-simple of lands and right, &c., refused, where part of subjects of contract only leasehold, and the right is qualified. Wright v. Howard, 1 Sim. & S. 190; 1 L. J. (O.S.) Ch. 94; 24 R. R. 169.

Injunction granted to stay action against the auctioneer for the deposit, although the estate sold was represented as freehold with leasehold adjoining, and turned out to be almost all leasehold, and although there had been great delay in making out the plaintiff's title. Fordyce v. Ford, 4 Bro. C. C. 494.

—— Boundaries Not Defined.]—Held, under the circumstances of the case, that a party, having agreed to purchase premises stated to be partly freehold and partly leasehold, could not, in the absence of concealment or misrepresentation on the part of the vendor, resist a specific performance of his contract, merely on the ground that the exact position of the boundary line between the freehold and leasehold portions could not be ascertained. Munro v. Taylor, 8 Hare, 51. Affirmed, 3 Mac. & G. 713; 21 L. J., Ch. 525.

—— Sale in Lots.]—Premises were put up for sale by auction. Lot 1 was described as all freehold, and in the occupation of R. Lot 2 was described as leasehold. In fact, part of the premises in the occupation of R. was leasehold, and held under the same lease as those comprised in lot 2. A., with a knowledge of this fact, became the purchaser of lot 2, in the belief that it comprised all the leaseholds. He filed a bill, claiming to have the whole of the leaseholds included in his assignment, and the bill was dismissed with costs Fairhead v. Southee, 9 Jur. (N.S.) 764; 11 W. R. 739.

Underlease for Lease.]—An underlease, described in the conditions of a sale by auction as a lease, is a fatal misdescription. Henderson v. Hudson, 15 W. R. 860.

The purchaser was aware that a short time before the sale the vendor only had the underlease:—Held, that the knowledge prevented his setting up the misdescription as an objection to the title. Ib. S. P., Flood v. Pritchard, 40 L. T. 873.

Property was stated to be held for the residue of a term of ninety-nine years, and there was a condition that no errors should vitiate the sale. The title proved to be an underlease three days short of the original term. A bill filed for specific performance was dismissed notwithstanding an offer of compensation made by the plaintiff. Madeley v. Booth, 2 De G. & Sm. 718.

A vendor who contracts for the sale of leasehold property described as held under a lease, cannot, if nothing further is said, make a good title unless it is held under an original lease, yet in a case where the particulars and conditions of sale of property so described contained enough to give notice to a purchaser that the property was held under a derivative lease:—Held, that the purchaser could not on that account refuse to complete, or claim compensation. Madeley v. Booth (supra) commented on. Camberwell and South London Building Society v. Holloway, 49 L. J. Ch. 361; 13 Ch. D. 754; 41 L. T. 752; 28 W. R. 222.

Houses were stated in the particulars to be held for ninety-nine years from the 24th of June, 1844, at a ground rent of 21*l.* There was a condition that error in description of the property should not annul the sale. The vendor was in fact entitled to an underlease for the residue of the term of ninety-nine years less two days at a peppercorn rent, and the owner of the two days could not be found:—Held, that the representation that the property was held by lease, when it was in fact held by underlease, was a fatal misdescription, and that the condition did not apply, for that "error in description of the property" meant a misdescription of the corporeal property, not a mistake in the description of the vendor's title. Dictum of Jessel, M. R., in Camberwell and South London Building Society v. Holloway (supra) disapproved. Beyfus and Masters, In re, 39 Ch. D. 110; 59 L. T. 740; 37 W. R. 261; 53 J. P. 293—C. A.

Under a contract of sale a vendor agreed to sell two messuages described as held by an indenture of lease dated the 1st August, 1872, for the unexpired residue of the term of eighty years computed from the 15th March, 1866. The title was to commence with the lease; and the purchaser was to be deemed to buy with full notice thereof. The lease contained covenants referring to the lessor and superior landlord. The lease was in fact an underlease:—Held, that, as the purchaser could not be considered to have had notice that the property she was intending to purchase was in fact held by an underlease, the representation that it was held by a lease was a fatal misdescription, and that a good title had not therefore been shown. Broom v. Phillips, 74 L. T. 459.

The advertisement out of which the contract arose was of the sale of six houses; total rental 131*l.* 6*s.* per annum; lease about seventy-five years, at a moderate ground-rent of 50*l.* a year; but what the plaintiff, who agreed to give 420*l.* for the property, found himself liable to take was an underlease of the houses at a rent of 50*l.*:—Held, that though there was a misdescription of the property, there was no such substantial misrepresentation as called upon the court to exercise its jurisdiction. Bartlett v. Salmon, 6 De G. M. & G. 33; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 277.

B., by memorandum of agreement, agreed to assign to D. messuages, for the residue of two several terms of sixty years and twenty-one years, for which B. held the same under leases, of which terms thirty-eight years and eight years, or thereabouts, were unexpired, subject to the yearly rents of 15*s.* and 50*l.*, "and to the covenants in such lease contained, and free from all incumbrances." B.'s interest was an interest under an underlease in the residue of two terms of sixty years and twenty-one years, less seven days. The rent subject to which B. held the property comprised in the former lease, also, was 150*l.* and not 15*s.*:—Held, that there not being on the face of the agreement a distinct description that the property was subject to the risk of eviction by no default of the purchaser, he was entitled to take advantage of the omission. Brumfit v. Morton, 3 Jur. (N.S.) 1198.

A. writes a letter to her solicitor, saying that she has agreed to give B. the lease of certain premises in consideration of 400*l.* A. subsequently agrees to surrender the same premises to C., the owner of the fee, in consideration of 550*l.*, and afterwards grants an underlease for all the rest of her term, less one day, to B., in consideration of 1,000*l.* and a bond of indemnity:—Held, that the underlease is no execution of the agreement to assign, the consideration and the subject matter being different; and specific performance of the agreement with C. decreed, and the deed granting the underlease set aside. Goodwin v. Fielding, 1 W. R. 255, 343.

If a lessee for a term of years underlet for a less term, and the underlessee sell by auction the lesser term, describing it as a lease, and one of the conditions of sale is that the lessor's title shall not be inquired into, the vendor's title being good, quære, whether the purchaser can refuse to complete, because there is a term imposed between the vendor's interest and the freehold. Darlington v. Hamilton, Kay, 550; 2 Eq. R. 906; 23 L. J., Ch. 1000. And see National Provincial Bank of England and Marsh, In re, infra, col. 1485.

Conditions as to Title.]—See TITLE, infra, col. 1482.

9. COVENANTS FOR TITLE.

And see COVENANTS, infra, col. 1216.

a. In General.

Effect of.]—Covenants for title are merely a bargain by the covenantor to pay damages if he has no such title. General Finance, Mortgage, and Discount Co. v. Liberator Permanent Building Society, 10 Ch. D. 15; 39 L. T. 600; 27 W. R. 210.

Implied.]—Implied covenant by vendor of a freehold estate for the title, though an assignee in bankruptcy, selling by a general description, not restrained to his actual interest. Deverell v. Bolton (Lord), 18 Ves. 512.

Rule in Conveyancing.]—It was said in this case to be a rule among conveyancers, that where an estate had been long in a family, the vendor's covenant must go as far back as the first purchaser of the estate; but where the vendor claims immediately under the person who first bought the estate, there he need not covenant any further back than from that person, because whoever buys the estate has the benefit of the covenants in the deed to the vendor's purchaser. Lord Hardwicke said he never heard of such a rule; yet, where conveyances are to be made by a decree of the court, they should be settled by such rule as learned conveyancers would direct. Lloyd v. Griffith, 3 Atk. 267.

By Beneficiaries.]—A testator devised real estate upon trust for sale, and to divide the proceeds among his children equally. A sale of such real estate having been made under a decree for the division of the proceeds among the parties beneficially entitled thereto:—Held, that the purchaser was not entitled to covenants for title from those parties. Cottrell v. Cottrell, 35 L. J., Ch. 466; L. R. 2 Eq. 330; 12 Jur. (N.S.) 285; 14 L. T. 220; 14 W. R. 572.

Settled Estates—Tenant for Life.]—Estates were devised to A. for life, remainder to his sons successively in tail male. A. and B., during the infancy of B.'s eldest son, obtained an act of parliament vesting the estates in trustees in trust to sell:—Held, that A. and B. must covenant with the purchaser for the title. If settled estates are sold under a power to sell them, with the consent of the tenant for life, he must covenant for the title. London Bridge Acts, In re, 13 Sim. 176.

An estate was sold by trustees of a settlement to raise a sum to which the tenant for life was entitled:—Held, that the tenant for life must enter into covenants for title. Poulett v. Hood, 37 L. J., Ch. 224; L. R. 5 Eq. 115; 17 L. T. 486; 16 W. R. 323.

—— Sale by Trustees—Equitable Tenant for Life.]—Certain property having been sold under a condition that "the vendors, being trustees, are to be required only to give the statutory covenant against incumbrances implied by reason of their being expressed to convey as trustees":—Held, that the purchasers were entitled to require the equitable tenant for life to enter into the usual limited covenants for title, and that the conditions of sale did not deprive them of this right. Sawyer and Baring's Contract, In re, 53 L. J., Ch. 1104; 51 L. T. 356; 33 W. R. 26.

—— Statutory Declaration—Notice.]—A land company was in possession of part of settled estates under building agreements. The tenant for life waived the completion of these agreements within the specified time. A railway company knowing these facts entered without making a deposit or giving a bond to the land company, and the railway company took a conveyance in fee, the tenant for life joining as beneficial owner, and he and his land agent giving statutory declarations that they knew of no negotiation of any kind with the land company having reference to any extension of time under the building agreements. The conveyance was expressed to the subject, so far as the premises were affected thereby, to the building agreements. The land company subsequently obtained compensation from the railway company in respect of the interest in the lands taken:—Held, that neither under the statutory declarations nor under the covenant for title supplied by the Conveyancing Act, 1881, were the railway company entitled to be recouped the compensation they had paid the land company. L. & N. W. Ry. v. Boulton, 63 L. T. 727—C. A.

Sale of Copyholds.]—A. sold copyholds in fee simple to B., and covenanted to surrender, which he did the next day, and entered into the usual covenants for title. Shortly afterwards, the copyholds were again sold:—Held, that the covenants for title either ran with the land for the benefit of the second purchaser, or that he was entitled to sue on them in the name of the first. Riddell v. Riddell, 7 Sim. 529; 5 L. J., Ch. 102.

Quære, whether covenants for the title of copyholds run with land. Ib.

Prior acknowledgment of Encroachment.]—By a covenant in a conveyance in fee, from A. to B., of a house and premises, "together with all rights, liberties, privileges, easements and appurtenances to the premises belonging or in anywise appertaining or actually held or enjoyed therewith, or deemed or taken to be part, parcel, or member thereof," A. covenanted that, notwithstanding any act, deed, matter or thing whatsoever made, done or permitted by him, or any person claiming through him, he hath now good title to convey the messuage and premises with the appurtenances. Previous to this A. had in writing acknowledged that certain parts of his premises were encroachments on a neighbouring property, and agreed to pay a yearly rent for leave to use such encroachments:—Held, that there was no breach of the covenant, for that A. had neither done nor permitted any act, deed, matter, or thing, to the contrary of his right to convey all that he was ever entitled to convey, and that he had not derogated from any estate which he had ever possessed by an agreement, the effect of which was simply to keep matters in statu quo. Thacheray v. Wood, 6 B. & S. 776; 34 L. J., Q. B. 226; 10 Jur. (N.S.) 877; 10 L. T. 645; 13 W. R. 996—Ex. Ch.

Absence of Covenants for Title.]—It is no objection to title that some of the deeds do not contain covenants for title if a good legal estate passed, and there is a covenant against incumbrances. Scott v. Alvarez, 64 L. J., Ch. 821;

[1895] 2 Ch. 603 ; 12 R. 474 ; 73 L. T. 43 ; 43 W. R. 694—C. A.

b. For Quiet Enjoyment.

Express Covenant.] — An agreement was entered into to grant a lease, by indenture, for a term, and that covenants should be inserted by the lessor for quiet enjoyment. The lessees were in possession under the agreement, but damage having accrued from mining operations, they filed a bill for specific performance. No title could be shown to the minerals :—Held, that the lessees were entitled to the execution of a lease by deed containing an absolute covenant for quiet enjoyment. Onions v. Cohen, 2 H. & M. 354 ; 34 L. J., Ch., 338 ; 11 Jur. (N.S.) 198 ; 12 L. T. 15 ; 13 W. R. 426.

Secus, if the case had been that of an agreement to sell an estate in fee simple. Ib.

—— Building Land.]—A. sold some building land to B., and covenanted for title. After some houses had been built on the land, the purchaser was evicted :—Held, that the purchaser was entitled to recover upon the covenants, not only the value of the land, but also that of the houses subsequently built thereon. Bunny v. Hopkinson, 27 Beav. 565 ; 29 L. J., Ch. 93 ; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 187 ; 1 L. T. 53.

——Mortgage.]—N., the mother of A., was seised in tail, ex provisione viri, reversion in fee to her husband. A. and W., her husband, created a mortgage term on this estate, and joined in levying a fine to the mortgagee ; remainder to such uses as W. should appoint. W., before levying the fine, on sale of an estate, covenanted with I., the purchaser, for quiet enjoyment, and afterwards made an appointment to trustees for paying off the mortgage. I., being evicted, brought his bill against A. and her children, to subject her estate to his demand, under the covenant of W. It being doubtful whether plaintiff's debt accrued by breach of covenant till after the appointment of W., the bill was dismissed. White v. Sansum, 3 Atk. 410.

The plaintiff purchased of the defendant a freehold property, and took a conveyance thereof, in which there were no covenants for title, but which contained a covenant for quiet enjoyment by the vendor. In the same month the plaintiff mortgaged the property, and in 1846, after defending an action of ejectment, was evicted by the verdict of the jury. The plaintiff then brought an action for damages upon the covenant against the defendant, but was stopped by a plea that at the date of the eviction the legal estate was in the mortgagee. Shortly afterwards the defendant paid off the mortgagee, taking from him the mortgage deed, and an acknowledgement in full satisfaction and discharge of the mortgage debt, and of all right of action or demand on the part of the mortgagee against the defendant, under the covenant contained in the deed of conveyance to the plaintiff. Upon a bill filed by the plaintiff against the defendant, the court held that the plaintiff had clearly a right to damages, and gave him leave to bring an action upon the covenant within a time limited in the order, at the same time restraining the defendant from setting up the mortgage deed, or the indorsement thereon, by way of defence to such action. Thornton v. Court, 22 L. J., Ch. 361 ; 17 Jur. 151.

Covenant against Incumbrances restricting Covenant for Quiet Enjoyment.]—A father—seised of lands under a lease for three lives—by a deed reciting that he was seised in fee, or of some other sufficient estate of inheritance, conveyed them, upon the marriage of his son, in strict settlement, by words applicable to lands held in fee simple ; and the father and son covenanted that the lands should continue, remain, and be for ever thereafter to the uses of the settlement, and that free from all former gifts, grants, titles, and incumbrances made or suffered by the father and son, or either of them :—Held, that these two covenants—for quiet enjoyment and freedom from incumbrances—were so connected, that the general words of the former were limited and contracted by the restrictive expressions in the latter, and that in the absence of evidence of fraudulent intention on the part of the settlor, the error in the recital did not amount to such misrepresentation as would entitle the eldest son of the marriage to compensation out of his grandfather's assets. Thompson v. Thompson, Ir. R. 6 Eq. 113.

Defect appearing by Recital.]—Covenants for title and quiet enjoyment do not extend to protect a purchaser against defects of title, which the recitals in his own purchase deed are sufficient to disclose. Hunt v. White, 37 L. J., Ch. 326 ; 19 L. T. 141 ; 16 W. R. 478.

Covenants for title are to be construed literally. Consequently, covenants which on their literal construction are wide enough to apply to a defect in title disclosed by a recital in the conveyance itself, do in law so operate. Hunt v. White (supra) overruled. Page v. Midland Ry., 63 L. J., Ch. 126 ; [1894] 1 Ch. 11 ; 7 R. 24 ; 70 L. T. 14 ; 42 W. R. 116—C. A.

Contemporaneous Deed of Indemnity.]—A deed contained a covenant for quiet enjoyment, free from quit rent and crown rent ; and, by a contemporaneous deed of indemnity, lands were conveyed to a trustee and his heirs, upon trust, to permit and suffer the vendors and their heirs to take the rents and profits until the purchaser and his heirs, or any person claiming under him, should be disturbed by reason of any judgment or incumbrance affecting the lands ; and immediately after any such disturbance by sale of the indemnity lands, to discharge such incumbrance or judgment. Quit rent and crown rent were claimed and paid out of the purchased lands. A report was made omitting the sums paid for quit rent and crown rent, and stating there were no incumbrances other than those named in the report on the indemnity lands. An order was made giving leave to the owner of the purchased lands to file a charge for the quit rent and crown rent accrued since the date of the report and decree :—Held, that the claimant was not precluded by the finding in the report and decree from proving his demand. Massy v. O'Dell, 10 Ir. Ch. R. 22.

Breach—No Disturbance in Possession.]—The defendant covenanted for title and quiet enjoyment, notwithstanding any act or thing done or suffered by him or any of his predecessors in title. After the conveyance, decree made against a class of persons, of whom plaintiff was one, that the land was subject to a right of common:—Held, that the decree alone, without any entry or actual disturbance of the plaintiff in his possession, was no breach. Howard v. Maitland, 53 L. J., Q. B. 42; 11 Q. B. D. 695; 48 J. P. 164—C. A.

And see Howes v. Brushfield, infra, col. 1218.

—— Measure of Damages.]—A conveyed to C. an undivided moiety of land as trustee. B. conveyed to C. the other moiety as beneficial owner. In an action by C. against B. for damages for breach of covenant for quiet enjoyment by reason of the existence of rights of way:—Held, that B. was liable only to the extent of one-half of any damages sustained by C.:—That the measure of damages was—(1) the difference in value of the land free from and fettered with the rights of way; (2) the costs incurred by C. in defending an action and an appeal therefrom. Sutton v. Baillie, 65 L. T. 528.

Implied Covenant.]—Covenant by A. with B. not to permit trade of beerseller on the land. A. demises a shop on the land, and lessee covenants not to carry on certain trades not including the trade of beerseller, and A. covenants with lessee for quiet enjoyment. Lease assigned to D., who, without notice of A.'s covenant to B., sells beer, and is restrained by injunction at suit of B. Action by D. against A. for breach of the express or implied covenant in the demise:—Held, that the express covenant for quiet enjoyment excluded any implied covenant; and that that covenant did not amount to a warranty to the lessee that he might use the premises for any purpose not mentioned in the restrictive covenant. Dennett v. Atherton, 41 L. J., Q. B. 165; L. R. 7 Q. B. 316; 20 W. R. 442—Ex. Ch.

—— Conveyance as Beneficial Owner.]—The defendant granted to B. a lease for years. B. executed three mortgages, by way of subdemise, of the land so leased, and then, as beneficial owner, surrendered the term to the defendant for valuable consideration without disclosing the mortgages. The defendant subsequently, as "beneficial owner," conveyed the land to B. in fee. B. then, as beneficial owner, conveyed to the plaintiff in fee for valuable consideration, without disclosing the existence of the mortgages. In an action for breach of the covenant for title implied by virtue of s. 7, sub-s. 1 (A) of the Conveyancing Act, 1881:—Held, that the existence of the mortgages created by B. arose from an act done by the defendant to which his implied covenant extended, and that he had, therefore, committed a breach of such covenant; and that, inasmuch as the covenant was one which ran with the land, and the plaintiff sued as assignee of the land in respect of privity of estate as distinguished from privity of contract, the defendant could not successfully set up the fraud of B. as an answer to the plaintiff's claim. David v. Sabin, 62 L. J., Ch. 347; [1893] 1 Ch. 523; 2 R. 342; 68 L. T. 237; 41 W. R. 398—C. A.

Act of Government.]—A covenant in a conveyance of lands in America, during the time of the rebellion, that the grantor had a legal title, and that the grantee might peaceably enjoy, is not broken by the States of America seizing the lands as forfeited for an act done previously to the conveyance: notwithstanding the subsequent acknowledgment of their independence by this country. Dudley v. Folliatt, 3 Term Rep. 584; 1 R. R. 772.

c. For Freedom from Incumbrances.

Remedy on Ejectment.]—J. bought an estate of A., who gave him a bond to suffer a recovery within three years, or to return him his money upon a reconveyance. A. tendered a recovery, but, before it was suffered, a third person made a title to the land, whereupon J. brought his bill for the purchase money; but the court could not relieve him, for having consented to take the bond, he must resort to A.'s covenant against incumbrances. Maynard's Case, 2 Free. C. C. 42.

Discovery of Incumbrance before Completion.]—In articles, there was to be a covenant in the conveyance that certain lands were free from incumbrances. Lord Chancellor said, this is not a covenant that the lands are free; and if any incumbrance is discovered between the execution of the articles and sealing the conveyance, whereof the party had no notice, that incumbrance shall be discharged before the sealing of the conveyance. Vane v. Bernard (Lord), Gilb. Eq. R. 6.

Mistake in Conveyance.]—By mistake in the conveyance property was conveyed which the defendant was obliged to reconvey to the right owner. The defendant brought an action for damages against the vendor under his covenant against incumbrances, and an injunction to restrain this action was refused the vendor. Wild v. Hillas, 28 L. J., Ch. 170; 7 W. R. 82.

Charges Exceeding Powers.]—A., with power to charge estates, charges in excess of the power and assigns to the plaintiff 5,000*l.* also in excess of his power, and covenants for quiet enjoyment of the premises assigned against "any person or persons then or thereafter having or possessing any title or interest in, out of, or respecting the same":—Held, that the right of the owners of the estate not to have the 5,000*l.* raised was a right respecting it, and that A.'s estate was liable on the covenant to make good the plaintiff's purchase money. Henty v. Wrey, 21 Ch. D. 332; 47 L. T. 231; 30 W. R. 850—C. A.

Covenant by Mortgagee.] — Conveyance by mortgagee and mortgagor of part of estate to A. by deed which empowered A. to erect a porte cochère or projection over the pavement of a road. Afterwards mortgagee and mortgagor conveyed another part of the same estate to the plaintiff, and granted plaintiff right to pass along road on which the porte cochère was built, and the mortgagee covenanted with the plaintiff that he "had not done, omitted, or knowingly suffered, or been party or privy to anything whereby the premises were or might be impeached, affected, or incumbered":—Held, that upon the construction of the deeds the covenant of non-incumbrance was not broken by the mortgagee having been party to the deed with A. Clifford v. Hoare, 43 L. J., C. P. 225; L. R. 9 C. P. 362; 30 L. T. 465; 22 W. R. 828. And see Thompson v. Thompson, supra, col. 1200.

d. For Further Assurance.

Crown Lands.]—A purchaser of crown lands, sold part to plaintiff, with a covenant for further assurance: on the restoration he obtained a lease from the crown. He shall assign to the plaintiff his term in the part he sold him. Taylor v. Debar, 2 Ch. Ca. 212.

Covenant to Produce Deeds.]—If vendor retains title deeds, and covenants for further assurance only, the purchaser may, under that covenant, compel him to enter into a covenant for production of deeds. Fain v. Ayers, 2 Sim. & S. 533; 4 L. J. (O.S.) Ch. 166; 25 R. R. 264.

Seisin.]—S. purchased church lands in fee, under the usurper's title, and sold them, covenanting that he was lawfully seised. The church being restored, S. was relieved from his covenant, upon proof that at the time of the sale he undertook for his own acts only. Caldecot v. Hill, 1 Ch. Ca. 13.

Right to Assign.]—A. agreed to assign a lease to B., and to deliver possession, and undertook that he had lawful right to assign. A. had no lawful title to assign at the time of the agreement, as he had covenanted with his lessor not to assign without his lessor's consent in writing, and had not got such consent:—Held, that this was no breach, for, till the agreement with the intended purchaser was completed, it could not be known in what name the licence should be made out. Stowell v. Robinson, 3 Bing. (N.C.) 928; 5 Scott, 196; 3 Hodges, 197; 6 L. J., C. P. 326.

10. Conveyance.

a. Form and Execution of.

Duty of Vendee to Prepare.]—In a contract for the sale of land, it is the duty of the vendee to prepare the conveyance, unless there is an express stipulation to the contrary; therefore, in an action for non-payment of the purchase-money, the declaration need not allege a tender or offer to convey: it is sufficient to state that the vendor was ready and willing to convey. Poole v. Hill, 6 M. & W. 835; 9 D. P. C. 300; 10 L. J. Ex. 81.

A declaration stated that by a deed B. agreed to sell and the company to buy premises, and that B. would on payment of the purchase-money by the company, at the costs and charges of the company, execute a proper conveyance:—Held, that the breach alleged that the company had not prepared a proper conveyance, was good, since, as the deed provided that the conveyance was to be at the costs and charges of the company, it lay on them to prepare it. Thames Dock & Ry. v. Brymer, 5 Ex. 696; 19 L. J., Ex. 321—Ex. Ch.

Stamps.—A 10*s.* deed stamp on a mortgage deed is insufficient; therefore, a purchaser is entitled on a contract for sale with a mortgagor to require the mortgage deed, where so stamped, to be stamped before completion to the full ad valorem duty at the vendor's expense, notwithstanding that the mortgagee may have consented to join in the conveyance. Whiting to Loomes, 50 L. J., Ch. 463; 17 Ch. D. 10; 44 L. T. 721; 29 W. R. 435—C. A.

A land society, after the passing of the Epping Forest Act, 1878, repurchased from its allottees the lands in Epping Forest, and the allottees reconveyed to the trustees by indorsement on the original conveyances, but the reconveyances were not stamped. Compensation was payable to the society by the conservators, who contended that the reconveyances ought to be stamped at the cost of the society. The society refused, but offered that the allottees should join with the society in a conveyance to the conservators. The conservators refused, and paid the compensation into court, under s. 75 of the Lands Clauses Act, 1845 (incorporated in the Epping Forest Act). On petition for payment out by the society:—Held, that it was not necessary that the reconveyances should be stamped: that the conservators ought to have been satisfied with the conveyance offered them by the society; and that the conservators must pay the costs. Whiting to Loomes (supra) distinguished. Birkbeck Freehold Land Society, Ex parte, 52 L. J., Ch. 777; 24 Ch. D. 119; 49 L. T. 265; 31 W. R. 716.

Presence on Completion.]—Upon a sale of real property, the purchaser has not an absolute right in all cases to require the vendor's presence at the completion of the purchase. Essex v. Daniell, L. R. 10 C. P. 538; 38 L. T. 476.

The fact of the vendor having been confined in a lunatic asylum is not a reasonable ground for insisting upon a departure from the ordinary course, when it is duly certified and sworn that he was competent at the time of executing the conveyance. Ib.

There is no rule that the purchaser may in all cases require the purchase-deed to be executed in the presence of himself or his agent, and the purchase-money paid directly to the vendor, but that he may so require in the absence of special circumstances rendering a different course proper. Viney v. Chaplin, 2 De G. & J. 468; 27 L. J., Ch. 434; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 619; 6 W. R. 563.

Execution by Agent.]—A purchaser may refuse to accept a conveyance executed under a power of attorney. Coore v. Callaway, 1 Esp. 115. S. P., Richards v. Barton, 1 Esp. 268.

—— Trustee.]—A trustee can execute a deed by an attorney, and can empower the attorney to receive or join in receiving trust-money, and s. 2 of the Trustee Act, 1888, will protect a purchaser paying money to a person so authorised to act; but the solicitor to receive the money under that section must be a solicitor appointed by the trustee himself, and permitted by the trustee himself to produce the deed by a proper receipt clause. Hetling and Merton's Contract, In re, 62 L. J., Ch. 783; [1893] 3 Ch. 269; 2 R. 543; 69 L. T. 266; 42 W. R. 19—C. A.

Compulsory Purchase.]—When the price of land taken compulsorily under the Lands Clauses Act has been settled by arbitration the execution of the conveyance is, as in ordinary cases, a condition precedent to the right of action for the purchase-money. East London Union (Guardians) v. Metropolitan Ry., 38 L. J., Ex. 225; L. R. 4 Ex. 309. See also Dicker v. Jackson, infra, col. 1306.

Conveyance not Tendered.]—A. agreed, in consideration of 7,000*l.*, to present the nominee of B., and to furnish an abstract of title to and execute a conveyance of the next presentation to B.; afterwards A., by consent of B., agreed to sell the next presentation to C. for 7,500*l.*, on having such title as A. had received, C. paying to B. absolutely, on a day certain, the odd 500*l.* A. furnished an abstract of such title as he had received, which C. refused to accept, and no conveyance was tendered to him. B. sued C. for the 500*l.*:—Held, that A. having done all that his contract required, it was no answer that no conveyance was tendered to C. Wilmot v. Wilkinson, 9 D. & R. 620; 6 B. & C. 506; 5 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 196; 30 R. R. 405.

Covenant to Convey.]—If A. covenants that he will, on or before a certain day, convey to B., by such conveyance as B.'s counsel should advise, all the grounds before conveyed to him by C.; in consideration of which B. covenants to pay a certain sum, and reserve certain rents to A., and to lay out a certain sum on the premises:—Held, that A. cannot maintain an action against B., without averring such a conveyance, or a readiness to convey, to B. on or before the day all the land, but that B. prevented him by some act or neglect of his. Heard v. Wadham, 1 East, 619.

Effect of Error.]—A deed which incorrectly recites the consideration of a contract on which a conveyance was executed, does not thereby warrant a suit in equity to set aside the contract, but only to reform the conveyance. Harrison v. Guest, 8 H. L. Cas. 481.

Form—Right of Purchaser.]—In a suit where the only question related to the form of the conveyance:—Held, that the purchaser had a right to choose the form of the conveyance, but no costs given. Clark v. May, 16 Beav. 273; 22 L. J., Ch. 302; 1 W. R. 69.

—— General Words—Conveyancing Act, 1881, s. 6.]—Under an open contract for the sale of land with the appurtenances, the purchaser is only entitled to have such general words expressed or implied in his conveyance as he would have been entitled to before the Conveyancing Act, 1881, came into operation; and if the general words implied by s. 6 of that Act are more extensive, the vendor is entitled to limit them accordingly. Sect. 6 of the Conveyancing Act, 1881, does not apply to contracts, but only shows what general words are to be taken as included in a conveyance where the conveyance is otherwise silent. Peck and the London School Board, In re, 62 L. J., Ch. 598; [1893] 2 Ch. 315; 3 R. 511; 68 L. T. 847; 41 W. R. 388.

—— Insertion in habendum of Servitudes.]—A condition that freehold property "is sold, and will be conveyed subject to all" particularised servitudes "(if any)," gives the vendor a right to have the words "subject," &c., inserted in the habendum of the conveyance though no such servitude is shown to exist. Gale v. Squire, 46 L. J., Ch. 672; 5 Ch. D. 625; 36 L. T. 632; 25 W. R. 226—C. A.

Right to Separate Conveyances.]—A vendor may be required by the purchaser to convey the land in parcels by separate conveyances at the same time, on tender of the entire purchase-money and the additional costs thereby occasioned, but not at intervals of time, without an express stipulation. Egmont (Earl) v. Smith, 46 L. J., Ch. 356; 6 Ch. D. 469.

Purchaser Retaining Draft.]—Form of order in a suit for specific performance where the draft conveyance had been approved of by the vendor and purchaser, but retained by the latter. Hirst v. Stokehill, 1 W. R. 479.

Conveyance Suspended.]—Conveyance of an estate to which defendant is entitled in equity suspended till an account of the rest of the estate should be taken in the original suit, from the danger of the plaintiff's losing his demand. Shish v. Foster, 1 Ves. sen. 88.

Building Lands.]—Where, on a conveyance of building land, in lots, the vendor takes a separate deed of covenant, the object of so doing is not to keep the notice of the covenant off the face of the title, but to obviate the necessity of executing the conveyance in duplicate. Sydney v. Clarkson, 13 L. T. 659.

Execution by Person Named.]—Proof that a conveyance was executed by a person named by the defendant, will support an averment in a declaration that he himself "became the purchaser." Seaman v. Price, 1 Car. & P. 586; 2 Bing. 437; 10 Moore, 34; Ry. & M. 195; 3 L. J. (O.S.) C. P. 58; 27 R. R. 684.

Execution Presumed.]—D. agreed with S. for the purchase of an estate, and that the purchase deed should contain a covenant by D. that he, his heirs, and assigns would pay to S., his executors, administrators, and assigns for coals gotten. The purchase deed was executed by S., but not by D. D., however entered:—Held, that the execution by D. of a counterpart of the deed containing the covenant could not be presumed, and there was no liability in D. or his representative under the covenant. Witham v. Vane, 44 L. T. 718.

Sale in Lots.]—A leasehold, subject to the yearly rent of 12*l.* 10*s.*, was put up for sale by auction in five lots, under conditions of sale, that each lot would be sold subject to the entire rent, but "with right of indemnity against the other lots, save as to 12*l.* 10*s.*," and another, that the original lease would be handed to "the purchaser of the largest lot in amount." At the auction only two lots were sold, one to O. for 200*l.*, and the other to S. at the same price. A few days afterwards, O. sent in a proposal to purchase another lot for 160*l.*, subject to the same conditions, which was accepted. S. subsequently, executed an agreement with O., surrendering in his favour a claim which he (S.) might have to the original lease. The two other lots remained unsold:—Held, O. was entitled to custody of the original lease, but not to have inserted in his conveyance a clause creating a rent-charge upon the other lots for their share in the rent reserved by the lease. Doherty's Contract, In re, 15 L. R., Ir. 247—C. A.

Order to Convey.]—In a decree for specific performance, a direction that the vendor shall convey has the same effect as a direction that the vendor and all other necessary parties shall convey. Minton v. Kirkwood, 37 L. J., Ch. 606; L. R. 3 Ch. 614; 18 L. T. 781; 16 W. R. 991.

Condition as to Parties.]—It being one of the terms of a contract, that certain parties were to join in the conveyance, the court would not consider whether they were necessary or proper parties. Benson v. Lamb, 9 Beav. 502 ; 15 L. J., Ch. 218.

Conditions of sale stated that the purchaser should not require the persons beneficially interested in the premises or the purchase-money to concur in the sale. A suit in respect of the property had been compromised, and the compromise signed by the solicitors of all parties, and all parties except R. (a defendant to the suit) signed a power of sale to I. R. refused to concur in the sale agreed on in pursuance of the compromise :—Held, R. was not a necessary party to the conveyance. Thompson v. Raine, 28 L. T. 362—Ex. Ch.

R., sole acting executrix, sold, in 1885, leasehold, bequeathed in 1868 upon trust to pay debts :—Held, that as one of the conditions of sale provided that the purchaser should not require any of the legatees to be parties to the conveyance, the purchaser could not require the concurrence of the legatees or the executor who had not proved. Ryan and Cavanagh, In re, 17 L. R. Ir. 42.

Necessary Parties—Sale of Share.]—A. devised the residue of his property to his wife, in trust to divide it among their children in such manner as they should deserve : one of the seven children sold her share, and covenanted to make it up a full seventh ; this is good, and on a specific performance she can make a good conveyance without the mother joining. Musprat v. Gordon, 1 Anstr. 34 ; 3 R. R. 541.

—— Sale by Administrator.]—See ante, col. 1105.

—— Sale by Tenant for Life.]—Where property was devised to trustees for A. for life, for her sole and separate use, and after her decease for such person as she should appoint ; and A. conveyed to B. :—Held, on a conveyance to a third person, C. (A. being still living), that the trustees were necessary parties. Hall v. L. C. & D. Ry., 14 L. T. 351.

—— "Bare Trustees."]—A testator devised his real estate to trustees for sale, who were married women, one of them having married before and the other after the Married Women's Property Act, 1882. Both of them also took beneficial interests in the proceeds of sale. Under the judgment in an action for the administration of the testator's estate, part of the real estate was sold by the trustees, the purchaser paying his purchase-money into court :—Held, that the married women were "bare trustees" within s. 6 of the Vendor and Purchaser Act, 1874, and that the conveyance to the purchaser did not require the concurrence of the husbands, or acknowledgment under the Fines and Recoveries Act. Doewra, In re, Doewra v. Faith, 54 L. J., Ch. 1121 ; 29 Ch. D. 693 ; 53 L. T. 288 ; 33 W. R. 574. And see Morgan v. Swansea Urban Sanitary Authority, supra, col. 1101.

—— Copyhold Trustees.]—A copyhold was devised to trustees for certain persons, who sold it, and the purchaser was admitted on the surrender of the customary heir :—Held, that although the purchaser had thus obtained both the legal and equitable title, to make a good title there must be a release from the trustees of their bare right to be admitted. Steele v. Waller, 28 Beav. 466.

—— Dower Trustee.]—A vendor being entitled under a limitation to uses to bar dower without a power of appointment, the purchaser insisted on the concurrence of the dower trustee :—Held, that the objection was frivolous and vexatious, and that costs ought not to be given to the purchaser. Collard v. Roe, 4 De G. & J. 525 ; 28 L. J., Ch. 560 ; 7 W. R. 623.

—— Party unable to Execute through Infirmity.]—On a bill for specific performance, stating a contract made with the sanction of the mortgagee, who was unable, through infirmity, to execute the conveyance, the court overruled with costs a demurrer, that the plaintiff had stated in his bill his inability to procure the execution of the deed by a necessary party. Beaufort (Duke) v. Glynn, 1 Jur. (N.S.) 888 ; 3 W. R. 463, 502.

—— Tenant by the Curtesy.]—R. took the benefit of the Insolvent Debtors Act in 1850, and a vesting order was made. In 1853 a remainder in fee became vested in possession in R.'s wife, and in 1854 R. and his wife made an equitable mortgage to C. with notice of R.'s insolvency. In 1855 R. became tenant by the curtesy :—Held, in a suit by the assignees for specific performance, that the question whether C. had not a valid charge on the estate by the curtesy was sufficiently doubtful to entitle the purchaser to require C.'s concurrence. Murrell v. Goodyear, 1 De G. F. & J. 432.

—— Bankruptcy.]—Where trustee is a beneficiary, and has a power of sale, the concurrence of his assignee in insolvency is necessary. Young v. Tregear, 21 W. R. 215.

—— Heir-at-Law.]—A purchaser of real property, the title to which is derived under a will, is not entitled to have the will established, or to have the concurrence of the testator's heir in the conveyance to him, unless some reasonable ground exists for doubting the validity of the will. M'Culloch v. Gregory, 3 K. & J. 12 ; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 1134.

Specific performance of contract for purchase of lands will not be refused where the heir-at-law has no reasonable claim to any beneficial interest, and his concurrence is matter merely of conveyance, not of title. Minton v. Kirwood, 37 L. J., Ch. 606 ; L. R. 3 Ch. 614 ; 18 L. T. 781 ; 16 W. R. 991.

A., having made a will devising all his property, and having contracted to sell the land, and afterwards died :—Held, that the heir-at-law of A. was not a necessary party to the conveyance. Fowler v. Lightburn, 11 Ir. Ch. R. 495.

A. articles to sell lands, and dies before a conveyance made ; the heir decreed to convey, and the purchase-money to be paid to the executors. Baden v. Pembroke (Countess), 2 Vern. 215. S.P., Daly v. Nalder, 35 L. J., Ch. 52 ; 11 Jur. (N.S.), 921 ; 14 W. R. 45.

—— Infant Heir.]—Where confirmed purchaser of estate under a decree died before conveyance made, having in meantime devised his interests therein to trustees, court ordered conveyance to be made to them without consent of testator's heir-at-law, he being an infant. King v. Gregory, 4 Price, 380.

Defendant being in possession, and having exercised acts of ownership, payment of the money ordered, although an infant heir was a necessary party to the conveyance. Bradshaw v. Bradshaw, 2 Mer. 492.

The vendor dying intestate, and leaving an infant heir, the purchase-money being paid into court in a suit for a specific performance instituted after his death, will be retained till the heir attains twenty-one, and conveys. Bullock v. Bullock, 1 J. & W. 603.

—— Infant Beneficiary.]—No objection to sale in court under a will, that infants interested in will cannot join in conveyance. Powell v. Powell, 6 Madd. 53.

In a suit for partition, the estate was vested as to one moiety in A. in fee and as to the other moiety in B. in fee, in trust for infants:—Held, that a conveyance from B., and a decree of the court, would give A. a good title, and, therefore, that it was not necessary to order the infants to convey when they came of age. Cole v. Sewell, 17 Sim. 40.

—— Judgment Creditors.]—A. devised an estate which on death of devisee descended to N. Pending a suit instituted by A.'s creditors, judgments were entered up against N., which remained unsatisfied when the estate, together with the testator's other estates, was sold under the decree in the suit:—Held, that N.'s judgment creditors were necessary parties to the conveyance of the estate, and, as they could not be compelled to join in the conveyance, because they were not parties to the suit, that a good title could not be made. Craddock v. Piper, 14 Sim. 310.

A judgment was obtained against a party under a warrant of attorney. He afterwards took the benefit of the Insolvent Debtors Act:—Held, that the judgment creditor was a necessary party to the conveyance of the insolvent's real estate to a purchaser, notwithstanding the 1 & 2 Vict. c. 110, s. 61. Hotham v. Somerville, 9 Beav. 63; 14 L. J., Ch. 385; 9 Jur. 702.

Judgment registered in 1843. A mortgagee in 1844, made no searches; and in 1846, sold under his power of sale. The judgment was not re-registered till 1850:—Held, that, at the hearing on further direction, in 1853, the purchaser could not be compelled to complete without the concurrence of the judgment creditor. And, semble, that a title of vendor, a purchaser, without notice of a registered judgment, cannot be forced upon a purchaser. Freer v. Hesse, 4 De G. M. & G. 495; 23 L. J., Ch. 338; 17 Jur. 703; 1 W. R. 242, 487.

Held, also, that though the question was one of conveyance, yet, as it had occasioned the suit, the vendor, submitting to obtain the concurrence required, must pay the costs. Ib.

A. agreed to sell land to B., who accepted the title, paid part of his purchase-money, and was let into possession, but took no conveyance. A. subsequently obtained a decree against B. for sale of the property, and payment of the balance of purchase-money out of the proceeds:—Held, that a purchaser, under the decree, could not be compelled to complete without the concurrence of the registered judgment creditors of B., whose judgments were prior to the decree, and who were not parties to the suit. Grey Coat Hospital v. Westminster Improvement Commissioners, 1 De G. & J. 531; 26 L. J., Ch. 843; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 188; 5 W. R. 855.

Mortgage—Transfer.]—Sect. 4 of the Vendor and Purchaser Act, 1874, does not apply to a transfer of a mortgage, and therefore the legal personal representative of a mortgagee of freeholds cannot convey the estate to a transferee. Spradbery's Mortgage, In re, 49 L. J., Ch. 623; 14 Ch. D. 514; 43 L. T. 82; 28 W. R. 822.

Where Successive Mortgagees have assented to Sale.]—See Wallis v. Woodyear, 2 Jur. (N.S.) 179.

b. What passes by.

Mortgage by Testator—Conveyance by Trustees for Purposes of the Will—All the Estate Clause.]—The general rule that where a party conveys all his estate in a property to a purchaser, every estate vested in him will pass by the conveyance, although not vested in him in the character in which he is made a party, may be rebutted by the circumstances. A trustee in whom the legal estate was vested under a mortgage created by the testator, joined with his co-trustee in a conveyance in fee for the purposes of the will:—Held, that, having regard to the intention of the parties and the circumstances of the case, the legal estate did not pass. Cooke and Bletcher's Contract, In re, 13 R. 264.

General Words—"Yards."]—The parcels in a conveyance were described by reference to coloured parts of a plan. A yard, delineated, but not coloured in the plan, was held to pass under the general word "yards." Willis v. Watney, 51 L. J., Ch. 181; 45 L. T. 739; 30 W. R. 424.

——Appurtenances.]—It is settled by the earliest authority, repeated without contradiction to the latest, that land cannot be appurtenant to land, and the word "appurtenances" only includes incorporeal hereditaments attached to the land granted or demised, such as rights of way, of common, piscary, and the like, but it does not include additional lands. Lister v. Pickford, 34 Beav. 576.

M., possessed of two contiguous plots of ground, assigned one of them to T., "together with the right to use the walls on the north side" (i.e. on the adjoining plot) for building purposes. T. afterwards assigned the plot to the defendant by deed, the granting part of which was silent as to "rights, members and appurtenances," habendum "with the rights, members and appurtenances thereto belonging:" and, subsequently, M. assigned the adjoining plot of ground to the plaintiff:—Held, that the right to use the walls for building purposes passed with the plot of ground to the defendant. Renwick v. Daly, Ir. R. 11 C. L. 126. And see Bolton v. Bolton, ante, col. 1106.

Excess when Rectified.]—Words of conveyance passing more than was intended, relieved in chancery. Beversham's case, 2 Vent. 345.

A conveyance which passes too much may be rectified, and the excess deducted. Where a deed affects by its recital to carry an agreement into execution, and goes beyond the agreement, the court will rectify it. Beaumont v. Bramley, Turn. & R. 41.

Where there was a variation between the particulars for sale and a plan which was used at the sale, and the vendors executed a conveyance of the property according to the plan, and then applied for rectification:—Held, that the conveyance having been executed, primâ facie governed the relations between the parties and evidenced their contract, but that if for the purpose of showing a mistake in the conveyance the prior written contract was to be looked at, then all the prior relevant transactions ought to be looked at also, and not the contract alone. Ellis v. Hills, 67 L. T. 287.

Parcels—Overhanging Buildings.]—A portion of premises as occupied overhung adjoining premises. The owner in fee of both premises demised them as occupied to separate persons. He subsequently conveyed the overhung premises by reference to a ground-floor plan, subject to the lease of those premises, but not expressly subject to the lease of the overhanging premises:—Held, that the overhanging part of the adjoining premises passed by the conveyance. Layhourn v. Gridley, 61 L. J., Ch. 352; [1892] 2 Ch. 53; 40 W. R. 474.

"Rights of Way and Water."]—Where an owner in fee of two adjoining houses, let to A. and B. as yearly tenants, allowed A.'s house to have a waterpipe running into the well of B.'s house, and at a subsequent sale of the houses by auction each tenant purchased his own house, such privilege of water supply does not pass as against B. under an ordinary reservation in the conditions of sale of "rights of way and water and other easements." Russell v. Harford, L. R. 2 Eq. 507; 15 L. T. 171; 14 W. R. 982.

Reservation.]—In June, 1870, an agreement was entered into by the secretary of a railway company for the purchase of land for the purpose of carrying a road over the line, and the agreement contained a proviso that the vendor, &c., should have a right of access to other lands belonging to him by and over any of the slopes which the company might arrange on their intended works. This agreement was not under seal. Possession was taken by the company, and a bridge was constructed over the line. In April, 1871, the land was, in consideration of the price named in the agreement, conveyed to the company without reserving any right of access to the vendor or in any way referring to the proviso contained in the agreement:—Held, that as the vendor by the terms of the conveyance had absolutely conveyed to the company every interest which he possessed in the land, any right of access previously stipulated for was thereby absolutely extinguished. Teebay v. Manchester, Sheffield and Lincolnshire Ry., 52 L. J., Ch. 613; 24 Ch. D. 572; 48 L. T. 808; 31 W. R. 739. See also Sumner v. Scholfield, 43 L. T. 763.

——Easement of Necessity.]—There is no need to expressly reserve an easement of necessity in a conveyance, such reservation is a matter of legal presumption to be implied from the nature of the transaction between the grantor and grantee. Shubrook v. Tuffnell, 46 L. T. 886; 46 J. P. 694.

Without Impeachment of Waste.]—Trustees for a term without impeachment of waste sold the term, and in the deed of conveyance the words "without impeachment of waste" were omitted:—Held that the estate of the purchaser was unimpeachable of waste. Beaumont v. Salisbury (Marquis), 19 Beav. 198; 3 Eq. R. 369; 24 L. J., Ch. 94; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 458.

Easement—Knowledge of Purchaser.]—Mere knowledge of the manner in which property conveyed was used by a vendor for the convenience of an adjoining tenement will not affect the purchaser, if the property is conveyed without reservation. He was not entitled to an injunction. Suffield v. Brown, 4 De G. J. & S. 185; 3 N. R. 240; 33 L. J., Ch. 249; 10 Jur. (N.S.) 111; 9 L. T. 627; 12 W. R. 356.

A grantor cannot claim rights over property absolutely granted, even if such rights were, at the time of the grant, continuous and apparent easements enjoyed in respect of an adjoining tenement which remains the property of the grantor. Ib.

If an owner of two adjoining tenements conveys one of them to a purchaser absolutely, the tenement so sold is discharged from any quasi-servitudes to which it was subjected by the vendor during his ownership of both properties, and the purchaser is not bound to take notice of the manner in which the tenement purchased has been used for the convenience of the adjoining and unsold tenement. Ib.

The owner of land by deeds at different dates sold portions of the lower land with easements to enter the unsold upper lands, to fetch water and make gutters, &c., to convey a spring to the lower lands, and to build a reservoir and watercourse on the unsold upper land. Several years afterwards the upper land was sold, according to a particular, describing it as fit for building, and subject to conditions of sale, providing that if any mistake were made in the description of the premises, or if any other error should appear in the particulars, such error or omission should not annul the sale, but compensation should be given or taken. The existence of the easements was not stated in the particulars or conditions:—Held, first, that the circumstances of the purchaser living in the neighbourhood and being acquainted with the property, did not affect him with notice of the easements; secondly, that the existence of the easements constituted a material defect in the title to the upper land; thirdly, that the purchaser could not be compelled to take the title, with compensation as to lands prejudicially affected. Shackleton v. Sutcliffe, 1 De G. & Sm. 609; 12 Jur. 199.

A deed of conveyance purported to grant the whole of the demised premises without exception or qualification, and the covenants for title corresponded with the granting part; the vendor had previously assigned a portion of the premises to a railway company by a deed which had not been disclosed to the purchaser, but the works constructed by the company were apparent to any one, and the purchaser was aware of them before he purchased:—Held, that the condition of the premises being known to both parties at the time of the contract, they should be taken to have contracted as to them in that condition, and that the deed of conveyance should be rectified so as to carry out the real contract between the parties. Young v. Hahahan, Ir. R. 9 Eq. 70.

A. buys a house and finds 12 flues in it, but 14 chimney-pots on the wall:—Held, that he has constructive notice of an agreement under which the owner of the adjoining house uses the two remaining flues. Herrey v. Smith, 22 Beav. 299.

In 1864, B., in possession of lands under an agreement for a lease, obtained the consent of the board of works to stop up a public foot-path and substitute a new one, and this he did, but the owners in fee never consented, and there was no actual dedication to the public. In May, 1866, a lease to B. was executed, describing the land by reference to a plan on which the new road was shown but marked "private road." The habendum was "subject to the existing rights of way." There were other rights of way. The lease became vested in W., who purchased by a sale plan in which the road was marked "private road." W.'s tenants stopped up the road:—Held, that W. was a purchaser without notice, there not being enough on the sale plans to affect him with notice that there was a public right of way; and that, therefore, assuming the existence of an agreement which could have been enforced against B., it could not be enforced against the defendants, W.'s tenants. Att.-Gen. v. Biphosphated Guano Co., 49 L. J., Ch. 68; 11 Ch. D. 327; 40 L. T. 201; 27 W. R. 621. And see Leigh v. Jack, infra.

—— Possession of Legal Estate.]—Sale by direction of the court. S. purchased a lot with right of footway over another lot, but by the conveyance, a right of way for carts and carriages was granted. S. sold to C. with the right which had been conveyed to him. The owner of the servient lot, T., refused to allow the passage of carriages. T. had not completed his purchase:—Held, that C., being in possession of the legal estate, was entitled to an injunction against T., who was only an equitable owner, although T. purchased subject to the limited right only, and had no notice of the larger right actually conveyed. Curtis v. Thomas, 33 L. T. 664.

Land intended for Highway—No Dedication.]—The presumption that the soil of a highway belongs to the owner of the adjoining land, usque ad medium filum viæ, does not apply to ground which was intended to be used as a highway, but had never been dedicated to the public; and if the owner of the soil of the intended highway disposes of the adjoining land by conveyances in which it is described as bounded by the intended highway, the grantees do not acquire by presumption of law the ownership of the soil of the intended highway. Acts of user committed upon land, which do not interfere and are consistent with the purpose to which the owner intends to devote it, do not amount to a "dispossession" of him, and are not evidence of "discontinuance of possession" by him within the meaning of 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, s. 3. Leigh v. Jack, 49 L. J., Ex. 220; 5 Ex. D. 264; 42 L. T. 463; 28 W. R. 452; 44 J. P. 483—C.A.

"Exclusive use of Gateway."]—M. and others were owners in fee of a house, fronting a street, and also of a yard and premises in rear of the house. A covered passage or gateway led from the street through the house to the premises in the rear. They conveyed the premises in the rear, "together with the exclusive use of the gateway," which was described by its dimensions, to W. in fee:—Held, that W. was entitled not merely to a right of way through the gateway, but to the use of the gateway for all lawful purposes. Semble, such a right amounted to the ownership of the space within the gateway. Reilly v. Booth, 44 Ch. D. 12; 62 L. T. 378; 38 W. R. 484—C.A.

"Ingress, Egress, and Regress."]—A grant of a right of "ingress, egress, and regress," is a grant of a right of way from the locus a quo to the locus ad quem, and from the locus ad quem forth to any other spot to which the grantee may lawfully go, or back to the locus a quo. By a deed of conveyance from a railway company of a close of land the grantee was given the right of free "ingress, egress, and regress," to and from certain private roads which bounded the close and led to the railway station and on to the public highways:—Held, that the grantee was entitled to pass from the close to the private roads, and thence to the public highways, or in the reverse direction, and was not limited to passing from the close to the railway station, or vice versâ. Somerset v. G. W. Ry., 46 L. T. 883.

Rights of Third Parties—Renters' Stalls in Theatre burnt.]—Trustees acting for the shareholders or rentallers of a theatre granted in 1858 a disposition of the ground and buildings to one J. B., subject, inter alia, to the real burden of a perpetual annuity to each rentaller of the said theatre, and to the successors or assignees of them; and it was further declared that each of the said rentallers, or the assignee or successors of such, should at all times be entitled, inter alia, to free admission to the auditorium of the said theatre. There was no stipulation as to insurance of the theatre or as to the rebuilding of it in case of destruction by fire or otherwise. The theatre was two or three times burnt down and rebuilt by another name and twice sold, but in each case the conveyance was granted subject to the "real burdens, conditions, provisions, declarations, and others," specified in the original disposition of 1858, and especially under the burden of payment of the annuities to the rentallers, and of allowing "these parties the privileges to which they are entitled." The privilege of free admission was enjoyed by the rentallers for fourteen years after the destruction of the first theatre:—Held, that the privileges conferred on the rentallers by the original dispositions, other than the payment of the annuities, rested only on the personal obligation of the original disponee, and were confined to the theatre then in existence. Scott v. Howard, 6 App. Cas. 285.

Title to Approaches.]—On the sale of a house or stables in a cul de sac, the vendor is not bound to show a title to the roadway. Curling v. Austin, 2 Dr. & Sm. 129; 10 W. R. 682.

Sea Walls.]—The purchaser of lands situate below the level of the sea is bound to inquire how all walls necessary for the protection of his property against the encroachments of the sea are maintained. Morland v. Cook, 37 L. J., Ch. 825; L. R. 6 Eq. 252; 18 L. T. 496; 16 W. R. 777.

c. Costs and Stamps.

General Rule.]—Expense of conveyance falls on the purchaser if no particular stipulation. Bolton (Duke) v. Williams, 2 Ves. J. 155; 4 Bro. C. C. 297; see 7 R. R. 285.

Costs of Perusal.]—The conditions of sale requiring purchaser to pay the expenses of all assignments and surrenders of terms, &c.:—Held, that the purchaser must pay the expenses of perusal and execution. Johnson v. George, 2 Jur. 886.

Where Stipulation.]—Construction of a contract, that a reference of the expenses was confined to the expense of the conveyance; but evidence was admitted to prove the intention of both parties, that the purchaser should also pay the expense of making out the title. Ramsbottom v. Gosden, 1 V. & B. 165; 12 R. R. 207.

—— Surrender.]—A vendor agreed to surrender, or procure some person to surrender, and the costs of the surrender were to be paid by the purchaser. It was found necessary to procure a surrender under the Trustres Act:—Held, that the costs of the proceedings ought to be paid by the vendor. Bradley v. Munton, 16 Beav. 294.

—— Admission to Copyholds.]—A condition of sale, that "the purchasers should have proper surrenders, conveyances, and assignments of the premises at their own expense," did not bind them to bear the expense of procuring the concurrence of all proper parties. Where, therefore, it was necessary for the heir of a trustee to be admitted, the fine and fees on that admission were ordered to be paid by the vendors. Paramore v. Greenslade, 23 L. J., Ch. 34; 17 Jur. 1064.

—— Getting in Outstanding Estate.]—On the sale of an estate, one of the conditions provided, that if the purchaser should require a conveyance of any outstanding term, all the expenses attending the getting in and conveyance, of such estate should be borne by the purchaser. The estate was in 1823 conveyed to trustees for a term of 1,000 years, to secure the payment of a sum of money, the payment of which was under orders of court provided for:—Held, that the purchaser was entitled to an assignment of the term, the costs of which, not having been provided for by the conditions of sale, must be borne by the vendors. Stronge v. Hawkes, 2 Jur. (N.S.) 388.

—— Reinvestment.]—Sale of settled estates, upon the condition that C. bear all the expenses incident to and consequent on his proposal to purchase, and the negotiations consequent thereon and the obtaining the act of parliament, &c., "and all other expenses whatsoever of A. and B., in consequence of the sale, or arising out of or in anywise relating thereto." The act of parliament was obtained, directing that the purchase money should be invested in stock until it could be invested in real estate, to be held upon the original trusts:—Held, that the expenses of reinvesting the purchase money in real estates were not such expenses as C. was, under the agreement, bound to pay, as being incidental, &c., to the sale. Witts, Ex parte, 6 Jur. 936. And see London Bridge Acts, In re, 13 Sim. 180.

Sale by a Company.]—On a sale by official manager of a company being wound up, a condition of sale provided, that if the purchaser should consider the legal state to be outstanding, and should require a conveyance thereof, he should bear the expense of obtaining such conveyance, and all other expenses incidental thereto:—Held, that under the condition, it was incumbent upon the purchaser, and not the official manager, to find out and specify the person in whom the legal estate was outstanding, and that then the official manager was, at the expense of the purchaser, to get such conveyance or conveyances of the legal estate as the purchaser should require and the official manager could obtain. Sheerness Waterworks Co. Official Manager v. Polson, 3 De G. F. & J. 36; 29 Beav. 70; 30 L. J. Ch. 326; 7 Jur. (N.S.), 12; 4 L. T., 568; 9 W. R. 113.

Stamps.]—Contract to sell a freehold groundrent of 20*l*., arising from a wharf, "subject to an agreement for a lease for a term" of years. The agreement mentioned was unstamped. On a bill for specific performance by the purchaser:—Held, that the agreement was part of the subject of the contract, and that the vendor was bound to perfect it by having it properly stamped. Smith v. Wyley, 16 Jur. 1136.

—— Mortgage.]—A ten-shilling deed stamp on a mortgage deed is insufficient, therefore a purchaser is entitled on a contract for sale with a mortgagor to require the mortgage deed, when so stamped, to be stamped before completion to the full ad valorem duty at the vendor's expense, notwithstanding the mortgagee may have consented to join in the conveyance. Whiting to Loomes, 50 L. J., Ch. 463; 17 Ch. D., 10; 44 L. T. 721; 29 W. R. 435.

—— Land Society—Reconveyances.]—A land society conveyed allotments to members and subsequently repurchased them from the members, repaying them the purchase-money; the reconveyances were indorsed on the original conveyances but were not stamped:—Held, that it was not necessary that the reconveyances should be stamped. Whiting to Loomes (supra) distinguished. Birkbeck Freehold Land Society, Ex parte, 52 L. J., Ch. 777; 24 Ch. D. 119; 49 L. T. 265; 31 W. R. 716.

11. COVENANTS.

a. In General.

Implied—Conveyance subject to Mortgage.]—On a conveyance for value of lands subject to a mortgage, and expressed to be so conveyed, there is, in the absence of express agreement, an undertaking implied by law on the part of the purchaser to indemnify the vendor against personal liability on foot of mortgage. Adair v. Carden, 29 L. R., Ir. 469.

Not to Sell Water.]—Covenant upon a conveyance in fee with the grantors, lessees of the waterworks, not to sell or dispose of water to the injury of the proprietors of the said waterworks, their heirs, executors, administrators, and assigns. Whether the covenant runs with the land, whether it is contrary to the policy of the law, and as to the effect of a renewal of the lease, quære. Collins v. Plumb, 16 Ves. 454; 10 R. R. 214.

To build Wall—Damages.]—Covenant to enclose lands with a brick wall. It appeared that, in the events that had happened, the value of the adjoining land was not decreased by the nonerection of the wall to anything like the amount which it would have cost to build the wall:—Held, that the true measure of damages being the pecuniary amount of the difference between the position of the plaintiffs upon the breach of covenant and what it would have been if the covenant had been performed, under the circumstances of the case the amount that it would cost to build the wall was not the correct measure of the damages. Wigsell v. School for Indigent Blind, 51 L. J., Q. B. 330; 8 Q. B. D. 357; 46 L. T. 422; 30 W. R. 474.

Building Covenants—As to Roads.]—A covenant for "the free use of the newly intended road whenever the same may be made," will not apply to a road which, when the parties contracted, was newly intended to be made, but was executed and complete before the sealing of the deed. Crisp v. Price, 5 Taunt. 548.

A messuage, consisting of two parts, separated by intervening reserved land, subject only to a specific right of way for the lessee to a third building for a specific purpose, was demised; the reservation, strictly interpreted, would preclude him from all access to the one part, which was accessible only by crossing the reserved land in one of two directions, the one by entering it from the residue of the demised premises; the other, and far the more convenient, by entering it from a public street:—Held, that the lessee was entitled to a way across the reserved land from the public street to that part. Morris v. Elgington, 3 Taunt. 24.

By a deed reciting that the defendants had appropriated and laid out certain meadows as building ground, they demised a piece of the land to the plaintiff, who covenanted to build thereon two houses, and the defendants covenanted "that on such buildings being covered in, they would cut good and sufficient roads in, through and over the meadows, and construct a good and sufficient sewer under the intended roads, for the common use of the plaintiff, and all other lessees or tenants of the other portion of the meadows":—Held, that the defendants' covenant was not satisfied by their making a road up to the plaintiff's houses, but that, as soon as those houses were covered in, the defendants were bound to make good and sufficient roads over the whole meadows as contemplated by the building scheme, although no other houses than the plaintiff's had been built. Mason v. Cole, 4 Ex. 375; 18 L. J., Ex. 478.

Parties to Sue for Breach.]—Persons who have no title in their own persons to raise an action, cannot have the right to sue, where nil, validated by the consent and concurrence of the party to whom alone such right of action belongs. B. and C., owners of an adjoining feu, raised an action with "consent and concurrence" of the common superior to enforce building restrictions contained in A.'s feu contract:—Held, that B. and C. were strangers to the action, and therefore had no title to sue. Hislop v. Leckie, 6 App. Cas. 560—H. L. (Sc.)

Where no Damage.]—It is no defence to an application for an injunction to restrain a breach of covenant to say that the covenantee sustains no damage from the breach, for if the covenantor derives any benefit therefrom, the covenantee may reasonably demand a share of it as the price of his consent. Wells v. Attenborough, 24 L. T. 312; 19 W. R. 465.

Where there is a clear breach of covenant the covenantees are entitled to an injunction and no damage need be shown. Manners (Lord) v. Johnson, 45 L. J., Ch. 404; 1 Ch. D. 673; 24 W. R. 481.

Land Sold subject to.]—A purchaser contracted to purchase a piece of land. On the abstract it appeared that the land was subject to covenants. The purchaser tendered a draft conveyance, to which the vendors added similar covenants on the part of the purchaser:—Held, that the purchaser could elect either to take a conveyance with the covenants or to rescind the contract. Lukey v. Higgs, 3 Eq. R. 510; 24 L. J., Ch. 495; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 200; 3 W. R. 306.

In a sale by the court the particulars of sale contained certain reservations and stipulations as to the property, and one of the conditions of sale provided that the conveyances should contain covenants by the purchasers for securing the liabilities and rights under such reservations and stipulations, the form of such covenants, in case of dispute, to be settled by the judge. A dispute having arisen between a purchaser and the vendor, the judge settled the covenant, adding a proviso that if the purchaser assigned his purchase, and the assignee entered into a similar covenant, the purchaser should be freed from further liability:—Held, that the vendor was entitled to an unqualified covenant, and that the proviso must be struck out. Pollock v. Rabbits, 21 Ch. D. 466; 47 L. T. 637; 31 W. R. 150.

The order of a judge settling the form of a conveyance is subject to appeal. Ib.

Charge—Covenant by Purchaser.]—Where, by a memorandum of agreement, the defendant agreed to sell certain cottages and gardens lately purchased by him to the plaintiff, for an annuity payable to the defendant during his life, which was to be charged on the premises, and the defendant was empowered to sell for the purpose of raising any arrears:—Held, that the vendor was entitled not only to the security of the charge, but also of the covenant of the purchaser, for payment. Bower v. Cooper, 2 Hare, 408; 11 L. J., Ch. 287; 6 Jur. 681.

Against Alienation.]—To a suit for specific performance, by the purchaser against the vendor of a leasehold interest, it is not a defence that the lease contains a covenant against alienation without the consent of the landlord, and that it does not appear that the consent of the landlord has been obtained. Leitch v. Simpson, Ir. R. 5 Eq. 613.

In Lease.]—Where property put up for sale is described merely as held by the vendor as assignee under a lease, the purchaser cannot object to complete on the ground that the lease contains a covenant not to carry on obnoxious trades. Grosvenor v. Green, 28 L. J., Ch. 173; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 117; 7 W. R. 140.

Constructive Notice.]—Where property was sold by private contract, under conditions of sale, one of which alluded to letters patent:—Held, that the purchaser had constructive notice of the covenants contained in the letters patent (Temp. Car. 1.) under which the lands were held. Stewart v. Conyngham (Marquis), 1 Ir. Ch. R. 534.

Sale of Quit Rents including Arrears.]—A seller covenanted with a purchaser of an estate, that he should enjoy and receive the rents, without any action or interruption by the seller, or those claiming from him, or by, through, or with his or their acts, means or default :—Held, that a breach was well assigned in respect of certain quit rents in arrear before and at the time of the conveyance, though not stated to have accrued while the seller was tenant of the premises. Howes v. Brushfield, 3 East, 491.

Running with Land.]—A covenant relating to but not running with land is binding on an assign with notice. Luker v. Dennis, 47 L. J., Ch. 174 ; 7 Ch. D. 227 ; 37 L. T. 827 ; 26 W. R. 167.

A proviso in a lease of a seam of coal under lands empowered the lessor to distrain for rent the chattels, effects, goods, &c., employed upon or under the lands, in connection with the working of the coal, as well within the limits of the lands, as also in, or under or about any other lands in which there should be any pits or openings, through which the coal demised should be for the time being in course of working by the lessees, their executors, administrators and assigns, and for that purpose to enter into and upon such other lands : — Held, that such a proviso or covenant could not attach to land in which the lessor had no interest, and that he could not by virtue of it distrain on any "such other lands" after an assignment of the lessees' interest therein. Daniel v. Stepney, 41 L. J., Ex. 208 ; L. R. 9 Ex. 185 ; 27 L. T. 380 ; 22 W. R. 662—Ex. Ch.

—— To Maintain Walls.]—Lands situated below the level of the sea were partitioned by a deed containing a covenant that the expense of keeping and maintaining the walls and gutts of and belonging to the lands thereby divided, should be borne by the owners, and should be payable out of the lands by an acre-scot. Semble, that the covenant was one which would run with the land although the assigns of the covenantors were not named. Morland v. Cook, 37 L. J., Ch. 825 ; L. R. 6 Eq. 252 ; 18 L. T. 496 ; 16 W. R. 777.

—— As to Mines.]—A covenant by the purchaser to the vendor of copyhold land, that the vendor shall be able to work mines underneath the land sold without incurring any liability for injury to the surface, does not run with the land. Richards v. Harper, 4 H. & C. 55 ; 35 L. J., Ex. 130 ; L. R. 1 Ex. 199 ; 12 Jur. (N.S.) 770 ; 14 W. R. 643.

Novel Rights.]—A vendor cannot create rights not connected with the enjoyment of the land and annex them to it, nor can the owner of land render it subject to a new species of burden, so as to bind it in the hands of an assignee. Ackroyd v. Smith, 10 C. B. 164 ; 19 L. J., C. P. 315 ; 14 Jur. 1047.

And see infra, col. 1223.

Covenant for Production.]—If a vendor retains title deeds and covenants for further assurance only, the purchaser may compel him to enter into a covenant for production under that covenant. Fain v. Ayers, 2 Sim. & St. 533 ; 4 L. J. (O.S.) Ch. 166 ; 25 R. R. 264.

Covenants for Title.]—See supra, col. 1197.

Non-performance of Covenants.]—See infra, col. 1476.

b. Restrictive.

i. In General.

Personal to Vendor.]—G., a lessee, contracted with the trustees of his lessor, to purchase the reversion. Prior to the contract, the trustees had sold the adjoining house to W., and had covenanted with W. that they, the vendors, "would not, either alone or jointly with any other person or persons take proceedings to prevent the said house, or any other house or erections that might thereafter be constructed on the said premises, being used or occupied by convalescent fever or other patients" :—Held, that the covenant was a mere personal covenant binding the vendors only and did not in any way bind G. Groves v. Loomes, 55 L. J., Ch. 52 ; 53 L. T. 592 ; 34 W. R. 94.

Building Covenants — Sale of Lot subject to Existing Covenants.]—K. purchased one lot at a sale of building land, intended to be laid out according to a general building scheme, and entered into covenants with the vendor and with the purchasers of other lots to observe a building line. K. made an equitable mortgage of half his lot to F., and F. obtained a foreclosure order absolute against K., and K. having refused to convey the property, an order was made vesting the property in F. F. had entered into no covenant with K., but it was admitted that he had notice of and took his mortgage subject to the existing covenants :—Held, that at the date of the mortgage, the land was subject only to covenants enforceable by the original vendor and the adjoining owners, and that K. not having taken any fresh covenant from F. had no power to enforce these existing covenants. King v. Dickeson, 58 L. J., Ch. 464 ; 40 Ch. D. 596 ; 60 L. T. 785 ; 37 W. R. 553.

——Personal to Builder.]—F., a builder, bought one lot of an estate laid out for building, and covenanted with the vendors that "he, his heirs, executors, administrators, and assigns," would do certain acts in respect of the property purchased, and "the said F. erecting any building on the said land shall only erect" buildings of a certain description :—Held, that the restrictive covenant was only a personal covenant binding on F., and that a purchaser from F.'s devisees could not object to the title on the ground that this covenant had not been disclosed. Fawcett and Holmes, In re, 58 L. J., Ch. 763 ; 42 Ch. D. 150 ; 61 L. T. 105—C.A.

Usual Covenant.]—A. deed of grant contained a covenant to build houses on the land, the rent of which should be double the value of the rent reserved by the deed, without limiting any time within which such building was to be required : —Held, that such covenant was unusually restrictive. Andrew v. Aitken, 52 L. J., Ch. 294 ; 22 Ch. D. 218 ; 48 L. T. 148 ; 31 W. R. 425.

Semble, that although the assignee of the grantee of the land was not liable affirmatively on such covenant, he might be called on to allow the house to be built in accordance with the covenant. Ib.

Indemnity.]—A vendor liable on a restrictive covenant which prohibited building on the land, put it up for sale, pursuant to particulars and conditions, noticing the existence of the covenant, but not stipulating that the purchaser should enter into any covenant on the subject. On a bill for specific performance, filed by the purchaser :—Held, that the plaintiff was not entitled to a conveyance, unless on the terms of giving or providing for the vendor a sufficient indemnity against any breach of the covenant on the part of the plaintiff, his heirs, appointees, or assigns. Mœhay v. Inderwick, 1 De G. & Sm. 708.

Held, also, that a covenant on the part of the plaintiff, his heirs, executors, administrators, appointees, and assigns, with the defendant, his heirs, executors, and administrators, to the same effect, mutatis mutandis, as the covenant entered into by the vendor on his own purchase, ought to be considered as a sufficient indemnity. Ib.

Between Purchasers.]—Building land was sold in a number of lots, subject to certain conditions as to fencing, repairing the roads, and to restrictions as to the class of houses to be built. The conditions also provided, that statements to this effect should be inserted in the conveyances. By the 15th condition the vendor reserved the right of selling the unsold lots under different arrangements, "and either subject to or not subject to the stipulations as to fencing and other stipulations contained in the particulars or the conditions":—Held, first, that as to the unsold lots the vendor was subject to none of the restrictions; secondly, that the purchasers were bound to have not only the restrictive conditions stated on their conveyances, but also the 15th in favour of the vendor; and thirdly, that a separate deed of covenant by a purchaser as to the restrictions was a sufficient compliance with the provision as to the statement on the conveyances. Sidney v. Clarkson, 35 Beav. 118.

—— Withdrawal of One Lot.]—Two lots of land were put up for sale under conditions which provided that each purchaser should enter into a covenant with the vendor and the purchaser of the other lot not to use any building on his lot as a public-house. No provision was made for the case of a lot remaining unsold. Lot 2 was purchased at the sale, and the purchaser signed a contract embodying the conditions. Lot 1 remained unsold:—Held, that the purchaser was bound to enter into the restrictive covenant with the vendor. Mordy and Cowman, In re, 51 L. T. 721—C. A.

Power of Entry.]—In a contract for a purchase of land, there is a stipulation that the conveyance shall be made subject to certain conditions and restrictions as to building upon the land, and to a covenant for their observance, and proper provisions for securing the due performance thereof:—Held, that this contract entitled the vendor to have a power of entry inserted in the conveyance in case of a breach of the covenant, but not to have a term of years or a rentcharge limited to a trustee. Ralph, Ex parte, Dobbs, In re, 1 De G. 219.

Sale by Auction—Onerous and unusual Covenants in Lease—Nondisclosure by Vendor—Constructive Notice—Duty to Inquire.]—It is established by the the decision in Reeve v. Berridge (supra, col. 1174) that it is primâ facie the duty of the vendor on a sale of property to disclose all that is necessary to protect himself, and not the duty of the purchaser to make inquiry before entering into a contract; and that is so whether the sale is by public auction or private contract. White and Smith's Contract, In re, 65 L. J., Ch. 481; [1896] 1 Ch. 637; 74 L. T. 377; 44 W. R. 424.

Accordingly, where on a sale of leasehold property the purchaser's attention is not called, either by the particulars or otherwise, to the possible existence of onerous and unusual covenants in the lease, and he is not informed that he will be allowed, if he desires it, to examine the lease before the sale, he will not be acting otherwise than as a business man of ordinary caution if he abstains from examining the lease, and will not under such circumstances be affected with constructive notice of the contents of the lease, or, if the lease contains onerous and unusual covenants, be compelled to complete. Ib.

Whether Running with Land.]—A covenant relating to but not running with land is binding on an assign with notice. Luker v. Dennis, 47 L. J., Ch. 174; 7 Ch. D. 227; 37 L. T. 827; 26 W. R. 167. And see infra, col. 1225.

A purchaser of a piece of land with a well upon it covenanted with the vendor, who retained land adjoining, to erect a pump and reservoir, and to supply water from the well to all houses built on the vendor's land:—Held, that both the benefit and the burden of the covenant ran with the land, and that the case was not within the second resolution in Spencer's Case (5 Rep. 16, a; 1 Sm. L. C. 60), but if not, a subpurchaser with notice of the covenant was bound by it. Cooke v. Chilcott, 3 Ch. D. 694; 24 L. T. 207.

A covenant, by a purchaser of land not naming assigns, that no building on the land should be used for the sale of beer, does not run with the land. Wilson v. Hart, 2 H. & M. 551. Affirmed L. R. 1 Ch. 463; 11 Jur. (N.S.) 735; 12 L. T. 798; 13 W. R. 988. And see Patman v. Harland, infra, col. 1225.

The owners of a freehold property, on a sale of a plot of land to the plaintiff, covenanted with him not to allow any house built on the adjoining land to be used for the sale of liquor:—Held, that an assign with notice was in the same position as a party to the covenant, and that, therefore, the court will not require substantial damages to be shown before granting an injunction to restrain a breach. Richards v. Revett, 47 L. J., Ch. 472; 7 Ch. D. 224; 37 L. T. 632; 26 W. R. 166.

An assignee of land with notice of a covenant is subject in the same measure of relief as if he had been party to the covenant, and the covenantee suing on breach of the covenant is no more bound to prove substantial damage in one case than in the other. Ib.

——User of Land.]—A covenant between vendor and purchaser, on the sale of land, that the purchaser and his assigns shall use or abstain from using the land in a particular way will be enforced in equity against all subsequent purchasers with notice, independently of the question whether it be one which runs with the land so as to be binding on subsequent purchasers at law. Tulk v. Moxhay, 2 Ph. 774; 1 Hall & Tw. 105; 18 L. J., Ch. 83; 13 Jur. 89.

According to Tulk v. Moxhay (supra), if parties purchase land with notice of a covenant concerning it, but which does not run with the land so as to bind them at law, equity will not permit them to do anything contrary to the true meaning of that covenant. Patching v. Dubbins, 1 Kay, 1; 17 Jur. 1113; 2 W. R. 2. Affirmed, 2 Eq. R. 71; 23 L. J., Ch. 45.

Land was granted to J. in fee subject to a rentcharge. The grantee covenanted for himself, his heirs, executors, and administrators, that he, his heirs and assigns, would pay the rent, would erect buildings on the land, and would thereafter keep them in repair. The grantor afterwards assigned the rentcharge with the benefit of all covenants to the plaintiff, and the land and the buildings which had been erected came by assignment to A., who mortgaged them, subject to the covenants, to the defendants, who afterwards entered into possession. In an action on the covenant to repair :—Held, that the defendants were not liable, that the covenant did not run with the land, that it was a collateral affirmative covenant, and did not impose a burden on the land, so that the defendants could not, as assignees with notice, be compelled to perform it. Haywood v. Brunswick Permanent Benefit Building Society, 51 L. J., Q. B. 73 ; 8 Q. B. D. 403 ; 45 L. T. 699 ; 30 W. R. 299.

Cooke v. Chilcott (supra), questioned. Tulk v. Moxhay (supra), explained. Ib.

Whether Appurtenant.]—A. conveyed Whiteacre to B., his heirs, and assigns, together with all ways, paths, and passages, particularly the right and privilege to and for the owners and occupiers for the time being of Whiteacre, and all persons having occasion to resort thereto, of passing and repassing, with or without horses or carriages, for all purposes, in, over, along, and through Blackacre. B. conveyed Whiteacre, with the appurtenance to C. :—Held, that the right and privilege exercisable over Blackacre granted by A. to B. were not confined to purposes connected with the occupation and enjoyment of Whiteacre, but that the right and privilege, as granted, did not run with the land, not being of such a nature as to inhere in the land, or to concern the premises conveyed, or the mode of occupying them. Ackroyd v. Smith, 10 C. B. 164 ; 19 L. J., C. P. 315 ; 14 Jur. 1047.

Undertaking to Construct Roadway and Footpath.]—In an action to recover from the defendant certain expenses paid to a highway authority for paving, &c., a new street prior to its being taken to by the parish, it was proved that the defendant had constructed the roadway and footpath in pursuance of an undertaking given by him to the plaintiff upon an assignment by him to the plaintiff of his interest in premises adjoining the street :—Held, that the fact of the parish authority having paved, &c., the roadway and footpath, prior to taking to it, was not evidence of the defendant not having fulfilled his undertaking ; and that the defendant was not bound by his undertaking to construct the roadway and footpath to the satisfaction of the highway authority, and keep it in repair until it became a street repairable by the inhabitants at large. Read v. Bullen, 46 J. P. 359.

Whether Tending to a Perpetuity.]—Certain persons having formed themselves into a company for the establishment of a railroad called the Trevil, E. & J., who held certain ironworks under a long lease, covenanted with the proprietors of the railroad and their assigns, that they, their executors, administrators and assigns would procure all the limestone wanted for the ironworks from the Trevil quarry, and carry it along the Trevil railroad, paying a certain toll. E. & J. assigned their lease of the ironworks to the defendants, who began to construct a railroad to other lime quarries situated eastward of the Trevil quarry. On a bill for an injunction to restrain them from using that or any other new road :—Held, that the covenant was valid and did not tend to create a perpetuity. Keppel v. Bayley, 2 Myl. & K. 517.

—— Land Never to be Sold.]—A deed of conveyance contained an agreement that certain land, described in the deed, should "never be hereafter sold, but should be left for the common benefit of both parties and their successors" :—Held, that the agreement was good as being an agreement on the part of the grantor to leave the land in the state in which it was at the time of the conveyance : and because the agreement contemplated, not an uncertain and indefinite use of the land by the parties, but that the land should be left open for the advantage of the parties as adjoining proprietors. McLean v. McKay, L. R. 5 P. C. 327 ; 29 L. T. 352 ; 21 W. R. 798—P. C. And see next case.

By his will a testator devised his property to trustees upon trust for his eldest son for life, with remainder in trust for his first and other sons in tail male, with remainder in trust for the testator's second and third sons successively for life with the like limitations to their first and other sons respectively, with remainder in trust for his grandson for life, with remainder to his first and other sons in tail male, with remainders over. In accordance with a power to that effect in the will, the trustees sold a portion of the settled land to a tenant for life, and by a separate deed he covenanted with the trustees that he would not, "during the continuance of the strict settlement," sell or dispose of the land otherwise than as therein mentioned :—Held, that the covenant was void as tending to a perpetuity. Trevelyan v. Trevelyan, 33 L. T. 853.

—— Reservation of Minerals.]—Covenant on conveyance of land (reserving minerals) by vendor, that if vendor should at any time thereafter sell mines under adjoining lands the vendor would at the same time offer to the purchaser the mines thereby reserved upon certain terms : —Held, that this covenant was not obnoxious to the rule against perpetuities. Birmingham Canal Co. v. Cartwright, 48 L. J., Ch. 552 ; 11 Ch. D. 421 ; 40 L. T. 784 ; 27 W. R. 597.

—— Rent to arise at any Time.]—Where it was agreed between a covenantor and covenantee that a rent was to arise at any time thereafter when the mortgagees should enter into possession :—Held, that though no rent can be created which violates the law against remoteness, as a rent in fee simple may be granted to a man and his heirs to continue for ever, so also one may be granted to commence at any time, however remote. Gilbertson v. Richards, 5 H. & N. 459 ; 29 L. J., Ex. 213 ; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 672.

—— To Reconvey.]—By a deed which recited that the plaintiff company were seised in fee of certain land not required for the purposes of their railway, the company conveyed the land to P. in fee, and P. covenanted that he, his heirs, and assigns would at any time thereafter, whenever the land might be required for the railway and whenever thereunto requested by the company on a six months' notice, reconvey on receiving the same sum as that paid by P. :—Held, that an executory interest in property to arise on a future event which may not happen within the limits of the rule against perpetuities is void, though it be limited to an ascertained person who can release it at any time. The dictum in Gilbertson v. Richards (supra) dissented from. Held also, that as the covenant gave to the company an executory interest in land to arise on an event which might occur after the period allowed by the rules as to remoteness, it was invalid on the ground of remoteness. Birmingham Canal Co. v. Cartwright (supra) overruled. The doctrine of Tulk v. Moxhay (supra) only applies to restrictive covenants and not to covenants to do acts relating to the land. L. & S. W. Ry. v. Gomm, 51 L. J., Ch. 530; 20 Ch. D. 562; 46 L. T. 449; 30 W. R. 620—C. A.

Liability of Assignee.]—The purchaser of a plot of ground agreed that no building erected on it should be used as a public-house during twelve years and a half. The agreement did not appear on the conveyance. The purchaser's assignee built a public-house on the plot, and let it to a yearly tenant. The assignee had notice, but the tenant had not. On a bill against the assignee and his tenant, an injunction was granted to restrain the assignee from allowing the premises to be used as a public-house; the injunction to be suspended during the existing tenancy. Carter v. Williams, 39 L. J., Ch. 560: L. R. 9 Eq. 678; 23 L. T. 183; 18 W. R. 593.

A sub-tenant is liable to a restrictive covenant entered into by the purchaser of the freehold for himself and his assigns, though neither the sub-tenant nor his lessor has actual notice of it, and in spite of the provision of s. 2 of the Vendor and Purchaser Act, 1874, preventing the examination of the title to the freehold. Thornewell v. Johnson, 50 L. J., Ch. 641; 44 L. T. 768; 29 W. R. 677.

Each of the original owners of houses entered into covenants with the original owner of all the land on which they stood :—Held, that whether the covenants did or did not run with the land, a purchaser of one of the houses, with notice of the covenants, was bound by them in equity. Western v. Macdermott, L. R. 2 Ch. 72; 12 Jur. (N.S.) 366; 15 L. T. 641; 15 W. R. 265.

Constructive Notice.]—A lessee having notice of a deed forming part of the title of his lessor, has constructive notice of the contents of such deed, and is not protected from the consequences of not looking at the deed, even by the most express representation on the part of the lessor that it contains no restrictive covenants. The rule that a lessee has constructive notice of his lessor's title has not been altered by s. 2, sub-s. 1, of the Vendor and Purchaser Act, 1874, but a lessee is now in the same position with regard to notice as if he had, before the act, stipulated not to inquire into his lessor's title. Wilson v. Hart (supra, col. 1222) observed upon. Patman v. Harland, 50 L. J., Ch. 642; 17 Ch. D. 353; 44 L. T. 728; 29 W. R. 707. And see White's Mortgage, In re, infra, col. 1504.

Who May Sue on.]—Covenant by vendors of part of estate to be laid out for building with A. "not to erect thereon, or use or permit to be used any building to be erected thereon as a tavern, public-house, or beershop." Part was subsequently sold to G., subject to this covenant, who sold to H., also subject to this covenant: I., a yearly tenant under H., obtained an "off licence":—Held, that B., an assign of A., was entitled to an injunction and damages against H. and I., in respect of the breach of covenant in selling beer under an "off licence." Nicoll v. Fenning, 51 L. J., Ch. 166; 19 Ch. D. 258; 45 L. T. 738; 30 W. R. 95.

Where there are mutual covenants by owners of land, their heirs and assigns, with the owners of adjoining land, their heirs and assigns, to comply with certain stipulations, the subsequent lessee of one of the owners is entitled to the benefit of the covenants as an assign, and can sue to restrain a breach. Taite v. Gosling, 48 L. J., Ch. 397; 11 Ch. D. 273; 40 L. T. 251; 27 W. R. 394.

Covenant by purchaser that he would not do, or suffer to be done, on the premises anything which would be a nuisance to the vendor or his tenants, or the occupiers or owners of the adjoining property, or the houses to be built thereon. The purchaser sold under an exactly similar covenant :—Held, that by the word "adjoining" in the last-mentioned covenant was meant the property adjoining each lot, and not merely the property adjoining the whole piece of land originally sold; and that the owner of any lot was entitled to enforce the covenant against the owner of any other lot. Harrison v. Good, 40 L. J., Ch. 294; L. R. 11 Eq. 338; 24 L. T. 263; 19 W. R. 346.

A covenant by A., a lessee, that he, his executors, administrators, or assigns, would not during the term do on the premises anything which should be an annoyance to the neighbourhood or to the lessor or his tenants, or diminish the value of the adjoining property, nor build, nor allow to be built, on the ground any building or erection without first submitting the plans to the lessor and obtaining his approval. The landlord afterwards granted a lease of an adjoining plot to B., who entered into a similar restrictive covenant. Within twenty years A. commenced, with the approval of the lessor, to build upon his ground so as to darken the windows of B.'s house. On a bill by B. to restrain A. from erecting and the lessor from approving the building objected to :—Held, that B. was not entitled to relief either on the principle that the lessor could not derogate from his grant, or on the ground that the restrictive covenants in A.'s lease enured for B.'s benefit. Master v. Hansard, 46 L. J., Ch. 505; 4 Ch. D. 718; 36 L. T. 535; 25 W. R. 570—C. A.

The owners in fee of a residential estate and adjoining lands sold part of the adjoining lands to the defendants' predecessors in title, who entered into covenants with their vendors, their heirs and assigns, restricting their right to build on and use the purchased land. The same vendors afterwards sold the residential estate to the plaintiffs' predecessors in title. The conveyance contained no reference to the restrictive covenants, nor was there any contract or representation that the purchasers were to have the benefit of them :—Held, that the plaintiffs were not entitled to restrain the defendants from building in contravention of the restrictive covenants entered into by their predecessors in title. Renals v. Cowlishaw, 48 L. J., Ch. 830; 11 Ch. D. 866; 41 L. T. 116; 28 W. R. 9—C. A.

As to Part of Divided Estate—Repurchase.]—A. sold part of an estate to B., who entered into restrictive covenants for himself, his heirs and assigns, with A., his heirs, executors and administrators, as to buildings on the purchased property; but A. did not enter into any covenants as to the land retained. After this A. sold to other persons various lots of the part retained, but nothing appeared as to the contents of their conveyances, nor was there any evidence that they were informed of the covenants entered into by B. After this A. bought back from B. what he had sold to him:—Held, that the benefit of B.'s covenants did not in equity pass to the subsequent purchasers of other parts of the estate from A., and that A., after the repurchase, could make a title to the repurchased land discharged from the covenants. Keates v. Lyon, 38 L. J., Ch. 357; L. R. 4 Ch. 218; 20 L. T. 255; 17 W. R. 338.

—— Injury to Adjoining Property.]—G., the owner of some land, sold it in lots, subject to conditions, by which the purchaser of lot 6 was required to covenant to build according to a certain elevation. The purchaser of lot 6 excavated the land, as required, according to the conditions:—Held, that the purchaser of lot 7 could not sue for the injury he had sustained. Murchie v. Black, 19 C. B. (N.S.) 190; 34 L. J., C. P. 337; 11 Jur. (N.S.) 608; 12 L. T. 735; 13 W. R. 896.

Mistake—Omission.]—Covenant not to build within —— feet of H. Street:—Held, on the evidence, that the omission of the number was accidental, not intentional, and that the covenantees might have had the covenant reformed on a bill. Child v. Douglas, 2 Jur. (N.S.) 950. And see S. C., 1 Kay, 560; 5 De G. M. & G. 739; 2 W. R. 701.

Building Estate.]—On the sale of two lots the parties covenanted that none of the proprietors for the time being should ever use as an hotel a house erected on any of the lots. The purchasers of two other lots afterwards executed the deed, and then sold their lots, the one to A., the other to B., neither of whom executed the deed, but both had notice of it; B. and his tenant were restrained by injunction from using the house built on B.'s lot as an hotel. Whatman v. Gibson, 9 Sim. 196; 7 L. J., Ch. 160; 2 Jur. 273.

When the owner of some of a number of houses purchased for the same owner for building purposes conveyed them to separate alienees in such manner that the benefit of a covenant (entered into originally with the grantor) passed to each alienee; upon a breach injurious to one only of these alienees:—Held, that the party injured might sue alone, without joining the others. Western v. Macdermott (supra).

Sites of a row of houses in a town were conveyed by the same vendors to various persons, all about the same time, and the conveyances were substantially in the same form:—Held, that it was a question of fact in each case whether the restrictions were merely matters of agreement between the vendor and the several purchasers for the protection of the vendor, or were intended to be for the common advantage of the several purchasers. Western v. Macdermott (supra) discussed. Sheppard v. Gilmore, 57 L. J., Ch. 6; 57 L. T. 614.

—— Scheme.]—Where a large building estate has been offered for sale in plots, under a common form of agreement containing a provision that the purchaser would not, without the consent in writing of the "vendor, his heirs or assigns," alter the building on the purchased plot, but there is no general building scheme governing the whole estate, the purchaser of a plot, although he has entered into a covenant in the terms provided by the form of agreement, is not bound to obtain the consent of the purchaser of another plot, which has been subsequently sold and conveyed, before he can alter the buildings on his own plot. The only consent which has to be obtained in such a case is the consent of the owner of the unsold portions of the building estate. Everett v. Remington, 61 L. J., Ch. 574; [1892] 3 Ch. 148; 67 L. T. 80.

When plots forming part of a building estate are purchased, having been selected by reference to a plan showing a number of building plots with a house on each, and a printed form of contract for sale containing restrictive covenants is used, but with written variations in the purchaser's particular case, the purchaser is not, upon these facts, justified in assuming the existence of a building scheme with restrictive covenants like his own binding on all the other plots. Tucker v. Vowles, 62 L. J., Ch. 172; [1893] 1 Ch. 195; 3 R. 107; 67 L. T. 763; 41 W. R. 156.

Parts of estates sold on three occasions; on all the plans a house was marked "Lodge." A purchaser of this house, with notice of the plans, commenced to build cottages:—Held, that the estate plans were put forward as part of a general building scheme, and that as the defendant had notice thereof he was bound thereby. Tindall v. Castle, 62 L. J., Ch. 555; 3 R. 418.

An estate was sold in plots for building purposes, according to a scheme. The conveyances contained restrictive covenants as to the buildings to be erected, entered into by the several purchasers with the vendors, their heirs and assigns:—Held, that the successor in title of the purchaser of one of such plots was entitled to enforce such restrictive covenants against the successor in title of an earlier purchaser of an adjoining plot. Brown v. Inskip, 1 Cab. & E. 231.

An estate was laid out for building, and a great part of it had been sold. In 1882 some of the unsold part was put up for sale by auction, with a condition that the purchaser of certain lots was to covenant to expend on each of the dwelling-houses built not less than 1,200*l*. As to some lots there were other restrictions; and some were free from restriction. One of the plaintiffs bought one of the free lots, and also a restricted lot. Next year the unsold lots, together with another piece of land forming together the whole of the unsold parts of the estate, were put up for sale, with similar conditions as to the first-named lots; but as to other lots free from restrictions. All the lots were then sold, except the first-named lots, both plaintiffs being purchasers of free lots. The first-named lots were in the following year sold to the defendant, who entered into a covenant with the vendors not to build houses of less value than 1,200*l*. He now proposed to build houses of less value:—Held, that the doctrine of Nottingham Patent Brick and Tile Co. v. Butler (supra, col. 1174), ought to be extended to cover the present case, and that the plaintiffs were entitled to restrain the defendant from building houses of less value. The plaintiff in such a case is not obliged to prove damage in order to obtain an injunction. Collins v. Castle, 57 L. J., Ch. 76 ; 36 Ch. D. 243 ; 57 L. T. 764 ; 36 W. R. 300.

Where a vendor selling to several persons plots of land, parts of a larger property, exacts from each of them covenants imposing restrictions on the use of the plots sold without putting himself under any corresponding obligation, it is a question of fact, to be deduced from all the circumstances of the case, whether the restrictions are merely matters of agreement between the vendor and his vendees, for his own benefit, or are meant by him or understood by the buyers to be for the common advantage of the several purchasers. Birmingham and District Land Co. and Allday, In re, 62 L. J., Ch. 90 ; [1893] 1 Ch. 342 ; 3 R. 84 ; 67 L. T. 850 ; 41 W. R. 189.

Particulars of sale by auction contained restrictive conditions that the houses to be erected were to be private houses only, of a fixed minimum value, and in accordance with a building-line already existing as regards buildings on other land of the vendors :—Held, to be an invitation to the public to come in and purchase on the footing that the whole of the property offered for sale was to be bound by one general rule, and that the vendors would not be allowed to depart from it. Nottingham Patent Brick Co. v. Butler (supra, col. 1174) approved. Ib.

Where an estate is vested in trustees, who sell plots for building subject to restrictive covenants, each purchaser has an equity against the other purchasers to compel the observance of the covenants. Eastwood v. Lever, 33 L. J., Ch. 355 ; 9 L. T. 615 ; 12 W. R. 195.

In a suit to enforce such an equity, the trustees are necessary parties, and the remaining purchasers ought to be represented on the record. Ib.

The plaintiffs, in 1867, bought part of a building estate from trustees for sale, subject to certain restrictive conditions contained in a deedpoll which had been executed by the trustees and the plaintiffs, and some sixty-six purchasers in all from time to time down to 1889 :—Held, that the trustees were bound either by actual covenant or by implied agreement not to deal with the land in violation of the scheme, and an injunction was granted restraining them from authorising any purchaser from them to build contrary to the terms of the scheme. Mackenzie v. Childers, 59 L. J., Ch. 188 ; 43 Ch. D. 265 ; 62 L. T. 98 ; 38 W. R. 243.

Agreements to sell to A., B. and C., subject to restrictions as to building. Before the contracts were completed the vendor sold other land to J., and covenanted that the conveyance to the other purchasers should contain covenants with J. similar to the agreements. J. covenanted to observe similar restrictions as to building. Subsequently the land purchased by A. was conveyed to him by deed, in which A. entered into the same covenants as he had entered into in the deed of agreement. The land purchased by J. became vested in the defendants, with notice of the agreements and of J.'s covenants in his purchase deed, and the land of A. came in like manner to the plaintiff :—Held, that, whether the covenants run with the land or not, as the defendants had notice of them, the plaintiff might have an injunction to restrain the defendants from building in a manner contrary to the general scheme for the benefit of all the original parties. Coles v. Sims, 1 Kay, 56. Affirmed, 6 De G. M. & G. 1 ; 2 Eq. R. 951 ; 23 L. J., Ch. 258 ; 18 Jur. 683 ; 2 W. R. 151.

—— Corporation.]—Although, in ordinary cases, where the conditions of sale subject to which a sale, whether by auction or by private contract, is made, state that every purchaser shall enter into certain restrictive covenants limiting, for the benefit of the adjoining land, his right of user of the land conveyed to him, such conditions constitute a scheme enforceable by any purchaser against the vendor and any other purchaser with notice ; yet, if the vendor be a municipal corporation, sections 108, 109 of the Municipal Corporations Act, 1882, make it necessary that the approval of the Treasury (or, since the Local Government Act, 1888, of the Local Government Board) should be obtained not only to the conveyance to the purchaser, but also to the restrictive covenants on the vendor's part which are to be implied from the conditions. If, therefore, the Treasury has consented only to the conveyance and not to the implied covenants, such covenants cannot be enforced against the corporation, or against other purchasers from them even with notice. Davis v. Leicester Corporation, 63 L. J., Ch. 440 ; [1894] 2 Ch. 208 ; 7 R. 609 ; 70 L. T. 599 ; 42 W. R. 610—C. A.

ii. Breach of.

What amounts to—Bay Windows.]—Covenant by purchaser not to erect any building on his plot nearer to the road in which it was situate than the line of frontage of the then present houses in that road. He then erected two houses on his plot, each of which had a bay window projecting three feet beyond the line of the existing houses, and carried from the foundation up to the roof : — Held, that the bay windows were buildings within the meaning of the covenant and the erection of them a violation of it, and that the invasion of privacy constituted damage. Manners (Lord) v. Johnson, 45 L. J., Ch. 404 ; 1 Ch. D. 673 ; 24 W. R. 481.

—— "House" of Certain Value.]—The defendants were the assignees of a piece of land which was subject to a covenant that no house should be erected upon the land of less value than 400*l.* The defendants commenced to build two houses or shops, but, on an objection of the local board, the two houses were thrown together by making a communication between them on the ground floor. As altered, the houses had two separate doors opening to the road, and two separate shop windows fronting to the road. They had separate staircases, but one of them had no kitchen, and in the yard behind, which was common to the two houses, there was only one water closet and ashpit :—Held, that the building formed two houses, and that a breach of the covenant had been committed. Snow v. Whitehead, 51 L. T. 253.

A. purchased a building plot, and covenanted to build a dwelling house of the value of 250*l.* at least, under the inspection and to the satisfaction of C.'s architect, in twelve months. The twelve months expired, and A. proceeded to build a house of the required value, but as to situation contrary to the opinion of the architect :—Held, that it was a breach of the covenant, and an injunction was granted. Goolden v. Anstee, 18 L. T. 898. And see Collins v. Castle, supra, col. 1228.

—— Wall instead of House.] — Land was sold, subject to a covenant entered into with a neighbouring landowner, that "no buildings, except dwelling houses," to front a certain road, should be built thereon. The purchaser threw the land into his garden, and enclosed it, by erecting thereon, along the side of the road, a wall, and raising its height to form the back of vineries:—Held, that the boundary garden wall was no breach of covenant, but the raising it for the purpose of the vineries was; but no substantial injury being caused, the court awarded damages instead of granting an injunction. Bowes v. Law, 39 L. J., Ch. 483; L. R. 9 Eq. 636; 22 L. T. 267; 18 W. R. 640.

—— Stable instead of Houses.]—A covenant to the effect that private houses only, of a certain minimum value, are to be built on certain plots of land, is not broken by the erection on one of them of a stable with a bedroom over it, of such dimensions and in such a position that it would still be possible to build a house of the stipulated value upon the plot. Russell v. Baber, 18 W. R. 1021.

—— "Building"—Erection of Hoarding.]—The grantee of two plots of freehold land, forming part of a residential estate, covenanted that any building erected thereon should be of a certain height, should have a cement or stucco front and a slated roof, and that such buildings should be used only as dwelling houses:—Held, that the erection of a substantial hoarding used for advertising purposes was not a breach of the covenant. Foster v. Fraser, 63 L. J., Ch. 91; [1893] 3 Ch. 158; 3 R. 635; 69 L. T. 136; 42 W. R. 11; 57 J. P. 646.

—— "Operative Machinery"—Hut, Tent, "or other chattel"—"Switchback Railway."]—A restrictive covenant by a vendee, that no operative machinery shall be fixed, and that no hut, tent, shed, caravan, house on wheels, or other chattel should be erected, made, placed, or allowed to remain on the land conveyed, is broken if the vendee erect a "switchback railway" on the land—upon piles driven into the ground—inasmuch as such railway is both "operative machinery" and a "chattel" within the meaning of the covenant. Chamberlayne v. Collins, 9 R. 311; 70 L. T. 217—C. A.

—— Height of Building.]—Covenant that there should be no trees or any building whatever in the garden that should exceed the level of the parlour floor:—Held, that it was a breach of the covenant to erect any building above the prescribed height extending beyond the back of the house, though the ground upon which such building was erected had never been used as a garden. Western v. Macdermott, 36 L. J., Ch. 76; L. R. 2 Ch. 72; 12 Jur. (N.S.) 366; 15 L. T. 641; 15 W. R. 265.

Upon a covenant not to build or allow trees to grow above a certain height, the object of which was to prevent obstruction of the view from certain houses:—Held, that substantial injury was not requisite in order to enable the court to interfere and restrain a breach of covenant. Ib.

A railway company, in purchasing land, covenanted with the owner not to build upon it above a certain height. They afterwards obtained an Act of Parliament empowering them to widen their line:—Held, first, that it would prevent them from building so as to widen the line. Lloyd v. L. C. & D. Ry., 34 L. J., Ch. 401; 11 Jur. (N.S.) 380; 12 L. T. 363; 13 W. R. 698.

Held, secondly, that if the covenant was not invalid at law, as being against public policy, the court would not be prevented from interfering on that ground, and that when the court refuses to enforce a covenant, because the damage would be inappreciable, the case must be perfectly clear. Ib.

Covenant by defendant with the vendors that he would not erect any building on the same plot within the distance of six feet from the intended streets:—Held, that the erection of a wall fifteen feet high at right angles to the principal street, and extending quite up to it, was an infringement of this covenant, but that it was not broken by the projection a few inches too far of the lower part of the wall of a house, nor by a brick porch which came forward one foot within the limit. Child v. Douglas, 1 Kay, 575; 5 De G. M. & G. 739; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 950; 2 W. R. 701.

A covenant by a purchaser of land not to build above a certain height does not amount to a reservation to the vendors of a right to use the upper surface of light and air for their own purposes, as for building, or throwing any covering thereover. Pinchin v. London & Blackwall Ry., 2 Eq. R. 1172; 24 L. J. Ch. 417; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 241; 2 W. R. 696.

—— Covenant not to build on certain part.]—Covenant that a piece of land belonging to the vendor which adjoined the property conveyed to the purchaser "should for ever thereafter be kept open and unbuilt upon" by the vendor. The vendor subsequently excavated part of this piece of land and constructed therein a covered urinal, the roof of which projected very slightly above the adjoining surface:—Held, that this was not a breach of the covenant. Graham v. Newcastle-upon-Tyne Corporation, 2 R. 254; 67 L. T. 790—C. A.

Where a purchaser in fee covenanted that no building whatever should at any time thereafter be erected on a certain portion, which latter afterwards vested in the defendant, who before the conveyance to him had notice of the covenant, the court restrained the defendant from continuing a building begun by him. Mann v. Stephens, 15 Sim. 377; 10 Jur. 650.

Covenant by vendor that no building, excepting monuments and tombs, should be erected on any part of the land belonging to the vendor "lying on the east side of the said terrace, and opposite to the plot of land thereby conveyed":—Held, that the covenant applied only to that part of the vendor's land which was opposite to and of the same width as the piece conveyed. Patching v. Dubbings, 2 Eq. R. 71; 23 L. J., Ch. 45. Affirming 1 Kay, 1; 17 Jur. 1113; 2 W. R. 2.

Injunction to Prevent Breach—Threatened User.]—A person who has covenanted not to use a building for certain purposes will not be restrained from erecting a building seemingly adapted only for such purposes. Worsley v. Swann, 51 L. J., Ch. 576—C. A.

Mandatory Injunction—Erecting Porch.]—A defendant having, after express notice, erected a porch in breach of a covenant entered into by him, was upon interlocutory motion ordered to remove the erection, although the same had been completed before the filing of the bill. Morris v. Grant, 24 W. R. 55.

—— Delay.]—Covenant not to erect building beyond certain lines. A building erected beyond the line and no objection for five years. Then on renewed building the plaintiff commenced an action for an injunction to restrain the defendant from allowing any buildings to continue on his land beyond the line:—Held, that a mandatory injunction ought to be confined to buildings erected since the defendant acquired his title. Gaskin v. Balls, 13 Ch. D. 324; 28 W. R. 552.

As to User of Premises.]—A conveyance of an estate to a purchaser and his heirs, to the use that certain trades should not be carried on upon the premises, is a stipulation in the nature of a covenant running with the land. Hodgson v. Coppard, 29 Beav. 4; 30 L. J., Ch. 20; 9 W. R. 9.

—— National Schools—Nuisance.] — Held, that the word "nuisance" in the covenant must be restricted to its technical meaning; that the establishment of a national school is not a legal nuisance: and that the establishment of such a school on one of several lots could not be restrained by the owner of a dwelling-house built on an adjoining lot, though his property would be depreciated thereby. Harrison v. Good, 40 L. J., Ch. 294; L. R. 11 Eq. 338; 24 L. T. 263; 19 W. R. 346.

—— Girls' School.]—The owner of an estate covered it with houses, and sold some of them subject to a covenant not to carry on any trade, business, or calling therein, or to otherwise use, or suffer the same to be used, to the annoyance, nuisance, or injury of any of the houses on the estate:—Held, that the carrying on of a girls' school in one of the houses was a breach of the covenant. Kemp v. Sober, 1 Sim. (N.S.), 517; 20 L. J., Ch. 602; 15 Jur. 458.

—— Charitable Institution.]—The erection of a building, for the education and lodging of 100 girls in connection with a charitable institution for the daughters of missionaries, supported by voluntary contributions:—Held, to be a breach of a covenant entered into by the purchaser that "no house or other building to be erected or built upon the land shall be used or occupied otherwise than as and for a private residence only, and not for any purpose of trade." German v. Chapman, 47 L. J., Ch. 250; 7 Ch. D. 271; 37 L. T. 685; 26 W. R. 149—C. A.

—— Public House.]—On a sale of an estate as building land in plots each purchaser executed a covenant with trustees to observe conditions that certain plots were reserved for two taverns; that "no houses, other than detached or semi-detached," were to be erected except on the portion on which shops were permitted to be built; and that shops would be allowed to be built on specified plots. A purchaser of one of the plots set apart for shops was restrained from building a public-house on it. Hall v. Box, 18 W. R. 820.

A deed contained a covenant by the grantee of a piece of land that no building to be erected on the land should be used as a public-house, tavern, or beer-shop:—Held, that an off-licence was a breach of the covenant. St. Albans (Bishop) v. Battersby (3 Q. B. D. 359) approved. London and Suburban Land and Building Co. v. Field, 50 L. J., Ch. 549; 16 Ch. D. 645; 44 L. T. 444. And see Nicholl v. Fenning, supra, col. 1226.

Covenant that the piece of land should not be used "as a site for any hotel, tavern, public-house, or beer-house," nor should "the trade or calling of an hotel or tavern keeper, publican, beer-shop keeper, or seller by retail of wine, beer, spirits, or spirituous liquors, be used, exercised, or carried on, at or upon" the same:—Held, that the sale of wine and spirits in bottle by a grocer in the course of his trade was not such a breach of the covenant as the court would restrain. Jones v. Bone, 39 L. J., Ch. 405; L. R. 9 Eq. 674; 23 L. T. 304; 18 W. R. 489.

Demise of land for erection of a hotel, with a covenant not to let any house for the erection of a hotel within a quarter of a mile. An assignee of another plot, with notice of the covenant, was restrained from building a hotel thereon during the continuance of the demise. Jay v. Richardson, 30 Beav. 563; 31 L. J., Ch. 398; 8 Jur. (N.S.) 689; 6 L. T. 177; 10 W. R. 412.

A purchaser in fee of a piece of land cannot, by the purchase of a lease granted of the same land, avoid covenants which his vendor had taken from his tenants over a wide area, in aid of covenants which he had entered into with third parties. Ib.

User of Roads.]—By a deed of partition of a freehold estate between S. and P., portions of the estate, which were laid out for roads, were conveyed to S. in fee, and he covenanted with P., his heirs and assigns, that P., his heirs and assigns, and all owners and occupiers for the time being of all or any parts of the lands limited to P., and of the house to be built thereon, should at all times for ever thereafter have right of passage over the roads, which was given in the most ample terms, and also the full use and enjoyment of the roads in as full, free, complete, and absolute manner to all intents and purposes whatsoever, as if they were public roads:—Held, that the occupiers of the lands had the same right to use the roads as if they had been public roads. Selby v. Crystal Palace Gas Co., 4 De G. F. & J. 246; 31 L. J., Ch. 595; 8 Jur. (N.S.) 830; 6 L. T. 790; 10 W. R. 636. Affirming 30 Beav. 606.

—— Purchaser for Value without Notice.]—In 1864 B., in possession of lands under an agreement for a lease, obtained the consent of the board of works to stop up a public footpath and substitute a new one, and this he did; but the owners in fee never consented, and there was no actual dedication to the public. In May, 1866, a lease to B. was executed, describing the land by reference to a plan on which the new road was shown, but marked "Private road." The habendum was "subject to the existing rights of way." There were other rights of way. The lease became vested in W., who purchased by a sale plan in which the road was marked "Private road." W.'s tenants stopped up the road:—Held, that the defence that W. was a purchaser without notice was sustained, there not being enough on the sale plans to affect him with notice that there was a public right of way; and that, therefore, assuming the existence of an agreement which could have been enforced against B., it could not be enforced against the defendants, W.'s tenants. Att.-Gen. v. Biphosphated Guano Co., 49 L. J., Ch. 68 ; 11 Ch. D. 327 ; 40 L. T. 201 ; 27 W. R. 621—C. A.

Effect of Merger.]—A., being possessed of a piece of land for a term, laid it out in plots, and underleased one plot to the defendant for the residue of the term, less three days, the defendant covenanting as to building. A. underleased another plot to the plaintiffs. On A.'s death, the estate was sold under conditions which provided that the purchaser of the largest lot in value should take an assignment of the whole, and grant fresh underleases to the various under lessees, for the residue of the term less two days. The defendant purchased his own plot, and the plaintiffs purchased their plot, which was the largest in value. The plaintiffs took an assignment of the whole, and granted a fresh underlease to the defendant of his lot for the residue of the term less two days :—Held, that though the defendant's original underlease was merged at law, he was still bound in equity to observe his building covenant. Birmingham Joint Stock Co. v. Lea, 36 L. T. 843.

iii. Waiver of.

Acquiescence in Trivial Breach.]—Acquiescence in a trivial breach of covenant does not preclude a plaintiff from relief in respect of a breach of an important character. Richards v. Revett, 47 L. J., Ch. 472 ; 7 Ch. D. 224 ; 37 L. T. 632 ; 26 W. R. 166.

When the vendors of land have covenanted with the purchaser against the carrying on of certain trades upon other parts of the land, the purchaser is not prevented from obtaining an injunction against an assignee of other part of the land because he has not attempted to prevent previous unimportant breaches of the covenant. Ib.

On the sale of an estate in building plots, purchasers were required to enter into covenants not to build without the vendor's approval of plans. In an action to restrain a purchaser from building without submitting a plan :—Held, that the erection of a temporary hovel on another part of the estate, which had not been interfered with by the plaintiffs, was not a waiver of the covenant. Kilbey v. Haviland, 24 L. T. 353 ; 19 W. R. 698.

Estate sold in plots for building, with restrictive covenants by all the purchasers. In an action by a purchaser :—Held, that breaches of the covenant allowed by the vendors in relation to other portions of the estate, not affecting the plaintiff's enjoyment of his lot, could not be set up against him, and that a deviation of two feet from the building line with regard to the plaintiff's house was too trifling to affect his right. Jackson v. Winnifrith, 47 L. T. 243.

Restrictive covenants intended to preserve the character of land to be laid out and used in a particular way will not be enforced in equity if such land has already been so laid out or used that its preservation, as intended, is no longer possible, and the object of the covenants cannot be attained ; but the fact that such covenants have not been enforced in the case of some trivial breaches does not prevent them from being enforced in the case of other subsequent breaches. Knight v. Simmonds, 65 L. J., Ch. 583 ; [1896] 2 Ch. 294 ; 74 L. T. 563 ; 44 W. R. 580—C. A. And see Bedford (Duke) v. British Museum Trustees, infra.

On the sale of an estate under a general scheme, the conveyances contained a stipulation that "nothing is to be erected within fifteen feet of the high road, or within ten feet from any other road, except fences, and those not more than six feet high, and no house or part of a house is to be erected at a greater distance than fifty feet from the front building line." The plaintiffs had erected a chapel and building more than fifty feet from the front building line, and claimed to restrain the defendant who had erected a shop only eight feet from the high road :—Held, that the two covenants were essentially different (the one to observe the line of frontage being of a more important, and the other, as to building in the rear, being of a less important, character), and could be treated as separate covenants ; that the plaintiffs were not prevented in equity from enforcing the covenant as to the frontage line, which they themselves had substantially observed ; and that the injunction claimed must be granted, and the defendant's building removed. Chitty v. Bray, 48 L. T. 860 ; 47 J. P. 695.

—— Injunction.]—Acquiescence in the violation of a covenant to a certain extent :—Held, a sufficient objection to an interlocutory application for an injunction. Child v. Douglas, 5 De G. M. & G. 739 ; 1 Kay 560, 575 ; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 950 ; 2 W. R. 701.

Where, on a motion for an injunction to restrain an alleged breach of covenant the question in dispute appeared doubtful :— Held, that the burden of proof was on the plaintiff to show that the balance of convenience was in favour of granting the injunction. Ib.

Distinction between the hearing of a cause and of interlocutory applications, as to the amount of acquiescence which will preclude a plaintiff from obtaining the assistance of the court. Distinction between the effect of a single waiver of a restrictive covenant by a landlord in favour of one of several tenants, as against the others, and a prior waiver of a right under such a covenant by the tenant as against himself. Patching v. Dubbings, 1 Kay, 1 ; 17 Jur. 1113 ; 2 W. R. 2. Affirmed, 2 Eq. R. 71 ; 23 L. J., Ch. 45.

A party was entitled to the benefit of a covenant not to build more than eight feet high in the garden next door to his house, and not to allow trees or buildings over that height upon land lying in view of his house. In process of time tall trees were allowed to grow up, and cottages were built upon the latter land, and he, or those through whom he claimed, never interfered :— Held, that this non-interference could not operate to prevent his enforcing the covenant to restrain a building in the garden. Western v. Macdermott, 36 L. J., Ch. 76 ; L. R. 2 Ch. 72 ; 12 Jur. (N.S.) 366 ; 15 L. T. 641 ; 15 W. R. 265.

What is Sufficient Acquiescence.]—Where all the purchasers of an estate were bound by restrictive covenants not to use their houses otherwise than as private residences, and the vendor had given permission to one of the purchasers to open a school in his house, this was held not to be a waiver of the covenant as to another purchaser whose house was at some distance. German v. Chapman, 47 L. J., Ch. 250; 7 Ch. D. 271; 37 L. T. 685; 26 W. R. 149—C. A.

Covenant that no building on any lot should be erected or used as a shop, workshop, warehouse, or factory, nor should any trade or manufacture be carried on on any lot. Since 1886, W. carried on the business of a laundryman on one of the lots. In July, 1893, he commenced to build on a lot of which he was the owner, a building adapted solely for the purposes of his business. In an action to restrain the erection of the building, evidence showed that trades had for some time openly been carried on on several lots, and that the plaintiff had carried on the trade of milkman, and subsequently allowed a mason to work on his lot:—Held, that the defendant had committed a breach of the covenant greater and more serious than any previously committed; that the plaintiff was entitled to relief, and that an injunction ought to be granted. Meredith v. Wilson, 69 L. T. 336.

—— Nuisance.]—Houses sold subject to a covenant not to carry on any trade, business, or calling therein, or to otherwise use, or suffer the same to be used, to the annoyance, nuisance, or injury of any of the houses on the estate:—Held, that the carrying on of a girls' school in one of the houses was a breach of the covenant, and that the covenantee had not waived the benefit of the covenant, though he had permitted other houses, held under the like covenant, to be used as schools. Kemp v. Sober, 1 Sim (N.S.) 517; 20 L. J., Ch. 602; 15 Jur. 458.

—— Public House.]—Covenants by purchasers of lots that the premises should not be used as a public-house, beer-shop, temperance hotel, &c.:—Held, that the vendors had not waived their right by forbearing for six and nine months respectively from taking proceedings against two purchasers who sold beer, but in such a way that the sale was not visible to the occupiers of the other houses. Mitchell v. Steward, 35 L. J., Ch. 393; L. R. 1 Eq. 541; 14 W. R. 453.

Covenant by T. with S. not to carry on the trade of beer-shop keeper on the premises. From 1852 to 1853, T. carried on the business of beer-shop keeper with knowledge of S., and then sold to H. In 1854 S. filed a bill to restrain T. and H:—Held, that T. having before bill filed parted with her interest, no injunction could be granted against her; and delay and acquiescence having taken place, no injunction would be granted against H. as to the trade of beer-shop keeper. Searisbrick v. Tunbridge, 3 Eq. R. 240.

Covenant by purchasers with vendors, "their and each of their heirs and assigns, and also separately with the owners and owner, lessors and lessees, for the time being, or other the persons or person for the time being entitled to the receipt of the rents and profits of any part of" the C. estate, against (inter alia) keeping a beer-shop on any part of the premises sold. In an action by subsequent purchasers of the C. estate:—Held, on the evidence adduced, that they had lost their right to bring an action by long-continued acquiescence in breaches of the covenant both by the defendant and other similar covenantors. Kelsey v. Dodd, 52 L. J., Ch. 34.

Semble, also, that they were not entitled to sue on the covenant at law, even for nominal damages. Ib.

—— Sale in Plots.]—Where an estate is vested in trustees, who sell plots for building subject to restrictive covenants, each purchaser has an equity against the other purchaser to compel the observance of the covenants. Eastwood v. Levers, 33 L. J., Ch. 355; 9 L. T. 615; 12 W. R. 195.

Such equity may be lost by acquiescence. Ib.

Where vendor of plots has permitted material breaches by some purchasers he cannot compel another purchaser to observe the same covenant; and there is no difference where the covenant is not only a covenant by each purchaser with the vendor, but also a covenant by each purchaser with all the others, nor in the case where the breaches have been committed before the defendant became a purchaser, and executed the deed of covenant. Peek v. Matthews, L. R. 3 Eq. 515; 16 L. T. 991; 15 W. R. 689.

Ignorance of Breach.]—In 1867 the plaintiffs conveyed in fee certain hereditaments adjoining their railway, and the purchaser covenanted "for himself, his heirs, executors, administrators, and assigns, that he (the said purchaser) would not erect or build any erection or buildings of any kind whatsoever within ten feet of the roadway or viaduct of the plaintiffs without their permission in writing first had and obtained." The purchaser conveyed to the testator of B., who took without notice of the covenant other than such constructive notice (if any), as he had by reason of the deed of 1867, being a title deed. In 1869 the testator erected a hotel, part of which stood within ten feet of the roadway or viaduct of the plaintiffs, and he demised to a woman, who assigned the lease to the second defendant F. Neither the lessee nor the defendants had any notice of the covenant in the conveyance of 1867 other than constructive notice. In 1881 the defendant F. increased the height of that part of the erection, which was within ten feet of the plaintiffs' roadway or viaduct. The plaintiffs had no knowledge of this erection by the defendant B., or the alteration by the defendant F., until they were both completed in 1881:—Held, upon a special case, that the plaintiffs were entitled to an injunction to both the defendants requiring them to pull down the said erections; and that the defendant F. was not entitled to be indemnified by the defendant B. L. C. & D. Ry v. Bull, 47 L. T. 413.

Alteration of Character of Property.]—Where land is conveyed in fee by deed of feoffment, subject to a perpetual ground-rent, and the feoffee covenants for himself, his heirs, and assigns with the feoffor, the owner of adjoining lands, his heirs, executors, administrators, and assigns, not to use the land in a particular manner, with a view to the more ample enjoyment by the feoffor of such adjoining lands, and the subsequent acts of the feoffor, or of those claiming under him, have so altered the character and condition of the adjoining lands, that, with reference to the land conveyed the restriction in the covenant ceases to be applicable according to the intent and spirit of the contract, a court of equity will not interpose to enforce the covenant, but will leave the parties to law. Whether upon such a covenant there could be any remedy at law against the assignees of the covenantor, quære. Bedford (Duke) v. British Museum Trustees, 2 Myl. & K. 525; 2 L. J., Ch. 129.

The plaintiff and defendant were owners in fee of two houses, situate in one block, forming part of a property which was laid out as a building estate, and sold with restrictive covenants as to the user of the houses as shops. The defendant had purchased with full notice of the existence of the restrictive covenant. The defendant immediately commenced to sell, and had ever since sold, beer in his house under an "off" licence. The plaintiff, who had purchased before the defendant, also with full notice of the covenants, was aware of the fact of the defendant's so trading, and he bought beer himself at the defendant's house. The character of the property had completely changed, several houses situate in the block in which the plaintiff's and defendant's houses stood, having been for a considerable time, and still being, used as shops and places of business. Held, that the plaintiff had been guilty of such an amount of acquiescence as made it inequitable in him to enforce the covenant. Sayers v. Collyer, 54 L. J., Ch. 1; 28 Ch. D. 103; 51 L. T. 723; 33 W. R. 91; 49 J. P. 244—C. A.

—— Variations from Plan.]—A., by indenture, covenanted to lay out and preserve land in an ornamental manner, according to a certain plan, subject to such alteration as should be made or approved of by him, his heirs, or assigns, and as should not destroy the general beauty of the design, and upon selling any part thereof, to require purchasers to enter into a covenant not to erect any messuage thereon so as to lessen the value of those already erected. B. agreed to purchase and build certain messuages on a line with each other on part of the land. After B. had built and taken a conveyance of two of such messuages, the agreement as to the remainder was cancelled, and the rest of the land conveyed to A., who had sold part of it to C., who commenced building several feet in advance of the line in which B. had built:—Held, that A. had power to vary the details of the plan, and that a purchaser from B. of one of the messuages built by him was not entitled to relief by injunction restraining C. from building in such manner. Schreiber v. Creed, 10 Sim. 9; 8 L. J., Ch., 346; 3 Jur. 625.

12. Rescission and Abandonment.

a. In General.

Sale of Reversion.]—Upon sale of a reversion, part of the terms was that the money be paid by a certain time; not being so by default of the vendee, vendor discharged from his contract. Newman v. Rogers, 4 Bro. C. C. 391.

Notice.]—Party declaring, that unless contract was performed by such a day, he should consider it as a refusal by the other party to perform it, and would act accordingly, does not amount to a notice of abandonment of the contract. Reynolds v. Nelson, 6 Madd. 26; 22 R. R. 225.

Vendor gave notice that unless purchaser agreed to complete within five days he would resell. The purchaser brought an action for his deposit:—Held, that the notice by the vendor of an intention to resell, was equivalent to a declaration that he would not seek specific performance of the contract, and that the purchaser's action to rescind was effectual. Royou v. Paul, 28 L. J., Ch. 555.

Though time may not be of the essence of the contract, yet, upon unreasonable delay on the part of a vendor in completing, the purchaser, upon giving notice, may rescind the contract. Benson v. Lamb, 9 Beav. 502; 15 L. J., Ch. 218.

Reasonable Notice.]—Where there is an undue delay on the part of the vendor in making out his title, the purchaser, on reasonable notice, may put an end to the contract. Nott v. Riccard, 22 Beav. 307; 25 L. J., Ch. 618; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 1038; 4 W. R. 269.

The plaintiffs agreed to sell some property to the defendant. By the conditions the vendors were bound to furnish a certain declaration as to seisin free from incumbrances. The vendors furnished an insufficient declaration, and positively refused to furnish any other:—Held, that the purchaser was justified in putting an end to the contract, and a bill afterwards filed by the vendors for specific performance was dismissed, with costs. Ib.

Semble, the purchaser was empowered to put an end to the contract without giving notice to rescind. Ib.

A purchaser cannot, owing merely to the delay of the vendor in complying with his requisitions, determine the contract without notice, or bring an action for his deposit before the termination of his notice, where time was not originally of the essence of the contract. Whether he can do so after the expiration of the notice, where time has not been made of the essence of the contract, or being of the essence of the contract, has been waived, depends upon the conduct of the vendor after notice. Wood v. Machu, 5 Hare, 158; 16 L. J., Ch. 21.

Agreement for sale to be completed on 29th October. An abstract was delivered to the purchasers' solicitor on the 6th of September. On the 22nd of September objections and requisitions were delivered to the vendors' solicitor. On the 4th of November (which was six days after the time mentioned in the contract for completion), the vendors' solicitor forwarded to the purchasers' solicitor replies to the requisitions on title. Nothing further was done until the 29th of November, when the plaintiffs issued a writ against the vendors' solicitor to recover back the 285*l.* deposited with him. The deposit was thereupon returned: and on the 11th of December the vendors gave notice to rescind the contract:—Held, that the vendors were not bound to exercise their option to rescind immediately on receiving the objections and requisitions, and that, under the circumstances (which the court was to deal with as a jury ought), their notice was given within a reasonable time. St. Leonard's, Shoreditch, Vestry v. Hughes, 17 C. B. (N.S.) 137; 33 L. J., C. P. 349; 10 L. T. 723; 12 W. R. 1106. S. P., Ker v. Crowe, Ir. R. 7 C. L. 181.

By a contract made on the 25th of August, for the sale of a farm, it was stipulated that the purchaser should have possession by the beginning of October, and that the vendor should deduce a good title. The vendor failed to deliver a complete abstract until the 28th of November, more than six weeks after a notice delivered by the purchaser that, in default of delivery of a proper abstract within fourteen days from the date of the notice, he should rescind the contract. Shortly after the expiration of the fourteen days the purchaser gave notice of rescission:—Held, that in the circumstances the limit of fourteen days was reasonable, and the purchaser was entitled to rescind and to a return of the deposit with interest, and to be paid the expense of investigating the title by way of damages. Compton v. Bagley, 61 L. J., Ch. 113 ; [1892] 1 Ch. 313 ; 65 L. T. 706. And see Smith v. Batsford, 76 L. T. 179 (ante, col. 1151).

When a requisition is made by a purchaser, the vendor must be allowed a reasonable time to comply with it. Thus a requisition was made at the end of June, which involved the necessity of instituting a suit, and obtaining a decree. On the 1st August the vendor consented to comply with the requisition, and obtained a decree in Michaelmas term ; but on the 9th August the purchaser gave notice to rescind the contract :—Held, that it was ineffectual. Nicholls v. Corbett, 22 Beav. 376.

Where Time is of the Essence.]—See cases, ante, cols. 1145 et seq.

After Possession Taken.]—Where the purchaser has been let into possession and the parties cannot be placed in statu quo ante, the purchaser cannot give notice to rescind. Blackburn v. Smith, 2 Ex. 783 ; 18 L. J., Ex. 187. See also Rosenberg v. Cook, 51 L. J., Q. B. 170 ; 8 Q. B. D. 162 ; 30 W. R. 444—C. A. Infra, col. 1270.

"Usual Covenant."]—A covenant in a lease that the lessee was not to assign or part with possession without the consent of the lessee, is not a "usual covenant," and an intended purchaser to whom this was not disclosed can repudiate the contract. Hampshire v. Wickens, (7 Ch. D. 555) followed. Bishop v. Taylor, 60 L. J., Q. B. 556 ; 64 L. T. 529 ; 39 W. R. 542 ; 55 J. P. 695. S.P., Strangways v. Bishop, 29 L. T. 120.

Who can bring Action.]—Semble, a bill to set aside a purchase may be maintained by some partners of a company, including the actual purchasers, withut making all the partners parties against a vendor who is not a partner. Attwood v. Small, 6 Cl. & F. 232 ; 2 Jur. 246. And see Edinburgh United Breweries v. Molleson, [1894] A. C. 96 ; 58 J. P. 364.

Delay in Application.]—The defence of laches applies with peculiar force to a bill seeking to set aside a sale or lease of mineral property after a considerable lapse of time. Ernest v. Vivian, 33 L. J. Ch. 513 ; 9 L. T. 785 ; 12 W. R. 295.

An estate was sold, the purchase to be completed in two months according to the conditions of sale. The buyer died soon afterwards, and suits were instituted, both in the spiritual court and chancery, which prevented the completion of the contract. Four or five years after the sale, the vendor filed his bill to have the contract rescinded, and the affairs of the buyer still remaining unsettled, the court rescinded the contract, and gave the plaintiff his costs out of the deposit. Macbreth v. Marlar, 1 Cox, 258.

Delay of seven months in taking proceedings to set aside a sale, during which the purchaser was improving the property :—Held, no bar to the plaintiff's right to relief. Pearson v. Benson, 28 Beav. 598.

A conveyance made twenty years ago shall not be set aside on a suggestion that the party making it was non compos. Winchcomb v. Hall, 1 Ch. Rep. 40.

Where a cestui que trust objected to a sale of lands made by a trustee without the requisite consents, and after the lapse of about fourteen months, took steps to set it aside :—Held, that the purchaser not having been induced to change his position by the plaintiff's delay, the latter was entitled to have such sale set aside, notwithstanding his delay. Pepperell, In re, Pepperell v. Chamberlain, 27 W. R. 410.

Voluntary Conveyance—Death of Donor.]—The fact that the title of a vendor (who was himself a purchaser for value) is derived through a voluntary deed is not of itself sufficient to enable a purchaser from him to repudiate his contract. Noyes v. Paterson, 63 L. J., Ch. 748 ; [1894] 3 Ch. 267 ; 8 R. 323 ; 71 L. T. 228 ; 43 W. R. 377.

b. For Mistake.

As to Party.]—Where personal considerations enter into a contract, error as to the person with whom the contract is made annuls the contract ; not so where the person sought to be bound would have been equally willing to make the same contract with any other person. Smith v. Wheatcroft, 47 L. J., Ch. 745 ; 9 Ch. D. 223 ; 39 L. T. 103 ; 27 W. R. 42.

As to Interest.]—Where vendor in ignorance and mistake agrees to sell that in which he has no interest at time of sale, equity will rescind the contract, and will order bond given for purchase money to be cancelled, and interest paid on it to be refunded, without costs on either side. Hitchcock v. Giddings, 4 Price, 135 ; Daniell, 1 ; Wils. Ex. Eq. 32 ; 18 R. R. 725.

By Purchase Alone.]—The purchaser may escape from his bargain on the ground of mistake, if it was a mistake which the vendors contributed to—that is, in other words, if he was misled by any act of the vendors. If the mistake was entirely his own, then the court ought not to let him off his bargain on the ground of a mistake made by himself solely, unless the case is one of considerable harshness and hardship. Goddard v. Jeffreys, 51 L. J., Ch. 57 ; 45 L. T. 675 ; 30 W. R. 270.

By both Parties.]—Where, by the mutual mistake of vendor and purchaser as to the duration of a leasehold interest, it had been sold at a price considerably below its value, and the conveyance had been executed, and the purchaser let into possession :—Held, upon a bill filed some years afterwards, that the vendor was not entitled to be relieved against the mistake. Okill v. Whittaker, 1 De G. & Sm. 83. Affirmed, 2 Ph. 338 ; 16 L. J., Ch. 454 ; 11 Jur. 681.

As to Part of Property.]—Purchaser not entitled to a conveyance of part, though answering the general description in the advertisement of sale, as it was not in the contemplation of either party at the time of the purchase or conveyance ; purchaser being referred to a more particular description which did not include that part, and the surrender having been made according to that, and from his own instructions. If one party thought he had purchased bonâ fide part of an estate which the other thought he had not sold, it is a ground to set aside the contract. Calverley v. Williams, 1 Ves. J. 210 ; 1 R. R. 118.

Small variation in general description of land not material. Ib.

Where a contract is entered into for the sale of an estate, and, under the general words, property passes, which the vendor insists he did not mean to sell, but the purchaser by his answer denies, or does not admit that it was not in his contemplation at the time of the purchase. Semble, that the vendor cannot sustain a bill against the purchaser to have the contract rectified, on the ground of mistake, and carried into execution. Quære, whether, consistently with the statute of frauds, the court can entertain a bill for rectifying an executory contract for the sale of lands, and carrying it, when rectified, into execution, even where the mistake is admitted by the answer. Att.-Gen. v. Sitwell, 1 Y. & C. 559; 5 L. J., Ex. Eq. 86.

As to Extent of Property.]—A contract for the sale of a plantation of larches was entered into by a vendor in ignorance of the number of trees contained in it. The purchaser knew the exact number, but was not aware of the mistake made by the vendor. He was, however, prior to signing the contract, told by the vendor's woodman that his master must have made some mistake in reference to the matter:—Held, that the contract ought to be set aside. Hamilton v. Board, 2 N. R. 13.

P. agreed to purchase a house and premises of L., supposing that he was seised in fee, but he subsequently discovered that L. possessed only an agreement from B. for a lease for a short term, with an option of purchase. P. agreed to purchase, for 2,500*l.*, "the benefit of L.'s agreement with his lessor," and he covenanted to perform all L.'s covenants in the agreement for a lease. L. admitted that this contract was erroneous, that 2,500*l.* was inserted by mistake for 500*l.* It was subsequently discovered that B. had not a freehold title to more than three-fourths of the property, and P. consequently refused to complete his purchase:—Held, that the mistake in the agreement rendered it null and void, and the court ordered it to be delivered up to be cancelled, and the defendant to pay the costs of the suit and of the action. Price v. Ley, 9 Jur. (N.S.) 295. Affirmed, 32 L. J., Ch. 530; 7 L. T. 845; 11 W. R. 475.

Where purchaser has given full value for estate, mistake of some party to conveyance of their claim thereto, under a marriage settlement, shall not turn to the prejudice of the purchaser without notice. Malden v. Menill, 2 Atk. 8.

As to Succession Duty.]—B. being entitled to a sum of 2,916*l.* stock in reversion expectant on the death of lady aged eighty-two, obtained through the defendant E., who acted as solicitor for both parties, a loan of 1,650*l.* upon mortgage. The mortgage contained a power of sale upon three months' notice, or on interest being one month in arrear. The interest being in arrear, the stock was sold, under the power, for 1,950*l.*, as subject to succession duty at 3 per cent. It was found that only 7*l.* was payable for succession duty. There was evidence that, having regard to the age and health of the tenant for life, from 100*l.* to 200*l.* might have been obtained for the reversion:—Held, that the sale could not be set aside on the ground of the mistake as to succession duty, that being merely a matter for compensation. Bettyes v. Maynard, 49 L. T. 389; 31 W. R. 461.

Agreement not Disclosed.]—A. being jointly interested with M. and G. in a foreign mine, agreed to sell his share to them upon certain terms not to be fulfilled immediately. Under an arrangement negotiated between M. and B. the whole property was conveyed to B. upon trust to secure him an annuity. A. concurred in this conveyance under an impression that B. was at the same time to execute a mortgage securing the fulfilment of the terms upon which A. sold. B. in fact executed this mortgage, but without knowing what it was, and without having been informed by A. of the terms upon which he had sold:—Held, that A. ought to have communicated directly with B., and that the court was justified in setting aside the second instrument alone, in a suit to which M. and G. were not parties. Leader v. McEwen, 1 N. R. 251.

Will incorrectly stated.]—In a sale under a decree, the will devising the property had been incorrectly abstracted in the abstract furnished to the purchaser, although the document next appearing upon the abstract recited the will correctly. The conveyancer acting on behalf of the purchaser had not called attention to this discrepancy, although he had directed an examination of the probate for other purposes. The will had been admitted to probate in facsimile, but neither the will nor the probate copy had been examined:—Held, that as the conveyancer had been clearly misled by the abstract, the purchaser was entitled to be relieved from his purchase, but on paying the costs of the application, as he had been negligent. McCulloch v. Gregory, 3 Eq. R. 495; 1 K. & J. 286; 24 L. J., Ch. 246; 3 W. R. 231.

Reservation of Minerals.]—The conveyance on a sale of land contained a reservation of the minerals to the vendor, which was not intended by either the vendor or the purchaser. Five years afterwards the purchaser discovered the mistake, and filed a bill to have the conveyance rectified. The vendor, after putting in an answer, died:—Held, having regard to the lapse of time and other circumstances, that if the defendant did not consent to have the conveyance rectified, the whole transaction must be set aside, in which event the plaintiff would be fixed with an occupation rent, while the defendant would have to repay the purchase money with interest, and also all sums expended by the plaintiff in permanent improvements. Blommer v. Spittle, 41 L. J., Ch. 369; L. R. 13 Eq. 427; 26 L. T. 272; 20 W. R. 435.

Mortgage.]—A person purchased by auction, for 2,500*l.*, property which was described in the particulars as an "immediate reversion in fee simple." Shortly after signing the contract he discovered that, by the conditions of sale, which were produced for the first time and read aloud by the vendor's agent at the commencement of the sale, but which the purchaser was prevented by deafness from hearing, the purchaser was to take the property, subject to mortgages for 2,500*l.*, in addition to his purchase money, the real value of the reversion being considerably under 5,000*l.*:—Held, that the purchaser was entitled to have the contract rescinded on the ground of common mistake, and of misdescription in the particulars. Torrance v. Bolton, 42 L. J., Ch. 177 ; L. R. 8 Ch. 118 ; 27 L. T. 738 ; 21 W. R. 134.

Costs.]—In an ordinary case where the purchaser's carelessness has contributed to the mistake, he is not entitled to the costs of his suit, but where before suit, he had offered to pay the costs of the sale on having the contract rescinded, he was held to be entitled to them. Ib.

c. For Fraud and Misrepresentation.

General Effect of.]—In the absence of fraud, the court will not entertain an application for the rescission or cancellation of an agreement in writing relating to land, although incapable of being performed. Noble v. Edwardes, 5 Ch. D. 378 ; 36 L. T. 312—C. A.

There is no general rule that actual fraud is necessary to induce a court of equity to rescind a contract for sale. The court acts on the same principle in rescinding contracts for sale as in setting aside other contracts and dealings which it considers unconscientious. Torrance v. Bolton, 42 L. J., Ch. 177 ; L. R. 8 Ch. 118 ; 27 L. T. 738 ; 21 W. R. 134.

Misrepresentation, though in a slight degree, is an objection to specific performance. Distinction upon a bill to rescind the contract. Cadman v. Horner, 18 Ves. 10 ; 11 R. R. 135.

—— Completed Contract.]—Semble, that the court will, even in the case of a completed contract, give relief against a common mistake on the ground of fraud. Jones v. Clifford, 45 L. J., Ch. 809 ; 3 Ch. D. 779 ; 35 L. T. 937 ; 24 W. R. 979.

Representations of Vendee.]—When a vendor, ignorant of the real value of an estate, sells it at a loss on the faith of what the purchaser represents to him that it is worth, the sale will be set aside, and that irrespective of any fiduciary relation, fraud or other concealment in the transaction between the parties. Haggarth v. Wearing, 40 L. J. Ch. 577 ; L. R. 12 Eq. 520 ; 24 L. T. 825 ; 20 W. R. 11. And see Walters v. Morgan, 3 De G. F. & J. 718 ; 4 L. T. 758.
